Mar. 4—An Absent-Minded Mother (Comedy) 500
Mar. 4—A Four Footed Desperado (Comedy.. 500
Mar. 6—Comedy and Tragedy (Special 2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 17—When the Cartridges Failed (Dr.)...1000
March 9—The Sultan and the Roller (Comedy).1000
March 10—The Mexican's Gratitude (Drama)..1000
March 11—Andy, the Actor (Fourth of the Andy Series) (Comedy).....1000
March 13—The Price of the Necklace (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 14—An Affair of Dress (Third of the Dolly of the Dailies Series) (Com.).1000
March 16—The Adventure of the Alarm Clock (Third of the Octavius Amateur Detective Series) (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 17—A Real Helpmate (Drama) 1000
Mar. 18—A Winter Holiday in the Bernese Oberland, Switzerland (Scenic)..... 400
Mar. 18—A Boarding House Romance (Com.).. 600
Mar. 20—The Double Shadow (Special -2 parts —Drama) 2000
Mar. 21—The Message in the Rose (Drama)....1000

ESSANAY.

Feb. 25—Mrs. Manly's Baby (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 26—The Arm of Vengeance (Drama).....1000
Feb. 27—Let No Man Escape (Special—2 parts —Drama) 2000
Feb. 28—Broncho Billy's Bible (Drama).....1000
Mar. 3—The Long Cold Night (Drama).....1000
Mar. 4—"Presto" Willie—Magician (Comedy).1000
Mar. 5—The Conquest of Man (Drama).....1000
Mar. 6—Chains of Bondage (Special—2 parts —Drama).....2000
Mar. 7—Sophie's Birthday Party (Comedy)...1000
March 10—The Counter Melody (Drama).....1000
March 11—The Girl, the Cop, the Burglar (Comedy) 1000
March 12—The Warning (Drama).....1000
March 13—Grass County Goes Dry (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
March 14—The Interference of Broncho Billy (Drama) 1000
Mar. 17—Oh! Doctor (Comedy) 1000
Mar. 18—Luck In Odd Numbers (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 19—Single Handed (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—Shadows (Special 2 parts—Drama)..2000
Mar. 21—A Hot Time In Snakeville (Comedy)..1000

KALEM.

Feb. 23—The Shadow (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Feb. 25—The Tigers of the Hills (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 27—Reggie, the Squaw Man (Comedy)....1000
Feb. 28—The Delayed Special (Drama).....1000
Mar. 2—Chest of Fortune (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 4—The Intrigue (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Mar. 6—Hiram's Hotel (Comedy).....
Mar. 6—Beauty, the Educated Horse (Edu.).
Mar. 7—The Hopi Raiders (Comedy).....
Mar. 7—Unveiling the Maine Monument (Topical).....
March 9—The Secret of the Will (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 11—The Medicine Man's Vengeance (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 13—Her Fallen Hero (Comedy).....
March 13—Looking For a Fortune (Comedy)...
March 14—The Race for a Mine (Drama).....1000
Mar. 16—The Colleen Bawn (Special -3 parts—Drama) 3000
Mar. 18—The Award of Justice (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 20—The Family Skeleton (Comedy).....
Mar. 20—Cypress Logging in Florida (Industry)
Mar. 21—His Indian Nemesis (Drama).....1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Feb. 3—The Marriage of Figaro (Special—2 parts—Ambrosio—Drama) .....
Feb. 10—After Death (Cines—Special—2 parts —Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—The Artist's Model (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 24—The Money-Sharks (Cines—Three Parts —Drama) .....
Mar. 3—The Diamond-maker (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 10—The Greatest Gift (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
March 17—Gypsy Love (Cines special 2 parts —Drama) 2000
Mar. 24—The Barber of Seville (Ambrosio - Special 3 parts -Drama) .....

LUBIN.

Feb. 26—The Two Roses (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Feb. 27—A Desperate Chance (Drama).....1000
Feb. 28—Coon Town Suffragettes (Comedy).. 400
Feb. 28—Father's Temper (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 3—The Best Man (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 3—That Terrible Kid (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 4—In the Gambler's Web (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 5—His Wife (Special—2 parts—Drama).2000
Mar. 6—A Romance of the Northwest (Dr.).1000
Mar. 7—When Dooley Passed Away (Comedy).1000
March 10—A Dangerous Case (Comedy)..... 400
March 10—Slumberville's Scare (Comedy)..... 600
March 11—A Cruel Revenge (Special—2 parts —Drama) 2000
March 12—A Strange Melody (Special—2 parts —Drama) 2000
March 13—The Tell-Tale Star (Drama).....1000
March 14—Just a Note (Comedy) 400
March 14—She Wanted a Count (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 17—The Laziest Man (Comedy) 1000
Mar. 18—The Weaker Brother (Special -2 parts Drama) 2000
Mar. 19—The Secret Marriage (Special 2 parts Drama) 2000
Mar. 20—The Price (Drama) 1000
Mar. 21—So Long, Count (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 21—A Trip to the Moon (Comedy) 600

MELIES.

Feb. 5—Playing With Fire (Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 5—Winky Willy's Disappearing Stunt (Comedy) .....
Feb. 5—Dippy on the Boston Dip (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Com.).
Feb. 19—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
Feb. 19—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700
Feb. 26—Winky Willie's Arithmetic (Com.).. 300
Feb. 26—Batty Billy and His Pal's Legacy (Comedy) 700
March 5—Winky Willy and the Telephone Crime (Comedy) 300
March 5—A Village Scandal (Comedy)..... 700
Mar. 12—Love's Oblivion (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 12—One On Batty Bill (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 19—Winky Willy's Private Show (Comedy) 300
Mar. 19—Cupid's Window (Comedy)..... 700

PATHE.

Mar. 16—Pathe's Weekly, No. 22 (News)....
Mar. 17—Whiffles and the Diamond Pin (Com.)
Mar. 18—Col. Heeza Liar Shipwrecked (Nov.)
Feb. 17—Whiffles Balcony Buds (Comedy)....
Feb. 17—Rambles in Bourges, France (Scenic)..
Feb. 18—Won By a Nose (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—Monuments of Upper Egypt (Architec.)
Feb. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 15—1914 (News)
Feb. 19—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 21—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts —Drama) .....
Feb. 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 16—1914 (News)
Feb. 24—The Winning Hand (Drama).....
Feb. 25—September Morn (Comedy).....
Feb. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 17—1914 (News)
Feb. 26—The Devil's Assistant (Special—2 parts —Drama) .....
Feb. 28—The Parasites (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 2—Pathe's Weekly, No. 18 (News).....
Mar. 3—The Second Generation (Drama).....
Mar. 4—Hogan's Alley (Comedy).....
Mar. 5—The Brother Counts (Special—2 parts —Drama).....
Mar. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 19 (News).....
Mar. 7—On the Altar of Patriotism (Special —2 parts—Drama).....
March 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 20 (News)....
March 10—The Hunting Spiders (Zoology).....
March 10—The Picturesque Coast of Catalonia —(Scenic) .....
March 11—Abide With Me (Drama).....
March 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 21 (News).....
March 12—A Spoiled Life (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
March 12—Making Lace Fans (Industry).....
March 14—Against Heavy Odds (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
March 14—A Trip to the Great Nile Dam (Travel) .....
Mar. 18—Madura and Its Pagodas (Arch.)....
Mar. 19—The Wasted Years (Special—2 parts —Drama) .....
Mar. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 23 (News).....
Mar. 21—His Wife Wins (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....

SELIG.

Feb. 24—The Cynic (Drama).....
Feb. 24—Doc Yak, the Cartoonist (Comedy)..
Feb. 25—King Baby's Birthday (Drama)....1000
Feb. 26—Tested By Fire (Drama).....1000
Feb. 27—The Attic Above (Drama).....1000
Mar. 2—The Tragedy of Ambition (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 3—The Smuggler's Sister—(Drama)....1000
Mar. 4—The Countess and the Burglar (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 5—Little Lillian Turns the Tide (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 6—The Renegade's Vengeance (Drama)..1000
March 9.—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 6 —Three Bags of Silver—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 10—Suppressed News (Drama).....1000
March 11—The Speedway of Despair (Drama)..
March 11—The Cathedral and Leaning Tower of Pisa (Travel) .....
March 12—Kid Pink and the Maharajah (Dr.).1000
March 13—Elizabeth's Prayer (Drama).....1000
Mar. 14—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News)..1000
Mar. 16—The Better Way (Special 2 parts - Drama) 2000
Mar. 17—The Story of Venus (Drama) 1000
Mar. 18—The Cop on the Beat (Drama).....1000
Mar. 19—The Evil We Do (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—Two Little Vagabonds (Drama).....1000
Mar. 21—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News)..1000

VITAGRAPH.

Feb. 24—Doctor Polly (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
Feb. 25—The Hero (Comedy) .....
Feb. 25—Crawfishing (Educational) .....
Feb. 26—The Old Oak's Secret ,Drama).....
Feb 27—A Change in Baggage Checks (Com.).1000
Feb. 28—The Drudge (Spec.—2 parts—Drama).2000
Mar. 2—Buffalo Jim (Drama).....1000
Mar. 3—The Sacrifice of Kathleen (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 4—A Pair of Frauds (Comedy).....
Mar. 5—Silent Trails (Drama).....
Mar. 5—Scenes In Norsland (Scenic).....
Mar. 6—The Speeder's Revenge (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 7—The Mischief Maker (Special—2 parts —Drama) .....
March 9—Ginger's Reign (Drama).....1000
March 10—The Portrait (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 11—Art for a Heart (Comedy).....1000
March 12—The Way to Heaven (Drama).....1000
March 13—Mrs. Maloney's Fortune (Comedy)..1000
March 14—An Officer and a Gentleman (Special —2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 16—Auntie (Drama) 1000
Mar. 17—The Price of Vanity (Special -2 parts —Drama) 2000
Mar. 18—The Ghosts (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 19—The Idler (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—A Model Young Man (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 21—Old Reliable (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company

All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York

Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

3 Southern Exhibitors—Now At Your Service 3
Exclusive Features Every Week

Opening with the Following Releases:

APEX

The Black Snake	4	reels
Red Powder	4	"
London by Night	4	"
Humanity	3	"
Peter Makaroff	4	"
A Bargain with Satan	5	"
The Engine of Death	4	"
The Fall of France	3	"
The Black 13	3	"
Hari-Kari	4	"
From the Gutter to the Footlights	5	"
In the Python's Den	4	"
The Great Dock Disaster	3	"
The Great Bullion Robbery	3	"
A Battle in the Clouds	3	"
Brother Officers	4	"

COSMOS

Famous Battles of Napoleon	5	reels
The Yellow Passport	3	"

BLACHE

The Star of India	4	reels
Shadows of the Moulin Rouge	4	"
Beneath the Czar	4	"

ITALA

Dread of Doom	3	reels
Gipsy's Kiss	3	"
Death's Door	3	"
Shadow of Evil	3	"
The Burning Train	3	"
Out of Darkness	3	"

We have the exclusive rights for all the above subjects for Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee

ALSO NOTE:--APEX and COSMOS features are available for Virginia
ITALA and BLACHE for Louisiana

Also - THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO - 5 Parts

Other Big Productions to Follow

For an Exclusive Feature Service, Write or Wire

APEX FEATURE SERVICE, RHODES BUILDING, ATLANTA, GA.

The Colosseum in Films

These motion pictures are the first in a gala series of truly educational films entitled

THE GLORIES OF ROME

The pictures were made with special permission of the Italian Government and according to instructions of W. Stephen Bush of The Moving Picture World, who was in Rome at the time. The Vero Educational Society has purchased the negative.

Every point of interest in the immortal edifice is covered in a most entertaining way, bringing back memories of the wonderful days when 80,000 spectators looked down upon the struggles in the arena.

There are four divisions:

I. The Exterior and Entrances, together with views of Rome from different stories of the Colosseum.
II. The Lower Floor and the Arena.
III. The Stories and Lodges.
IV. What was hidden beneath the Arena.

The total length of the pictures is three thousand feet. Title and all printed matter have been prepared by Mr. Bush. The titles are full and exact, and a lecture goes with certain parts of the film. The photography is of a high standard, and portions of the films are suitably tinted. For all further information address

The Vero Educational Society Room 704, World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, City
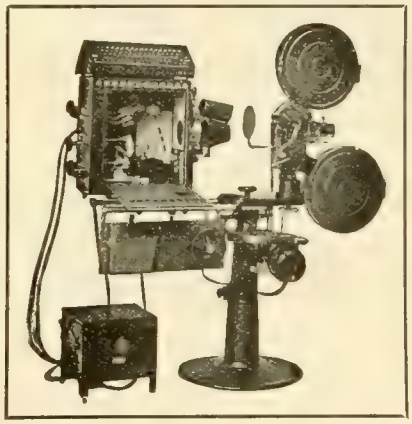
TELEPHONE BRYANT 578



"IT certainly is remarkable how well the MOTIOGRAPH stands up under all conditions and heavy grinds for so long a period," says a MOTIOGRAPH purchaser of 1908, who brought his mechanism to the factory for Inspection.

We contend this is nothing unusual, as we hear such remarks every day, and remark that this is only a proof of the quality of material used, and with skilled labor will make the MOTIOGRAPH a long-life machine with practically no UP-KEEP.

Ask the Exhibitors who have used the one MOTIOGRAPH for several years.

Manufactured and Guaranteed by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York — 564-572 W. Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. — Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

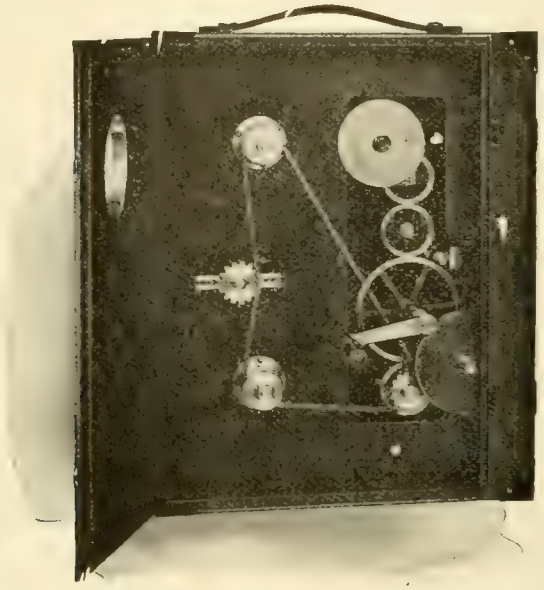


PHOTO-CINES, ERNEMANN, EMPIRE

CAMERAS

WRENCH TRIPODS

AUSTIN EDWARDS RAW FILM

PHOTO-CINES CO., 24 East 13th Street, New York

A Feature Buyer Told Me The Other Day

That he preferred foreign film—that it was more brilliant and wore better. As an illustration he named two features he had bought. I knew that the raw film for both of these had gone through my New York office. The buyer referred to is still making money on his Lumiere prints, while other prints put on the market at the same time were long ago thrown away.

DAVID HORSLEY

American Agent for Lumiere Film

NEW YORK - - - Mecca Building
CHICAGO - - - Schiller Building
LOS ANGELES - - - Higgins Building

One, Three and Six Sheets Now Ready

For the Weeks of March 9th and 16th

KALEM

THE SECRET OF THE WILL (Monday)
THE MEDICINE MAN'S VENGEANCE (Wednesday)
THE COLLEEN BAWN In Three Parts (Monday)
THE AWARD OF JUSTICE (Wednesday)

LUBIN

A CRUEL REVENGE (Wednesday)
A STRANGE MELODY (Thursday)
THE WEAKER BROTHER (Wednesday)
THE SECRET MARRIAGE (Thursday)

A. B. C. COMPANY Cleveland, Ohio

ARE YOU BURNING DAYLIGHT?

YOU ARE UNLESS YOU ARE USING THE

"THE PEERLESS" — DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN — "THE PIONEER"

AND YOU ARE WASTING MORE MONEY—YOU ARE LOSING MORE GOOD BUSINESS—AND YOU ARE CAUSING YOURSELF MORE WORRY THAN YOU HAVE ANY CONCEPTION OF.

THE SCREEN FROM QUALITY STREET — THE SCREEN DE LUXE — THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM WILL SAVE YOU THAT WASTE AND WORRY—IT WILL INSURE YOU AGAINST LOSS OF BUSINESS.

WAKE UP — BE A BUSINESS MAN — BE PROGRESSIVE

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE ARRANGE FOR COMPARATIVE TEST

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

NEW YORK — PHILADELPHIA — NEW ORLEANS — ATLANTA — SAN FRANCISCO — SEATTLE — PARIS — BERLIN — LONDON

WHEN you consider that you can cut your juice bills more than half and increase your box office receipts by relieving your patrons of all eye strain and showing clear, natural and lifelike pictures, you must install a

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

Write Department 17 for full particulars about our NEW SPECIAL PROPOSITION.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Co.

Nulsen Bldg., 6th and Olive Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

Pittsburg Office: Suite 9-10, Hartley Bldg., 405 Fourth Ave.

New York Office: 2nd & 3rd Floor, Chandler Bldg., 220 W. 42nd Street.

THE WORLD'S BEST, BAR NONE

Why Tax Your Mind With Worries?

MIRROROIDE

Is an absolute necessity to your business. Over 7000 MIRROROIDE SCREENS in use. Let us send you our large Free Samples. Test same with the eyes that God gave you against any curtain or screen on earth. Surely, seeing is believing?

Make us prove our claims. Make us show you that our broadest claims, our broadest statements, are bona fide facts!

Every MIRROROIDE SCREEN sold is backed up with our five-year guarantee

Not to Crack, Peel or Turn Black

Do you realize what this means to you? Do you realize that we have the largest and most extensive plant in the world, backed up by ample capital, experience and facilities?

MIRROROIDE

Is universally known, as is our reputation

Get the best. Prove it by test.

Make us show you why we have sold more MIRROROIDE SCREENS than all others combined.

Won't you let us show you? Surely it costs you nothing.

Get Next, Do It Now!

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.

NEWBURGH N. Y.

You must buy a FOTOPLAYER to get a double-tracker

There is only one FOTOPLAYER

Allows immediate change from one music selection to another without discord or interruption and uses ordinary 88-note player piano roll.

Full Orchestral Effect BUILT FOR THE MOVIES Fits the Pit

REED ORGAN, PIANO, ORGAN PIPES, DRUMS, CYMBALS, CRASH, WIND, WHISTLES, TRAPS OF ALL KINDS

PRICE RIGHT BUILT RIGHT TERMS RIGHT

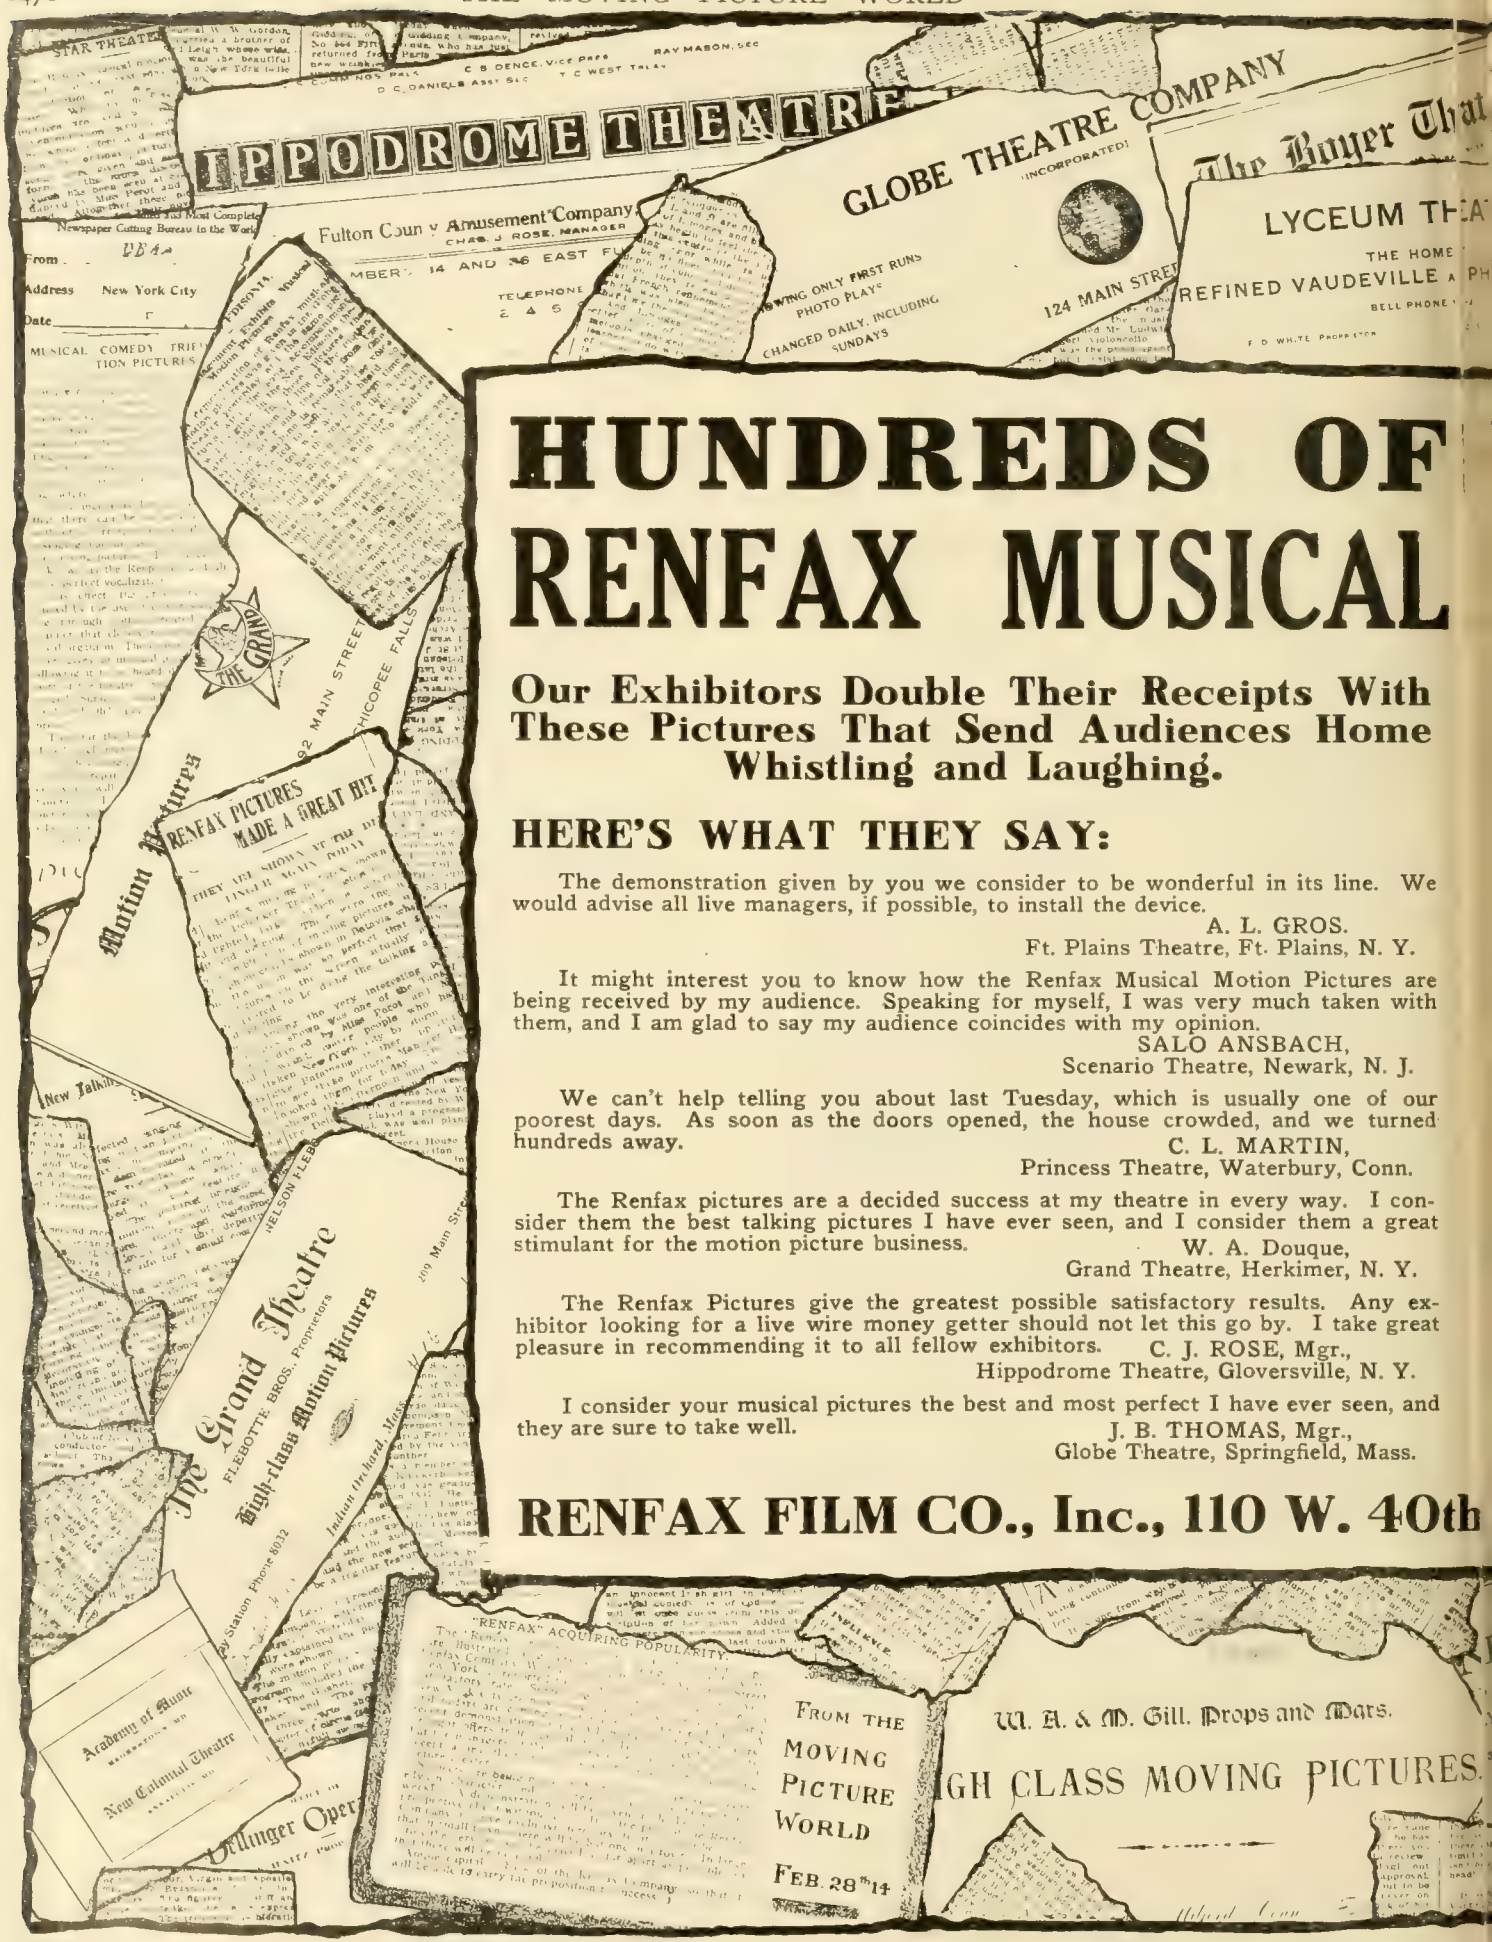
AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER COMPANY Factory and Offices: Berkeley, California



HUNDREDS OF RENFAX MUSICAL

Our Exhibitors Double Their Receipts With These Pictures That Send Audiences Home Whistling and Laughing.

HERE'S WHAT THEY SAY:

The demonstration given by you we consider to be wonderful in its line. We would advise all live managers, if possible, to install the device.

A. L. GROS.
Ft. Plains Theatre, Ft. Plains, N. Y.

It might interest you to know how the Renfax Musical Motion Pictures are being received by my audience. Speaking for myself, I was very much taken with them, and I am glad to say my audience coincides with my opinion.

SALO ANSBACH,
Scenario Theatre, Newark, N. J.

We can't help telling you about last Tuesday, which is usually one of our poorest days. As soon as the doors opened, the house crowded, and we turned hundreds away.

C. L. MARTIN,
Princess Theatre, Waterbury, Conn.

The Renfax pictures are a decided success at my theatre in every way. I consider them the best talking pictures I have ever seen, and I consider them a great stimulant for the motion picture business.

W. A. Douque,
Grand Theatre, Herkimer, N. Y.

The Renfax Pictures give the greatest possible satisfactory results. Any exhibitor looking for a live wire money getter should not let this go by. I take great pleasure in recommending it to all fellow exhibitors.

C. J. ROSE, Mgr.,
Hippodrome Theatre, Gloversville, N. Y.

I consider your musical pictures the best and most perfect I have ever seen, and they are sure to take well.

J. B. THOMAS, Mgr.,
Globe Theatre, Springfield, Mass.

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc., 110 W. 40th

BOOSTS FOR THE MOTION PICTURES

MR. STATE RIGHT BUYER:

Here is your opportunity. You can handle this service that is revolutionizing the picture business.

THINK OF IT!

Musical comedy actually in pictures

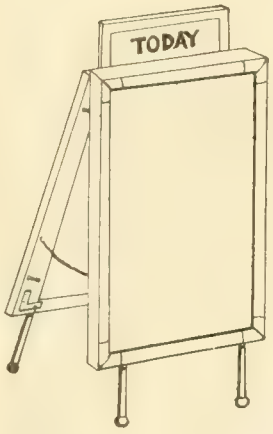
For a small cost you can establish an exchange with permanent service

---

You can supply these musical comedy playlets for less than the weekly salary of one singer

---

St., New York City. Phone 7048 Bryant

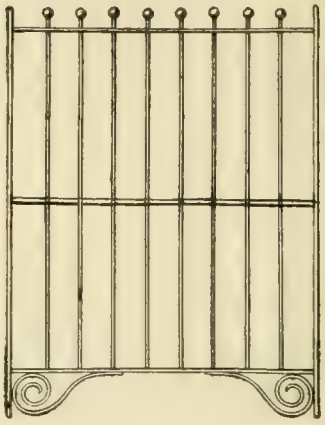


BRASS POSTER FRAMES

RAILINGS
WINDOW GRILLES
PIANO PIT RAILS
KICK PLATES

Add immeasurably to the drawing power of your posters, and make a bright and attractive lobby. We make a number of different styles to meet your requirements, and our prices are as attractive as the goods.

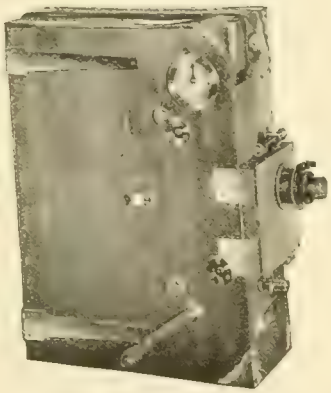
Write to-day for our illustrated list.



ROCHESTER BRASS AND WIRE WORKS CO.
76-84 Exchange Street, Rochester, New York

NO WAITING

if you order a
CAMERA or TRIPOD
from us



Prestwich Model 5, $250.00.

English Prestwich, Pathe Professional and Moy
Motion Picture Cameras

ALWAYS IN STOCK

Motion Picture Apparatus Co., Inc.
810 Broadway, New York

Have Motion Pictures at Home

BING'S Home Entertainer

Inexpensive, serviceable and simple to handle. Admirably adapted for use in the home, and throws a picture 3x4 feet on a screen at 3 yards distance under proper lighting conditions.

This Machine can be Retailed at $25—$30
ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED

The Bing Home Entertainer is constructed according to the safety laws of all countries. Parts and repairs given immediate attention by our Service Department.

Write for Terms, etc.

BING BROTHERS, Manufacturers
JOHN BING, Sole Representative
381 FOURTH AVENUE NEW YORK

THE CARBON FOR PERFECT PROJECTION

ELECTRA

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway NEW YORK

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN

DEAGAN BUILDING

1776 Berteau Ave.

Chicago, Ill.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. The A. H. Andrews Co. Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.

San Francisco Office, 788 Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

ORCHESTRA MUSIC

FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on

Motion Picture Seating

Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books

V-2, Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.

Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan

American Seating Company

"Public Seating Exclusively"

218 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

FILMS FOR SALE

$3.00 per Reel Up

Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.

ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh. Pa.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.

Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Boston: 69 Pearl St.

Steel or Iron STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 31-33 East 32nd Street, New York City. Telephone 1488 Murray Hill.

California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

Steel standards will not break.

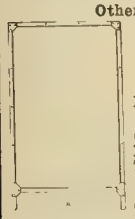
The Wisconsin Seating Company, New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

Indirect Lights, Poster Frames and Exit Lights

Moving Picture Theatres

No. 62—12" Diam.....$4.00
No. 51—15" Diam..... 6.00
No. 52—20" Diam..... 8.00

Solid Brass. White Enam. Reflector. Wired, Ready to Attach. Other Styles.



POSTER FRAMES

Highly Polished Heavy Brass. Very Strong.

One Sheet Size.....$4.00
Easel Frame..... 5.50
Three Sheet..... 7.50

No Glass.

One Sheet Glass..... 1.00

EXIT LIGHTS

No. 68, Like Cut — Brass — $3.50

Exit Box.....$2.00

Other Brackets as Low as $1.25

CIRCULAR

General Specialty Co.

409-11 Morgan St., St. Louis, Mo.

Every Day 1,500,000 People

IN Motion Picture Theatres

of the United States listen to the Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra. Have you one? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES

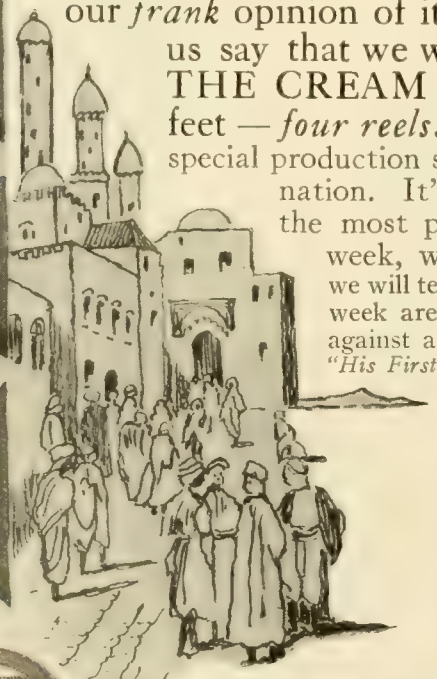
CINCINNATI

Is Our Next Special But We Decline to Advertise Its Goodness Until We Know EXACTLY HOW GOOD IT IS. The negative—seven thousand feet of it—has been turned in by our directors, but we won't give you our frank opinion of it until we have seen it. In advance, let us say that we will cut out three thousand feet, retaining THE CREAM OF THE ACTION in four thousand feet—four reels. That is the secret of New Majestic's special production success—plenty of action and plenty of elimination. It's "death to padding" here! William Garwood, the most popular man in pictures, plays Imar. Next week, when we shall have seen and "cut" this Special, we will tell you how good or bad it is. The "regulars" for the new week are "The Stronger Hand," (2 reels), a story of a fight against a trust—it was a WARM fight—on Sunday, March 8; "His First Love," a love story, of course,—but an UNUSUAL one—on Tuesday, March 10; and "The Moonshiner's Daughter," a melodrama of the mountains that is bang! bang! bang! in action and surprise.



"NEW MAJESTIC"

"There Are no Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites"

All-Year-Round Studios: Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal
Business Offices: New Rochelle, N. Y.

Selig

"THE BETTER WAY"

An exciting and attractive play of realism and romance that has unusual current interest by reason of a strange condition, which the scientist disposes of to the advantage of all concerned.

IN TWO REELS—RELEASED MARCH 16th

March 17th "THE STORY OF VENUS"

The Queen of Love shows the modern girl equal to the classic through the magic of "dissolves."

March 18th "THE COP ON THE BEAT"

A big-hearted policeman does a clever turn in rescuing a fortune for a poor but worthy man.

March 19th "THE EVIL WE DO"

Two sailor lads, brothers, love a heartless coquette, and die for her. She lives on—a life of remorse.

March 20th "TWO LITTLE VAGABONDS"

A pair of city waifs desert the busy city for the quiet country, but go back to the town in disgust.

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, the newsiest and most attractive novelty in the motion picture world, is released every Saturday.

N. B. Secure SELIG posters if you desire to give your lobby a varied charm of color. Use sheets for all releases; threes and sixes for multiple reels.

TRADE S MARK THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY TRADE S MARK

CHICAGO

PROFITS

ALL exhibitors aspire to reach the goal of success, but often overlook the greatest asset of a Photo-Play Theatre.

A profitable business must be built up on stability, and Motion Picture profits can only be assured through the use of the best films and PERFECT PROJECTION.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6-A projects perfect pictures for over 70% of the entire trade.

Write for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street :: :: New York City

Vol. 19. No. 12 March 21, 1914 Price 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "A Hot Time in Snakeville" (Essanay).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

Every Admirer of JAMES CRUZE and FLO LA BADIE will thank you for booking "Cardinal Richelieu's Ward"

Because it's their best joint effort to date and there's no doubt of it! Even "Star of Bethlehem" must give way to it. Reel Life said recently that "the thousands of persons who saw Miss La Badie in 'Bethlehem' will always think of her as 'Mary'"—but don't you believe it! At least, not until YOU HAVE SEEN HER "JULIE" IN "CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S WARD." As a character portrayal—in which the player "lives" the part—it can only be compared to Mr. Cruze's "Richelieu." Remember to see that nearest Continental or Mutual Office for the attractive arrangement that gives you for EXCLUSIVE first-run use for a full year in your locality. Absolute protection is yours under this system. No more advertising a feature heavily to learn the fellow down the street is going to get it, too. All in four reels, and all BIG in story, cast and settings.

"Thanhouser 'Big' Productions"

For March, "CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S WARD," with James Cruze and Flo La Badie.

Thanhouser Three-A-Week

Sunday, March 15th—"THE EUGENIC BOY" is one of the Thanhouser Twins—a repetition of our last week's stunt, wherein we gave you a Twin ALONE for the first time in our lives. Lila Chester plays the Twin's mother, Harry De Jonge her father, and the whole film gives you a fine laugh.

Tuesday, March 17th—"THE CAT'S PAW," TWO REELS, is the much-announced SECOND ADVENTURE of the much-advertised DIPLOMATIC FREE LANCE, whose magazine serial has been running for nearly a half-dozen years in the Blue Book—a magazine record! With James Cruze and Flo La Badie. A peachy adventure picture that will "draw" like wild-fire from magazine readers, of whom five million are estimated to have "followed" the Clarence New serial.

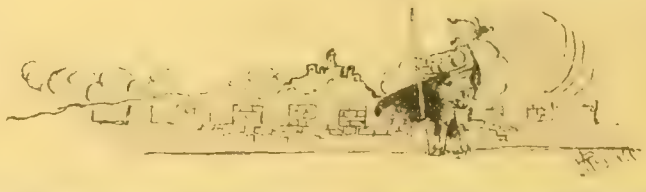
Friday, March 20th—NO RELEASE because of extra reel release of preceding Tuesday.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Head European Offices:
Thanhouser Films, Ltd.

100 Charing Cross Road
London, W. C., England

More "Adventures of a Diplomatic Free Lance," based on the most popular of magazine series, soon!



ESSANAY
FIVE-A-WEEK

COMING
FRIDAY, MARCH 20th

"SHADOWS"

(IN TWO PARTS)

This is positively one of the most sensational melodramas ever produced for the screen. A gang of counterfeiters are passing the "queer" on everybody. A detective and a newspaper reporter are assigned to "get the offenders." It is thrilling in the extreme.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN FEATURED

Essanay Leads in Comedies

Released Tuesday, March 17th.

"OH, DOCTOR"

A flock of boarding school girls mistake a piano-tuner for a doctor. Some scream.

Released Wednesday, March 18th.

"LUCK IN ODD NUMBERS"

A comical tale of a messenger boy whose number happened to be 33.

Released Thursday, March 19th.

"SINGLE HANDED"

A thrilling Western drama in which a sheriff, single handed, captures a gang of outlaws.

Released Saturday, March 21st.

"A HOT TIME IN SNAKEVILLE"

A FEATURE WESTERN COMEDY WITH THOSE ENTERTAINING COMEDIANS, VICTOR POTEL AND HARRY TODD, ALSO THE IRRESISTIBLE MARGARET JOSLIN.

COMING FRIDAY, MARCH 27th

"THE THREE SCRATCH CLUE"

(IN TWO PARTS)

This is positively a feature drama containing more exciting and eccentric situations than one would imagine. An aristocratic society "Raffles" creates an atmosphere of mystery which is sustained throughout the entire depiction. The photography is superb and the action great.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN FEATURED

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors. You can order these from your exchange or direct from the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. STATE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg. Chicago

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.
Branch offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

"WASHINGTON AT

Four-Reel Universal Special

There's a bang in every foot of every reel. It starts off with a bang and finishes with a volley that will bring the house to its feet. It's a bully combination of acting and action. Spectacular scenes. Strong story. Strong and stirring situations. The spirit of '76 in films!

Written, Produced and Played by

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL FEATURES

FRANCIS FORD and GRACE CUNARD

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL FEATURES

Get Your Booking Immediately!

Remember, it is a "UNIVERSAL SPECIAL," which means that it has cost your exchange an extra price and therefore will cost you extra. Begin to do your advance advertising right away and don't fail to buy a big supply of the stunning special posters designed by the best artists of the Morgan Lithograph Co. for this four-reel thriller.

Coming! Coming! Coming! "The Spy" Adapted from Fenimore Cooper's great novel by Otis Turner

With Herbert Rawlinson, Edna Maison and William Worthington in the leading roles. This is the Universal Special Feature of which President Laemmle telegraphed, "Made me stand up and yell when I saw it. Best thing Turner ever did in his life."

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

Universal Film Man

VALLEY FORGE"

Ready Last of March!

WE WANT THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF

EVERY EXHIBITOR

NOT GETTING "THE UNIVERSAL WEEKLY"

"The Universal Weekly" contains page after page of important announcements which we cannot possibly crowd into our trade paper advertisements. Every exhibitor, NO MATTER WHAT PROGRAM HE IS USING, will find news of intense interest in its columns every week. YOU CAN'T KNOW WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE BUSINESS WITHOUT IT. Send us the name and address of YOUR THEATRE on a postal card and we'll put you on the mailing list. Address "Editor, Universal Weekly, 1600 Broadway, New York."

DO IT THIS MINUTE!

ıfacturing Company

CARL LAEMMLE
President

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES EXTRA! UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

ANNA LITTLE

If a few days ago we surprised the film world with the news that Ford Sterling, one of the world's most famous comedians, had been added to the already wonderful list of Universal stars, we now take enthusiastic pride in giving you another happy surprise right on the very heels of it by announcing that MISS ANNA LITTLE, of "Broncho" and "Kay-Bee," is NOW WITH THE UNIVERSAL. The Universal now has nearly every worth-while star in the screen world. USE YOUR BRAINS!

UNIVERSAL COMPANY

To give Universal exhibitors new features with an entire change of scenery and atmosphere, we have just sent DIRECTOR HENRY McRAE AND HIS ENTIRE STOCK COMPANY to Honolulu and from there to the Philippines and thence to CHINA AND JAPAN. Watch for further details with regard to this trip through the Orient and BE MIGHTY HAPPY THAT YOU ARE A UNIVERSAL EXHIBITOR!

King Baggot

has just finished a corking good 2-reel "Imp" in his detective series. It is called "King, the Detective in the Marine Mystery." Take note that it was not only acted by Mr. Baggot, but also WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY HIM! Advertise that fact good and hard! It's a gem!

O. Henry

the king of short story writers, wrote "The Caballero's Way." The Eclair company has produced it in 3 reels, released March 1st. IT IS PERFECTION. Undoubtedly one of the strongest productions ever made for the Universal or any other program. Get it!

Florence Lawrence

appears in a 3-reel "Victor," entitled "Diplomatic Flo," which will be released March 27th. In this picture you will see her in her very best vein and supported by a rattling good cast. Take advantage of her great popularity. Advertise in advance.

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

Universal Film Man

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES EXTRA! UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

JOINS "BIG U"

Did you ever, in all your life, know of any company that shows the untiring, aggressive, determined enterprise that the Universal does? Can't you read the signs of the times? Can't you see that the brains, and bigness, and money, and spirit of the Universal are bound to make THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM THE SAFEST POSSIBLE INSURANCE FOR THE SUCCESS OF YOUR FUTURE? Go to the nearest Universal exchange as quickly as possible and see some of our recent pictures. Then you will USE THE BRAINS GOD GAVE YOU!

TO CHINA AND JAPAN

The last two features Mr. McRae directed before leaving for Honolulu are booked for early release. They are "From the Lion's Jaws" (2 reels) and "In the Wolves' Fangs" (2 reels). Both are "animal features" containing some of the most sensational thrillers ever shown on the screen. They are on the regular Universal program. Jot down the names now and see them at the nearest Universal exchange.

The Smalleys

have produced another typically artistic "Rex" 2-reeler, entitled "The Spider and Her Web," which will be released March 26th. It is full of strong situations as well as the exquisite lighting effects for which the Smalleys are famous.

Wild Animals

are shown in "The Mysterious Leopard Lady," a Cunard-Ford Gold Seal released March 24th; also in "In the Wolf's Fangs," a coming 2-reel 101-Bison; also in "From the Lion's Jaws," a 2-reel 101-Bison released March 14th. Demand every one of these!

Sealed Orders

is the title of a story, by EUGENE MANLOVE RHODES, which recently appeared in The Saturday Evening Post. J. WARREN KERRIGAN has just finished it as a 2-reeler and it is a crackerjack. Kerrigan plays a Western part, the kind that made him famous. Get it!

ufacturing Company

CARL LAEMMLE
President

HELEN PICTURE

A NAME THAT BRINGS A CONTINUOUS

WILL INCREASE YOUR

Scene in "Pieces of Silver."

Features None Can Compete With

DID it ever occur to you that you are losing many hundreds of dollars by not handling the HELEN GARDNER PRODUCTIONS? There is big money waiting for you. Get the habit and fall in line. You can command the highest rentals for the HELEN GARDNER FEATURES.

State Right Buyers!
WIRE TODAY!
QUICK ACTION MEANS SPLENDID TERRI
WIRE! DO IT

THE HELGAR CORPORATION, WORLD
PHONE, BRYANT 7697-8 SOLE SELLIN

GARDNER PLAYERS

FLOW OF MONEY INTO THE BOX OFFICE

BUSINESS 100 Per Cent.

Scene in "A Princess of Bagdad."

Exchange Men!
DON'T DELAY!
MONEY TO YOU! SOME ORY STILL OPEN. NOW. WIRE!

Did You Ever Think of That?

BY handling the HELEN GARDNER FEATURES you advance the interest of the exhibitor; moreover, yours in particular are advanced. You can monopolize your territory—HELEN GARDNER'S name acts as a magnet that insures packed houses. If you love to count shekels, now's your opportunity.

TOWER BLDG., NEW YORK CITY, U. S. A.
AGENTS
CABLE ADDRESS "HELGAR"

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

A dramatic triumph greater than any that has yet distinguished Mary Pickford's phenomenal career.

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents
America's Most Famous Film Actress,

MARY PICKFORD

In The Famous Tale of a Woman's Heroism,

"TESS of the

"IT'S MY BRAT, I TELLS YER!"

"Tess of the Storm Country," th drama of a woman' unconquerabl written by a woma knows her sex, wi the entire feminin tion of the world- other half. Tess quaint philosoph ous and pathetic, i erful characteriz type of woma modern condition Mary Pickford a dirty but beautifu rificing, renders

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

A number of thrills, mingled with the sweetest of human traits —compassion.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

TESS STEALS THE MILK FOR TEOLA'S CHILD.

STORM COUNTRY

By Grace Miller White

In Motion Pictures.

faith, who appeal to popula- and the with her of life, at once humor- one of the most pow- tions ever conceived. Tess is an elemental hood, a primitive heart struggling with and the delicate tortures of civilization. "Tess," the ragged little "squatter" girl, rude, willful, saucy, but noble and self-sac- portrayal of inexhaustible fascination.

In four reels
Released
March 20th.

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

NOT GUILTY

A THREE PART DRAMA

THE MILITARY MASTERPIECE OF THE SEASON

THE unwritten tragedies of army life are legion. The inexorable discipline of it all is a thing that makes cowards or heroes of men on short notice. Many are the stoical sacrifices that are made in the name of honor; all of which forms a dominating part of this Furiously Forceful Feature.

SHOULD SHE TELL?—An Absorbing Russian Drama—3 Parts
THE DEAD MAN WHO KILLED—A New Idea . . 4 Parts
QUEEN OF THE FORTY THIEVES—A Hummer . . 4 Parts
THE BATTLE IN THE CLOUDS—A Marvel . . . 3 Parts
IN THE HANDS OF LONDON CROOKS—By Barker 5 Parts
BROTHER OFFICERS—A Drama of East India . . 3 Parts

APEX FILM COMPANY

145 W. 45th St.—NEW YORK—P. P. Craft, Manager

HUGH HOFFMAN

THE TURNER FILMS, LTD., PRESENT

THE TWO PART PHOTOPLAY

ROSE OF SURREY

Featuring

MISS FLORENCE TURNER

America's Most Popular Motion Picture Actress

Another Hepworth Masterpiece! Charles Reade's Famous Novel

THE CLOISTER and THE HEARTH

FIVE PARTS

Special Publicity Matter: 1, 3, 6, 24-Sheet Lithographs, Special Heralds, Photographs, Cuts, Slides, Etc.

A. BLINKHORN

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

110-112 West 40th St. New York City

State Rights for New England, New York State, Greater New York and Northern New Jersey for "The Cloister and the Hearth" and "Justice" sold to Anima Film Rental Co., 110 W. 40th St., New York City

NAPOLEON

(Copyrighted)

In Five Parts Now Ready

M. Charlier, Theatre Antoine, Paris.
In the role of "Napoleon."

A VIVID AND REALISTIC REPRESENTATION OF THE DYNAMIC CAREER OF THE MOST PICTURESQUE CHARACTER OF MODERN HISTORY. ALL OF THE MAIN EVENTS WERE ACTUALLY TAKEN ON THE EXACT SITES OF THE ORIGINAL OCCURRENCES. SEE THE BATTLES AS THEY WERE FOUGHT BY THE POWERS OF EUROPE A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Full line of attractive publicity matter.

ESTHER

In Three Parts (Copyrighted) Ready March 20th

Esther is made queen.

A LENTEN OFFERING. A MAGNIFICENT BIBLICAL PRODUCTION THAT WILL FILL A DISTINCT NEED DURING THE PRESENT SEASON. A BEAUTIFUL TALE TAKEN FROM THE OLD TESTAMENT. READ THE SYNOPSIS IN THIS ISSUE.

THE RECKONING

In Four Parts (Copyrighted) Ready April 1st

THE THRILLING TALE OF THE PUNISHMENT METED OUT TO AN ABSCONDING BANKER WHO HAD MURDERED ONE MAN AND RUINED ANOTHER. HIS ACCOMPLICE PROVED TO BE HIS UNDOING. A STORY OF HUMAN INTEREST.

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES:

NEW YORK — 110 W 40th St. — CHICAGO — 5 S. Wabash Ave. — BOSTON — 3 Tremont Row — MINNEAPOLIS — 4th and Hennepin Sts. — ATLANTA — Rhodes Bldg. — DALLAS — Andrews Bldg.

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

"THE CREAM OF AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN STUDIOS"

Ambrosio

MICHAEL PERRIN or A SPY FOR A DAY

A Perfect Photoplay Superbly Acted

By The Greatest of Modern Actors

ERMETE NOVELLI

With exquisite blending of pathos and humor NOVELLI holds his auditors in deepest sympathy

In the beautiful character of MICHAEL PERRIN, the old parish priest, we see a heart story of absorbing interest

Still some territory open for that thrilling, highly dramatic subject

For the Queen's Honor

All Sizes Paper. Photos, Heralds, Slides. State Rights Buyers Wire or Write.

COMING—TWO REELS

"The Mystery of the Glass Coffin"

COMING—TWO REELS

Società Anonima Ambrosio TORINO

Ambrosio American Co.

15 East 26th Street

Società Anonima Ambrosio TORINO

WE HAVE MOVED

Owing to the tremendous increase in business, we were compelled to move our Executive Offices to larger quarters, and have rented the entire third floor in the Leavitt Building, 130 W. 46th Street, occupying 7500 square feet of space, where we can be found on and after Saturday, March 14th.

GOOD NEWS!!

Our Denver Office, located in the Ideal Building, Corner 17th and Champa Streets, and our Los Angeles Office at 733 South Olive Street, and our San Francisco Office at 104 Golden Gate Avenue, are now open and ready to supply the Western Exhibitors with our Money Getting Feature Films:

"THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII" in 8 parts.
"TRIUMPH OF AN EMPEROR" in 5 parts.
"JOAN OF ARC" in 5 parts.
"THE CONSPIRACY" in 4 parts.
"PROTEA" in 5 parts.
"WHAT THE GODS DECREE" in 4 parts.
"THE TWO SERGEANTS" in 5 parts.
"SAPHO" in 4 parts.
"JACK" in 4 parts.
"The HEART of a POLICE OFFICER" in 4 parts.
"A RAG-PICKER OF PARIS" in 3 parts.
"THE GOLDEN CROSS" in 3 parts.
"THE BLIND SCULPTOR" in 2 parts.

Eight more offices to be opened soon in United States and Canada. Watch for our announcement of future plans!

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

130 WEST FORTY-SIXTH STREET

BRANCH OFFICES:

New York,	Boston,	Pittsburg,	New Orleans,
Philadelphia,	Indianapolis,	Atlanta,	Washington,
Cleveland,	Chicago,	Buffalo,	Denver,
Detroit,	Kansas City,	St. Louis,	Los Angeles,
Minneapolis,	Cincinnati,	Dallas,	San Francisco.

MARC MacDERMOTT

In New Edison Series

TEN FILMS

Released the first and third Tuesdays
Beginning April 7th with

THE BLACK MASK

These stories will appear simultaneously in "Popular Magazine."

The Man Who Disappeared

By Richard Washburn Child

Nelson Wales kills the butler in his own home and is caught red-handed by John Perriton, who loves Nelson's sister. The girl appears and John, to shield her brother, puts on a mask and attempts to escape, but the girl tears it off his face and he stands before her apparently guilty of murder. He becomes a fugitive from justice, a hunted man. This dramatic series traces his adventures in the lower strata of life.

The most thrillingly dramatic series yet announced

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
239 Lakeside Avenue
Orange, N. J.

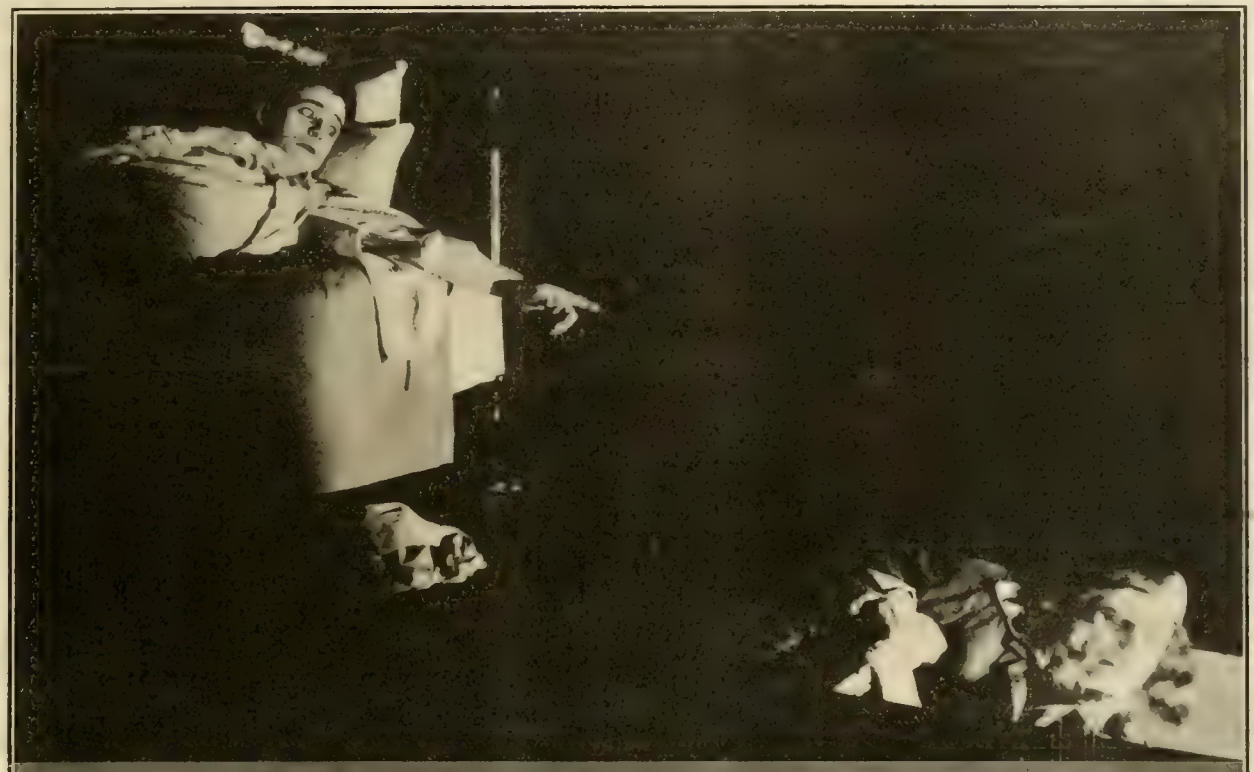
·LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·VIENNA·BRUSSELS·ROME·MILAN·HAMBURG·

PATHÉ

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·ATHENS·ROSSTOFF·SYDNEY·ALGIERS·SINGAPORE·SHANGHAI·MANILA·CAIRO·HONGKONG·BACOU·

·BUENOS AIRES·MEXICO·RIO JANEIRO·BARCELONA·BELGRADE·BUCAREST·ZURICH·WARSAW·SOFIA·MARSEILLES·BUDAPEST·



THE GHOST

IN THREE PARTS.

A DRAMA THAT WILL PROFOUNDLY INTEREST EVERY ONE WHO SEES IT.

FEATURING:

CRANE WILBUR.

RELEASED SATURDAY, APRIL 18TH.

THIS FILM IS PRINTED ON CELLULOID STOCK.

INSIST UPON IT AT YOUR EXCHANGE. IF YOU CAN'T GET IT WRITE US AND WE WILL HELP YOU.

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE WHOLE WORLD

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST., JERSEY CITY, N. J.

·ST PETERSBURG·STOCKHOLM·DRESDEN·MADRID·ODESSA·MOSKOW·KIEW·

LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·ROME·MILAN·VIENNA·MADR

PATHÉ

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL

·KIEV·CAIRO·BOMBAY·SHANGHAI·SINGAPORE·HONGKONG·SMYRNA·ALGIERS·

GERM

FIVE

WONDERFUL IN STORY, ACT
TRUE MASTERPIECE MEASUR
EXCELLENCE. BOOK IT NOW
DONE SO. TO

→MARCH SI

THROUGH THE GENERAL FI
FEATURE PHOTO

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY
COVERS THE

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·MARSEILLES·NOUMEA·ZURICH·ODESSA·MOSC

TERSBURG·DRESDEN·HAMBURG·BRUSSELS·STOKHOLM·ATHENS·

PATHÉ

CITIES OF THE WORLD

INAL

REELS

NG AND PHOTOGRAPHY: A
ED BY EVERY STANDARD OF
IF YOU HAVE NOT ALREADY BE RELEASED

XTEENTH←

LM COMPANY AS A SPECIAL
PLAY MASTERPIECE.

BARCELONA·MEXICO·BUENOSAIRES·RIO JANEIRO·SYDNEY·MANILA·

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

WHOLE GLOBE

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST. JERSEY CITY, N.J.

STOFF·WARSAW·BAKU·BELGRADE·BATAVIA·BUCAREST·SOFIA·

LUBIN

Our Two-Reel Features on Wednesday and Thursday of Each Week Are Pictures of Exceptional Merit and They Are Booked by Every Successful Exhibitor.

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday

A Drama Every Friday

A Two Reel Feature Every Wednesday and Thursday

"The Weaker Brother"—Two Reels—Released Wednesday, March 18th.

EXTRAORDINARY FEATURES!

The best money-making features of the year, "The Third Degree," "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Battle of Shiloh" and "Through Fire to Fortune," were produced by Lubin. The coming features will prove equally profitable.

"The Gamblers" FIVE REELS — By Charles Klein

"The Daughters of Men" FIVE REELS — By Charles Klein

"Officer Jim" THREE REELS — By Lawrence S. McCloskey

IN PREPARATION AT ENORMOUS COST—

"The Wolf" FIVE REELS — By Eugene Walter

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK

"THE LAZIEST MAN"—Comedy	Tuesday, March 17th
"THE WEAKER BROTHER"—Two Reel Military Drama	Wednesday, March 18th
"THE SECRET MARRIAGE"—Two Reel Drama	Thursday, March 19th
"THE PRICE"—Drama	Friday, March 20th
"SO LONG COUNT"—Comedy "A TRIP TO THE MOON"—Animated Comedy } Split Reel	Saturday, March 21st

SPECIALLY DESIGNED POSTERS

One and Three Sheets with Single and Split Reels—One, Three and Six Sheets with Multiple features. Order from your Exchange or the A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

LUBIN

Lubin Manufacturing Co.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office, 154 West Lake Street

LUBIN

FOR NAPOLEON AND FRANCE

In Six Parts

Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine.

A Picture of Nation-wide Appeal!

EVERY NATIONALITY, EVERY RACE, FROM SCHOOL BOY TO GRANDPARENTS, IS FAMILIAR MORE OR LESS WITH THE HISTORY OF NAPOLEON.

YOU BOOK A MIGHTY SUBJECT BEARING A MIGHTY NAME—THE MAGNETIC WONDERS OF THAT WORD, "NAPOLEON," WHICH STIRRED A MILLION SOULS A CENTURY AGO, STILL HOLDS ITS POWER—is an immensely spectacular bit of picture-making, historically true from the skirmish that started it to the successful charge that ended it.

The Battle of Austerlitz

THROUGHOUT RUNS A DELIGHTFUL LOVE STORY which brings with it charming glimpses of ancient chateaus and the quaint social life of the day.

Made by "CINES"—Enough in itself to mark it with the stamp of sterling quality.

Kleine-Celio

Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine.

THE PRICE of SILENCE

(In Two Parts)

Release Tuesday, March 31st, 1914

Leading an evil life, the Duke marries and reforms—but his past returns and shadows his good intentions—A delightful adventure story illustrating the old saw that the dead past is never dead.

1, 3 and 6 sheets with this subject.

RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY.

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State Street CHICAGO, ILL.

VITAGRAPH

"OLD RELIABLE"
In Two Parts. Released Saturday, March 21st

Every Week

Two Vitagraph Special Features

Each in Two Parts

Tuesday and Saturday

Every Week

A Comedy every Wednesday and Friday.

"HER HUSBAND"
In Two Parts. Released Tuesday, March 24th.

"AUNTIE"

Drama. Monday, March 16th

She protects a young girl from becoming a victim to foolish ambitions. An old gentleman, who has innocently aroused them, falls in love with Auntie and there are two engagements instead of one. Margaret Gibson, George Cooper, Karl Formes and Loyola O'Connor, are the cast.

"THE PRICE OF VANITY"

Drama. Special Two-Part Feature

Tuesday, March 17th

Guilty of extravagance to satisfy her vanity, a wife incites her husband's jealousy. He accuses their mutual friend of being his rival. The friend brings about their reconciliation and proves his innocence. Naomi Childers, Arthur Ashley and William Humphrey are the principals.

"THE GHOSTS"

Comedy. Wednesday, March 18th

He is a sleep-walker? He proved to be the ghost, who hides his own clothes and finds them again. He frightens all the girls, but one, who has courage enough to marry him. Myrtle Gonzalez, George Cooper, Margaret Gibson are among the players cast.

"THE IDLER"

Drama. Thursday, March 19th

Given every advantage, he neglects his opportunities. Finding himself in poverty, from which he had been taken when a child, he redeems himself and makes good, repaying his benefactors. S. Rankin Drew, Darwin Karr, Rose Tapley, Bobby Connelly, Tefft Johnson and Julia Swayne Gordon are the all-star cast.

"A MODEL YOUNG MAN"

Comedy. Friday, March 20th

He is more lucky than model. He is almost found out. His quick wit and his grandfather's generosity save him. Sidney Drew keeps the fun and something doing all the time.

"OLD RELIABLE"

Drama. Two-Part Special Feature

Saturday, March 21st

He suffers ten years for another's crime, to protect his employer from the disgrace of his son's misdeeds. In the end his innocence is established and the guilty man is punished. Van Dyke Brooke, Norma Talmadge and Leo Delaney are featured.

SIX A WEEK

"THE WOMAN IN BLACK"
Comedy.....MONDAY, MARCH 23rd
"HER HUSBAND"
Drama—Two-Part Special Feature.....TUESDAY, MARCH 24th
"THE HALL-ROOM RIVALS"
Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th
"CHANLER RAO, CRIMINAL EXPERT"
Drama.....THURSDAY, MARCH 26th
"MILLIONS FOR DEFENCE"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, MARCH 27th
"NEVER AGAIN"
Comedy—Two-Part Special Feature.....SATURDAY, MARCH 28th

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY RELEASES A SPECIAL FEATURE IN TWO PARTS EVERY TUESDAY AND SATURDAY AND A COMEDY EVERY WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS—7 x 9 PHOTOS OF VITAGRAPH PLAYERS.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES, SURPASSING ALL PREVIOUS VITAGRAPH ACHIEVEMENTS.

"LOST IN MID-OCEAN", in Three Parts, Special Service, Released by the General Film Company.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL SERVICE FEATURE

IN THREE PARTS

Released by the General Film Company, Monday, March 23rd

Kidnapped in Japan from her husband, the young wife escapes from her villainous captors. She sails for America. The steamer strikes an iceberg and is lost in mid-ocean. Clinging to a part of the wreckage, the girl is saved. All trace of her husband is lost until she is rescued from a burning building and they are strangely reunited.

AN OVERTOWERING DRAMATIC MASTERPIECE
THE COMPOSITE OF ALL THAT IS THRILLING AND INTENSE
THE BIG DRAWING CARD OF 1914

A Passover Miracle

A Two-Part Drama based upon the Jewish Passover

A powerful story of a prodigal son's return produced with the assistance of the Bureau of Education of the Jewish Community, of New York (The Kehillah). Every detail of the Passover celebration absolutely authentic. Titles in both Yiddish and English.

Released, Monday, March 30th

Superb, 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters depicting striking scenes.

THE RAID OF THE RED MARAUDERS

(Length 1,500 ft.)

An Exciting Two-Part Romance of the West

The terrific hand-to-hand struggle between the ambushed troopers and the Indians, one of the many stirring incidents.

(On the same Reel)

PROFESSOR OLDBOY'S REJUVENATOR

(Length 500 ft.)

Oldboy invents a machine which restores youth. He tries it on himself—and then things happen. One long laugh.

Released Wednesday, April 1st

Get Kalem's Special 1, 3 and 6-Sheets and Attract the Crowd.

THE CONFISCATED COUNT

How the lovers fool a title-mad mother, will bring laugh after laugh.

(On the same Reel)

HISTORIC TARRYTOWN

The spot where Major Andre was captured during the Revolutionary War, one of the many highly interesting scenes shown.

Released Friday April 3rd

FAST FREIGHT 3205

Annie's superb heroism in averting a frightful train wreck results in a situation filled with suspense.

Released Saturday, April 4th
Striking 1 and 3-Sheet Posters

Released through Special Feature Department of the General Film Company.

THE BOER WAR
(In Five Parts)

WOLFE, or THE CONQUEST OF QUEBEC
(In Five Parts)

THE DEATH SIGN AT HIGH NOON
(In Two Parts)

A CELEBRATED CASE
(In Four Parts)

FRANCIS MARION, THE SWAMP FOX
(In Three Parts)

THE OTHER HALF OF THE NOTE
(In Two Parts)

KALEM COMPANY

235-239 West 23rd Street NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. Telephone: Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 a year

ADVERTISING RATES.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 1594.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, March 21, 1914.

Facts and Comments

A JURY of twelve men taken from various walks of life looked at certain "white slave" films whose promoters had been indicted for exhibiting immoral, indecent and obscene pictures. The exhibition was part of the proceedings in the Court of General Sessions of New York County, and had been arranged by the prosecuting attorney, who chose this way of putting the pictures in evidence and submitting them to the jury. No other proof or testimony of any kind was offered by the prosecution, and after the defense had called some witnesses as to the previous good reputation of one of the accused, the jury retired for deliberation. In thirty-five minutes they returned with a verdict of guilty and a recommendation for mercy. The recommendation of mercy was inspired by the feeling probably that other men had been guilty of much the same offence and had gone unwhipped of justice. One cannot say that this recommendation was logical, but it was natural under the circumstances.

*

It is needless to say that the conviction of these promoters is a triumph for common decency. It is a refutation of the belief that the public of New York will, as the saying goes, tolerate anything. The reputation of this city as a "wicked town" is due to the visiting thousands who come here every day in the year and, freed from the wholesome restraints of their own firesides, have what they are pleased to think amounts to a riotous time. Twelve typical New Yorkers and a typical New York judge have furnished proof that they are not a bit different from other Americans when it comes to passing upon the question of what is obviously indecent and obscene.

*

The conviction establishes a valuable precedent not only for New York but for every state in the Union. By reason of this conviction the courts in other states will have less difficulty in dealing with the question of what is obviously indecent and obscene. Judge Swann, who presided at the trial of the promoters, declared that the people had gone "sex-mad" and that the filming of the so-called white slave traffic was perhaps due to this strange mania. He very appropriately thanked the jury for their verdict of guilty. Had the jury acquitted the indicted men, it would have been taken as an approval of such films, and as such it would have been used all over the country by the diligent and unscrupulous press agents. Judge Swann also said that the film "reeked of the sewer," giving in almost the same language the reason of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD for refusing to soil its pages with any advertisements of such films. We have only one regret in the matter. The men who have just been found guilty are no more so than others, some of whom are still trading on the "sex-madness" under the wretched pretense of uplifting at an average of a quarter of a dollar per uplift.

*

Perhaps the greatest significance of the decision lies in the fact that it proves most eloquently how superfluous censorship is. On the viciousness of censorship we have declared ourselves on more than one occasion, and here we have the amplest proof that it is as needless as it is vicious. The laws now on the statute books, wherever sanely and conscientiously enforced, are quite sufficient to deal with objectionable films. If the law against indecent exhibitions, which is the law in every state in the Union, is strong enough to deal with the "sewer-films" it is strong enough to deal with any other bad films, and no previous restraint of either producer, distributor or exhibitor is at all necessary. The plain people of the country, exactly the type which composes the average jury in the criminal courts, can be depended upon to arrive at the right conclusion in such matters, nine times out of ten. They will not be disposed toward puritanism or fanaticism, but will on the whole be more liable to err on the liberal than on the illiberal side. Human nature is so constituted that it can tell by instinct what is merely doubtful and problematical and what is plain filth. A decision like this will do more to put the fear of the decent citizenship of the country into the producers of bad films than an irresponsible and unconstitutional censorship.

*

The decision of the Appellate Division reversing the ruling of the lower court in the case of Hammerstein against Belasco must not be taken as passing upon the main question at issue, i. e., whether the class and character of a theater suffers through the exhibition therein of motion pictures. The Appellate Court grants an injunction against the further use of the Republic Theater as a motion picture house and thus reverses the lower court, but it leaves the material question of whether the Republic would depreciate through motion picture exhibitions to be decided at the trial of the action. In other words, its action is based upon purely technical grounds and does not enter into the real merits of the controversy at all. The reason for the decision of the appellate tribunal in allowing a preliminary injunction lies in the extrahazardous character of the motion picture as an insurance risk. The character of the motion picture entertainment as such is not involved in this decision at all.

Quality's Deadliest Foe

By W. Stephen Bush

NEXT to the childish belief that Heaven smiles with special favor upon the nickel as the proper price of admission into a motion picture theater, the most pernicious heresy is the faith in the daily change. It is impossible for the daily change to co-exist with quality. We are glad to observe that in some portions of the country the daily change is dying out, but it still prevails in the vast majority of motion picture houses.

The reason for the daily change obsession is not far to seek. It is the old story of the "line of least resistance." It is much easier to run a theater on the daily change program than on the plan of quality programs and a longer run. The daily change theater depends primarily on the express companies. As long as the deliveries are regular, any person who is mentally strong enough to be at large may run the theater with the daily change.

Easy, fatally easy as it is to fall into the rut of the daily change, it is the hardest work in the amusement world to drop it. Your audience in the course of time quite naturally ceases to care for quality. You have accustomed them to look not for better but for newer pictures. You may know from your own inspection that Monday's release in your service is very strong and Tuesday's release horribly weak. Your natural instinct as a sane person would be to skip the Tuesday production and give your audience two days or more of the stronger Monday release. It is too late to mend. An appeal to the audience on the ground of superior quality is ineffective, for you yourself have done your worst to spoil them. They want to see the newer picture. They may have enough discrimination left to damn it as it deserves to be damned, and thus you as an exhibitor lose out twice in the same transaction. First, you suffer through creating a fictitious standard of values, and secondly, you suffer through being unable to satisfactorily meet the very taste that you yourself have helped to create. You have trained your audience to expect terrapin, filet mignon, and all the best things on the bill of fare, and to expect it not only on festive occasions but as part of their everyday diet. In other words, you have undertaken to supply a demand which no human being can indefinitely supply.

It would be bad enough if you had no competition. The fact is that competition is growing stronger every day, and competition among daily change theaters is deadly and ruinous. It is a physical impossibility to avoid "repeaters." You must of necessity overfeed your public and make it sick. The patronage of your whole city is bound to suffer and the popularity of the picture becomes a thing of the past.

It may seem to some that this daily change mania is or ought to be profitable to the producer. It may be while he is able to sell or lease his product on compulsory standing orders and while he has little competition. Unless these conditions, always abnormal and transient, are present, the daily change hurts the producer really far more than either exchange or exhibitor. The producer takes the biggest risks in the industry. He plays with the largest stakes. He is the man engaged in the extra-hazardous occupation of gauging, or rather guessing, the public taste and demand. He must stand the brunt of experimenting, and his share of any loss is always the lion's share. He is the leader who explores at his own cost and peril the unknown future. Under a daily change system the rental life of any film is low. There is a fierce demand for the "new stuff," but when a reel is ten days in service it is hard to place. It is considered old.

Even at a very low cost of the negative, no profit can be realized if the life of the subject ends in fifteen or twenty days. The producer who tries to sacrifice quality to quantity is embarked for a long journey up Salt River. The daily change forces him to sacrifice quality. It also forces him into overproduction of the worst kind. Daily change of necessity begets waste, and who pays for this waste but the producer? The exchange and the exhibitor may be forced to share in a slight degree, but the main waste and damage and burden inevitably falls upon the producer. Then what has he to gain by aiding a system of daily changes? Absolutely nothing. Look about you these days, and who is making the most money among producers? In proportion to the money invested and expended, the companies catering to quality and utterly rejecting the time-table methods of production stand at or very near the top of the list.

Golden opportunities await the exhibitor with judgment and courage. This is the day for the high-priced show of quality. A year or even six months from now everybody will be doing it. There are men—altogether too many of them in the exhibiting ranks—who imagine that a high-priced show of quality is impossible in any city where the prevailing price is five cents. As a matter of cold fact, these are the very towns where a high-priced entertainment of corresponding quality will pay best. The public, let us admit, are not educated to paying more than the nickel. Five cents, as one of our cavemen friends put it, is "their speed." I doubt this assertion, and am rather inclined that the cavemen speak of their own speed rather than the speed of their audiences.

Let us, however, for the sake of argument assume that the public will take unkindly to a higher price of admission. Whose fault is that? The fault of the show. The show is worth just five cents and no more. It makes one sick to hear the cavemen say that the "fellow down the street" runs eight reels and two acts of vaudeville for five cents and that therefore competition with him is out of the question. There is a public that will respond to offerings of quantity, but there is also a public that positively will respond to quality. I mean, of course, quality of films first and foremost. Quality, however, must not be confined to films. There must be the quality atmosphere. With a substantial seating capacity, a clean house, improved and different methods of presentation, facilities, for the comfort of the patrons, personal attention, in addition to quality films, will fetch high prices as sure as water will run down a hill.

Nor is this by any means a mere hope or theory. As we have been at pains to point out on more than one occasion, the European exhibitor, with no greater facilities than his American colleagues, has succeeded in raising his price to what to-day often amounts to ten times the amount of the average admission here. He could not do this if the daily change were to overwhelm Europe tomorrow. Immediately there would be competition all around and quality would suffer severely. Without quality there would no longer be any justification for substantial prices of admission. I firmly believe that the introduction of the daily change would bring about a panic and a loss which it would take considerable time to repair. The absence of the daily change in practically all of Europe is chiefly responsible for the good prices of admission. Here is a well-known fact to ponder over and to pattern after.

When Features Are Failures

By Louis Reeves Harrison

"BE charitable to the erring" is a sentiment that every fair-minded critic must feel in dealing with the big photodramas of this period that are honestly intended and attempted with fine purpose. There is a great deal for all of us to learn in a new art like this. It is no longer denied that the visualization of a story of human life is bound to suffer from structural defects without two architects, one who can design a complete plan and one who can superintend the execution of such a plan. No first-class producer now attempts to build the complex structure of a feature play without a carefully prepared design, but these are not always to be had for the asking. Few authors of merit have more than a general idea of how the photoplay should be shaped, and directors who do know too often lack either intellectual qualification or that sincerity of purpose which cannot be vitiated by petty vanity or temporary advantage. One result is scarcity of good features.

The idea that any old thing will do for screen exhibition is no longer a safe one to cherish. A survival of the strongest and the fittest this year is bound to involve elimination of producers who cannot be brought to realize that the leading idea behind a visualized entertainment is that of telling an interesting story. That is what the audience wants—a live story, not a dead one. The mainspring of the whole business is the art of story telling—a brilliant critic calls it the "fine art of lying." He puts it humorously, "Many a young man starts in life with a natural gift for exaggeration which, if nurtured in congenial and sympathetic surroundings, or by imitation of the best models, might grow into something really great and wonderful."

"As a rule, he comes to nothing. He either falls into careless habits of accuracy, or takes to frequenting the society of the aged and well-informed. Both things are fatal to his imagination, as indeed they would be fatal to the imagination of anybody, and in a short time he develops a morbid and unhealthy faculty of truth-telling, begins to verify all statements made in his presence, and often ends by writing stories so like life that no one can possibly believe in their probability. His is simply one example out of many; and if something cannot be done to check, or at least to modify, our monstrous worship of facts, Art will become sterile, and Beauty will pass away from the land."

Behind this irony is knowledge that trying to make a story too true often robs it of reality. The true novelist does not write fiction as a sense of duty; he neither aims to be grandiose nor thrusts moral platitudes upon us, as do many amateur scenario writers. He does not tell us that the hero is very, very good and the villain very, very bad, so that you may know just how things are going to turn out at the end. He does not inflict upon us the long and tedious lives of people who are absolutely without interest. In order to tell a long story of absorbing interest, such as is an absolute necessity for feature plays. the author must, it would seem, have some natural qualification and training for doing it.

What kind of men are writing the feature plays?

One has a pretty actress to exploit. Very good. A woman of beauty and charming personality is a big factor in the matter of screen interpretation, particularly if she knows how to portray character and emotion. She is a very important factor, one of the big wheels of a complicated mechanism, and that is all. To merely show that she is a charming woman, and one capable of responding to opportunity can be done in one reel if she is given opportunity, but an exhibition of five reels, requiring an hour and a half to project on the screen, requires also the unfolding of other sources of pleasure, chief among which is suspense as to the outcome of a well-contrived and deeply interesting situation.

Another writer of feature plays has a matter of direct personal vanity to exploit, that desire for publicity which is excusable in the actor, which never animated Stevenson, Hawthorne, Bronte or other inspired authors of fiction. The desire to see one's name on the screen, to achieve immortality by clumsy plagiarism, is common enough, Dieu sait, but it is not indicative of a mind so illuminating as to fire those of great mixed audiences in all parts of the world. Your hack writer is not so bad. Very often he has met with minor success as a writer of stage plays—he has a well-assorted box of tricks to draw from—and he may do fairly well if that is enough, but we need not look to him for enlivening originality of plot or treatment.

Almost from the beginning of my connection with moving picture production — that beginning was writing sketches which the incomparable Griffith visualized—I was impressed with the limitless opportunity afforded by this newest and most beautiful of arts for the diffusion of ideas ethical and artistic by means of entertaining stories circulated among the unprivileged millions. By unprivileged, I mean those of scant leisure. If a thinker and observer had something worth while to communicate, here was an attractive medium of expression, through which human minds could be furnished with what might benefit as well as brighten and cheer them.

To do that we must have authors. To belong to that company, which has included the greatest of human minds, a man must have something more in him than a desire to exploit himself, or a charming woman, or a fad—he must reach the highest development of his own abilities, acquire that power which sincerity of purpose only can give to win the human heart and mind and to deserve immortal recollection. Where are those authors? If the brightest intellects of to-day, the finest creative talent, found in this medium the encouragement offered in all other arts of expression, it must be obvious that a tremendous advance of quality would result.

The main object of a big feature is to visualize a story that will hold the average audience enthralled. To visualize a story that will hold the average audience enthralled is the sole object of everything done in every department of finance, factory, acting, directing, marketing, every effort put forth in making and selling the product—success or failure depends heavily upon visualizing such a story—the story is vital—the story is the essence of the whole product—the story is the blood and soul of success—when well-made features are failures, it is because the story has not been considered as it should have been.

It is safe to say that there is not a man of clear vision and sound common sense in the business to-day who does not realize this. If greed stands in the way, it is not even self-advantageous. The first producer to accord full recognition to superior authorship will mark a new era in the business, will establish a brand destined to set the pace for all others, and, keep the prophecy in mind, he will appear in the field before the close of 1914. Then will the exhibitor get the profit he deserves. He, of all others, is the big loser "When Features Are Failures."

Rex E. Beach

Author of "The Spoilers" Sees Filmed Story Passed by Chicago Censors, and Gives an Interesting Interview to World Representative.

By James S. McQuade.

REX E. BEACH spent several days in Chicago last week. It was a business visit, for, first and foremost, he desired to be present at the reviewing of "The Spoilers" by the Chicago censor board, a Selig photodrama adapted from his famous story of the far North, and in the next place he had other interests to look after, as will be shown.

Mr. Beach had already seen the films run off in New York, while being viewed by the National Board of Censors, and he had been stirred by the spontaneous outburst of applause given the pictures by the staid members. Doubtless, with anxiety for the welfare of this favorite child of his imagination in Chicago, after hearing exaggerated stories of the ruthless slaughter of films by the Chicago censor board, he hurried on here to be present at the killing, if any killing there was to be.

He found, however, that his fears were groundless and that his child of the North, as shown in Selig's nine-part production, has an appeal that knows no north, south, east or west in this country. This appeal, based on elemental Americanism, moved the Chicago board to such a pitch of enthusiasm that if any of the members brought cutting implements with him or her, he or she forgot to use them. And so "The Spoilers" was passed without weakening any of the great scenes of the story, as given in Beach's book. For this we are thankful, as we are also for the preservation of the good name of Chicago.

Rex Beach.

I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Beach during his visit and had a brief, informal chat with him. One cannot help comparing, almost at first sight, the fine physique of Mr. Beach with the powerful, masterful climaxes in "The Spoilers." No puny, thin-blooded man—no matter what the caliber of his brain—could have given us that descriptive fight between Glenister and McNamara, or the faro bank scene in the dance hall. A man must be able to go through the mill before he can know how hard it grinds.

Naturally, our short conversation touched on moving pictures. Mr. Beach acknowledged that he had been intensely interested in the "game" for some time. He referred to his experience, about six years ago, when asked to write a one-reel scenario for a prominent New York manufacturer. He had found it difficult, and, personally, unsatisfactory, and suggested to this manufacturer, or his representative, that works of fiction—the best efforts of prominent authors—should be put in scenario form. The objection made then was, that it would be impossible to hold together a producing company for the length of time required to complete productions on so large a scale. And there was also the question of lack of demand for such subjects at the time.

"Now the demand for such material for scenarios is so great that all fictional authors of prominence are fairly besieged for photoplay rights," said Mr. Beach.

Mr. Beach believes that, in the near future, there will be valuable photoplay serial rights for works of fiction, with stories suitable for photodramatic purposes, just as there are now valuable serial rights for periodicals. He also believes that the photoplay serial rights will be the more valuable. He referred to the "Kathlyn" series by way of illustration. He was careful to emphasize that such serial film stories must abound in adventure, and be capable of being broken up, so that the various climaxes shall not be merely episodical, but closely connected parts as in the written serial.

Answering a question, Mr. Beach was not quite certain that a serial filmed story would be as valuable, in the way of publicity, for the sale of the story in book form as a serial story in a periodical. The test must first be made to decide the question definitely. He rather inclined to the opinion that the serial story in a periodical would lead to a larger sale of the book, for the reason that there is such a thing as over-serialization. He drew attention to the fact that the appearance of a story in serial form, in a monthly periodical of good circulation, will bring a better sale for the book than does a serial in a weekly periodical, with a circulation many thousand times larger. The filmed serial story would reach vastly more people than a serial in any publication, and would thus tend to reduce the sales of the book.

On being asked how he was pleased with the Selig production of "The Spoilers," Mr. Beach stated that all his expectations had been far exceeded.

"An author may feel proud and plume himself when he has succeeded in writing a successful book, in 100,000 or 125,000 words," said Mr. Beach; "but when he sees the pith and marrow of it—including the characters, atmosphere, and story—visualized in moving pictures, in which only 200 or 300 words are used for sub-titles, he cannot but feel the great superiority of moving pictures over the written word."

He paid high tribute to the work of Producer Grandon, William Farnum, Miss Kathlyn Williams, Thomas Santschi and other photoplayers in the production; and expressed regret that he had missed much valuable education by not being present while the production was under way. In the future, Mr. Beach intends to be right on the spot during the production of his other available works.

"I intend to do this not from any desire or intention to participate in any way as a producer," he said. "I desire rather to be on hand to make suggestions that may tend to give stronger local color to a scene, or to bring out more strongly, at points, the personality of a character."

This intention of Mr. Beach is a good one, for be the producer ever so capable there are times when the author is needed to give him a full view of what was in his mind's eye at the time some scene was described.

Speaking about the comparative returns to an author from dramatic and photodramatic rights for adaptations, Mr. Beach considered them about equal. Since many dramatic adaptations prove failures, and that one only may be successful, the profits of the latter, for one or more seasons, will still be large. This one success, with respect to profits, would pretty well balance the returns from photodramatic adaptations, where each of the photodramas makes profits, large or small.

When asked if he intended having any more of his books used for scenario purposes, Mr. Beach informed me that he had just arranged with Mr. Selig for the photodramatic rights of his great tropical story, "The Ne'er Do Well." This work he considers eminently fitted for a photoplay, even better than "The Spoilers." Then he has in mind five or six other stories, all suited for stirring photoplays, in the hands of expert scenario writers. It is understood that Mr. Selig has the rights to all of them for photodramatic purposes.

As we said adieu, Mr. Beach told me that in writing his future books he will make it a point to keep the camera well before his mind's eye. He also expressed his faith in a marvelous future for pictures. Indeed, he spoke quite casually about our having our morning news read from a screen in our breakfast rooms, in the near future.

WILL BUILD THEATER.

B. F. Liddon, Corinth, Miss., is preparing his own plans for a moving picture theater in that town. The plans call for a house with 700 seats. It will be handsomely equipped throughout, and will be one of the finest 5 cent picture houses in the South.

"The Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy."

A Two-Part Story of Common Folks, by Selig—Released Through General Film Co.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

IF the photodrama is to fulfill its mission it must be given free rein, within the bounds of good taste and propriety, to depict truthfully life as it is, in all its phases. The sugar coating and the pruning which some censors of moving pictures believe in are ethically false, since they contribute to distorted views of life and character. The photodrama wields a powerful influence, and this influence should be exercised to visualize the perils of wrongdoing, the insidious growth of bad habits and the disintegrating effects of evil association on character. I truly believe that the moving picture will be the medium, in the near future, through which the most powerful sermons yet preached will reach world audiences; and I believe, too that these visual sermons will effect reformations in character, of such wide scope and permanence that humanity will be raised to a higher plane of thought and action.

Scene from "The Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy" (Selig.)

The effect created by viewing the Selig two-part subject, "The Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy," has led to the preface just made to my review of these films. The story is laid in the East Side of New York City, among what one might call "submerged" society, as distinguished from the underworld. We see the unsophisticated working girl, weary of her lonely room, seeking to relieve the monotony of her life by attending a dance hall in the vicinity. Her girl companions are aware of the snares laid in the place and are always accompanied by their "steadies." Our girl, Nance, is looked upon immediately as a most desirable acquisition by the evil-visaged cigarette-smoking proprietor of the place.

Once in a while, during the changing scenes in the dance hall, we get occasional glimpses of the adjoining bar, run on the premises, where drinks are served. Once we catch the sight of Nance as she drinks her first glass of wine, one of the strong strands of the web which the spider-like proprietor is weaving around her.

But a good angel is hovering near in the person of one Sandy McCarthy, like Nance herself, of Celtic blood, and pureminded and fresh from the country, whence the memory of his good old mother and a sweet colleen of a sister follow him into the great city's haunts. The call of race and of hearts bring the two together, and Sandy in a manful way tries to break the meshes of the web that the proprietor is forming.

One night, the night on which he had seen with his own eyes that Nance had been tempted to take her first drink by the proprietor, he attempts to prevent that sleek rascal from escorting her home; but Nance snubs him and takes the arm of the man who seeks her ruin. That very night the dance hall man forces his caresses upon her. Pure of heart, she repulses him with anger, her screams bringing the landlord to the spot, and the baffled spider slinks away into the darkness.

Her eyes being opened, Nance spends the following Sunday in the woods with Sandy, and he tells her of his love and of his great wish to marry her. But during the week following the loneliness of her room and the alluring dance, in which her buoyant girlish spirit delights, cause her to go once more to the dance hall, despite the efforts of Sandy to prevent it. Sandy follows.

Scene from "The Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy" (Selig.)

We see Nance treading the mazes of a waltz in the arms of the man who had insulted her, and what seems worse, enjoying herself hugely. During an interval a poor derelict of a woman, Mame, approaches the dance hall owner and in maudlin condition tries to kiss him. She is brutally knocked down and her little boy who has come to take her home attacks the man with fury. He, too, is knocked down.

Nance stands by horrified at the sight. Then Sandy rushes on the scene, and with a catapult right to the jaw floors the bully for the count. Nance then accompanies Sandy to the pure outside air, and they plight their troth for better or for worse.

Later, while walking along the water front, they prevent the poor derelict, Mame, from drowning herself, and accompany her and her devoted child, Dicky, to their squalid home, where an enraged and sodden husband awaits the woman. Nance and Sandy play the parts of peacemakers with such success that the husband and wife become reconciled, and so the pictures leave them, in the firm resolve to travel the straight path together.

That is the story, and to me, as it is revealed in the Selig pictures, it makes a tremendous appeal for right-doing. The little side lights which reveal the snares of the dance hall are absolutely necessary to accentuate the story, and should not be cut by any censor, however seriously he or she may take himself or herself.

The acting of Miss Bessie Eyton in the part of Nance is very pleasing to the critical eye at all times. In the strong character part of Mame, Miss Eugenie Besserer meets the demands with fine talent. Her characterization may aptly be termed a finished study. Accomplished as Wheeler Oakman and Joe King are in the respective rôes of the dance hall keeper and Sandy, I think it only just that little Roy Clark should first be complimented on his really admirable appearance as Dicky, the devoted son of Mame. Frank Clark carries the part of Ryan, husband to Mame and father of Dicky, creditably. The whole production bears the marks of the master hand of Producer Colin Campbell.

The release date is March 30.

WILL OPEN HOUSE APRIL 1.

C. N. Waters, of Corry, Pa., will open on April 1, a moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 600. The name of the new house is the Lyric, and it will be absolutely fireproof in every respect. Mr. Waters has had ten years' experience in the moving picture business.

"The Dream Woman"

A Sensational Picture of Wilkie Collins' Hair-Raising Novel Made by Madame Blaché With Marvelous Art.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE effect of real sensations when artistically produced is tremendous. Wilkie Collins was a master of the sensational and his popularity was and is immense. In this picture of "The Dream Woman," which is to be distributed by The Box Office Attraction Film Rental Company and which was produced by Madame Blaché, the startling, terrific story is adequately illustrated. It is an offering of the get-hold-and-keep-hold-of-you kind from its opening to the close of its fourth reel, where it ends with an apt quotation from Shakespeare. One has to wonder how it was accomplished and why it is that all pictures are not also as effective.

Scene from "The Dream Woman" (Blaché).

It must be admitted that the producer and writer of this picture started with a first class subject; the story is full of action. But no story is a picture scenario until it is truly visualized and the scheme set down so that it can be followed. Collins, in writing the story, had to discard much material that would not have been helpful in the final effect he desired. In making the picture, the producer has discarded all except what she needed for her peculiar effect. But the telling quality of the picture comes most from the fact that, by the mysterious alchemy of art she had changed what material she did use into something her own, fresh, new, life-like, of today. The really big thing about the picture is that no one can tell that there was any part of it that interested her less than any other part. It is even. There are scenes in it that inspire more awe than others—take that old inn as a picture of loneliness, dreary and forlorn; take those snowy fields into which poor Francis is driven after the landlord sends him out, what a terrible "blasted heath" effect they have—but there is no scene in it that isn't just as adequate as any, to carry the part of the weird tale that it sets forth. It is a picture in which minute details have been considered. And its producer hasn't given us a chance to say, "Oh this is only a picture after all." We don't say anything while it is on, we just watch.

One hardly knows whether the story that it pictures really happened or whether someone in the picture's characters didn't dream it. The vague touch that the producer has given it all will keep the spectator wondering whether, as Shakespeare says, he himself isn't really of the "stuff that dreams are made on," or that perhaps he himself has dreamed it. All this puts it in the realm of the unsubstantial and keeps it, in spite of the horrific things it shows, from being rough. The tale is told by a groom to his employers and the final episode, which buttresses the man's story with an account of his death weirdly in line with his morbid fears, is pictured as a witness' account at the time of the trial; yet even that takes us out into the open spaces and leaves us, like the rope of the East Indian fakir, pointing upward, not supported by anything and filled with a sense of mystery.

The groom, so he tells his employers, is in dread of being killed on his birthday, which falls on the first of March, and by a woman who has been his wife. The strange beginning of it all lies in a dream in which he sees the woman. He hasn't as yet met her, but he lies down asleep in a lonely country inn, and in the middle of the night she comes, a dream woman, with a knife and stabs where he has been lying. His shouts disturb the house and he gets turned out of doors. She appears to him again on a snowy waste outside. When he tells his mother and his aunt of this, they too are distressed by it, making it seem as though there is more to it than to an ordinary dream. Then he forgets it and later meets the woman in person. She attracts and yet repels him; yet her power over him is such that he marries her. Their life isn't happy. She drinks heavily and one day in a fury he strikes her. She tries to stab him and he takes the knife from her; but she warns him that she will stab him yet and with the identical knife. He has a queer adventure with highwaymen, in which he is robbed and also loses the knife. He begins to dread every birthday and gets a job as groom in another country and it is to his new employers that he tells what it is that he dreads.

The closing part, which shows how he came to be bedridden on his next birthday and how the dream woman or the actual woman got her chance to "get" him is quite convincing. No one will be likely to think of any better ending nor carry away the feeling that it is only a show, and by no means real. The reason for the latter lies in the producer's art.

The only part of the production that it would be safe to criticise is the acting which, although it is better than the average all through, isn't absolutely even. There is no part of it that fails to get the story over, but now and then art is more apparent in the work of the players than nature. It is like watching marksmen shooting at a target—a bullet hits the center now and then, and now and then there is a mark in the outside rings reminding us that it is possible to miss. No player in the picture fails to be perfect at times and no player in it is perfect with outbreak all the time. The leads are carried by Fraunie Fraunholz and Claire Whitney. The photography and stagecraft are excellent. A very good offering to the public.

UNIQUE PROJECTION ROOM.

By F. H. Richardson.

By invitation of Mr. Johnson, publicity man of Warner's Features, Inc., I recently visited their offices, and inspected the projection and operating rooms attached thereto. The outfit is deserving of more than passing mention. It serves to illustrate the fact that even film producers and film purveyors are beginning to realize the importance of having their films displayed to customers under the best possible conditions.

The operating room is of ample size, though not large, and is equipped with two Simplex machines. Rubber matting covers the floor. The wires are all in a flat steel conduit, which looks very neat and is, in my opinion, greatly superior to the round article usually used. It was the first flat conduit I have seen in an operating room, and it certainly looks well. The size is probably ¾ or 1 inch by ½ inch.

While the operating room is excellent, it was not which attracted my particular attention, but, instead, the projection room. This room is about square in shape. The walls are paneled by heavy columns, round in shape and fluted; the chairs are of mahogany and the floor is covered with dark green carpet. The ceiling is heavily beamed and there are numerous decorative pillars. Around the room were several gigantic urns, standing fully four or five feet high, decorated in bronze and gold. The eight-foot picture is projected twenty-six feet to a mirror screen, and the illumination, on a low amperage, is brilliant.

Altogether the room is a decidedly unique and beautiful one. Its fitting up undoubtedly cost Warner's Features some considerable chunk of that article commonly designed as the "long green," but the result more than justifies the outlay.

STOLEN FILMS.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—I would like to insert in the World an account of the theft of five reels of film (licensed) by Charles Hicks, formerly of Arnot, Pa., present whereabouts unknown. Exhibited these reels at Ralston, Pa., Saturday night, February 14, and have not heard from him since. Has old Edison Model B machine and shows with gas in towns where no electricity is available. He is about five feet ten inches tall, sandy complexion, large lips with sores and frothy corners, blue eyes, wears checkered cap and overcoat, blue clothes. Anybody identifying him will confer a great favor by wiring me immediately.

Blossburg, Pa. J. F. COWLEY.

"The Criminal Path"

A Woman's Agony Vividly Pictured by Edith Hallor Is a Feature of a New Ramo Three-Part Offering.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE are really two detective stories, one the sequel of the other, in the new Ramo feature, 3,500 feet long, "The Criminal Path." This is not an accusation of it as entertainment; it may even be commendation. But it does show a tendency, often found in these feature multiple-reel offerings, to split themselves up. The truth is that there is a limit to the soul's ability to give any work of art its highest grade of attention. Whether that limit is one reel length of film, two or five or perhaps ten reels hasn't yet been determined. This is a sensational detective story and it seems probable that the soul's limit for such is nearer two reels than ten. If so, then the producer of it is wise in dividing his nearly four-reel length up into two separate stories—he has done so at any rate. And we note with pleasure that both the opening story and its sequel are good, interesting offerings.

Scene from "The Criminal Path" (Ramo).

The first story, as a piece of artistic construction, is worthy of high praise. In the gripping intensity, especially of the latter part of it where the criminals have accomplished their scheme to rob the bank and the detectives who have been watching them, with a different object in view, are drawing the net around them, there is something that reminds one of the power of a Poe. The bank with all its rooms and corners seems so real to us that it makes us think we are there ourselves. We see the thieves lying in wait and also the watchman as he goes about his work putting out the lights and punching his clocks. We wait while he leisurely comes through the door where the thieves are and then he is covered with a piece of carpet over his head and tied up. It is about this time that the detectives have broken into the house next door and discovered the tunnel made to give access to the bank and with their lantern are worming their way after the thugs who are captured just as they succeed in blowing the door off the safe.

The sequel, which begins after an interval of a few years, centers our interest in a girl who appeared in the first story as the daughter of one of the criminals. Entirely innocent, she had a job as cashier in a night restaurant. The chief detective, though he had formed a half friendship with her, suspected that she was an accomplice, and in order to insure her presence at the house when he made the "haul," "framed up" a job so that she would be fired by her boss. Such bits of realism in a picture give a sense of actuality to it and help a lot and we may add that the Ramo producer, Will S. Davis, is a past-master at such things.

This girl, she is played by Edith Hallor, had been sentenced with the others and has been released from jail, but can get no work. There are some scenes at a mission—these are rather trite—and a minister becomes interested in her. She at length gets a job as nurse to the child of the minister's sister who is married to a worthless profligate, This man makes advances to her. The setting is a beautifully and lavishly furnished house and the climax comes while there is a reception with dancing giving some perfectly made pictures of a dignified and distinguished social gathering. The man is found dead in the library on the second floor with a broken skull. It is the girl's father who has done it. He has at this time also been released and has come, hoping to get money from his daughter; has slipped in, grappled with the man, killed him and run away. The girl is suspected by the regular police and arrested. They put her through the third degree, and the agony she puts on her face makes these scenes terrible as pictures of pain. The detective suspects that there has been some other hand in the job and follows his clue till he finds the girl's father. The chase of this man gives one sensation after another, such as we expect in episodes of this nature. The father, wounded, hears of his daughter's arrest and confesses.

The photography is of high order and the lighting and staging in general have been handled throughout with exexceptional skill, so that although the second part lacks the fiber of the more closely written first part, the whole makes a diverting piece of entertainment and will be, we think, counted an acceptable offering as a feature picture.

MISS BILLINGTON DOES THE "IMPOSSIBLE."

FRANCELIA BILLINGTON, of New Majestic, has been associated with youthful parts so long, that the character she portrays in "The Rector's Story" will surprise many of her admirers. At the beginning of the play she is a young girl, but at its conclusion she appears as the minister's wife, a woman of 35. Thirty-five has often vainly endeavored to appear twenty, now Miss Billington, who has just passed her twentieth year, by means of a most deceptive make-up, has accomplished the seemingly impossible feat of looking like a woman of 35. Director Jack Adolphi, who is staging "The Glory of Whiney Durkel," an intensely dramatic play dealing with a village craven, suspected of a murder, who glories in his monetary notoriety, discovered that he had no actor available who could play the very important part of the real murderer, for whose crime Whiney Durkel is arrested. Whereupon the director astounded the entire Majestic Company by making up and playing the part himself, and doing it in a manner that showed him to be a finished actor. And so he is, for those who will remember the Vitagraph productions of a few years back will recall that "Napoleon" and "Ruy Blas" were portrayed by a slim, dark actor named Adolphi, who also won fame as Brutus in "Julius Caesar." William Nigh, who had the star part in the play, became very thoughtful after witnessing Adolphi's performance. "Great Scott," he exclaimed. "Adolphi is such a good actor that if the leading men don't give good performances he will play the principal parts himself." But Adolphi says he has troubles enough directing, and has no intention of playing principal roles except in an emergency such as the present one.

Francelia Billington.

STATE PRISONS INSTALLING PROJECTORS.

Among recent installations of Power's Cameragraph No. 6A projecting machines was one to the Auburn Prison of Auburn, New York. This machine was sold through the Auburn Film Co. of Auburn, who are to be congratulated on the sale, as the competition was very keen.

A Power's Cameragraph No. 6A projecting machine has been installed in the Clinton Prison at Dannemora, New York, and, needless to say, the prisoners await with eager interest for Sunday so they can see what is going on in the outside world. The pictures shown are of the regular film releases, but the pictures most liked are those showing current events.

More Churches Install Motion Pictures.

Power's Cameragraph No. 6A projecting machines have been installed in the St. James Methodist Church of New York City and the Church of St. Rose of Lima in Flatbush, Brooklyn.

Hippodromes's "America" in Pictures.

Great Stage Spectacle Being Photographed for the Screen —A Huge Undertaking Involving Big Figures.

By George Blaisdell.

ALL the world knows the Hippodrome of New York. No wise visitor in the metropolis leaves the city without attending at least one performance. Many New Yorkers make an annual pilgrimage to the big Sixth Avenue playhouse. It is no exaggeration to say that the productions staged there each year exceed in magnitude those of any other theater in the world. It has long been the ambition of Arthur Voegtlin, the man who year after year conceives these spectacles, to preserve in film a record of the accomplishments. He has been told it was impossible. Realizing it was simply a matter of installing lights of sufficient power, and believing that recent advances in the manufacture of lamps would justify the attempt, he determined to go ahead and reproduce "America." The screened results show that he was correct.

Under the technical guidance of "Larry" McGill, the director of the All Star Feature Corporation, aided by John Pratt, work was begun on the stage of the Hippodrome on Sunday, March 1. During the week, between the hours of 9:30 and 12:30 in the morning, steady progress was made, so that by the second Sunday of the month all the big ensembles had been photographed and attention was being concentrated on the "close-up" scenes on small groups. It may be stated in this connection that the close-camera views in the Hippodrome production will approximate the regular distance of the ordinary studio. The stage of the Hippodrome, be it said, measures 110 feet from the footlights to the back wall. It is 200 feet wide. In order to include within the field of the lens four-fifths of this great area it was necessary to place the camera up in the balcony and well back. The lens used was a 50-millimeter. The lights employed in these big scenes showed a pull on the meters of three-quarters of a million candle power. One of the men connected with the Hippodrome has made the interesting computation that this amount represents an expenditure for lighting alone of $12 a minute, or $720 an hour.

The normal capacity of the house is 500,000 candlepower. To increase this facilities were provided for an additional 350,000. Two great boomerangs provided each sixteen lamps. Four battleship searchlights were installed. Around the front of the aproned stage were placed lamps in half-cylinder containers of ten-foot length, which took the place of the ordinary footlights. Over the stage were placed many lamps of house construction. These were arranged in rows on cranes that might be raised or lowered at will. Other lamps of regulation studio pattern were placed in the wings. In the boxes and in the balcony and gallery were many spotlights, most of these, however, belonging to the regular equipment. In order to insure as far as possible against the contingency of a retake, four cameramen were used in the big scenes and two in the "close-ups."

Mr. Voegtlin has taken the liveliest interest in the progress of the work. So also has William J. Wilson, who staged "America." Mr. Voegtlin said on Sunday that the project was feasible only because trained forces were available. He estimates that to secure the equivalent of talent and train and rehearse all the men and women and animals; to organize all the mechanical forces—75 property men, 78 electricians and 22 engineers—and to build and paint the scenery, etc., and then to make the picture would cost a quarter of a million dollars, a sum so great as to preclude the possibility of getting it back. As it is, the screened production of "America" may exceed in cost anything heretofore attempted in a picture way. The writer saw the racks containing the time cards of those taking part in the spectacle. The numbers ran to 700. These all appear before the camera. Mr. Voegtlin said the entire organization of the Hippodrome was manifesting the liveliest interest in the work. As an instance, he cited the case of the two Australian woodchoppers, who contribute one of the novel and thrilling features of the regular show. These men had been offered a large sum to appear in an independent picture. They refused it, saying they wanted to be with their associates.

The story of "America" will be amplified for the screen. In the regular production, truth be told, plot is very much subordinated to spectacle. For the picture version scenes have been substituted to accentuate the dramatic action, so that the subject will not depend on the spectacular features alone. In the regular show when the automobile runs wild down the mountain road and falls into the stream, the four occupants jumping to one side for safety, the curtain falls. In the picture the horses in a troop of the United States cavalry plunge into the water and their riders rescue the drowning men. Much will be made of the comedy element. The complete circus act will be given, which means that the trained elephant will provide much entertainment. In the mermaid scene, where forty-eight girls enter the water and a few minutes later reappear, Director McGill took 360 feet of film. All the time the girls were under water the show was going on about the tank. It was Mr. McGill's object by avoiding "tricking" to prove to the skeptical that the girls really were under water for that length of time. The observer, of course, may not know that while the bodies of the girls are under water their heads are free in a lighted compartment and watched over by an experienced diver in case there should be any nervousness on the part of any of the participants.

Some of the settings and scenes in "America" are of the prologue, "The Landing of Columbus"; a railway station, a New England farm, a levee at New Orleans, the Alamo at San Antonio, a New York street of the East Side, another New York street showing a typical fashionable hotel; a general fire alarm and fighting the flames. Then comes Panama, with a view of the Culebra Cut and the opening of the canal. The scene shifts to the National Park, then to the Ponce de Leon Hotel in Florida, where is held the carnival of sports; then to a Pueblo village in New Mexico, and then to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. The final is the Court of Honor. The picture is designed to be in seven reels. Accompanying the production, which will be marketed as a theatrical proposition, will be the music composed by Manuel Klein.

The Imperator Projector.

By F. H. Richardson.

THERE is about to be placed on the American market, a new projecting machine called "The Imperator." This machine is made in Dresden, Germany, and the American market will be supplied by the branch office, 114 Fifth Avenue, New York City, of which Messrs. Hoffman & Bader are managers.

I have made a careful examination of this machine, which lists for $450. I have, during the past four years, consistently advocated a higher price for projecting machines. I have repeatedly called the attention of theater managers to the fact that by the time the dealer has had his commission there is not enough money left to allow the manufacturer to put out a really high-class machine for less than $400. It simply cannot be done.

"The Imperator" shutter is ideal, in that its three blades are all of equal width, and of equal width with the light openings. This is the best possible condition. Whether this shutter will develop travel ghost or not I am unable to say, but I think not, for the reason that it has a very direct connection with the intermittent movement.

A unique feature of the Imperator is its star-wheel, which is 2⅛ inches in diameter. The geneva movement runs in an oil bath, and, by a clever arrangement, the operator is enabled to see at all times exactly how much oil is in the reservoir.

The machine is guaranteed by its manufacturers for a term of one year, and during that period they will replace any parts worn to excess, or any parts which may fail by reason of faulty material or manufacture.

The magazines are made to hold 2,000-foot reels, and are so constructed that the operator can at all times see the exact amount of film on the upper reel. The take-up is driven by a positive drive-shaft and gearing.

The take-up friction is of the usual type, consisting of two iron discs held together by a spring. The main machine bearings are supplied with oil cups. The film tension at the aperture is well taken care of; remarkably so. The film is held to the aperature by two heavy steel shoes something like 2½ inches in length by ½ inch in depth. The upper and lower sprockets are large—about 1⅞ inches. The whole machine is closed in by a heavy metal casing and the mechanism cannot be operated until the casing has been closed. In other words, the machine cannot project a picture until the casing is closed, because the crank is not connected with the crank shaft until then. The condenser is triple, consisting of two plano-convex and one Meniscus lens, the same being arranged so that the distance between the lenses can be altered at will. The whole amount can be lifted out. The arrangement is clever and effective. The lamp house is of large size, in fact larger than any of our present American lamp houses. It is lined throughout with asbestos, and is double-walled. The lamp is simple, and all the necessary adjustments of the carbons can be made without opening the lamp house. The stand is cast-iron, rigid and solid, with the necessary arrangements for giving the machine any desired angle. The motor is inclosed, and is attached to the underside of the table. Taken all in all, "The Imperator" impresses me as a well-made machine.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

THERE is a prevailing opinion that the managements of some of the amusement interests are making a mistake in the conduct of their "newspaper reels," a weekly issue supposed to cover current events in Greater New York. One innovation was created solely for use in the Loew houses and upon its introduction was looked upon as a striking piece of commendable enterprise. The current event reels issued by other companies made a big hit with the amusement people and the Loew people saw an opportunity for improvement by furnishing the New York people with a reel dealing solely with events in the city and making it a distinct Loew feature. A good start was made, but recent reels show a marked inclination to the backward slip on the part of its handlers. They reflect a failure to realize that of all pictures produced none require the "punch" more than those intended to serve as an animated newspaper.

* * *

To make a news reel the people who select the topics and are responsible in the final make-up of it for projection must be able to intelligently determine what is real news. Only in exceptional cases are stereopticon effects permissible. The recent Loew reels lean too much the other way. They have taken on more of the tour color than the snap of news gathering. For instance, pictures of the Woolworth or the Metropolitan buildings and towers convey nothing more than a stereopticon slide does, no matter how much the camera man may "panoram." If something unusual (such as a steeplejack scaling the towers, or the fire department attempting to reach a blaze at a great height by outside means) is shown in moving pictures, then the element of news is injected into the subject.

* * *

A fire scene shown in one of the reels last week created considerable adverse comment on account of its tediousness. But in the announcement preceding the picture the best informed of New Yorkers could not tell the location. And the part showing the fire eating the interior of the place created a suspicion that it was cut out of some film of days gone by. And, after all, the place burned was only a comparatively small haberdashery. The building and loss by fire only received casual notice in the press, and yet the occurrence was made one of the subjects of a feature reel.

* * *

Another subject was preceded by a title something to this effect: "Fifteen thousand demand work at living wages." The picture showed about thirty or forty closely grouped girls and women, and a few men, posed in front of a building. They were all fairly well dressed and displayed a surprising spirit of merriment. Were it not for the banners displayed the picture would more fittingly represent a group about to depart on an excursion, or for a picnic. There was no parade shown and absolutely nothing to convey to the audience who the girls were, or what they were striking for. There was nothing in the picture to give it local color, other than the faces in the group; and even then the audience was left to conjecture whether it was an East Side agitation. If the picture was intended to create sympathy for the alleged strikers it was a flat failure on account of the deportment displayed by the actors.

* * *

Other scenes in the same series have purported to show students entering educational institutions. The students were there all right; but, aside from the announcement, no resident of the city could determine the nature of the institution. And no part of the picture showed the motive for taking moving pictures of the place. A stereopticon view would have answered the same purpose.

* * *

The same kind of views would have sufficed to supplant a picture entitled "School teachers attending a lecture at the City College of New York." The teachers did not march in. They crossed the college campus singly and in couples and trios. Nor did they aggregate in number to convey the impression that the lecture was a special event. No prominent people were mentioned by the announcement, nor shown in the picture, which had no more of the essence of "news" in it than a slide showing the college and grounds would have had.

These comments may be taken for what they are worth by the promoters of the news service they refer to. They are not made for any purpose other than a hint to the trade in general that the patrons of motion picture houses require that all announcements be carried out as fully as is expected of houses in other lines of business. In fact, they are more exacting in respect to their demands upon picture houses. Storekeepers get away with the explanation that some special line of goods has become exhausted, but no latitude is allowed the picture man. Whether intentional or not, the majority of patrons will not stand for what is practically an artful substitution of stereopticon views for motion pictures.

* * *

While it was appreciated at the start that the Loew idea to give the people more views of local events than were furnished by other companies was a good one, there was a doubt on the part of veterans in the business of ability to successfully carry out the idea. Greater New York is a large city in both area and population, and the events that take place in it enable editors and reporters to glean material sufficient to fill thousands of daily and weekly columns. Yet, strange as it may seem to many, the events of sufficient importance to claim distinction as subjects in a weekly moving picture feature reel are few in number.

* * *

No doubt the Loew idea was originally founded upon the reported intention of newspapers to combine motion picture views with their publications, and these reports may have caused a misconception of the real object in view. There is a grave misunderstanding of the matter on the part of many people. Some have asked "How are they going to get the moving pictures in the newspapers?" Some of the more crude, intellectually, have declared "Why, the newspapers are going to give us motion pictures in our houses every day." The truth is that the adoption of motion pictures by the newspapers will be solely for bulletin purposes—to show pictures of events and create a desire on the part of the public to read about them. In this connection the newspaper—motion picture service will be entirely feasible. A picture flashed for bulletin service will attract attention almost regardless of importance, yet the same picture flashed in the news service of a picture house might bore an audience.

* * *

An answer frequently made to the last statement is that in one case the people see the picture without cost. But a monetary view really does not enter into consideration of the matter. The distinction lies in the importance of the subject and the judgment of the exhibitor must be keen in this respect. Years ago demonstrations such as the Dewey parade and presidential inaugurations at Washington were taken by motion picture people and reproduced in New York theaters the same night, the picture people being paid good prices for them. To-day they can hardly get enough to cover expenses for the same work. All parades in picture form now look alike to the people and they will not pay extra money to see them, no matter how much money and trouble has been expended to get the pictures on the screen on the same day the events take place. Enterprise and outlay does not figure with the public. They want something new and out of the ordinary. That is the proposition the news reel exhibitor is up against. He may get an excellent picture of some big parade taking place in this city, but if his competitor shows a wreck gang righting and replacing on the track a car that has been turned upside down by an accident on Broadway he gets the palm.

* * *

In inaugurating the news reel service, the Loew people flashed a slide inviting notifications of events to take place, so the company could get its camera on the job. Some may have thought this idea quite a novel one, but it wasn't. There is not a picture producing company in the business that has not been pestered by importunities to have pictures taken of events such as weddings, lawn parties, foot and other races of minor importance. It is quite clear that such invitations have been responsible in a large measure for the indifferent views that have crept into the news reels lately. It undoubtedly accounts for the subserving of general interest to the desires of a few in isolated sections to get their faces upon the screen. In this way the exhibitor gets on his hands a lot of pictures which are as so much junk to all who are not directly interested, and the news element of the exhibition is killed.

* * *

It is not surprising that people fall asleep sometimes while pictures are on. Let them sleep; but for goodness sake instruct the ushers to cut out the snoring.

Moving Picture Educator

"The Creation."

THE fact that this series of pictures seems to be having such a wide display, and is evidently intended to be of a religious, educational character, it ought certainly to be reviewed on this page. Described as being under the auspices of the I. B. S. A. (International Bible Students' Association), of which one "Pastor Russell" appears to be the head, there should be every reason to expect something more and beyond anything yet attempted in biblical kinematography. Although somewhat acquainted with the work of "Pastor Russell," his scope and methods, the writer was not acquainted with the nature and purpose of his entrance into the realm of moving pictures.

Accustomed to heavy personal advertising, and high sounding titles and an extraordinary freedom with the word "millions," any one who knows him is led to discount to a large extent whatever "Pastor Russell" does. The International Bible Association is a title which suggests an almost world-wide organization for bible study and exposition, although it seems to be little known in the world at large, or indeed anywhere beyond the limited bounds of "Pastor Russell's" influence. It would seem, however, that with such an authoritative heading, a series of pictures issued by such an association would be of an exceptional and highly educational character. It appears that while entitled "The Creation," the real object of the I. B. S. A. is to introduce a series of pictures covering the scope of the whole bible from "Creation to Paradise."

So great a subject is naturally too large an effort for one, or even several exhibitions, they must therefore be shown in sections or courses—which if good would be very attractive and instructive.

The writer has been privileged to see several of these sections, and hopes to see them all. Before passing judgment upon them, however, it is only proper to commend the object in view by the production of such a series of pictures. Especially commendable is the fact that no charge is made for admission, and everything is done to make the public welcome, and to entertain and instruct them—from Pastor Russell's point of view.

The first disappointment arises from the fact that from half to two-thirds of the exhibition is composed of stereopticon views, many of them of ancient vintage, crude and coarse; perhaps good in their day, but almost obsolete now. After reading that "a million" had been spent on this production, more kinematographic results were expected. Of the moving pictures themselves they were "so far so good," but bearing in mind that they were produced under the auspices of an educational society (for such we must certainly expect the I. B. S. A. to be), and under the direction of so great a teacher as "Pastor Russell" describes himself, it follows that we must at least expect their work to be correct in both letter and spirit. As we have never hesitated to point out flagrant errors in biblical pictures when produced by any other manufacturer, we must be, therefore, more emphatic in our expectations, when reviewing pictures issued under the authority of teachers, and placed before the world as exact and truthful.

During the series "Israel in Egypt" there are a number of unpardonable errors. After the last of the ten plagues "The Death of the First-Born" the picture shows Moses and Aaron coming before Pharoah, who bids them depart.

This conveys a wrong impression; Moses and Aaron had refused to appear before Pharoah after the ninth plague, and only came into this particular occasion because he sent for them in great fear. To make it appear otherwise detracts from the character contrasts between Moses and Pharoah, and is prejudicial to Moses. In the next picture, the "Flight from Egypt," the whole scene is wrongly staged; instead of a "flight" it is a parade, with Pharoah on a reviewing stand and Moses leading with measured tread like a drum-major. The Egyptians are lined up on the both sides of the street, the procession being repeated to give it length: the whole is such as to make any one with any bible knowledge shudder. Time and space will not permit at this writing the detailing of more defects. It may be well, however, to show how "Pastor Russell" bends and twists the scriptures he is boasting to teach correctly, in such a way as may best suit his own purpose. An old stereopticon picture of Samson pulling down the great pillars of the banqueting hall is shown and entitled, "How Samson predicted the fall of Socialism." We hold no brief for socialism, but we do know that the question never troubled Samson; he never "predicted" anything about it, the people he destroyed were "Lords" and not "Socialists," thus making a false use of a biblical picture, in an altogether strained and untruthful manner. One of "Pastor Russell's" hobbies is the millenium, but he beggars the glorious future by showing a picture of a nice suburban house, with pretty floral surroundings, an automobile at the gate; and entitles the scene "Paradise." Evidently many who live under such conditions are in Paradise already and need not wait for the millenium. From the standpoint of an educational series the pictures are a failure. They are good primitive pictures and will perhaps interest the crowds in a general sort of way, but they will not do for The Moving Picture Educator. The Bible Students' Association had better give more thought and attention to the truth of that which they portray, and produce it according, and not strain and bend it to make it fit what they wish to say about it. Being true, it will best carry its own description.

A Strong Plea From Oklahoma.

There is much force in the demand which comes from Oklahoma for what they are pleased to call "A higher standard of films and more subjects of an educational character." To the readers of The Moving Picture World the thoughts presented at this Oklahoma meeting are by no means new, it is gratifying, however, to have them come from such a source, as beside emphasizing our own views they show the tendency in the larger field of experience as to what are really the wants both of the thinking public and the enterprising exhibitor. So thorough is the resolution passed by the Oklahoma Exhibitors' League that we repeat it in full:

> The members of this league are confident that the moving picture industry is bound to become a big factor in the amusement world, they are therefore anxious to see the film manufacturers keep pace with the times and improve their pictures accordingly. Educational pictures for exhibitions in schools or in theaters catering to school children are especially called for. A higher standard of dramatic art and comedy pictures is the goal we are striving to reach, and we desire to impress the manufacturer with this fact.

Other expressions made at this meeting are worthy of repetition here:

> We believe the time has come when the moving picture has a mission to fulfill, and we want to be prepared for the newer and wider field that has developed during the last year or two.

The sterling character and wisdom which stamps the nature of this meeting is worthy of commendation and emulation; if more of these meetings are held and more similar resolutions adopted there will be a great advance along the very lines here suggested. It should also be noticed that at this same meeting a committee of the "City Federation of Women's Clubs" were in attendance to urge views very similar to those already adopted, with the additional emphasis being placed on the educational picture.

Notice should be taken of the fact that in Oklahoma the various bodies seem to be working in harmony; the surest means to secure the quickest and best results and to offset possible unnecessary criticism or foolish censorship.

Without doubt the demand for more and better pictures will now come to the notice of the manufacturers who are only waiting for such encouragement as that which is here recorded.

Historical Pictures for the Future.

The King of Roumania has recently caused to be filmed about three thousand yards of war pictures depicting the recent Roumania-Russo-Turkish war which determined the independence of his country. The film will be preserved in the national archives, and of course will be of inestimable value in the future. The Italian Government is collecting all the films taken in Tripoli recently for the same purpose. The British Government has long adopted this method of record, beginning with the coronation of King George, and followed by the Indian Durbar. Germany also is not behind in this respect and, although we are without any particulars we can be sure that France—the home of kinematography—will not be in the least degree neglectful in securing such records.

In America no particular governmental plan has yet been adopted, but the ever-ready eye of the picture-historian is everywhere at work, so that in the future there will not be any lack. The more we are delighted with the powers of the picture as an historian, the more we are constrained to wish that its opportunities might have been discovered a century ago.

The Church, the School and the Moving Picture.

In Pittsburgh, Pa., there seems to be a cordial relationship between the religious, educational and the amusement fraternities. A large church being unfortunately destroyed by fire, the owner of a moving picture theater loaned his building for the use of the congregation, thus, for the time being homeless. This evidence of mutual good feeling is commendable, and if allowed to continue will be productive of future mutual helpfulness. In itself the moving picture is very popular in Pittsburgh. On this account a leading educator in that city says: "The great popularity of the moving picture convinces me of their greater possibility as an educational factor. Why not have a free moving picture exhibition in every school house in the city?" As a result of this inquiry, the local Board of Education has decided to make a beginning and is arranging special test exhibitions upon which future action will be based. From what we read of the arrangements, the outcome is by no means a doubtful one, and Pittsburgh will soon be added to the list of cities where the moving picture is an acknowledged leader. The movement, it is pleasing to note, is being backed by the city Chamber of Commerce.

Moving Pictures or Baseball?

In sporting circles it is interesting to notice that comparisons are being made between the popularity of moving pictures over against baseball. A picture enthusiast has figured that "over $275,000,000 are each year handed to the little girls in the little glass cages in front of the picture houses, and with 20,000 moving picture houses, and 7,000,000 people visiting them every day; also with $50,000,000 spent in moving picture manufacturing plants and $125,000,000 in theater building; as an amusement baseball can show no such capitalization."

The hold which the pictures have taken upon the public is therefore tenfold in popularity that of America's popular game. Another statistician has suggested that eighteen "Dreadnoughts" could be bought for "Uncle Sam" with one year's cost of moving pictures, while the film would in the same period of time go once and a half times round the world, totalling something like 40,000 miles.

It is safe to test the popularity of anything by comparing it with the national sport of the country, and what is said here may also be true in several other countries. By building upon this foundation the venture to adopt the picture in a campaign of higher education will be most easily accomplished. Never before was opportunity as ready as it is today.

Ask the Children.

It was recently pointed out on this page that the views of children could readily and profitably be taken upon everything that concerned them and the moving picture. Philadelphia seems to be the first to make a definite move in this direction. Social workers are preparing a list of questions to be submitted to the pupils of the high schools of the city. The questions are not to be careless or haphazard, they will be of such a nature that careful thought will be required of the student before answering; every phase of all problems related to their interests will be included. From the list of questions the following are samples: "Which do you like best, a vaudeville or moving picture show, and why?" "What kind of pictures do you like best? Give reasons." "Why do you go to moving pictures. Give your views relative to each class of picture, drama, comic, educational, scenic, etc., etc., etc." "Does looking at the pictures hurt your eyes? Give your opinion of good and bad pictures, in subject, interest or effect." "How often do you like to see the pictures?" From such a list as this much information can be obtained which will be valuable to all interested. May not the same questions be asked all over the country?

"Vampires of the Night"

Carefully Made Plot Gives Strength to a Five-Part Greene's Feature Photo Play Made by Aquila Torino Studio.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

NOT often do we find the different parts of a rather complicated story of this kind—that is to say, sensational melodrama—co-ordinated with more skill than in the Aquila picture in five parts, "Vampires of the Night," which is being distributed by Greene's Feature Photo Plays Company. There is a demand for sensations; but, unfortunately some producers think that they can string thrills on reels of film without stint and turn out a real picture. Those who are acquainted with audiences know that an interesting story is better than mere thrills. There are thrills in this; it is a sensational story; and it has good acting and fine photography with interesting backgrounds; it also starts with a good situation clearly stated and in its development, the camera like a finger of light, points here and there picking out the incident that is logically next in order so that there is no unpleasant "seesawing" of the attention as though one were called reluctantly away to the inn when his interest wanted to remain at the castle. This keeps one from noticing that it is a five-reel production or from realizing that time is passing. The picture interests as a whole.

The short prologue shows how it happens that Judith, the daughter of a criminal who has been hanged, is placed by her grandmother, a nurse, in the cradle of Edna, the little Duchess of Burville and grows up with broad lands and beautiful castle while the real duchess remains in poverty, a singing girl at a rough inn kept by the old, evil-faced nurse. This old witch of a woman is one of the picture's best asests. Her old, wrinkled visage easily can take on the convincing semblance of scorn, anger, hate or a poisonous evil vindictiveness. Skillful lighting gives us startling glimpses of it—that scene of her over the cradle is most effective.

After the prologue, twenty-five years pass and we find that the so-called duchess has inherited her father's evil disposition; she is the head of a desperate band of criminals with a rendezvous in the city's great sewers. This serves to show her as a powerful organizer and makes us realize her power for evil, so that we are more ready to fear for the poor singing girl when the false duchess discovers that she is the true heiress. These two young women look exactly alike. They are played by the same actress and appear together in one scene in which the camera has perfectly hidden from us that they are identical and not a striking likeness. A new character for this kind of picture is now introduced as the pivot on which the plot turns. He is a Lord Byron-like poet with whom the false duchess falls in love and for whom she gives a beautiful fête with a graceful dance as the evening's entertainment. The poet does not reciprocate her affection and a little later sees Edna on the street. Touched by her sweet singing, he follows her through some beautiful scenes and their acquaintance ripens into love. He even disguises himself as a poor workman in order to live near his enamorata and reads his poems to her at the inn. The old woman has a confederate, a man who knows too much of her past life, and he demands more and more money. In desperation, she turns to her granddaughter, the false duchess, for help and it is thus that it becomes known to her that she is not truly entitled to her riches.

The two last reels sweep us on through the consequences of this revelation to the story's happy ending, for the old woman sends Edna to the castle alone to get money and the duchess decoys her to a pit with its bottom in the sewer. From this the poet, learning the truth from the old nurse whom he has rescued from the burning inn, saves her. The duchess kills herself.

The story is, of course, just a mystery tale; there is nothing great about it. But as an offering to the public eager for entertainment, it should rank high. In staging and acting it is above the ordinary and, as we have said, the story is written so as to leave its impression on us as a whole and not merely as a collection of sensational episodes. It is a safe offering.

FAMOUS PLAYERS EXCHANGE MEETING.

The regular meeting of the exchanges handling the product of the Famous Players Film Company was held at the Hotel Astor, in New York City, February 26 and 27. Many topics connected with the distribution of the "Thirty Famous Features a Year" were discussed, the methods of the various exchanges in booking their films were compared, and many suggestions toward the benefit of all concerned were made and adopted. The exchanges unanimously report an unprecedented number of bookings for the Famous Players productions.

Foreign Trade Notes

BRITISH NOTES.

(Special Correspondence to the World.)

THOSE American exhibitors intimate with the early days of the film industry in England can probably recall to memory several products from the house of Hepworth in which their famous canine player, "Rover," appeared as a pup. As the industry grew "Rover" became quite indispensable at the Hepworth studies and was featured in many pictures, it being stated that the British film holding the record sale was the one entitled "Rescued By Rover." The animal died a fortnight ago and his demise has cast quite a cloud over the principals and staff with whom he was a great favorite.

* * *

This week has seen the issue of the first report of the British Board of Film Censors and the publication has occasioned much criticism from the daily press. Although the board is not authorized by the state, but was self-imposed by the manufacturers themselves, tribute is paid for the work done by the Home Secretary. The large quantities, numerous classes, and various conditions of films treated are much too lengthy to detail separately, but it is interesting to note that comparatively few productions have been suspended as unsuitable for public presentation. The policy of Mr. G. A. Redford, the president, is obviously that of prevention in preference to cure and to it this fact is directly attributable.

* * *

The first Scottish moving picture exhibition has opened in Glasgow. The show has been modeled upon similar if less pretentious lines to the International Exhibition held in London last year. Sir John A. Primrose performed the opening ceremony in the exhibition hall of the Glasgow Zoo and with other distinguished personages in attendance, including the Lord Provost of the city, directed a few pertinent observations on the development of the industry in the north. A number of competitions for operators, exhibitors and amateur photoplayers is announced for this week, while a number of trade conferences and debates will be heard during the next few days. Prominent among the American exhibitors is the Selig Company, which is featuring the abridged "Christopher Columbus"; the Lubin Company, whose advertising novelty, a huge bell, is worthy of mention; the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, and the Turner Film Company. There are seven private projection theaters for the exhibition of forthcoming releases. Miss Florence Turner and Mr. Larry Trimble will present at the exhibition for a few days, for Miss Turner is to distribute the prizes for amateur acting to the successful competitors in addition to appearing in her character studies at a local theater.

* * *

An idea as useful as it is novel is being exploited by the Lubin agency in this country. Mr. J. F. Brockliss' weekly house organ, circulated free to picture theaters, now contains musical accompaniments suitable for current Lubin releases.

* * *

The Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association bade farewell last week-end to Paul H. Cromelin, who after three years' stay in this country with the T. A Edison Company, has decided to return to America. At a complimentary dinner in London glowing tributes were paid to the guest's ability by H. A. Spoor (Essanay Company), Will Barker, E. H. Montagu (Selig Company), J. Avery (Universal Company), and numerous others. An old English spade guinea—a curio much prized by numismatists—was presented to Mr. Cromelin by his fellows.

* * *

A new topical or news film made its bow to the public two days ago under the title of the "Trans-Atlantic Times," issued from Universal House. The early bookings indicate a successful career for the new picture journal.

* * *

A small concourse of artists and literary men, some notable authorities on Shakespeare gathered at the West End Cinema the other day for a private exhibition of the British and Colonial Company's "Life of Shakespeare." Many who had previously witnessed Shakespearian productions upon the screen acclaimed this bioscopic biography to be the most perfect they had seen. The film deals picturesquely rather than extravagantly with the life of the immortal bard from his boyhood. As a fitting conclusion and through ingenious masking, Shakespeaare is depicted dreaming of the famous scenes in his own works. Mr. McDowell was the producer responsible for the film.

* * *

Some time ago I mentioned the advent in this country of a new half-watt lamp which burns in nitrogen instead of being encased in a vacuum as in ordinary incandescent electric globes. At the Croyden Camera Club the other evening, Mr. W. H. Smith demonstrated its practical application to photography and moving pictures. One point in explanation of the new lamp's extraordinary brilliance is the fact that the filament can be raised to a temperature of over 500 degrees Fahr. above that of an ordinary lamp. Another point to consider is that nitrogen is an element which retards filament evaporation. In place of the tests made, Mr. Smith is of the opinion that the new lamp will prove a serious rival to the arc and mercury-vapor lights for photographic work by artificial light. The half-watt lamps are now on the market in this country and are sold at prices equivalent to $12 for one 2,000 c.p. and $14.40 for the 3,000 c.p. size.

* * *

A novel method of printing long lengths of film has been devised by a Manchester inventor. The negative and positive strips are wound in contact around the body of a large opaque drum and held in position by transparent bands and clips. The light inside the drum then reaches the whole of the film at once and consequently the usual operations of printing several sections of film separately are somewhat curtailed. Another innovation which, if it is capable of what is claimed, will soon establish its utility to proprietors of continuous program theaters. The claim is for a projector mechanism with four film spools instead of two. When the film on the first pair has been exhibited an automatic arrangement moves the next pair into position so that there is no break in the image upon the screen.

* * *

Courtenay Foote, formerly a photoplayer with the Vitagraphy Company, has been on a visit home, but has now left these shores for America to take up his old sphere of work with the Reliance Company.

* * *

The commencement of a Kinema Club in the Metropolis materialized at a representative gathering in London a week ago over which Dr. Fowler Petty presided. A resolution was adopted favoring the acquisition of suitable premises.

* * *

An important precedent has been set this week between the renter and the exhibitor by the Western Import Company. This company, which handles on this side several well known American brands has made an open offer to exhibitors to send on approval for one day only the Keystone comedy "A Muddy Romance." Five or six renters of my acquaintance contend that if the practice of sending out films for approval, even as in this case only for a few hours is allowed, the consequences will be disastrous to both manufacturers and renters. Obviously the good-natured offer of the Western Import Co. is to give those exhibitors who cannot get to London to see the trade show an opportunity of running it through in their own theaters. The only point to guard against if the practice is extended is for renters or manufacturers to see that their films are not exhibited in public for a day and then returned as unsuitable.

* * *

Miss Florence Turner and her manager, Mr. Larry Trimble, during their engagement at a variety theater in Newcastle last week were entertained at dinner by the Weal Music Hall Artistes' Club. Miss Turner also visited Jesmond Dene, a local beauty spot, where a short topical series of moving pictures was taken.

* * *

"When is a re-issue not a re-issue?" is the question asked by E. H. Montagu, the London agent of the Selig Polyscope Co. When the original "Christopher Columbus" film was first exhibited in England two years ago, it was sold as an exclusive to the New Century Film Co. of Leeds and Bradford. From the way it was booked at the time I have reason to believe that neither the Selig Co. or the New Century Co. were satisfied. Now the makers have repurchased the rights of the film and through judicious condensing have made a shorter and more interesting historical narrative, embracing in less space all of the salient points of the original. It will be released in April but not as an exclusive.

* * *

An interesting sidelight upon the vast possibilities of future development of the moving picture news-film is cast by the addition to the London and Paris staffs of Messrs. Pathe of cameramen whose sole duty it is to collect portrait films of celebrities. As in the case of the ordinary printed newspaper these are all developed with sub-titles affixed and filed away where the negatives can be readily brought out. Immediately a celebrity so biographed dies it is only a matter of moments to speed off to any exhibitor a short topical film for inclusion in the day's program.

* * *

Mr. Cecil Raleigh, the playwright whose recent success "Sealed Orders" is being staged at London's premier "legitimate" theater (Drury Lane), has been delivering his opinions upon film copyright in forcible terms. His outburst was consequent upon the play's title being applied to a film recently released by a British house and as a preventative of this recurring Mr. Raleigh suggests that the leading manufacturers, exhibitors and renters should form a combined board with the powers over the industry like those the jockey club holds on the turf. In the event of titles being purloined the offender—according to Mr. Raleigh's dictum—would be "warned off" and his show boycotted by the renters.

* * *

The week's program at the trade exhibition in Glasgow has been given over almost entirely to conferences. The application of the moving picture to almost every branch of study and education has been dealt with and a few further discussions will be heard during the remaining days.

* * *

Under the designation of the "Anima Lodge" the moving picture trade branch of Freemasons held its first ladies' evening on Tuesday. The lodge consists of about 250 prominent men in the trade and not the least prominent people at this function were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Spoor, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Squier, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Montagu, and Mr. J. F. Brockliss.

* * *

The newest of Miss Florence Turner's productions is a short split reel feature entitled "Creatures of Habit" and will be released in Great Britain in April. Mr. Tom Powers, of the Vitagraph Co., has reached this country and it is understood he will join Miss Turner's company during the production of a new series of pictures featuring the pair. Both Mr. Powers and Miss Turner were much in evidence at the Glasgow exhibition.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

EDISON'S KINETOPHONE AT PARIS OPERA HOUSE.

Thomas Graf, special representative of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., has concluded arrangements whereby the Champs Elysees Theater will be leased during the summer months for a talking picture show. The actual proprietors of the Avenue Montaigne Opera House are a group of English and American opera impressarios. Alterations are being made to the building, the capacity of which will be increased by two hundred. Demonstrations of the Kinetophone at the theater have proved that the building is entirely suitable for such an exhibition.

The foregoing accounts for the failure of Felix Isman's plans to start a moving picture show at the theater. The Edison Company's is undoubtedly one of the most daring ventures ever launched in the French capital.

NEW THEATER FOR NEW YORK'S EAST SIDE.

Kauffman and Rosenbluth, of New York City, have filed plans with the building department for a moving picture house to be built at 5 First Avenue, New York. A fifteen year lease has been taken on the property. Work will be rushed on the theater in order to have it ready by August 1, 1914.

IN THE FAR-OFF PACIFIC.

Received from a Subscriber in Melbourne, Australia.

A story is told by a British naval officer about moving pictures in the Pacific. It appears that he was on a cruising trip in the Pacific islands, when they put in to an island, where a planter lived. He told them that some months before the natives got a "strike" microbe and "downed tools." Nothing would persuade them to return to work until a Chinaman landed with a bioscope and some films. He built a high corral and charged 25 cents admission and the natives swarmed there. It was something wonderful to them and excitement ran high for a week, but the money didn't last. They tried to barter clothes, etc., but nothing but good, solid money would suit our wily Celestial friend. There was only only one thing to do—go back to work. This was done with one object; no mention was made of the former grievance. When business fell off, owing to the staleness of the films the Chinamen left with a nice little nest-egg. Thus it shows a new use for moving pictures.

RUPERT JULIAN.

MOST actors find that the road to success is quite adventurous in itself without straying to other fields to gather material which will make the red corpuscles ramble. Therefore, when they are asked to relate their adventures, their reply, as a rule, is: "This drawing of a weekly check in three figures is my only adventure and it has kept me so busy that I even have to guess at my own age."

Rupert Julian.

However, Rupert Julian, who plays heavy leads in the Rex Company with Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, has been more fortunate, or unfortunate in this request — whichever way you wish to look at it. He is an accomplished actor—one of the best "heavies" in motion pictures. He had a hard time to get there, but he enjoyed himself on the way. At different times, during the ebb and flow of his affairs, he has been a sailor before the mast. He has been a tea salesman and the driver of a donkey engine. He has prospected for gold in Western Australia in sections of that country that were not even mapped. And finally he saw active service in the Boer War. However, between each of these episodes in his life, he has wandered back to his first love—the stage.

Mr. Julian had his first motion picture experience six months ago with the Rex and he is still a member of that company. From his first work for the screen he was immediately recognized as a genius for playing parts of the society-rascal type; the kind of roles that require ease, polish and intellectuality. He convinces his audiences with a cynical smile, a shifting of the eyes or a twitch of the mouth.

The closer he works to the camera the more convincing is his work. One of Mr. Julian's first parts was the false husband in "Shadows of Life." His excellent acting in this role will not soon be forgotten. With equal credit to himself he played the criminal in "The Clue," the juvenile in "The Haunted Bride," the part of Antonio in "The Merchant of Venice," the thief in "The Thieves and the Cross," the juvenile in "His Brand," the lead in "An Old Locket," and many other notable characters.

ARCHIE H. ELLIS GOING INTO PICTURES.

Archie H. Ellis, who for thirty years was connected with the Hyde & Behman Amusement Company, the original manager of the Four Cohans and a man of wide theatrical experience, has organized the Archie H. Ellis Feature Photoplay Company, with offices on the sixth floor of 44 Court Street, Brooklyn. Bob Russell, old-time picture and theatrical man, will be general representative. Mr. Ellis begins business with two winners—Sarah Bernhardt in "Camille," and Mme. Rejane in "Madame Sans Gene"; the latter subject featuring Napoleon the man. These two productions are to be booked in New York City and State. Accompanying them will be full orchestrations. Mr. Ellis intends putting out other pictures from time to time, he says.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Consistency.

LATELY we were in Philadelphia and did Market Street with Steve Talbot, who is a fan of the first water, so we got not only our own experience, but much of his as he led us to his favorite places.

At one house a two-reel subject was extensively advertised, so we paid ten cents, because we particularly wanted to see that subject. Instead we saw something entirely different and something that could not have coaxed to the investment of a whole ten cent piece. As we came out the proprietor was just taking down the paper which had attracted us and putting up the other.

"The picture was rotten," he explained, "so I sent it back."

That was all very well, but the moment he sent it back he should have taken his paper down. If the picture was not good enough to show it was not good enough to be advertised. And this was not an isolated instance, for he is doing it all the time. The whole Talbot family went up one afternoon to see a subject that Mr. Talbot had seen at a morning show, and the only satisfaction they got was that "the ending was a little sad for Saturday afternoon" and so it had been sent back.

The house does a good transient business, but it holds no regular trade because no one can ever tell what the program will show since the lobby is a perpetual lie. The house may do business on that system for a time, but it cannot last.

At a second house an elert usher grabbed our arm the moment we entered and steered us down the aisle to a seat. It was flattering to be made so welcome, but the subjects were so old and the projection so poor that between the rain and the flickering light the pleasant first impression was entirely effaced.

In front of a third house there were eight subjects advertised and as we were not out to spend the day at any particular theater, we passed on. "It's a good house if you can catch just what you want," was the comment. "Generally you have to sit through the six other reels to get what you came to see."

Two houses were so glaringly noisy that they were passed up, others had vaudeville and there was not a house on Market Street from City Hall to Seventh that combined the essentials of comfort, cleanliness, good subjects and proper projection. There may be such a house, but if there is it was not on the map the other day. From the lay point of view as well as that of the experienced observer, this thing of running eight or ten reels and taking it out of the projection or some other house expense is all wrong—and it must come out of something. A ten cent house can spend only a certain proportion of its takings on expenses.

A New Layout.

J. J. Rieder, of the Temple Theater, Jackson, Mich., sends in a small folder that gives something new. It is 5 by 5½ inches with four pages. The second page gives the formal program for the week. The third page gives readers about the star subjects without reference to the date. This gives the program a set and invariable form and yet permits the subjects to be treated fully or slightly as their importance may seem to warrant. Instead of giving just so much space to each day, the space is given to the most important subject while the uniformity of the program page is preserved. We would suggest for these special titles a ten point face to match that used in the set program, dropping the name of the producer here. It has already been announced as a Broncho or whatever it may be. It is not necessary to repeat, or, being considered necessary, should be given in the body type, the story starting, "A Broncho subject by Thomas Ince," the description. If Mr. Rieder will compare the two pages he will notice for himself how much cleaner and more attractive is the second page as against the small and somewhat muddy full face on page three.

Did you never feel that there was something wrong with your advertising without being able to tell what it was? Nine times out of ten it is either the choice of type or the manner in which it is displayed.

Here's a Tip.

Perhaps some American managers can profit by the example of B. Nichols, of the M. P. Sales Agency, London, who gets out a special for each of his big subjects, giving half tone reproductions of the actual paper available for the reels. This usually includes a twelve sheet, six sheet and two sheet in colors and other matter. It enables the manager to know precisely what he will receive and to arrange his layout accordingly. Of course, in England the film sellers have to be more alert, but something along these lines could be done just as Stanley Twist used to send his special sheets for the early Selig multiples.

Doing Well.

Don Meaney, the Essanay pressman had abandoned the loose bulletin sheets for a pseudo publication that gives these all on one sheet in such a form that they can be cut apart and hung as wanted. The scheme works well in that it keeps the sheets together until wanted and is better than the Lubin publication in that the bulletin is backed up by general matter instead of another bulletin that may be wanted later on.

Wants Credit.

Frank T. Bailey, of Grombacher and Bailey, writes that his firm in conjunction with William Cutts, house manager of the American Theater, evolved the trolley car scheme recently used in Butte, for which we gave to Melvin G. Winstock in default of any definite information. He adds that the stunt cost $60 for the day, which is cheap publicity considering the return received.

Friendly Scrappers.

J. L. Frazier, of the Lowell Theater, Lowell, Ariz., writes:

In the issue under date of November 22, in the Advertising for Exhibitors' Department, there was a copy of an advertisement headed "PUBLIC NOTICE," and went on to describe a disease called "BLUEATAS." My opponent here used this and enclosed you will find my come-back, we scrap considerable through the columns of the daily paper here, but personally are the best of friends and our apparent bucking through the medium of the paper causes a great deal of comment among our patrons; it seems to keep them wondering what one of us will do next and I believe causes the general public to look for our write-up and ads. I am of the opinion you will not approve of our methods, nevertheless I would like to have your opinion. You will also find enclosed a little folder which I have found to be a splendid reminder and causes no little comment, it is simple and yet attractive and the people keep them and carry them around, showing them to their friends and I have had numerous requests for them from those already having them as well as from parties who have seen them and want one for their own amusement. I personally know of a great many who have mailed them to their friends in other parts of the country. Of course this does not do me any good (the mailing of them to outside parties), still at the same time it convinces me that it is good advertising or else there would not be any call for them. They are inexpensive and yet do the work of awakening new interest in the theater giving them out.

I have used a great many suggestions from the Advertising for Exhibitors' Department and have found them all good. I do not know what I would do without this department and the "Comments on the Films," in the latter I find excellent matter for description of film for my regular advertising and stories. With kind regards to you and general thanks to the Moving Picture World, I beg to remain.

Why Not?

Assuredly we do approve of a friendly scrap. It is an old device of the press agents and when it really is friendly it hurts no one and helps to gain interest in the advertisements. Anything that helps to make advertising read helps to make that advertising sell what it offers and by working in conjunction many lively stunts can be pulled off that will keep interest to a high pitch.

The folder is a brown card printed in red and folded once. The first page carries the line, "This will tickle you." On the first inside page is a feather attached to the card with a bit of passepartout tape, and opposite:

So will the
LOWELL THEATER ALWAYS THE BEST
Seats may be reserved at any time for Theater Parties, Phone 142.

It is simple and effective and it will be carried around to be sprung on those who have not seen them until the whole town knows about it.

The come back on the public notice is given for the benefit of those who may want to use it. The last section of the advertisement runs on to tell of the feature of the day.

LOWELL PUBLIC NOT ALARMED.

There is no indication nor has there ever been, in Lowell or Warren, of the disease now claimed to be prevalent in Bisbee.

With the opening of the Lowell Theater over a year ago this so-called disease immediately disappeared from this part of the district. In fact, the change in the disposition of the general public was so noticeable that hundreds from Bisbee formed a regular habit of visiting the Lowell Theater. If by mere chance there should be anyone in Bisbee who sometimes feels blue (or is afflicted with blueatas) a visit to the Lowell will more than repay them for the time and money spent on the venture, and the feeling of entire satisfaction you carry away with you will make you a regular patron of the Lowell Theater, the playhouse with every comfort and convenience presenting at all times a show of rare quality and merit.

The patrons of the Lowell are never afflicted with "Blueatas" caused presumably by mediocre entertainment.

A Thinker.

Once or twice we have spoken of Emory M. Downs, of the Knickerbocker Theater, Cleveland, and we are glad to get this letter from him:

While I have a deep respect for my own ability as a manager, I have no desire to rush into print, and prefer to listen to what the others have to say; and "deepen" my well of knowledge; and if the "talk" comes in whispers I try and bring down criticisms for a change, as I did in my "News."

I think you know something about the "Knick" for I made bold to tell you of our prospective opening two years ago, and you honored me with a personal letter, and as this is our second anniversary I feel that I may "shoulder" my way to your attention, just once more.

We have had several other houses spring up during the past two years, and I have watched their career with interest, and convinced myself that my policy of "No Vaudeville" nor "Sensational" attractions (?) was a creditable one. The latest "contender" in the field has been sold to three different parties in less than a year, and the other house is now on the open market.

The Knickerbocker, while not boasting of its money making propensities, is sailing along nicely considering its isolated location in a residential neighborhood, with a capacity for 1054 (orchestra and balcony), using an orchestra of six high-priced musicians, and with only evenings to get our "play," at 10c., 20c., and 35c., with straight pictures.

I am (like you) a great believer in the dignity of the business, and also that we exhibitors should strive to put more individuality into projection, as well as the house, I find that to even change the lighting plan of the theater, occasionally, is a good "tonic"; it makes the regulars talk, and impresses the newcomers. But we can go further, and in time there will be a big demand for "Managers Who Think" and who can do almost as much for a feature as the director who staged it in the studio.

The films are the real attraction in the photoplay houses and besides the usual methods of advertising, the fellow who can send "them" away trying to tell how the production was "put on" at his theater, will find he has the greatest advertising trick that was ever thought of; because it has direct bearing on the attraction and a still stronger bearing on his house.

Take, for an instant, the description of my staging of the "Princess of Bagdad"; the fellow who wrote the article tried to tell how it was done, but he got it wrong; I used a deep stage and flats for the scenic; drops would not have been practical, as I aimed to make the scenery look as though it were part of the picture itself. I also had over $2,000 worth of oriental tapestries hung about the house with divans, etc., and all the lighting effects were in ruby tints.

The fact that "they" can't give a clear explanation of what they want to convey makes questions and further explanations, and a stronger incentive for the listener to come and see for himself.

Under Advertising for Exhibitors I would like to have you "start something" on this subject, as I am just as earnest a student as the "Johnnie Newcomer."

Some Effects.

The item to which Mr. Downs makes references follows:

Emery Downs, manager of the Knickerbocker Theater, offers many innovations in connection with the production of feature films.

To prove a theory that feature films can be just as elaborately staged as feature vaudeville acts, Mr. Downs obtained two oriental pictures this week. To these he has added a most artistic touch which greatly enhances the value of the pictures.

"The Princess of Bagdad," one of the films, is of oriental tone and flavor. The background of his picture sheet, Mr. Downs masked in delicately colored drops, showing an old world street scene. These he made more effective by a scientific lighting arrangement, which properly shaded both the drops and the pictures. Arranged in this way the film blended harmoniously with the drops, resting the eye, and giving an effect which will undoubtedly prove interesting to lovers and exhibitors of the movies.

Together with this, his orchestra used more than one hundred sheets of cue music—all oriental and in keeping with the picture. His theater is draped in oriental hangings, fixtures and lighting effects, which has proven to be unusually attractive to the followers of the Knickerbocker.

We think that Mr. Rothapfel was the first to pay real attention to the stage settings for pictures, but Mr. Downs is working out on lines for himself, creating a house as well as a stage atmosphere.

Entirely too little attention is given the matter of dressing the stage where there is a stage to be dressed. We know one house we frequent where the old house scenery, a wood set, is used to mask in the sheet and over the top of the scene is spread a canvas to keep off as much of the draughts as possible. The only saving grace is the fact that the front of the house is so dark that you do not see much of the painted stuff.

But we are getting beyond the old crude days and it is time to give some heed to the small matters that loom large. Why, for instance, should we get a boxed interior with the screen forming the back wall? It does not create the impression that the screen is a picture on the wall of this room and two gilt chairs and a small table with a vase of fly specked flowers does not help to create any illusion.

That was well enough five years ago, but this is 1914 and time to be doing something different. It is not always possible to get all of the pictures of a program in one atmosphere, nor is it necessary, but it should be possible to dress the stage adequately. We would like to see a stage draped in scrim and this lighted through carefully shaded colored lights, nothing vivid, but merely the palest hint of red or blue or green or mixed colors that can be varied through the use of switches. This would be better than heavy draperies of velvet that would suggest stuffiness. Something should be done and we hope that others will follow Mr. Downs and come in with suggestions.

And note that Mr. Downs runs up to thirty-five cents with straight runs in a good locality, and not only gets the people, but gets letters of praise from them as is shown by some that he sends. One man, the local representative of one of the large insurance companies, writes, "we come all the way from one hundred and fifth street and Kempton avenue, irrespective of the weather conditions." We don't know how far that is, but "all the way" suggests distance, and the trip is made because the film itself is backed up by intelligent and artistic setting.

What have you done or tried to do?

More Vaudeville Gone.

I. R. Gavin, of the Unique, Rice Lake, Wis., sends this letter:

I have finally conquered my bashfulness, modesty, or whatever it is, sufficiently to write you, mainly to tell you how greatly I appreciate your department in the World, and incidentally send in a little booklet of "picture information" for your criticism. I had 1,000 of these made up and hung them on the door knobs of every house in the city. This is my first attempt at anything like this and its amateurishness is probably making you smile. However, there always has to be a first time, and I hope to do better with each succeeding issue. You will notice that I have used some old "stunts" gleaned from your department. I use many more of them in making up my handbills and dodgers. In short, your department is invaluable to me, as is the Projection Department, and all the other departments of the World.

In enclose a fair view of the lobby of my theater, built in a brick block. It was built for a picture theater and not a store building remodeled. We seat about 400, show licensed pictures averaging about 60 days release. There is one other theater in town—the Lyric—with about the same capacity as my house. They show the Mutual Program of about the same age as I show. Both of us have better projection, better music and a better show all around than is ordinarily found in small cities of four or five thousand people.

I regret to state that we both use vaudeville part of each week. I say vaudeville, but it is only imitation vaudeville, for it is very seldom indeed that we get an act in either house that is worth half of the good American money we give them. I have hopes though that eventually we shall come to an agreement to do away with the stuff.

In a postscript Mr. Gavin adds that he has come to an agreement with his brother manager and they have cut out vaudeville entirely. It is a change for the better, for, as Mr. Gavin says, it is only imitation vaudeville at best.

We did not laugh at Mr. Gavin's first effort. It is well printed and sincerely phrased. It is an eight-pager, the second page being given to a brief note of thanks. The third page has the familiar "How we lost a patron." with the "He died" on page four, which serves as a text for a continuation on page five explaining how the success of the house is founded on showing the best of the licensed service. The last three pages are given to announcement of the specials for the month and the Edison series stories.

One thing we like about the letter is that Mr. Gavin is willing to admit that his competition runs a house well. This picture of the lobby does do it justice, but we suppose that the frames were brought in to get all in. Somethings should be done to brighten the appearance. The entrance is too sombre.

Unique Theater, Rice Lake, Wisconsin.

From the Haynic.

It's been a long time since we heard from the Hay-Nic, but they send a postcard souvenir that was used at the end of the "Who Will Marry Mary?" series. They arranged with the Kraus Company to supply them with gelatine process postcards of Miss Fuller without the usual printing and then had pen and ink autographs instead of the printed legend. These gave the card a double value and made a distinctive souvenir and one that had more the suggestion of some specially prepared souvenir than a plain postcard. It was good work.

And Speaking of Kraus.

And speaking of the Kraus Company, they are building up their series of portrait cards and are continuing to add names weekly. These cards are equal to first class photographs, in fact they are photographs printed with ink instead of by light, but they can be sold at an absurdly small price. With frames with removable backs the lobby display can be changed every few days by changing the cards. It is not what you have in your lobby, but what you have that is new that attracts the greatest attention, and this process work is worth a whole bundle of lithographs. There is the suggestion of permancy about a photograph, and these hand-colored portraits make capital displays.

Cherries Were Ripe.

The Third Street Theater, Easton, Pa., used for souvenirs on Washington's Birthday candy cherries on wire stems, an appropriate and inexpensive present. They were in pairs, each pair in a manila envelope to save handling and keep them clean. The cost was not large, but the effect of such little observances is great and all out of proportion to the investment. It makes your patrons feel that you are keeping abreast of the times and this helps their estimate of your bill as well as your management in general.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Last Call for Dinner

THIS is your last warning to send in and procure your tickets for the dinner of the Ed-Au and Inquest Clubs, at Keene's Chop House, on Saturday evening, March 21st. The price of each cover is two dollars, and any person interested in photoplay writing is welcome. Remittance should be made to the dinner committee, Box 70, Madison Square Station, New York City. This will be the only dinner this season.

In Our Midst.

William Lord Wright dropped into town last week, arranged for the publication of his new book on photoplay writing, closed a deal to white on the same subject for the Dramatic Mirror and took a train back to Bellefontaine, Ohio, where he is managing editor of the Index-Republican. It takes a lot of nerve to pretend you really like to go back to Bellefontaine, but Bill says he likes it.

It Was McCloskey's.

Lawrence S. McCloskey is the author of the five reel story, "The Drug Habit," which is being widely circulated by the Medical Review of Reviews. There was some discussion as to the use of the Lubin title for the film, and so the signature was not used, but he has to his credit a story as sensational as the White Slave stuff and infinitely cleaner and more gripping. It is beginning to look as though the Lubin editor has saved us from further White Slave pictures by pointing the way to a stronger and cleaner form of propaganda.

Write It Down.

Russell E. Smith, who looks after the routine details of the Mutual Film Corporation's script department, sends in a list of one hundred and thirty scripts, held by that company because of incomplete address. Most of them carry the author's name, but no street or city, one carries street but no name or city, and about a third have neither name nor address.

No doubt some of these scripts carried the name and address of the author on the envelope, but the envelopes are not retained and so the data has been lost. If you have sent a story to the Mutual and have not had it back, question Mr. Smith at the present script office, 4,500 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif., and not to the old New York address that is no longer correct.

After all that has been written about the necessity for identifying scripts, here are 130 scripts with never a sign of a signature. The full name and address should be on every page of every script, on the return envelope and on any letter you may send. Have your name and address on every scrap of paper you send out, and no matter how often you may send to a certain company, send the full name and address the hundredth time as well as the first. They may know it by heart, but on the other hand there may have been a change of editors.

In our own practice we use a printed heading and a serial number, all pages of any script bearing the same number, so that in case two scripts get mixed there is no trouble in separating them.

You cannot be too careful in this or any other matter having to do with your business methods. Mr. Smith explains that this list is compiled from the strays of less than three months, yet even the correspondence schools teach the use of the name and address.

And, by the bye, if you query Mr. Smith, send a stamped and self addressed envelope large enough to contain the script.

Visions Again.

Here is a new angle of the vision idea. We told the writer that the present scheme was to fade down, fade in a vision, fade it out and fade in the conclusion of the regular scene. Here is his come-back:

> Speaking about visions, it seems to me that the full scene vision referred to in a recent issue is not very effective. Those that I have seen were all taken in the same light as the other scenes and did not suggest a dream or thought.
>
> Why not keep the vision scene blank, the vision appearing as a small scene in the corner. When viewed on the screen we would see John in a thoughtful mood, the scene fades to blank, a small scene fades in in the corner of the screen (the rest of the screen remaining blank), we see John's wife, the little scene fades, the blank screen fades up to John again, he comes out of his reverie, rises and exits. The vision would be almost as effective as though the main scene had not faded out during the vision. The blank screen would serve to connect the first and last part of the scene and this would avoid the "break" caused by the full scene vision.
>
> Should the first and last half of a scene that has a vision cut in be numbered as seperate scenes? Suppose the camera is taking the scene where John is thinking of his wife, John becomes thoughtful, the camera man stops down his lens, don't he open up again and go on turning while John rises and exits? As I understand it, the vision scene is cut in. Visions are a good thing for the outside writer to keep away from, but we would like to have this explained in "The Photoplaywright."

This letter pays us for the trouble of writing the first reply. The correspondent doesn't like our solution of the problem and instead of accepting the common practise, he wants to do something more to his liking. In other words, he is thinking for himself and he dares to question studio usage, possibly because he knows that studio usage is more or less based on the objection of persons who, like himself, have had original ideas. In the present instance it does not appear that he has found his solution, but at least he is taking Carl Laemmle's advice and is using his brains. And, by the way, cut that line out of some Universal advertisement and paste it over your desk.

The idea suggested in this letter seems to be to fade into blackness and then bring the vision up in the usual frame, as though the room had grown dark and only the vision showed. In theory this would be all right, but the trouble is that absolute blackness cannot be had on the screen. We get only a dirty grey that would not be convincing.

Perhaps, however, it might be to the advantage of some director to take a mask slightly smaller than the full frame and with a burnishing tool give it a convex surface on the side nearest the lens. This would give a vignette effect that we think would be better than the straight fade down to a full screen vision. Perhaps, after all, our correspondent has builded well.

At the time time, nine times out of ten the vision is an admission that the writer cannot get the story over properly without recourse to trick writing, and so, after all, it is best to leave visions alone.

By Way of Contrast.

By way of contrast to the kicks, read this from Paul Arlington, now of New York, but late of Paris:

> If I may be permitted the liberty—just a line championing the cause of the poor Scenario Editor, whom I see many writers are inclined to roast without reason.
>
> I have been identified with the picture industry as a writer in Europe for the past ten years—though totally unknown here in my own country.
>
> As a free lance I submitted scripts to the Universal, Mutual and several other firms—From Mr. Frank Woods—I received the most polite treatment—and had two scripts accepted within a week of sending in—prompt recognition—was it not? By Calder Johnson of the "U" I was also most courteously received, and given invaluable assistance.
>
> With several scripts returned by other firms—I received a very polite note—asking me to make one or two changes and submit again.
>
> From reports I had heard, I was inclined to be sceptical—but my treatment so far—for a total stranger—has been very encouraging.

Rejection Slips.

Lew Hedrick argues in favor of a rejection slip for the hopelessly bad story that does not carry the conventional line asking for further submissions. In a way we are in agreement with Mr. Hedrick, but hopeless writer of to-day may be a star a couple of years from now and it is not given many to be fortune tellers. It is an interesting point and one that will bear discussion. Come on.

Words of Wisdom.

Just so long as you think that it is easy to write plays it is going to be hard to sell them.

Who's Who.

Your friend is the one who tells you that your script is bad; not the flatterer who tells you that it's great.

How It Works.

The man who makes money writing plays is seldom the man who writes plays merely to make money.

Doing Your Best.

"Of course I cannot expect to make many sales because I am holding my best work until prices get better," is the way one letter ends.

We are sorry for the man or woman who goes at the work in that spirit. Do your best. It is none too good. Even if you do not get paid what you think it is worth, do the best that is in you against the time that you can get a better price. If you can write good stuff now you'll be able to write better stuff later on when the prices are better, and meantime you can help to make prices better. The average price hangs at about $40 a reel because that is what the average story is worth. If the story average could be raised, the rate of payment would automatically raise with it. Make your work distinctly different and you will not have to wait for the general raise, you will be advanced before that time; but the man who does his second best cannot expect more than a third rate success and does not deserve even that.

Advertising.

Suppose that you were in the business of building suspension bridges and didn't care to bother with anything less than a half-million dollar job. Would you put your advertising in the Police Gazette and the Sunday School Times?

Then why all this talk about getting more money if you get your name on the film as author? Few editors see the work of other companies, and they care even less. And you are advertising for the editors, not for the general public. Your best advertising asset is not your name on the film, but your name on the script that is perfectly plotted and neatly done. That is the advertisement that counts and about the only advertising that is worth anything in the sort of money you can spend without being arrested.

If you will give half of the time you spend worrying about your name on the script to bettering your product, you will be able to stop worrying about prices.

Any time that the general public can influence the purchase of a script will be the time to demand film credit. Until then, devote your energies and your efforts to the editors. As matters stand, the preferences of the public are but little considered save in the matter of names with a fiction or dramatic fame attached. The best place for your name is on a check for ten dollars more than you got for your last story, and those checks emanate from the script room and not from the theater.

Tap! Tap! Tap!

(Continued from last week.)

Scene 52.—Forbes' study as in scene 4.
Servant enters with letter. Forbes starts at sight of post mark; opens and reads (Screen letter again—full length—important):
"I CANNOT LIVE WITHOUT YOU. THE MERCY OF THE RIVER MAY BE GREATER THAN YOURS. I HEAR THE TAP—TAP—TAP OF DADDY'S CANE.—POOR DADDY.
Back to scene.
He is stunned, stands staring in front of him, letter drops to floor from nerveless hand. Mother enters room cheerfully. He does not hear her—she speaks, but he fails to respond—standing staring into space his face expression of horror. Mother anxiously approaches him—sees letter on floor, picks it up and reads. First evinces horror then philosophical resignation. Forbes recovers himself, very emotional and tense—accuses his mother, saying, "This is your work." Business of mother attempting to comfort and soothe him. After first impulsive accusation Forbes ignores mother, sinks into chair to permit vision. Double exposure quickly dissolving in and out of scene as he saw her last standing disconsolately at end of pier in scene 33. (Not too close range.) Mother sighs and leaves him to his conscience.

Scene 53.—Boat standing in the city.
Quick scene of Daddy leaving boat—bewildered—questions policeman, who points off scene—Daddy turns in that direction.

Scene 54.—Corner drug store opening off street. Quick scene.
Daddy enters—questions clerk to directory and turning pages—finger down page and gives directions to old man who nods, goes out followed by clerk explaining and pointing the way.

Scene 54½.—Exterior of hulk—Adam trying locked door anxiously peers in window—worried turns away, exits.

Scene 55.—Forbes' study. Windows are open.
Forbes, trying to work, cannot. Brushes papers restlessly aside and takes Hilda's letter from pocket, looks at it and broods. Mother enters dressed for street, coaxes him to accompany her. He refuses irritably waves her away. She turns with a backward glance and sighs as she exits. Cut to:

Scene 56.—Entrance of house with three or four steps.
Daddy tap—tap into the scene looking at house uncertainly. Back to:

Scene 57.—Forbes' study.
Forbes intently listening. He rises to pace the floor, stops to listen again. Crumples letter in his hand. Cut in: "I IMAGINE I HEAR THAT TAP—TAP—TAPPING OF HER FATHER'S CANE."
Back to scene.
Forbes continues walking and working himself up to a frenzy of his next scene.

Scene 58.—Entrance of house as in scene 56.
Daddy decides it is the right house. As he starts clumsily to climb the steps the door opens and Forbes' mother appears and closes door. She starts as she sees Daddy, looks anxiously at open window next to door, hurries to Daddy and greets him coldly with nervous glances toward window. He eagerly asks for Hilda and Forbes. Mother expresses astonishment and disclaims any knowledge of son or Hilda. Daddy very crestfallen turns and starts to go. Mother, much relieved, watches him tap—tap away. Back to:

Scene 59.—Forbes' study.
Forbes in attitude of intent listening—shudders—rapidly working himself up to frenzy, he presses both hands to his ears with convulsive frenzy—grabs a hat and rushes out of house.

Scene 60.—Street.
Flash of poor old Daddy tapping heart-broken back to boat.

Scene 61.—Exterior of morgue.
"COULD HER BODY—HAVE DRIFTED—DOWN HERE?"
Forbes passing swiftly and nervously walking as if to get away from his thoughts—notes building with a shudder, hesitates and enters.

Scene 62.—Steamboat landing in city. (Getting dark.)
Daddy getting aboard up gangplank.

Scene 63.—(Optional). Interior morgue.
Several sheeted forms seen through glass on narrow inclined shelves. Forbes is turning away, after putting his hands over his eyes as if to shut out what he has just seen. Exits in hurry as if driven—Keeper looks after him curiously, shrugs shoulders.

Scene 64.—DRIVEN BACK TO THE SCENE OF THE SUPPOSED TRAGEDY.
Steamboat landing in city—gangplanks. (EVENING.)
Forbes going on boat—nervously hurries—with furtive glances as if frightened.

Scene 65.—Interior Adam's cottage. (Night.)
Hilda is lying on the bench-couch—which is in the living-room kitchen. Adam is going out with lantern—looks back at her. Cut in:
"I WAS WRONG—DADDY NEEDS ME—I MUST GO BACK TO HIM."
Adam looks significantly at mother—and both say she must wait, etc. Adam leaves. Hilda notes mother's nodding head and registers she will slip away when mother is asleep.

Scene 66.—"AGAIN I HEAR THAT DREADFUL TAP—TAP—TAP!"
Upper deck of boat, near stern, moonlight. (Night.)
Forbes restlessly walking starts and listens—panoram to portion of deck with obstruction between Daddy and Forbes. Daddy walking up and down shaking his head sadly—panoram back to Forbes who shudders as he listens—turns and walks hastily forward—trying to get away from the sound of Daddy's cane. Cut to:

Scene 67.—Other part of deck.
Daddy is standing by the rail perfectly still—looking over river toward shore—doesn't move—no sound of cane.

(To be concluded next week.)

Inquiries

NOTE—No inquiries can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of the manuscript. Always give your name and address. It will not be published. A list of addresses, to which photoplays should be sent, will be supplied on receipt of a STAMPED AND SELF ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. The request should be made to the paper direct and not to this department, nor to the Answers Man.

J. B.—Ask for characters by name, please, not merely by leads. It is often an open question just who is meant by "the lead."

A. S. Y.—The stories of the films printed in this paper may have been prepared by the authors or by the press department of the company supplying the information. Where the author's synopsis will do this is generally used, but this is not always the case. Don't get the "habit of using psychological words at their proper place." The best script employs no many-syllabled words, but is written simple and clearly

A. J. D.—Miss Mitchell was "Rose" and Mr. Borzage "John Brown" in a "New England Idyl." See above for "the leads."

R. J. H.—"Lead" and "heavy" do not mean the same thing in the cast. Roughly speaking, the lead is the hero and the heavy the villain. Condensing a script means not using more words than you have to or cutting down the action to give less footage. There is no "average salary" of a juvenile actor. A cripple will not be provided with transportation at the company's expense.

J. L.—It is not required that you send a stamped and addressed envelope with a release slip, but it is a courtesy that is appreciated. It is encouraging when your scripts are kept for consideration. The length of time the favorable prognosis stops differs with the different companies. You've got the right idea. Keep plugging and you'll land more fifty dollar sales. It is the writer who "knows" his scripts are good who never writes them any better.

EVERYWOMAN.—Sorry, but we can't locate all those actors for you.

C. B. S.—Not even an expert can determine in advance the exact length of a subject. Give the same script to two directors in the same company and one may bring in 900 feet and the other 1,400. You can only roughly judge by shutting your eyes and seeing the action. If you work with a stop watch you can get it approximately. In time you can judge from the story whether you have a half reel, a single or more. Don't say in the synopsis that a thing is done "by a clever expedient." Tell what it is. You can do so if you will practise condensation.

C. C. B.—Your new Keystone comedian is Charles Chapman, formerly of Karno's "A Night in an English Music Hall." He did not join the company with Ford Sterling, but replaced the latter.

J. L.—A week or ten days in the office will generally turn a release slip into a check, but sometimes the check signer is away and then it takes a little longer. Don't write a script to fit some particular company. Suppose they do not take it!

F. H. B.—Any film company that is buying will take amateur scripts if they are good. Send for a list as explained at the top of this department.

A. S. B.—Write Mr. Katterjohn, explaining the matter.

A. J. J.—Don't ask the Answers Man why people try to gauge the length of a play by the number of scenes. Miss Marsh is with Mutual. Your paper is far too thin. Lubin is not specializing in railroad stories and E. W. Matlack does most of those Kalem uses.

G. L. B.—If you have that stealing idea there is no use trying to write scripts. If you do want to try the game drop that idea and send the full script and not merely the synopsis

C. S. M.—We are dependent on the press bureaus for the material and some of the companies are lax.

B. P. S.—We could not tell why any particular company rejected your story, but you seem to have an excess of interiors. Most editors have stopped giving reasons for rejections.

C. S.—If the pamphlet was copyrighted, as it probably was, you have no right to make a play from it. There is practically no market for this class of story. You cannot copyright a photoplay until it is published any more than you can copyright a short story or novel in manuscript. Publication is the one essential to copyright. Your story is one the practised writer would probably keep away from. Anyhow, you have ideas of plots.

C. L.—Get a copy of Technique. For a list see the top of this column. Stories must be typed.

G. H. K.—Keystone announces it prefers synopses to full scripts. In such a case you can overrun the 250-word limit. Do not add notes. Tell it all in the synopsis at the proper place. Send a number ten stamped and self addressed envelope to the Answers Man, repeating your request.

C. L. C.—Send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the addresses, just as it says at the top of this column every week. We do not know of any company that would care for the style of story you mention. With the possible exception of Mutual, the synopsis brings very little in proportion to the full script.

M. K.—Mutual, Keystone, Joker and others use synopses only. If you want the addresses do as the others do and send an envelope.

C. J. L.—You would be giving some studio a big order. It would probably have to be studio stuff in miniature. A real night photograph differs from a daylight picture only in the time it takes. You cannot get these effects out of doors. There were no night photographs in "On the Lazy Line." You cannot take pictures in the dark at the rate of sixteen a second.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators' Union Director, I. A. T. S. E.

NOTICE: Each union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list, as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of regular meeting-place, if any.

Local No. 199, Detroit, Michigan.

Ray J. Branch, president; R. Vinton Moulton, vice-president; James P. Murtagh, treasurer; Ira A. Waddell, secretary, P. O. Box 80; Maxwell Ruben, business manager.

Local Union Auxiliary No. 12, Lowell, Mass.

Robert C. Gray, president; Charles J. LaRue, vice-president; Sidney C. Barton, secretary, 743 School Street; Robert Hamilton, treasurer. Meetings held last Friday in each month at 22 Middle Street.

Important Notice.

It is impossible to reply to letters through the department in less than two weeks and sometimes three. In order to give prompt service those sending four (4) cents in stamps to cover cost will receive a carbon copy of the department reply by mail.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the Department editor.

Question No. 24.

Best answer will be published and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Explicit permission to use the name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used.

Suppose you were using 110 volt a. c. from a city lighting system, and the owner purchased a 50 volt l. c. generator to supply current for the entire house. What, if any, changes would be necessary in the theater equipment going, in detail, reasons for each change named? The city current being 110 volt a. c., what shape would this leave you in, in case of breakdown in your plant, and what could or would you do, or recommend, under these circumstances?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 18.

There were fewer answers to question 18 than to any question since the series began. Whether the boys did not know, were not sure of their ground, or just a little bit lazy I cannot say. The Roll of Honor is short. It is made up of Fort Worth, Texas; W. L. Johnston, Toronto, Canada; and L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York. The reply selected for publication is by W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey.

My reason for asking the last portion of question 18 was to see how many of you possessed a little originality and ingenuity. Brother James has not covered this point, to my mind, in the best possible way, but he has the idea all right, as did one or two others. The majority, however, said that the thing could not be done, and those who made that reply were not entitled to be on the Roll of Honor.

Answer to Question No. 18.

By W. S. James, Camden, N. J.

The question:

What is the effect of a heavy but momentary overload on your motor-generator set and how much of an overload of this sort would be safe (with relation to capacity, I mean, of course?) What effect has a medium constant overload. Explain in detail. If you had a motor-generator set, or a generator pulled by an engine, the latter having considerable surplus power, and the generator capacity was 35 amperes, and you were pulling 35 amperes on each of your two projection arcs, and your manager insisted on dissolving one motion picture into the next, or, in other words, one film into the next, what would you do? The generator is compound wound.

The answer:

The effect of a momentary, heavy overload, providing the motor or engine driving the generator was strong enough, and the generator was compound-wound, would be very slight. There might be sparking of the brushes and a slip of the belt, if belt driven. I have my doubts as to the sparking, since most good machines are rated low enough so as to allow even as much as a 100% overload, momentarily, without damage, but I would consider the 100% about the limit, though some machines might stand even more without injury. The effect of a medium constant overload (a real overload, I mean, not a load that is slightly in excess of the rating) is to heat the armature and to cause sparking at the brushes. The sparking will in time destroy the commutator. In regards to the medium overload on a compound-wound type (I presume that is the only one which interests the operator) the explanation, in detail, follows. The compound generator being a combination of the series and shunt types, it is necessary to consider the action of each, in order to find the action of overload. The series machine has the peculiarity that there is no e. m. f. in the armature unless there is a load on the external circuit (I am not considering the slight e. m. f. generated by the residual magnetism) consequently the heavier the load, the greater the e. m. f. generated. The shunt type will produce an e. m. f. even though there be no current consumption. Of course, the field circuit must be closed, viz: the field rheostat must be on one of the points. The peculiarity is the fact that the voltage between the brushes (the outside circuit is connected to the brushes) decreases as the amperage is increased. This is on account of the internal resistance of the armature and its reactance on the field current. It will be seen from these explanations that when the armature of a compound-wound machine is revolving at normal speed the normal e. m. f. is generated in the shunt coils. When we close the outside circuit (use some current) the voltage tends to decrease, but here the series coils (compounding) come into action and help the magnetizing force of the shunt coils. This immediately brings the voltage at the brushes to normal. It will thus be seen that an overload will cause the armature to work harder. Consequently there is a tendency of the armature to heat and of the brushes to spark. I just want to say a word here about overload, since it will help me on the latter part of the question. A machine is overloaded when the voltage and amperage are increased beyond its normal capacity. If the voltage is increased by excessive speed, an overload may be avoided by using less amperage. The reason for this is that a machine is rated in watts, or k. w., and the amperage times the voltage will give the wattage. Therefore the less voltage used the more current it is possible to use in proportion, and still have the same wattage. (Yes, but the effect of 5000 watts at 110 volts and at 220 is quite different when light is being produced.—Ed.) As regards the dissolving I would wire the arcs in multiple with each other. When one m. p. machine was near the ending of the film I would start the other machine slowly, just enough to raise the fire shutter, and then strike the second arc. The moment the second arc was struck it would short the first and put it out, thereby causing the picture to fade off the screen. This would not injure the generator, since the arcs are in multiple with each other, not in multiple on the line. In the case of the "Hallberg Generator" it will stand the striking of the arc without resistance, or, in other words, that arcs would, in this case only, be in multiple with each other and the line also. This method cannot cause any overload, since the effect is merely that of striking a new arc. The existing one is killed immediately by the shorter arc, which the new one necessarily becomes when we touch the second carbons together. Another way is to use an extra rheostat which will bring the amperage down to about twenty. Cut this rheostat on during the last few feet of the film, lighting up with another one of these extra rheostats in series with the other arc after so doing. After the first machine is shut down throw over onto the 35 ampere rheostat. This will cause only about a 15% overload, and any good compound generator will stand this much intermittently without serious heating or sparking. These are the only methods I consider feasible, since lighting both arcs in multiple with the line would cause 100% overload, and, while 100% may be safely stood momentarily, there is no small generator that could stand it for the length of time necessary to get a full illumination of the arc, and stand it every fifteen or twenty minutes.

My own method would be to have each lamp on an adjustable rheostat capable of cutting the amperage down to about twenty or twenty-five. When threading the off machine I would set its rheostat at the low point. When near the end of the reel I would gradually cut in resistance until the arc was at the lowest point, then strike the other arc, start that machine and cut out the other arc. Then cut out resistance until the other machine is at normal. This could also be accomplished by setting the two rheostats side by side and connecting their adjustment levers so that one knob would move them both. Of course, brother James' scheme amounts to almost the same thing in practice, but it is not quite as good form, I think. Connecting the arcs in multiple is also entirely practical, that is, as James says, in multiple with each other. In fact that is the simplest way to do it. But what I was after was to discover how many of you would be able to dig up the resistance idea. That was exactly what I had in mind, because I thought all of you who had read the department were wise to the multiple idea.

As to the overload; while power house generators and generators built to stand that kind of jolt may stand even as much as 200% overload momentarily without injury, I think brother James' statement of 100% without injury is a little strong, as applied to small sets. Large and medium G. E. generators are guaranteed to stand from 50 to 75% overload for a limited time. Small sets might stand momentarily 100% overload, but if they are subjected to it three or four times an hour I think it would result in injury to the commutator. I differ with brother James to the extent that I think 100% overload would cause small generators to spark very heavily.

Good Work.

The Vitagraph Company of America has opened its new theater at 44th Street and Broadway, as was set forth in a recent issue of this paper. The writer purposely said nothing about this house, although he was present "Press Night" in advance of its opening, because he wanted to wait until there could be no excuse if the projection was not up to the mark.

On Wednesday, Feb. 18th, I attended a matinee performance, at which Messrs. Max Berman and George Dickson were in charge of the machines. I paid my way in, and no one knew I was in the house. I wish to compliment brothers Berman and Dickson on their work. The light was brilliant, and very well handled indeed. At no time during the two and a half hours' performance did I find anything to criticise, except the matter of speed, and this I discovered was not the fault of the operators. The Vitagraph Company is committing the same blunder perpetrated by so many of the cheaper houses, viz: the operator is given a certain definite period for each reel of film, utterly regardless of the action. The result is not the best. In fact it is a considerable distance removed from the best. "A Million Bid" was one of the photoplays shown; it is a magnificent production. In fact, everything considered, one of the best I have ever seen, but the cameramen failed, as is nearly always the case, to maintain a regular speed throughout the production, and the operator, being under instructions, was and is unable to remedy these defects. It is a shame that such a splendid production should be thus injured. Of course, I grant you that the average audience does not know there is anything wrong, but I also make a flat statement that the production could be very materially improved were the operator not only allowed, but obliged to watch the speed and remedy the defects of the camera's speed. In some places this action is too fast. In the last reel of "Goodness Gracious" the action was altogether too fast; in fact it was so fast that the effect was marred.

A competent operator should be employed and then matters of this kind should be placed in his hands absolutely, and he should not be held down by any hard and fast instructions from anybody. If he is not competent to handle the question of speed, under any and all conditions, then he is not fit to be in charge of projection in a house like the Vitagraph Theater.

The equipment consists of two glorified Power's Six A machines, taking d. c. through rheostats. I say "glorified," because these carefully selected mechanisms are the last word in "class;" even their magazines and lamp houses are nickel plated. The operating room is amply ventilated, and the editor directed the making of the observation ports which are constructed as per Figure 26, page 74 of the Handbook. The machines need some further anchoring, and I would suggest the plan set forth in Figure 34, page 91 of the Handbook has been admirably adapted to this case.

In closing let me say that the projection at the Vitagraph Theater, up to the point where the operator runs into his "instructions," is distinctly high class, and a credit to the Messrs. Berman and Dickson.

He Had An Awakening.

Phoenix, Arizona, writes:

> I had arrived at the conclusion that I knew it all, but later it dawned upon me that what I really knew was not worth talking about, as compared to what I did not know. It was only after reading the department that I came back to earth, and judging from the force with which I landed, I must have climbed almost to the top of my ladder of ego before you kicked me off, therefore I also have decided "to come out from under my stone and light my candle." But so far at every attempt I have found it so short I have burned my fingers. For the purpose of obtaining a little more wax to add to the candle factory, I enclose $2.75 for the Handbook and a list of questions. Incidentally I may say that, inasmuch as your period of usefulness on earth does not seem to be at an end, I would advise you to practice awhile on the back fence before attempting any telegraph poles with that Harley-Davidson.

Both the Handbook and the questions have gone forward. The first 74 questions are contained in a thirty page booklet, vest pocket size, neatly but plainly gotten up. I must ask pardon for the long delay in getting them ready. I did the best I could. Those who in future remit 25 cents for the questions will receive them by return mail. I am glad to know, brother, that you have "come back to earth." It would be a splendid thing for the business if several thousand other sufferers from exaggerated cases of swelled head would also get back on terra firma, and realize the fact that what little they know about their business, compared to what they might know, could be placed in a walnut shell and would rattle around therein like an undersized pea in a molasses barrel. There is always hope for the man who comes to the realization of the fact that there are still things for him to learn, therefore, Phoenix, welcome to our city.

Tremendous Waste.

The dope of the statistician is interesting, though sometimes very "dry." I have fallen into the habit of noticing small things and figuring them out to their logical conclusions occasionally. For instance: a subway train was delayed at 14th Street for about one minute. What few brains I have were, strange to say, idle for the minute, and I put them to work. I counted fifty people in the car; there were ten cars to the train, with probably an average of fifty persons in each, or 500 passengers. The delay was one minute. In the aggregate five hundred minutes were wasted, because there were five hundred people. This would be equal to wasting eight hours of one man's time. I merely quote this as a curious thing.

But there are things intimately connected with the operator which are along the same lines, and are of greater importance to you and me personally. In about one operating room in ten, things are so arranged that the operator can do his work without an expenditure of useless energy. Supposing, for instance, the observation port is improperly located. Did any of you ever stop to think of the enormous amount of wasted energy this seemingly trivial matter entails? Suppose 20,000 operators are inconvenienced by improperly arranged operating rooms so that each one is obliged to expend energy over and above what would be used under proper conditions, equal to one hour's work per day. This would mean in the aggregate 20,000 hours of energy wasted every day, or 600,000 hours every thirty days, or reduced to eight hour days, 99,999 days every month. In other words, in order to exert the same amount of energy one man would have to work 99,999 days.

This may sound fantastical; it really is not. In the average operating room there is at least what we might term one hour of energy wasted every day by things being wrongly located or improperly made. Of course, I don't mean that this requires the operator to actually put in an hour's extra time. It does not do anything of the sort, but it does require him to expend unnecessarily an amount of energy equal to one hour of labor every day. So that, as a matter of fact, this one thing wastes at least 20,000 hours of energy every day in the year. The theater manager will, of course, say that this does not cost him anything, because he does not have to pay for any more time, but as a matter of fact he is wrong. It does cost, and it costs him in the most expensive possible way, because it injures the results on the screen. What I mean by this is that if things were properly and conveniently located, and properly made, this wasted energy would be saved and the operator would, as a direct result, deliver better projection.

As I said, this may seem like a very far-fetched argument, and some of you may be inclined to laugh, but let me assure you I was never more serious in my life. Wasted energy is bad, and when that energy is wasted in a way that injures the projection on the screen of a theater it reflects back in dollars and cents at the box office.

From the Land of Gold.

F. P. Carroll, Goldfield, Nevada, writes:

> In January 24th issue, I note inquiry regarding focal length of condensers, from Purdon, Texas. Without desiring to criticise your answer with regard to using two 6½ inch lenses, will say I am running a 1910 Motiograph under the same conditions, viz.: 38 foot throw and a 14 foot picture. I firmly believe in operators helping one another over the difficulties encountered almost daily in the rocky road of good projection, and having been up against the same snag myself will say that I get the best effect with the 6 and 9 combination, though I have used the 7½ and 9 with nearly as good results. Would like to try a 5½ and 10½ combination, but can find no dealer who has them in stock. Would also say I have used a lens which gave a 10 foot picture, and this did not seem to make very much difference, if any, when using the wrong combination on a 38 foot throw. Use 40 amperes d. c. through G. E. rectifier. Have set my lamp at every available angle and have found it made no difference in the ghost. Of course, I have to move lamp closer to condensers when I shove over to stereopticon. Trust you will not take offense at these suggestions. They are not designed to criticise your work, but are sent with the best intentions. I have lots still to learn regarding projection, and believe me I do learn something every time I look into your Handbook, both editions of which I have. This is the first case of not following instructions as laid down therein, but it is not a very great error since the Bausch & Lomb and Gundlach Optical people advising two 6½ condensers under conditions named. This condenser matter is one which I think has not been given the attention it demands. Am getting my films from the General Film Company, Salt Lake City, and am having the same trouble Cushing, Oklahoma, has. Have protested to the exchange, but it does not seem to do any good. It is a common occurrence for me to cut out whole scenes, and sometimes as high as one hundred feet out of one reel.

Friend Carroll, I am not a child nor even a kid, therefore you run no risk of "offending" me by criticising or differing with any of my conclusions. Anybody who does not agree with me is entirely at liberty to rip my arguments up the back as far as he can. Perhaps I am wrong, and in this matter I am not at all certain that I am not wrong. In fact, we are all trying to find out what is right in the matter of condensing lenses. If you will look back through my writings of three years ago you will find that I then believed that the combinations of condensers in general use was altogether too short, but from lack of actual knowledge I was compelled to drop that proposition and agree with the general idea that anything greater than 7½ was not necessary, except in extreme cases. I certainly wish I had the time and opportunity to make a series of experiments with condensing lenses and objectives. I particularly would like to do this since it has been discovered that thick condensing lenses will absorb from 60 to 70 per cent. of the light; thin ones would absorb very much less if they could be used. I have referred your complaint concerning the Salt Lake City exchange to the General Film Company's headquarters, where it will no doubt receive immediate attention.

Information Wanted.

Karl Weiser, Kings Park, State Hospital, New York, writes:

> Enclosed find $2.00 for which I would kindly ask you to get and send me a copy of "Lessons in Practical Electricity" by Swoope, which you recommend. Also please answer the following through the department: (1) Having no experience with the professional m. p. machine, would you advise me to buy one of the home projectors? I wish to give a show to from 50 to 100 people, at the hospital, at one time. (2) How large a picture can I project with one of these home machines? (3) If I purchase a professional would you advise getting a second-hand one? I wish to use it for a traveling show also. (4) What is the name of the popular German cinematograph publication, and where can I get a sample of it? (5) Where in New York can I see one of those home projectors on exhibition?

(1) If you are going to show on the road you had better get a professional machine. The home projector will hardly give a satisfactory picture more than six feet wide, as they are designed to operate on from 2 to 4 amperes of current. (2) Answered by No. 1. (3) You can very likely secure a second-hand projector, which will serve your purpose very well. Watch the classified department of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for advertisements, or apply to one of the film exchanges, but be mighty careful or you will be stung on the second-hand outfit. (4) Lichtbild Buhne, published at Michaelkirchstr, 17, Berlin So. 16, Germany. I do not know where a sample copy can be obtained in this city, but you can examine the publication at the M. P. World office. (5) You can see the Ecalir machine at the Eclair office on West 42d Street, and the Bing projector at the office of John Bing, 381 Fourth Avenue. I do not know whether the Pantoscope people have a machine on exhibition in New York City or not. We will have the book forwarded to you at once.

Partly Wrong.

W. R. Case, Narberth, Pennsylvania, writes:

I noticed J. Roy Hunt's scheme for keeping the film from pulling down under the top sprocket of a Power's Six, page 44, January 3rd issue. I was about to try this same stunt some months ago, but determined to first find the cause. I discovered the reason lay in the fact that the upper sprocket teeth were somewhat worn, and the film had cut a sort of notch near the base of each tooth. I removed the sprocket and, with a fine file dressed the teeth down, being careful to remove no more than was absolutely necessary. Have not had the least trouble since. Saw you at the banquet on the 28th, but could not get anywhere near you. Weren't you afraid of being kidnapped and kept in Philly? I would like to see Philadelphia send in plenty of red hot fireworks with regard to C. H. Snow's roast on projection in Philadelphia. Very likely he only visited a couple of those South Street "dumps" and judged the whole by what he saw there. But we will have to hand it to him for his motor drive rewind; it looks very good. And now I want to give the Mutual service a little dig. They seem to pay no attention whatever to making proper patches. Their splices don't hold at all, and it is a shame, as well as an injustice to the exchange, the exhibitor and the operator. I am talking about ten day stuff, in which nearly all the patches are factory made. Another thing: they don't seem to have any regard for the width of their patches, which range from 1/16 to 3/8 of an inch. Imagine a 3/8 inch splice going through the machine, while others are so narrow they barely hold together long enough to get through. But, worst of all, I have received, time and again, films that were printed with misframes in them, and you know those are impossible to remove, as the sprocket holes will not come together in the right place. I have found this kind of crude work in the Majestic, Thanhouser, Broncho, Kay-Bee, Domino, Reliance and Keystone films.

While you are perfectly correct in saying that hooked sprocket teeth will pull the film under, still that is not altogether responsible, since often a poorly made patch, in which the sprocket holes are not properly matched, will wedge on a sprocket tooth and pull the film under, even though the sprocket itself be perfect; therefore the guard is a mighty good thing. As to Philly projection, I don't know; I have heard the story told both ways. I am going to make a sneak on you next summer and find out for myself what's what. So look out! I think Brother Snow probably set forth exactly what he saw, and if what he saw was not good, why that is up to you, boys, isn't it? I have many friends in Philadelphia, and I would like to say good things about you, but facts are facts, and when it comes to screen results I have absolutely no friends. If my son were an operator and I caught him delivering shadows and jumps on the screen I would roast the living tar out of him. As to the faults in the Mutual service, I have had the same kind of kicks before, and lots of them too, so we will just give this matter a little publicity, and see if the offending producers won't wake up and induce their employees to perform their duties properly.

How Long, How Long?

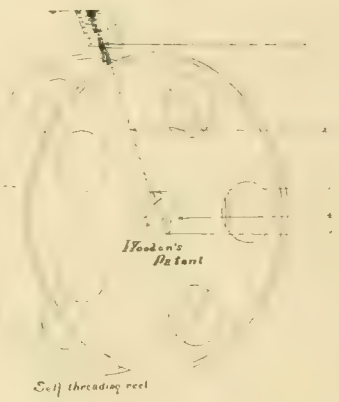
From the Pacific Coast comes the following:

I don't like a knocker, but I must unburden my system by writing you or else by telling my boss things he won't want to hear, and just now jobs are few and far between in this glorious Land of the Setting Sun. Visit with me today. We go on the job, open the closet and get two 5/8 carbons, which we are permitted to take to the operating room—two every day, because if you had a whole bundle you might s-t-e-a-l a few, or burn two at a time in the lamp, or consume one or two for supper instead of pork chops. Reaching the operating room we will light an 8 c. p. globe overhead, because we simply have to see, and a 16 or 32—horrors, they use juice! You set the carbons and heat up on 25 amperes from a rectifier tube, two years and a half in service—and that two and a half years is no joke either. If the voltage is up to 205 or 210 you get a nice little amber spot, which he, the boss, says is good enough for our neighborhood, though the opposition uses 40 amperes with 3/4 and 5/8 carbons. At 6:30 the audience is graciously permitted to enter and sit in the dark, save for four measly little side lights, until 7 P. M. when, with a mighty burst of spendthriftiness, the ceiling lights are switched on for possibly five minutes before the picture starts. The exit lights are lighted in the afternoon if the cop is seen coming up the street, otherwise the house is entirely dark. On Sunday we run nine hours, and if we are so recklessly wasteful as to run short we may have one extra carbon, or a total of fifteen for forty-two hours per week. A motor costs money and uses current, therefore you crank a Standard No. 4 by hand, the same having a 3/4 of an inch back lash in the shutter, due to worn gears and pinions. Our program will consist of 3 thirty to sixty-day reels, and one pick-up three to four years old. If the fourth reel is so abominably dirty and rainy that you absolutely cannot see through it, the boss will switch you over to the service company's power, thinking our 25 amperes is on the bum. Does he buy the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? Nothing like that in his catalog. The World costs a whole, big, colossal 10 cents, but (whisper) (no joke) (keep this dark, but it is straight truth) he does not mind several glasses of "schnapps" each day at the same price. The music for the player-piano came with it, and has been used every day since. The house has taken in as much as $200 a week, on a daily expenditure of $12, or it would be $12 if he paid rent, but he owns the property. If the house empties before 9:50 you ran the films too fast. If the weather is bad and the people don't come, your light flickers and besides you ought to stand for a cut in salary in bad weather. Not one single word of this is exaggerated, and I am anxious to see if your opinion will coincide with mine; also some other managerial artist may read this and take the hint. Mine can't unless I cut the clipping out and give it to him.

How long will this type of idiot be permitted to injure the photoplay business? It is utterly idle to comment on such a proposition. There are not words enough in the English language to do justice to the subject. I don't know just how "warm" your opinion may be, brother, but it would have to go some to be more sulphurous than my own. This type of "manager" (?) is not a joke; he is an outrage; in fact it is an insult to the term manager to even call him one. He is not even a good imitation of one. He is the prototype of the coal dealer who steals a quarter of a ton out of every two thousand pounds by short weight; he is short-weighting his audience and his operator. He is—but what's the use? A man of this kind is simply a barnacle clinging to the hull of the moving picture industry. I am very sorry indeed I cannot give his name and location.

Self-Threading Reel.

Earl Wooden, New York City, is the inventor of the "Self-Threading Reel" herewith illustrated.



Self threading reel

Very little explanation is necessary. The flat, flexible steel spring No. 2 is fastened to hub 4 by screw 3. The spring is similar to a clock spring when straight. At the end is attached clutch No. 1, which engages the film. It is so arranged that the clutch rests in space 5, which is routed out of the hub to receive it. At the end of the reel the film pulls out of the jaws of the clutch and the spring stands out straight, so that the clutch is even with the edge of the reel.

The only criticism I could make is that the spring might break occasionally, but they are very inexpensive, and, therefore, that would not be much of an objection. The invention of friend Wooden would add very largely to the convenience of the operator in threading, as well as add somewhat to the speed of that operation; therefore, the device is to be commended.

Up Against It.

M. Slotkin, Erie, Pa., writes:

Kindly advise me as to the best way to re-coat my screen. It is made of heavy window shade without any seams and coated with aluminum. Two weeks ago a local painter re-coated the same, and now there is a sort of veil before the picture.

I am afraid, friend Slotkin, you are up against it. The reason for the veil lies in the fact that window shade cloth is a very smooth material, and on top of this the painter in putting on the aluminum doubtless polished it, which made matters still worse. You possibly could improve it by sizing the screen and putting the aluminum on without rubbing it at all, but even then the surface of the cloth is so smooth I very much doubt if you will get satisfactory results. Under the conditions, if the screen were mine I would coat it either with a white paint, described on page 338 of the Handbook, or with alabastine or some other kalsomine, surrounding the picture with a black border of flat paint, composition of which is described in the Handbook. I have not space to repeat and re-repeat such things as are contained in the Handbook, hence refer you to that work.

He Has Got To Have It.

Thomas Dougherty, New York City, encloses 25 cents for the questions and writes:

I have not sent any replies to the questions yet, but I am still digging at those heart-breakers. My employer came into the operating room the other day and asked me: "What is the trouble with the light the last couple of days." I said: "There's a reason," and handed him the questions. He scratched his head (and he is some electrician) and now he has got the habit himself. Keep up the good work. You are not charging enough for the questions. They are, like the Handbook, so valuable for such a small price. I am sending you two sample bottles of oil, one for bearings and one for intermittent casing. Having no other reliable source of information, I submit them for your approval or rejection. Are they good or are they not?

As to the oil, brother, I could only answer your question by sending out samples to practical operators for test. I have no opportunity for making tests myself. And now that we have finally discovered a really good oil, which will very soon be on the market, I don't think it would be worth while. I have tested so many oils only to find them of no value, that I am a little discouraged on this proposition. The oil recently recommended in the department will, I am sure, fill all requirements as it was thoroughly tested by something like a dozen operators. Glad you like the questions, but don't let study interfere with your projection, neighbor Dougherty. Attend to that light, first, last and all the time, and don't let anything distract your attention for an instant while your picture is on the screen.

Union Affairs.

J. P. Quinn, Utica, New York, sends in a rather long communication which, condensed, reads as follows:

> Will you tell me why the A. F. of L allows the I. B. E. W. to cause trouble for operators who are doing all they can to get the profession on a sound, practical basis? Why do they allow the I. B. E. W. to come in where there is a local of the I. A. T. S. E., which has been given jurisdiction over the entire amusement business, and do things which tend to neutralize all our efforts. I am neither an agitator or a trouble maker, but I do think it is high time the I. A. T. S. E. members make one great big fight, and, in the parlance of the poker table, "call" the I. B. E. W., and friend Gompers, the same as President Moyer did in the great mine trouble which has just now got the whole country stirred up. The A. F. of L. has given jurisdiction of the operators to the I. A. T. S. E. By what process of reasoning does it justify its act in allowing the I. B. E. W. to interfere and seek to organize operators into an opposition faction? I ask you to put this matter up to the loyal I. A. T. S. E. men, and if we are to fight this question out let us rally to the banner and have it out once and for all. My own view is that we are affiliated with the proper organization, and unless the A. F. of L. can and does stop the I. B. E. W. from interfering, then we might better have an international of our own, and thus settle for all time the question of jurisdiction. The I. A. T. S. E. is a splendid organization—there's none better. I say this who am, I believe, as old as any other one man in projection work, my experience dating back to the two-inch films. I trust you will take this matter up in the department.

I don't care to go actively into this matter at the present time in the department, though I think your letter deserves space. The fact of the matter is the A. F. of L. is powerless to stop the proceedings of which you complain. The American Federation of Labor is a composition of the affiliated Internationals, plus some directly affiliated locals of crafts which have no International of their own. In theory it has absolute authority in jurisdictional matters; in practice, however, the International itself does just about as it gol darn pleases. The only thing the A. F. of L. could do would be to suspend the offending International and, when we consider that a suspension means a large decrease of A. F. of L. revenues, with very doubtful effect in so far as controlling the situation be concerned, we can see where the A. F. of L. "gets off at." Presumably the A. F. of L. has told the I. B. E. W. to stop organizing operators, and, presumably, also, the I. B. E. W. has connected its thumb to its nose and waggled its fingers and—there you are. A separate operators' International would probably not help the matter very much. Moreover, as things now are, I am not disposed to favor a separate International. What I might favor in the future is for the future to decide. A stiff fight by the operators would undoubtedly do much to check the I. B. E. W. and the thing to do is for all local unions to at once proceed to enter a strong protest officially, both at headquarters and to the A. F. of L. If enough unions did this and made the protest a red hot one something might come of it.

In Error.

James H. Pooley, Toledo, Ohio, writes as follows:

> In the Handbook you give instructions for cleaning the objective with alcohol. I have always cleaned my lenses with alcohol, but have learned you must be very careful, because the alcohol will eat the cement and the two lenses and the front combination will separate. In the first stages of separation the lens has the appearance of being cracked. I think, however, I can get as good results with the two lenses apart as when cemented together. Enclosed find 25 cents for the questions. We have a large up-to-date theater, the "Atlas," two miles from the center of the city.

Friend Pooley, you have simply made a mistake of using too much alcohol. It is not necessary to dip the lenses in alcohol; just wet a cloth and wipe off the surface, polishing quickly thereafter. I think, too, the effect will be improved if you mix the alcohol with water, about half and half. I have not tried that out, but have been told so by operators who have. I do not agree with you that you can get better results with the lenses separated. Possibly you might if they fitted tightly in the barrel, but I base my opinion very largely on the fact that the lens manufacturer is presumed to know more about lenses than you and I, and unless there was some good reason for cementing the two lenses together it would not be done. You inquire why it is necessary to use a heavier amperage on a.c. than on d.c. You will find that matter explained in the last paragraph on page 207 of the Handbook. It is a very simple matter, and I presume from asking such a question that you have had no experience with a.c.

He Uses Gas.

John R. Van, proprietor of the John R. Van's Silent Players, writes from Syracuse, New York, as follows:

> Am still on the road and business is better than ever before. Am using the Guil Pastil with a gas generator with fine results. I project a 10-foot picture at 30 feet with a 2½ B. & L. lens. Have made a study of the gas question and can run my six-reel show on eight cakes of ozone and one-third of a pound of ether, and have some of the ozone left, which I am able to use the next night. I can use a pastil about twelve times, provided I don't drop it. I run two shows, the first making the towns about four weeks ahead of the one I myself manage. This scheme works fine. I travel all alone, as does my other operator, and we show only at night, and only upon percentage. With a partner at the other end your show is always well advertised and tickets sold. I seldom use a piano player, as they are hard to get in small towns. My program is six reels, two good Westerns, two good comedies, and two assorted.
>
> I am writing this to set forth how a moving picture show can be made to pay in the "tank" towns.

The scheme of having an advertising man with a show in advance is a splendid one, provided the advance show can make its own expenses, which I assume it does. The posters you sent have been attended to and your letter delivered to Mr. Brady. Come again when the spirit moves you.

From Kansas City.

L. A. Wagner, Kansas City, Missouri, sends 25 cents for the questions and says:

> Was very sorry I missed you when you were in our city. I have been in the game a long time, and would certainly have enjoyed making your personal acquaintance. However, you will always find me trying to go higher. I know that the moving picture business is the best on earth, and that the operator is the best, or should be the best man connected with the show. I also am firmly convinced you are doing all you can to elevate the operator and bring him into his own, so go ahead; I am for you as long as you insist on the operator acquiring knowledge of his profession. I am with the Standard Amusement Company, and a better company to work for doesn't exist. They are owners of the 10th Street, 12th Street and Palace Theaters.

Many thanks for your words of appreciation, Brother Wagner. Sorry I did not meet you. As I remember it, the 10th and 12th Street Theaters were two of those I visited while in your city, and there was, at that time, considerable room for improvement, both in the management and the operating end. Probably things are better now, though the theaters were then, I think, considered the best in Kansas City.

Transferring Pictures.

J. H. Snyder, Arapahoe, Nebraska, writes:

> I enclose formula for transferring prints, pictures, etc., to glass, which I would like you to present to those operators who have had trouble with other formulas published.
>
> Take of gum sandarach four ounces, mastic one ounce, venice turpentine one ounce, alcohol fifteen ounces. Digest in a bottle, shaking frequently, and it is ready for use. Directions: Use good, clear, clean glass of the size of the picture to be transferred. Go over it with the above varnish, beginning at one side. Press down the picture firmly and evenly as you proceed, so that no air can possibly lodge between. Put aside, and let it dry perfectly, then moisten the paper cautiously with water, and remove it piecemeal by rubbing carefully with the fingers. If managed nicely, a complete transfer of the picture to the glass will be effected. N. B.—The best article to press the picture down firm and even is a six-inch photographic print roller.
>
> This process, if carefully followed will produce results, and it is simple enough for any one to understand. Am sending you sample of film cement I make myself. It has been on the market for four years, and is known as the Three (S) Cement. The sample is three years old, which shows its keeping quality. Can be used on any film. I will send the formula to any operator for 50 cents; it costs 5 cents an ounce to make.

Many thanks for the transferring receipt. Those who try it out kindly report. For a three-year-old sample the cement is certainly in A1 condition. I have heard of the Three (S) Cement before, and it bears a good reputation. As it only costs 5 cents an ounce to make, it certainly is cheap enough for any one. Friend Snyder's address is Box 423.

The Right Dope.

S. S. Holt, Marshalltown, Iowa, writes:

> Noticed in a recent issue where the editor dropped in a few theaters unknown to the operator and took notes of shadows, etc. I wish you could drop in at the "Orpheum." Don't believe you would have much use for your pencil. I have just as good picture and use the same care when the manager is out as when he is watching the screen. There is no excuse for having shadows when using modern lamps. Shadows are due to pure carelessness, though where only one machine is used and quick changes are to be made there is some excuse for the title coming on out of frame. Who sells or rents Kinemacolor films and machines. Have the Power's Company any projector of later type than the Six-A?

The brother has the right system. The real operator does not care whether the manager is around, or who is there, because his picture is right all the time. The Kinemacolor Company of America, Mecca Building, New York City, can supply your wants. No, the Six-A is Power's latest production.

Quick Change Artist.

Fred Benedict, Van Wert, Ohio, asks:

> What is the quickest change of reel ever made? I changed in eight seconds when running an Edison Type B.

I don't remember now what the quickest change is, and I don't like to consume space in the department, sadly needed for more important matters, in considering questions of this kind.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years
Address all orders and remittances to
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

MR. SNIFFKINS' WIDOW (Edison), Mar. 2.—There is a typical Edison atmosphere in this story of comical rural characters. The best of it is the way the players have drawn their people whose life is shown in the sitting-room of the widow, on the street and in the grocery store. It made laughter; but the plot has little newness or interest. The author is Elizabeth Miller and the producer Charles M. Seay.

THE LONG, COLD NIGHT (Essanay), Mar. 3.—The best and most truly human story of today's licensed releases. It will satisfy the spectator's natural desire to see something true of life and is quite free from the childishness so often found in film stories. It is a little clear-cut story of rural folk, well acted and fairly natural in staging—leaving apples and potatoes outside in very cold weather won't appeal to farming people, though. The photography is all that was needed and the offering as a whole will be much liked.

WITH THE EYES OF LOVE (Edison), Mar. 3.—A picture for lip readers and one that depends on lip reading to furnish its climax—the heroine at the trial of her lover catches what the real criminals, seated at the far end of the room, say to each other and has them brought to the bar of justice. This is new and perhaps in the line of progress; at any rate it is interesting. What the players say in their roles has been prepared beforehand for them and is meant to be read on their lips by the audience. This reviewer failed to catch it. Epes Winthrop Sargent is the author and George Lessey produced it.

THE SMUGGLER'S SISTER (Selig), Mar. 3.—Bessie Eyton herself wrote this script and acts in it. She is strong on acting and has many admirers; but hasn't given anything novel or truly interesting in this story. That she is the story's heroine is the best thing about it. The photography is clear. Colin Campbell is the producer.

THE SECOND GENERATION (Pathe), Mar. 3.—We dare not call this a good release. It is distressingly morbid and not at all entertaining; nor instructive in any worthy way either. None who needed this lesson would profit by it. It seems to us very poor.

THE BEST MAN (Lubin), Mar. 3.—Elopement farce depending mostly on a sissy boy lover (the girl's father's choice) to furnish the laughter. There is nothing new in it; but it made laughter among a few. The author deserves no credit. It was produced by Arthur Hotaling.

THAT TERRIBLE KID (Lubin), Mar. 3.—Sharing the same reel with the foregoing, is this unusual offering featuring a queer creature, Theo Sales, a freak who looks like a baby when he is dressed in long clothes. There is acting in his work and the offering has value as entertainment. It amused the audience. Frank C. Griffin is the author and Arthur Hotaling the producer.

A PAIR OF FRAUDS (Vitagraph), Mar. 4.—This has long been an acceptable situation for motion pictures and we have seen these two lovers, each of whom has deceived the other into thinking that he and she possess great wealth, under many kinds of circumstances. In this case the girl is secretary of a rich society woman and the other is a poor clerk. There is novelty in the method of development of the story and it cannot help but amuse even those who have seen something like it in other pictures. A fair offering.

AN ABSENT MINDED MOTHER (Edison), Mar. 4.—Absent mindedness, a lost baby and a wonderful hair tonic that makes the kid who accidentally comes in contact with it look like a full-fledged sport with full grown beard, are the elements that make fun in this very farcical offering, written and produced by Charles H. France. There was laughter in the house when it was on and it can be depended on to amuse all kinds of audiences.

A FOUR-FOOTED DESPERADO (Edison), Mar. 4.—On the same reel as the foregoing is an offering for children by Mark Swan and produced by C. Jay Williams, giving a story of a bear. He is not a really truly looking bear; but though he frightens a pirate crew, he is fond of children and lets little Goldie Locks feed him. Children will surely like it.

THE COUNTESS AND THE BURGLAR (Selig), Mar. 4.—A picture of the woman who sees in a glass that a burglar is in her room. She owns a splendid necklace and maneuvers to get the intruder into a closet, where she locks him in while the police are coming. There is too much padding, as when the thief walks to and fro about the room before the woman arrives; but the climax is well handled and the offering will furnish entertainment.

"PRESTO" WILLIE (Essanay), Mar. 4.—A picture for children, giving a dream of a boy who has just been presented with a set of "magic" tricks. He, in his dream, is handed a wand by Mephistopholes and has fun with the butcher, laundryman and others. It turns into a rough and tumble farce.

IN HOGAN'S ALLEY (Pathe), Mar. 4.—Hogan's Alley has furnished more than one offering with a habitation and a name; but this is different from the others, and, although the characters are akin, the incidents are fresh. It is amusing and will make a very fair offering.

THE CONQUEST OF MAN (Essanay), Mar. 5.—Reina Valdez, True Boardman and Lee Willard appear in this Western number. The discharged employee becomes jealous of the foreman, who befriends his wife. The fire scene was exciting and unusually well staged. As a whole this is a strong story, convincingly acted and much better than the average Western release.

LITTLE LILLIAN TURNS THE TIDE (Selig), Mar. 5.—This film story has an agreeable but rather slight plot, of a not very convincing sort. The child actor is clever, but her efforts to write a photoplay and request for $200 for it seemed somewhat incredible. However, the picture is pleasing in a way and succeeds fairly well.

WINKY WILLIE AND THE TELEPHONE CRIME (Melies), Mar. 5.—A half-reel comedy, in which some actors are heard rehearsing a melodrama over the telephone. The police investigate and some amusement is created. The photography is rather dark in places.

A VILLAGE SCANDAL (Melies), Mar. 5.—This, on same reel with above, shows some prudish old ladies watching actors in rehearsal. The chief fun in this is created by the pleasing character work, the plot being slight.

POLITICS AND SUFFRAGETTES (Biograph), Mar. 5.—A half-reel number in which some country politicians take up the cause of the anti-suffragettes. Some of the scenes are quite amusing, particularly where the political rogues have to kiss the babies.

PA AND MA ELOPE (Biograph), Mar. 5.—This, on same reel with above, shows how the girl's parents elope with each other in attempting to frustrate the runaway marriage. A new twist in the elopement plot and very well handled.

THE SPEEDERS' REVENGE (Vitagraph), Mar. 6.—This comedy number never becomes uproarious, but it is amusing all the way through and has a number of laughs in it. The auto speeders, after being fined, get up a murder mystery by use of a dummy, to fool the constables. Some good character effects are achieved. Hughey Mack, Wally Van and Lillian Walker are in the cast.

A ROMANCE OF THE NORTHWEST (Lubin), Mar. 6.—The closing scenes bring this story up to a good climax, in spite of the rather conventional opening. The manner in which Jules pursues the card sharp and brings him back to justice was very realistically portrayed. This is somewhat stronger than the average offering of this type.

HIRAM'S HOTEL (Kalem), Mar. 6.—Some genuine comedy in this, demonstrating the manner in which Hiram gets back at the hotel proprietor, who held him up while in the city. A fresh little plot, well handled, with John E. Brennan, Sylvia Ashton and Ruth Roland in the cast.

BEAUTY, THE EDUCATED HORSE (Kalem), Mar. 6.—This, on same reel with above, gives some brief glimpses of a fine black horse, which kisses the girls, plays games, etc.

THE RENEGADE'S VENGEANCE (Selig), Mar. 6.—The renegade revenges himself on the young ranchman by leaving his boy to perish in a burning house, with his foot caught in a steel trap. A conventional plot, closing with a realistic fire scene. This lacks freshness, but is well constructed and holds the attention.

SOPHIE'S BIRTHDAY PARTY (Essanay), Mar. 7.—This can be classed as a superior comedy and, although ridiculous in theme it has been so well produced its shortness can be excused. Victor Potel as Slippery Slim gets himself into an awful predicament; one that is original and caused great laughter from the spectators. The situations are well conceived and well done.

WHEN THE CARTRIDGES FAILED (Edison), Mar. 7.—This photoplay, written and directed by Ben Wilson, is meritorious and concerns the heroism of a young stenographer who risks her life to protect the financial interests of her employers. There are some discrepancies in the plot that the producer plainly overlooked. However, it is gripping and well acted. Gertrude McCoy sustained the leading role finely. It pleased.

CHILDREN OF DESTINY (Biograph), Mar. 7.—The opening of this story is rather conventional, but it develops as it progresses into an interesting plot. It involves a trusting but deceived maiden, a mock marriage, years of toil and anguish, etc. It is a good offering, and well made. The cast did splendid work. It will please and teaches a moral lesson.

THE HOPI RAIDERS (Kalem), Mar. 7.—The plot and theme of this picture is out of the ordinary and very interesting. The plot takes the spectator into a new and almost isolated locality. The prohibited selling of whisky to the Indians is vividly illustrated. A love story involving the captain of a military post is depicted gracefully. Picturesque scenes embellish it, which are photographed clearly. This is a splendid number, and is instructive.

UNVEILING THE MAINE MONUMENT (Kalem), Mar. 7.—This topical number is on the same reel with "The Hopi Raiders."

WHEN DOOLEY PASSED AWAY (Lubin), Mar. 7.—A broad Irish farce that Dr. J. Buckman is responsible for, directed by Arthur Hotaling, that is crowded full of laughs. It reminds one of an old farce of thirty years ago. Dooley and Casey are rivals for the affections of Widow Cassidy, their "boardin'" lady. Dooley is the favored one, but he indulges in a "bun" and what Casey doesn't do to him isn't worth publishing. Dooley wins out, however. If you can't laugh at this your risibles are wrong; call "Doctor Buckman."

FOR AULD LANG SYNE (Biograph), Mar. 9. A story of human sympathies that will be liked widely and is commendable as a good offering. Its central figure is an old grocer who has a store in a country town. He is doing well until his son comes back with his wife to run the store as a first class city store should be run and almost succeeds in making his father a bankrupt. It is his father's old friends whom he had rudely and unnecessarily offended that come to the rescue after the attachment notice has been pasted up by the sheriff. It is a well acted picture of interesting characters.

THE SULTAN AND THE ROLLER SKATES (Edison), Mar. 9.—A burlesque farce with freshly outrageous situations that made laughter. Epes Winthrop Sargeant is the author; but the players (Herbert Prior, as the sultan; William Wadsworth, as the vizier; Alice Washburn, as a slave who plainly knows the ropes about the court, and others, including Elsie McCloud as the American beauty with "wheels on her feet" and Arthur Houseman, as a roller skate salesman) help, and add to the fun by their acting. C. Jay Williams produced it.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 20.—Mar. 9.—Skiing with flying leaps into the air is one of the features. Rushing waters in southern California and blizzard scenes in New York have also been pictured.

GINGER'S REIGN (Vitagraph), Mar. 9.—A likable picture of sentiment with a little dancing girl of the Western mining camps who, as played, has charm and liveliness as its central figure. Around her are other clear-cut human characters typical of the time and place, but freshly interesting. Ginger seems at first more ambitious to dance than to marry "Bill" and when she learns that another girl has got him, she is, at first, bitter; but in the end, after she has fondled Bill's kid, she relents and helps him and his wife out of financial trouble. It makes a good offering, well pictured in every way.

Licensed Special

THE DIAMOND MAKER (Cines), Mar. 3.—A two reeler that makes a very fair offering, for although the situation is artificial, the working out of the story excites keen interest. Then a woman called a siren is introduced and the interest falls until the new story begins to carry us toward the rounding out, when both stories end. There is too much padding for the best effect. The photography is fair. It is carefully produced.

THE SACRIFICE OF KATHLEEN (Vitagraph), Mar. 3.—An acceptable two-part story through which, although the situation is not wholly convincing as shown and therefore does not get across with any "grip," there is a deeply interesting human drift. It is freshly conceived, clearly told, never drags and has a good romantic atmosphere. The truly interesting figure in it is the slavey, played by Norma Talmadge. She doesn't look anything like a slavey, except in the first scenes; but she puts over the emotional content of the developing situation strongly and makes a very pleasing human heart portrayal. The author is George C. Peterson and Van Dyke Brooke produced it. The camera work is good.

IN THE GAMBLER'S WEB (Lubin), Mar. 4.—A two-part offering that would have been better in one reel. As entertainment the first part, in which a situation is worked up in an amateurish way, is lost work. In the second reel there is enough suspense to make us forget the not very plausible train of circumstances on which it all is built and we watch the outcome with interest. It is not a picture that calls for strong acting. The photography is clear and effective. M. B. Havey is the author. Edgar Jones produced it.

THE INTRIGUE (Kalem), Mar. 4.—An unusual situation opens with the second reel of this two-part offering after a not convincing statement of underlying events. It is not wholly pleasant; for a young man whom we know to be the son of a certain business man, a widower who had lost his son years before and who is now neglecting his second wife, is shown as making love to the woman. The pretty situation is cut short by the accidental discovery of his identity. The acting is fair, and might have been much better. The picture is photographically acceptable.

THE BROTHER COUNTS (Pathe), Mar. 5.—A two-reel offering dealing with strong emotions in a sincere manner. The younger son is lured to ruin by a gambler and his sister. He commits suicide. Later the second brother meets the woman and proposes marriage to her. He is accepted and the woman tries to kill herself in a fit of remorse, but the second brother saves her from death and forgives her. The close lacks conviction and the general impression left by this production is somewhat depressing. The scenes are well photographed and the acting pleasing.

HIS WIFE (Lubin), Mar. 5.—This two-reel offering contains much that is unusual, but parts of it are so improbable as to be rather unconvincing. The hero's illegitimate sister, portrayed by Rosemary Theby, is a decided mischief maker. She upsets his love affair. Later when she has had a change of heart, which was not very well accounted for, she interrupts the wedding ceremony and her brother is reunited with his sweetheart. There is plenty of action in this and it is entertaining in spite of numerous faults.

CHAINS OF BONDAGE (Essanay), Mar. 6.—A two-reel number, with Richard C. Travers, Irene Warfield and Bryant Washburn in the leads. The story is not very probable, but becomes most absorbing as the plot progresses. The lawyer is a most unprecedented villain. He pretends to be the girl's father, when the real father is lying paralyzed in the hospital. In the end the father recovers, through an accident, and is reunited with his daughter. The sincere acting helped to render this convincing. An unusual story.

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY (Edison), Mar. 6.—A revival of a former Edison success, with Mary Fuller, Augustus Phillips and Marc MacDermott in the leads. The jealous prince contrives to lure his successful rival into a duel. While this is in progress Yvette is giving a demonstration of her ability to act both comedy and tragedy. A fine creation throughout, with considerable suspense toward the close when the prince falls in a vain effort to kill his adversary. Marc MacDermott played the part of the prince very convincingly. An unusually good two-reel offering.

THE MISCHIEF MAKER (Vitagraph), Mar. 7.—In this two-reel subject two young ladies and a man—the girls being chums—are the principals involved in the plot. He is in a quandary as to which one he loves best, and they both love him. Finally an accident decides him. After they are married the other girl, in pique, who is of a vindictive nature, causes jealousy on the part of the wife, also on the part of the husband, and coincidental circumstances help along. The wife outgenerals the husband and subsequently comes out victorious. It is padded copiously, but interesting all through. All in the cast did good work. The mountings and photography are adequate. Exhibitors can book this number with the confidence that it will satisfy.

ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN, NO. 6 (Selig), Mar. 9.—For extended review of this continued story film see page 926 in MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Feb. 21, 1914.

THE SECRET OF THE WILL (Kalem), Mar. 9.—An overdrawn melodrama with Alice Nilsson playing the two roles of a mother who dies and of the daughter grown up. The situation from which it starts is novel; but the development falls again into a rather conventional rut and shows lack of art handling. Such a picture gives no real chance for character interpretation and the acting is filled with conventions. The story is, of course, unbelievable as life; but the picture has some very pretty scenes.

A SPOILED LIFE (Pathe), Mar. 12.—A strong dramatic story, unpleasant in its ending, to be sure, but splendidly acted. The theme is of a hunchbacked playwright falling in love with an actress. The love is reciprocated, and the two are married. Later on the writer discovers an affection between his wife and her leading man. The story shows that the wife has not ceased to love her husband, but unquestionably she is fascinated by the young man of good figure. The husband at first intends to shoot the man he believes has displaced him in his wife's affections, but at the crucial moment decides that it is he himself who is in the way and commits suicide. At the end of the second reel is a short industrial, "Making Lace Fans," which will interest, especially the women.

AGAINST HEAVY ODDS (Pathe), Mar. 14.—These two reels tell a story of Mexico. George Gebhart has the role of a Mexican who by study raises himself to a position where he may claim a well-to-do girl with whom he is in love. His unsuccessful rival is a man whose life he had saved at the time he was serving him in a menial capacity. The story is directed with a snap and go, and this, together with the fact that the picture contains excellent backgrounds finely photographed, makes a worthy release. At the end of the second reel is an interesting travel picture, "A Trip to the Great Nile Dam."

Independent

BREED O' THE MOUNTAINS (Victor), Feb. 25.—In this rather complex story a waif left at the door of a young woodsman's cabin brings about some misunderstandings which have a good dramatic value at times. Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport play the leads. The photography is good.

ITALIAN LOVE (Beauty), Mar. 4.—A series of lively incidents with no very clearly defined idea or rationale. It has a broad humor and the players give it a sprightly touch of fun that will make it pleasing to the many.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 104 (Universal), Mar. 4.—The views of the Mardi Gras carnival were interesting, but seemed out of focus. Other views in this number were the champion walkers en route to Coney Island, launching a gunboat in Sacramento, a fox hunt in England, etc.

THE HOUSE ACROSS THE STREET (Rex), Mar. 5.—Robert Leonard appears as the mayor in this and Hazel Buckham as his daughter. The story begins as a conventional political yarn, but later develops some originality and proves enjoyable. The pictures are attractive and the denouement is pleasing.

HER WAY (Princess), Mar. 6.—Uses the same idea as "She Stoops to Conquer," but, although it is not without interest, it never really lives. No one will believe in it strongly and the acting is full of artificial suggestions. The heiress is sent to act as a maid in the house of her father's rich friend whose son, it is thought, will make a good match for her. His father knows that it is his habit to make love to the maids. There is something unpleasant in this situation and we dare not call the picture a first class release.

THE RECTOR'S STORY (Majestic), Mar. 7.—This is a very pretty and entertaining story and though there are no startling scenes in it, its continuity is pleasing and several little surprises are sprung. The cast includes a pair of twins who resemble each other about as much as day does night, but a title informs us that their voices are identical. Each has a lover, one of whom is blinded by an explosion. This accident forms the basis of the plot. It is well done and will please.

GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY (Thanhouser), Mar. 8.—From the celebrated but not very emotional "poem" of the same name, this picture presents to us the poor girl who has too hard a time trying to keep her little family of brothers and sister alive and steals three loaves of bread from the open wagon of a baker. She tells the police justice her sad tale and a collection is taken up for her, then the judge and the policeman go home with her and carry a big basket filled with good things to eat. Mignon Anderson is appealing as the principal character; but the picture though well staged is most unconvincing at this period of the business, and is hardly effective.

RAFFERTY'S RAFFLE (Apollo), Mar. 8.—Fred Mace is Rafferty and the picture aims at something doing on the screen rather than development of a situation. It is in kind like others in which this player has appeared recently, though not quite up to his best in its fun quality. It will get by.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Reliance—No. 8), Mar. 9.—This is a very pretty concrete offering and shows the sympathetic side of the Mutual girl. Passing a public school on returning from an automobile trip along Riverside Drive, she notices several crippled pupils and determines to purchase a doll for each. Working over them she falls asleep and dreams she is a large doll. It is all very pretty. The scenes along the Hudson are interesting and pretty.

HIS FIRST LOVE (Majestic), Mar. 10.—Pretty baby wins prize for its poor parents at a baby show and the money pays the rent. The story is made to express a tender sentiment and though a bit too slight to have real strength will leave a pleasant impression. The photography is clear and there are some pretty scenes.

HIS FAVORITE PASTIME (Keystone), Mar. 12.—One of the few farcical comedies in photoplays that gets continuous laughter. The comedian, whose favorite pastime is drinking highballs, is clever, in fact the best one Mack Sennett has sprung on the public. He is a new one and deserves mention. The situations in this offering are finely handled. This is a real comedy.

THE RURAL DEMON (Keystone), Mar. 14.—Here is one of Mack Sennett's comedy pictures. It is a hummer in every way. It has a regular rural twang and never hesitates from start to the finish. It embraces all kinds of characters, including a fractious goose. There is a bomb effect, a chase and a wind-up where everybody gets soaked but the cameraman, in the river. If you want a good laugh see it.

THE MOONSHINER'S DAUGHTER (Majestic), Mar. 14.—A melodramatic subject, which might be appreciated by some who are fond of rough outlaw characters in environments characteristic of such plots as this. Shooting is indulged in copiously. It is clean morally, however, and exciting; but full of incongruities. There is an element of love that softens it to some degree. Its rough scenery is ably photographed.

THE EUGENIC BOY (Thanhouser), Mar. 15.—A poor little rich boy is being brought up on a hospital regime by order of his too careful mother, a woman with advanced ideas. He breaks loose and has a good time, after which his father gets spunk enough to have his hair cut and prospects are more bright for the future. If the player who impersonates the boy had been of the male gender the picture would have had more punch; for it might have been made convincing. There is much that is distinctly good in it and we think it will please many just as it is. The photography is clear.

THE SCHEMERS OF SQUEEDUNK (Imp), Mar. 16.—A Yiddish character piece in which the interest is very uncertain. The story concerns a mining deal engaged in by the Jewish lover, and such humor as it possesses is of the low comedy type.

A MURDEROUS ELOPEMENT (Nestor), Mar. 16.—A number of honest, well-meaning people think that a girl has been killed in this comedy because they discover her handkerchief stained with blood from a nose bleed. The result is that what might otherwise have been a quiet elopement, turns out to be a very exciting one.

DAZZLE'S BLACK EYE (Crystal), Mar. 17.—Aunt Deborah, a New Thought lady, tries to cure Dazzle of certain ailments, which she terms "mortal error." The humor in this is not very strong.

BALDY BELMONT NEARLY A HERO (Crystal), Mar. 17.—Belmont hires Lazy Luke, inducing him to impersonate a burglar, while he himself plays officer. A slight offering; on the same reel with above.

WON IN THE FIRST (Joker), Mar. 18.—In this number, written by Grace Cunard, the minister and the pugilist are mixed up by the eager reception committees when they arrive in the small town. Some fun of the slapstick variety develops out of the error. The photography is not up to standard in places.

A VISIT TO MONT ST. MICHAEL, FRANCE (Joker), Mar. 18.—This number on same reel with "Won in the First."

A KIDNAPPED PUGILIST (Rex), Mar. 19.—A one-reel boxing story of the conventional type. The opening scenes are in a small town, where Jimmy Clabby and his rival come to blows over the girl. Later, in the city, the girl dresses as a boy and rescues Jimmy from the gang in time for the fight. The boxing scenes were realistic, but rather too brief.

COLONEL CUSTARD'S LAST STAND (Frontier), Mar. 19.—A burlesque on the early days of warfare with the Indians. Chief Standing Cowsky proves a humorous figure and the whole picture, while not a strong production, brings out a succession of smiles.

THOSE PERSISTENT OLD MAIDS (Nestor), Mar. 20.—An Al Christie comedy number, with Eddie Lyons, Victoria Ford, Russell Bassett and other members of this blithe little company in evidence. This is somewhat rough on the suffrage cause, but the humor is of a clean, appealing sort and is sure to bring a great deal of laughter. A good release.

THE SHERIFF'S DEPUTY (Frontier), Mar. 21.—A first rate story of politics in a Western town. The hero elects his prospective father-in-law as sheriff by casting his own vote for him, though he himself is a candidate. The characterizations are good, but the mother's make-up was bad. This little story has a good swing to it.

MIKE AND JAKE GO IN FOR MATRIMONY (Joker), Mar. 21.—The opening scenes in the bachelor's kitchen are too sloppy to have much attractiveness. Later along the production makes a very fair offering of the slapstick sort, but it is not especially funny.

Independent Specials

THE GLORY OF WHINEY DURKEL (Majestic), Mar. 3.—This two-part picture is something out of the ordinary in construction of plot and is very morbid in theme. It is well done in all respects, photography, lighting, scenic effects and direction. The acting of the old miser and his make-up, and that of his half-witted son is very artistic. All the members of the cast did good work. It creates attention with its intensity, notwithstanding its morbidity.

KATHLEEN, THE IRISH ROSE (Thanhouser), Mar. 10.—A two-part Irish love story with very little that is fresh or new in it. Maud Fealey plays the heroine and puts life and charm into the young woman. She is gracefully supported by all in the cast. But the staging is artificial—we see gardens in a riot of blossom and a few feet away see the wintry trees of a wood and cold waters of a lake. There is a story that interests; but it is too dependent on melodramatic license to really capture the spectator who is not simple-minded. It turns out, in the end, to be merely a dream. A fair number.

FROM THE LION'S JAWS (Bison), Mar. 14.—A two-reel number, written by Henry McRae, with Wm. Clifford and Miss Wolcamp in the cast. This is another African story, featuring animal realism. The girl's pet elephant carries out its part in good style, sliding down a cliff to go to her rescue. Lions and tigers are employed to get up excitement. The plot in this piece is quite ordinary, but the work of the trained animals and the splendid outdoor settings make the release an attractive one.

A MODERN FREE-LANCE (American), Mar. 16.—This is a romance of newspaper and theatrical life and depicts the deprivations a young reporter experiences while holding down his job, writing a play and loving a girl at the same time. He loses his job, his meal ticket and nearly his girl. In an almost starving condition he finishes his play, which is accepted and produced while he is in a hospital convalescing. He reads in a newspaper of its wonderful hit and finds he has several hundred dollars coming in royalties. He grabs the money, the girl and a license and locates on easy street. This is all to the good, Mr. Exhibitor.

THE ADVENTURES OF SHORTY (Broncho), Mar. 18.—This two-reel offering to picturedom written by William H. Clifford gyrates Shorty around the circle until it almost straightens out his chaps. His adventures are numerous and keeps the spectators on the qui vive wondering what is going to happen to him next. This is a very laughable photoplay. It is cast with capable artists, well directed and photographed. Shorty's finish after he is free is immense and amusing. "Back to the bunkhouse for him." It will please any audience.

THE SILVER LOVING CUP (Imp), Mar. 19.—A two-reel picture with a strong plot well carried out. It is the old story of a man, a head hospital surgeon, neglecting his wife because his time and thoughts are devoted to his duties. The wife, in pique, goes into the social set, neglecting her child. A loving cup is presented to the husband by his hospital associates, and while showing it to his little child she insists on drinking from it. The latter part is very touching and human, depicting how the frailty of a woman can cause dire results and anguish. A combination of circumstances gives a happy ending. This is a well-done offering with beautiful effects.

THE BELLS OF AUSTI (Domino), Mar. 19.—The plot of this two-reel photoplay drama is located in Mexico and is full of intrigue, treachery, jealousy, murder, etc. It is intense in an unusual degree. The direction is very ably done. The scenes are well selected and photographed clearly. The plot is in part conventional, still it contains some originality. The costumes lend to the whole, giving it a romantic flavor. It has a sad happening that detracts at the finale. It will entertain and please.

ROTHAPFEL BACK FROM EUROPE.

What He Thinks of European Methods of Presentation.

MR. S. L. ROTHAPFEL, the little Napoleon of motion picture presentation, has just returned from a hasty trip to Europe where he went to observe methods of presentation. He declines to join in the chorus of praise for European methods of presentation and frankly declares that "we have nothing to learn." Mr. Rothapfel spent a few days in London, in Paris and Berlin, and in none of these cities was he at all impressed with the achievements in the presentation of motion pictures.

"As far as projection goes," said he to a representative of The Moving Picture World, "we are away ahead of Europe. Their handling of the light problem is atrocious, even in some of their so-called best theaters. As for music the European h use may, on the whole, be better, but we have houses on this side that far surpass their best in the matter of music. It seemed to me that the popularity of the picture in England and Germany is on the wane. I never saw a really crowded house in either country except perhaps the Marble Arch in London, which has not much of a seating capacity any way. In France the attendances seemed to be better, but that might have been due to the fact that I was in Paris just as the carnival was getting into full swing. The best musical performance I heard in the New Gallery Kinema on Regent Street in London. In Germany the business is being ruined through excessive censorship. It has come to a pass in Germany where only comedies are allowed; the police scissor the life out of every drama. I cannot explain why the people in Europe who earn far less money than we do are willing and able to spend so much money for amusements. Everywhere the European prices are much higher than ours and some of these expensive shows are hideously bad. I refer in particular to an evening I spent at the Plasticon in Paris, where I paid five francs to see a show that was hardly worth a nickel. I must mention one thing in favor of the European theater—the attendants are exceptionally well trained, they are uniformly courteous and know how to make the patrons feel comfortable."

Mr. Rothapfel is busy with preparations for the Herculean task which awaits him when the new Strand Theater will be opened. The opening is scheduled for some time in April and until then the little Napoleon will be head over heels in work, planning, working out ideas and striving to make the opening night memorable in the history of the motion picture of America.

CALDER JOHNSTONE ARRIVES AT COAST.

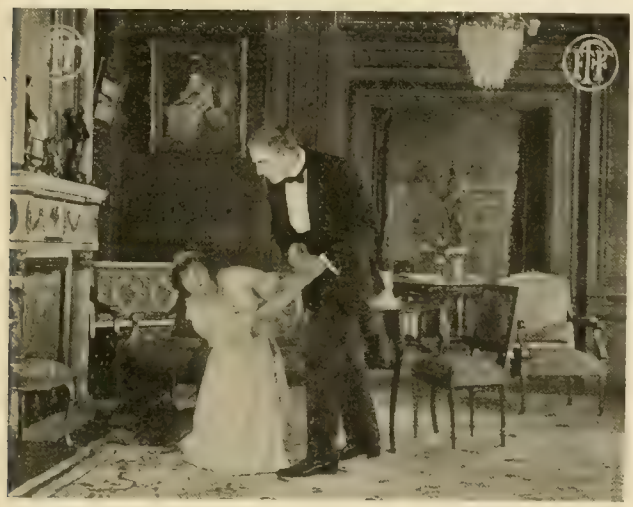
Calder Johnstone, for the past eight months editor of the Eastern Scenario Department of the Universal, has arrived at the Pacific Coast studios of that company in Hollywood, Cal. Mr. Johnstone will work in conjunction with James Dayton, editor of the scenario department of the West Coast organization. Mr. Johnstone's good work in the East was sufficient introduction and he was heartily welcomed at the Hollywood studios.

"Clothes."

House Peters by His Finished Acting Dominates a Good Famous Players' Subject Directed by Francis Powers.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "CLOTHES" the Famous Players released on March 10 a good four-part subject. It is an interesting story and it is well produced by Francis Powers, a recent acquisition in the directing force of the Twenty-sixth Street studio. House Peters is in this play Arnold West, the villain. It is a polished, a gentlemanly, a consummate rascal he portrays—one who deceives and measurably wins the sympathy of all of us who in the beginning have been warned of his villainy and who have even noted the significant and progressive steps by which he enmeshed his innocent victim. Mr. Peters shows an infinite capacity for taking pains. Charlotte Ives plays Olive Sherwood, the young woman who at the suggestion of West comes to New York, and who believes the money he pays over to her really is the income on the mining stock her late father had been duped into buying. Miss Ives' Olive is of a winning personality—wholesome, ungushing, despite the fact she is surrounded by socially ambitious women.



Scene from "Clothes" (Famous Players).

Edward Mackay is Richard Burbank, the young man in love with Olive. Minna Gale Haynes is Mrs. Cathcart, the friendly relative and landlady of Olive. Frederick Webber is Horace Watling, the contented if small Omaha publisher tempted to come to New York and finds his troubles increase with his added income. Josephine Drake is Mrs. Watling, whose head is turned by her new wealth, and who aspires to Society of the sort some would have us believe can be described adequately only with a large S. Little Mimi Yvonne is Ruth, the five-year-old who in her new home discovers her heretofore fond mamma has for her no time or even patience. So also is there Mr. Sherwood, whose identity we did not learn. The work of all these players is excellent.

"Clothes" is the successful drama by Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock in which Grace George starred. It is a serious story—a large audience gathered in the Lincoln Square Theater on the day of the picture's release found but two occasions for laughter, but the close, the silent attention indicated only too plainly its deep interest. Most of the scenes are of New York. The interiors of the Watlings' home in the metropolis by their luxury indicate the expanding financial resources of the head of the family. They are in sharp contrast with the charming simplicity of the first domicile out in Omaha. In fact, it is apparent that the husband, as he observes the bounding ambition of his wife, as he is compelled by her to leave his little daughter and his pipe by the fireplace and come out and meet her guests, longs to be back in his old if humbler surroundings. The story of the Watlings may not be the main theme of the play; neither is it an unimportant one. It is closely knitted to the chief action, and it carries a moral.

Arnold West is a scoundrel who sells worthless securities. He unloads a block on Sherwood. When he learns of the death of Sherwood he suggests to Olive, whom he met on his only visit to her home, that she come to live in New York. Olive has extravagant tastes; she craves the life of which she hears through her former neighbors the Watlings. In New York West pays her "dividends" on her father's stock. He pays her a commission on a sale of stock to Watling. He pays for a gown she had ordered. In each instance he takes a receipt. When at a house party, West locks Olive in a room and attempts to embrace her, Olive repulses him. When he is brought to book before the assembled guests by the indignant fiance of Olive he denounces the girl and shows the receipts. The girl will not explain. He goes back to Omaha. Watling, disgusted, believing he has been tricked by Olive as well as by West, tells his wife they are going back home; his business has taken a slump, anyway.

Burbank, the former fiance of Olive, goes to have it out with West, but enters the swindler's office as he is in his death throes from heart failure. A clerk who had assailed West tells Burbank of the man's crimes. Out in Omaha little Ruth straightens matters out to the happiness of the survivors. It is a pretty ending.

There are many interesting situations, some of them of dramatic power. There is the meeting of West and Olive in her home, and the dialogue at the foot of the stairs. There is the elaborately staged society circus, with its clowns and real and imitation donkeys performing in the ring; while in an adjoining room men and women are gathered about a billiard table. There is a tense moment as West, crouched on the outside of the snow-covered summer house, nearly reveals his spying presence to the lovers below him. The snow scenes will have more than a story interest for many who see the pictures. The climax is well built up. The cold-blooded denunciation by West of Olive will come as a shock. It is Machiavellian.

Just why Olive should write her lover that she cannot explain matters is not clear. Of course, if she did explain, the story would probably end right there, assuming the young man to be ordinarily reasonable. While on this tack, too, it may be suggested the newspaper headline was overdrawn. Newspapers report failures, but they take no chances on describing a named firm as "tottering." It would be too expensive.

There is pathos when the awakened mother puts her arms about her child. There is tragedy as West is fatally seized with his long-standing malady. There is drama in the trail of incidents following the writing of the letter of little Ruth to Burbank, asking him to come to Olive. There is laughter as father, mother and daughter run from the room, leaving the reunited lovers by themselves.

NEW FEATURE FILM COMBINATION.

THE latest development in the feature field is the announcement of the formation of an international combination to handle multiple-reel features of several large European producing houses not already contracted for. We understand that options have already been secured, giving first choice on all features exceeding 4,000 feet made during the next five years. This combination claims that it already has a seven months' supply all complete for shipment. Among those interested in the company are P. P. Craft, of the Apex Film Company, who was one of the first to specialize in feature productions in this country; H. Winik, who arrived from London last week, and Joseph Simmonds, another London feature exchange man, are also interested. For the past few months, Mr. Winik has handled quite a number of European and American made feature films in the English and European market. As far as the plan has been outlined at the present writing, it is expected to release at least twelve large productions each year, or one each month.

Executive headquarters have already been arranged for at 35 Little Newport Street, London, and temporary American headquarters at 145 West 45th Street, New York. Official announcement of the formation and purpose of the company has been withheld pending the securing of a Broadway theater in which to demonstrate the service upon the screen. While the official title has not been made public, it is understood that the combine will probably be known as the Dramatic Successes Feature Film Company.

A number of the larger feature buyers were invited to a private exhibition on Tuesday evening of this week, of one of the first importations of the company, a melodramatic spectacle entitled, "Sealed Orders."

Among those who enjoyed the "sample exhibition" by invitation were Mr. Rothapfel, America's leading moving picture impressario; Greater J. D. Williams, the ex-Australian film man; representatives of The Moving Picture World; Congressman Rynock, of the Shubert Theatrical Co.; Henry Ziegler, of Anderson & Ziegler; W. E. Greene, the New England film magnate; Mr. Cohen, general manager of the exclusive department of the General Film Co.; Mr. Mayer, of the Walnut St. Opera House, Philadelphia, and a circuit of New England theatres and distributor of the Jesse Lasky features; Alfred Hamburger, president of the Celebrated Players Film Co., of Chicago; W. L. Sherry, distributor of the Famous Players productions; J. E. Brulatour, distributor of the Eastman stock; Mr. Isaac, distributor of the All-Star Features for New York State; W. I. Sherry, distributor of All-Star and Famous Players features for the Southern States; Mr. Schwalbe, distributor of All-Star Features in Pennsylvania, and W. I. Samwick, distributor of Apex features for New York State.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE.

There Must Be Separate Programs for Children.

ON Friday, March 6th, Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, saw his first moving picture. Unfortunately, he did not go voluntarily to see the picture for its own sake. He viewed it from the standpoint of a censor, for this picture, "The Traffic in Souls," which had been rejected by Major Funkhouser and his board, some time ago, had created a wonderful impression in many large cities of the country and had been brought back to Chicago to get another chance. Mayor Harrison saw and admired the picture, and, after withholding his decision until the following day, he upheld Major Funkhouser and the censorship board. He explained his attitude as follows:

"There is all the difference in the world between a picture shown generally and one exhibited at a high-priced theater, attended only by adults, who are fully informed as to its character in advance," said the Mayor.

"If this film were to be shown to the proper audience, and if it could be kept out of the small shows attended by children, I would be inclined to issue a permit.

"But I am told by Mr. Sexton you can't make fish of one and fowl of another. If we grant a permit for its exhibition in a certain theater, it would be illegal for the city to refuse a permit for any other theater. Unfortunately, the city is not permitted to establish an elastic censorship. Therefore, I cannot see any reason for overruling Major Funkhouser.

"It is a remarkable film, however, and under proper auspices would inculcate a moral lesson and a healthy warning. But it would be disastrous to have pictures of that kind exhibited in outlying moving picture shows, attended by children of both sexes.

"Furthermore, if we grant a permit for one white slave film we cannot reject others. I enjoyed seeing the film in question, but I cannot allow others to see it."

The Mayor's decision was based on an opinion of Corporation Counsel Sexton that no discrimination could be shown with regard to the theaters in which the film might be exhibited, should a permit be granted.

He also was influenced by the consideration that the issuance of a permit for films of this character would necessitate issuing them for other films treating similar subjects.

The Mayor's decision is mainly based on the fact that it is not a desirable subject for children of both sexes. This implies that all moving picture subjects passed on by the Chicago board of censorship shall be censored from the minor's standpoint. It means, therefore, that Chicago adults will be deprived the right of seeing many of the finest pictures produced — classical and otherwise.

Is not this whole matter being treated farcically? Where has our common sense gone to?

In justice to this great industry, there must be such censorship of films as will determine what pictures are suited for children, and what are not. In other words, there must be children's programs and programs for adults. Children should be prohibited from viewing adult programs.

In Germany this is easily accomplished. Every picture theater manager must post outside his theater a card stating whether the program running at the time is for adults or minors. No manager must admit a child to an adult program, under heavy penalty. Adults can view children's programs if they wish.

It is about time that the exhibitor should do his part in settling this question. Children's picture theaters, as I stated several months ago, would be another solution of the difficulty.

There must be, in any case, programs for children in order to save the industry from a great setback.

H. H. Buckwalter Sends Breezy News from Denver

I have just received another breezy news letter from H. H. Buckwalter, of Denver, that will be read with much interest by readers. Here it is:

"Denver is still wondering why it didn't happen—the 'it' being the predicted failure of the new United States Theater, which is running programs three and four days and charging higher prices than the other houses. And, wonder of all, the house is crowded to the doors, while some of the others have seats holding lonesome conventions.

"The fact is, the ten-cent house and big feature programs have come to stay in Denver, and my prediction is that the next move will be to 25 cents, and then higher. Whenever the 'regular' theaters stop running naughty road shows and barnstorming attractions and put on clean, educational pictures the price will go to from 25 cents to $1 per seat, and the higher the rate the more people are drawn, while the five-cent fellows stand around and say, 'It can't last.'

"Another striking fact that indicates coming prosperity for the film men is the changed attitude of the Colorado newspapers. A few months ago they refused to print a line about moving pictures and the long-haired men and short-haired women of the pencil-pushing horde pretended to turn up their pug noses at the 'very idea' of moving pictures. Now, it is all different. The papers are looking for picture news and will print it—columns of it—if there is a bit of excuse for an interesting story. There is no reformation on the part of the news gatherers. They simply have seen the light and tardily recognized the fact that thousands and thousands of their readers were more interested in pictures than in papers, and that when 'hard times' came they stopped the papers so they could take in the pictures. Then the theater managers responded by doing some liberal advertising, and now the feeling of friendship between the two lines of endeavor is marked by one broad spirit of reciprocity. Of course, the big features helped to a great extent. First came the Selig 'Kathlyn' stories published every Sunday. Now comes the Universal with a picture story every day and more are to follow. Hearst, unfortunately, has no Denver paper, so the big writeups for the Hearst-Selig weekly do not appear, except as reprints, but they are showing an entering wedge. The Kleine big features caught the popular fancy from the start and almost every Colorado paper will eagerly grab a well-written story about a film put out under this brand.

"Just at the present moment the 'big news feature' in Colorado is the coming here of several film-producing plants from Los Angeles. From present indications, the Universal will be the first big one to start working under Colorado sunshine; but several others will follow—if they do not precede that company. W. H. Swanson will be here during the week of Monday, March 9th, and Carl Laemmle and party are expected about the same time.

"Through their local representative they announced that they wanted a 12,000-acre ranch. But it is my opinion that they got reckless with the ciphers, for the logical idea here would be small and mobile units, so as to get greater diversity of scenic effects. There are a number of locations very close to Denver where unlimited water and other conveniences for development seem to offer attractions, but the writer is of the opinion that the best method would be to establish a studio and darkrooms in Denver and then send the producing parties out to the best locations, which can be done very cheaply. Colorado people have never had the grasping, greedy instinct of the Southern California bunch, and for this reason the cost of making negatives here would be probably half the expense on the coast, where every move means a bank-roll. But, then, neither does Colorado have the thousands of idle workmen, and the bread lines and the food riots. Everybody is happy and contented and can well spare the few courtesies to the other fellow—the little things that make life worth living and that make the whole big family happy.

"The opening of producing plants here recalls the fact that this state was very well represented in the several transitions that marked the birth and early growth of the moving picture industry. When the old disappearing gun and fire-run films, shown as curiosities in variety theaters, petered out, and the business was kept alive for one whole year by the 'car shows' and 'tours,' Colorado had already contributed twenty-five thousand feet of railroad scenic films, all made from a coal car placed ahead of an engine—the very thing to fit the 'car shows.' These negatives were made just before they 'saved the baby' by carrying the declining business over its first real 'bad spell.' Then came the full-reel subjects and Colorado contributed the first of these. 'Lynching at Cripple Creek' was the leader of the wild westerns, and it was quickly followed by several in which Gilbert M. Anderson—at that time producing for Selig—either wrote, directed or played parts. 'The Girl from Montana' was one of these, and probably the most exciting and popular. And it is interesting to know that the 'girl' in this picture was Miss Pansy Perry, whose two sisters recently worked in 'The Squaw Man' with good results.

"Anderson really got his training as a 'bad man' in Colorado. When he first came here he rode a horse like a sailor—or worse. He learned quickly, and also accumulated a lot of 'bad man' togs which looked good in pictures, even if they were foreign to the ideas of the real cow puncher. After he left Selig he tried town comedies in Chicago, but quickly returned to Colorado for a season or two, and started on the famous western pictures that have made him the best-known picture actor in the world.

"The rush to Los Angeles really began when Selig sent a small company there to pass a few weeks during the winter. Francis H. Boggs was responsible for the movement taking root, for he bought a couple of lots in Edendale for Selig and then others followed. With the coming of the big business, the ideas of the natives grew with tropical speed, and soon the coast real estate men and others turned from the tourists to reap the harvest from the moving picture men, and their appetites seemed to feel no bounds. Prices went up, and even the weather man was caught in the vortex. Floods, dust storms, rains in July and August, cloudbursts and finally static—all caused the picture man to turn to newer fields, with the result that for several weeks there have been mysterious parties skirmishing around Denver in automobiles looking for factory sites and holding corner-conferences with real estate men, anxiously asking them to find 'just the place we want.' And by general consent, or, rather, understanding, there has been not the slightest disposition to raise prices or grab at the promise of golden flood. Why, I really believe if one case of coast tactics should sprout, the vigilantes would get busy and work in a picture that would never appear on any screen."

Chicago Film Brevities.

Alfred Hamburger, president of the celebrated Players Film Company, this city, left for New York, Sunday, March 8th. He will spend several days in the metropolis, looking over the film feature market with the intention of buying for his company.

* * *

H. M. Warner, sales manager of Warner's Features, New York City, arrived in Chicago, Friday, March 6th, after visiting his branch managers in Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Minneapolis, whom he advised on the rental prices of the Warner's productions. He left this city for Pittsburgh last Monday evening, and will arrive in New York about Thursday. Mr. Warner reported very good business for his firm throughout the territory visited.

* * *

D. W. Russell, Chicago representative for David Horsley, who has the American agency for Lumiere Film, called on us at our new offices early last week. Mr. Russell reports that business for the Lumiere product is encouraging in this territory.

* * *

Carl Rademacher has sold the Orpheum Theater, Freeport, Ill., and purchased the Monogram Theater, 35th and Halsted Streets, this city. Mr. Rademacher has closed the Monogram for remodeling, and will reopen in about ten days. The Monogram seats 450 people and, under Mr. Rademacher's management, four reels of Licensed service will be offered daily at five cents, with the exception of Saturdays and Sundays, when ten cents will be charged for special programs. Mr. Rademacher's predecessor ran vaudeville and pictures, but under the new management vaudeville will be cut out and straight picture programs used. The Orpheum, Freeport, was a "lemon," when Mr. Rademacher took hold of it; but he made a big success there during his one and a half years' residence. He succeeded in getting permission to open on Sundays about six months ago, and the Orpheum, under his management, had achieved such a fine reputation that ministers recommended his house, from their pulpits, as a good place to go on Sundays. Mr. Rademacher states that his good wife was a great help to him in making his Freeport success, and he believes that she will be a strong partner in his new venture.

* * *

Harry W. Baker, manager of the Weneeda Theater, 5038 West Chicago Avenue, called at our new offices last week, and, after admiring our surroundings, renewed his subscription for THE WORLD. This theater offers four reels of Licensed pictures for five cents, and Mr. Baker stated that business is very satisfactory; also that he has made exceptionally fine business with the "Kathlyn" series. The Weneeda seats 300 people.

* * *

Charles S. Goetz, special representative of The World's Film Corporation, New York City, called on us March 5th on his way back to New York, after a tour on which he visited Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis and Minneapolis, in all of which cities his company has offices. He reported that business has picked up, and that in some cities it is quite flourishing. He also reported that his company is now releasing nothing less than five-reel subjects. Mr. Goetz was accompanied, during his call at our office, by F. H. McMillan, Chicago manager of the company. Mr. McMillan has held his present position since the office was opened last October. He stated that business was keeping up fully with all the rest of the offices, and that there is a great demand for "Joan of Arc."

* * *

I have just received a postal card from William H. Bell, bearing the Havre postmark. He states that after getting through with the French republic he will return to this country.

* * *

T. F. Cabasino, vice-president of the Italian-American Film Corporation, New York City, visited our offices Tuesday, March 3rd. Mr. Cabasino stopped off at Pittsburgh on his way here from New York City. He will remain in Chicago until the latter part of the month, and will then proceed to St. Louis and Kansas City. He stated that his company expects to open a western office here some time this month or early next month. He has not yet decided who will take charge of the Chicago office.

James Martin, manager of the Magic Theater, Fort Dodge, Ia., writes that Francis X. Bushman, the popular leading man of Essanay's eastern company, will appear at his theater on Sunday, March 15th, to take part in a special program that has been arranged. Mr. Bushman is in high demand these days by exhibitors, as his lectures are clever and entertaining, and most educational in their way.

* * *

The moving picture spreads in the Chicago Sunday papers of March 8th were really remarkable. The Examiner's page had fine illustrations of "The Battle of the Wilderness" (Vitagraph), and of "Wolfe, or the Conquest of Quebec" (Kalem), with a well-written synopsis of the latter. Over a column of descriptive reading matter, on another page, was devoted to the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. The Sunday Tribune's page, in the magazine section, had a beautiful colored likeness, on a large scale, of Maurice Costello, of the Vitagraph Company, with a brief biographical sketch. The page had also a column and a half of moving picture news paragraphs. The Sunday Record-Herald also devoted a full page to pictures. "Samson and Delilah" (American), carried most of the space in illustrations and story.

ECLECTIC OPENS BOSTON AND N. Y. EXCHANGES.

The Eclectic Film Company has opened a branch office to be conducted under the name of Eclectic Feature Film Exchange, 65 Olympia Bldg., 3 Tremont Road, Boston, Mass. This announcement will undoubtedly be welcome to the New England exhibitors. Henceforth they will have the opportunity of booking the Eclectic feature films direct in that territory.

The Eclectic Company cordially invites the exhibitors in New England to get in touch with the new office, which is in charge of Mr. S. Bernfield, an experienced exchange man and thoroughly familiar with the character and needs of that territory.

Another Eclectic exchange has been opened in New York City, a rental office from which bookings can be made for Eclectic features. This rental office will be conducted the same as other Eclectic exchanges, under the name Eclectic Feature Film Exchange. It is temporarily located in the World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, New York City, room No. 1401. Jule Bernstein is in charge of the office and will be pleased to meet old and new friends, and will be glad to explain to interested parties everything in connection with Eclectic film service.

VITAGRAPH ORGAN DEDICATED.

A large number of New York musicians interested in organ music were present at the formal dedication of the big Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones symphonic orchestra at the Vitagraph Theater, Forty-fourth Street and Broadway, New York, on Monday morning, March 9. Mr. Robert Hope-Jones, the inventor of the instrument, and other experts gave a recital which developed the possibilities of the symphonic orchestra much to the amazement and delight of the assembled musicians, one of whom declared that it was not only a "revolution, but a revelation." It is the intention of the management to give public recitals daily at the hours of 11 o'clock a. m. and 5:30 o'clock p. m.

Supplementing the recital will be shown the pictures "The Vengeance of Durand," a powerful dramatic subject; "Wild Beasts at Large," a most laughable comedy, in which wild animals play an important part; "Wonderful Niagara" and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The program which has been on since the opening of the theater will prevail at the 2:30 o'clock matinee and the 8:30 o'clock evening show. The prices will remain the same.

FAMOUS PLAYERS ENGAGE WILLIAM FARNUM.

The Famous Players' Film Company has engaged William Farnum, one of the most popular stars on the American stage, who will be presented in "The Redemption of David Corson," by Charles Frederic Goss, published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company. "The Redemption of David Corson" provides Mr. Farnum with a role superbly suited to his physique and individuality.

TAKES OVER LEASE.

H. H. Durgin, proprietor of the Spa moving picture theater, Pittsfield, Mass., took over the lease of the Empire Theater on Summer Street that city. Besides the lease Mr. Durgin becomes the owner of the chairs, scenery, moving picture booth and furnishings. Present plans call for the remodeling of the entire playhouse and the opening about April 13. A mirrorroide screen will be installed. Motion pictures and vaudeville will also be on the program. Lawrence Durgin will be associated with his father in the new venture. Together they will conduct the Empire and the Spa Theater.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

NEW YORK LOCAL REORGANIZED.

President Neff, of the National League, Straightens Out Some Kinks in the Local Situation.

PROSPECTS for a better organization of League Exhibitors in New York City have greatly improved during the past week. For some time the local League organization, known as the Motion Picture Board of Trade, with Sidney Ascher as president, has been in a moribund condition. No meetings were being held and there was no attempt to increase the membership, due largely to the inaction of the officers. President Neff was invited to come East and look the situation over, with the hope that he would be able to suggest some solution for the problem that beset the Local League.

Several conferences were held early in the week, and it was decided to request the resignation of the officers of the so-called Board of Trade and to make a new start. Mr. Ascher, the president, was practically disqualified to hold office for the reason that he had become interested in the manufacture and renting of pictures. For this and other reasons, it was decided to have a new deal, and after a hurried arrangement with State Secretary Fleischman, notice of a meeting to be held at the Hotel Imperial, Wednesday morning, March 11th, was sent out.

At the appointed hour the exhibitors began to arrive until quite a considerable gathering was assembled. Among those present were President Neff; National Vice-President, R. L. Macnabb; New York State Secretary, M. L. Fleischman; T. P. Finnegan, member of the National Executive Committee from Texas; John J. Wittman; John Mullaney, and others from the Bronx; T. B. Keppler, Counsel for the New York State League, and H. U. Newsome, of Birmingham, Ala.

A resolution was adopted declaring all offices of the Board of Trade vacant. A second resolution changed the name of the organization to that of New York Local No. 1 of New York State Branch No. 11, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. An election of temporary officers was had, and the following were named: President, John J. Wittman; First Vice-President, R. L. Macnabb; second Vice-President, H. Feldman; Secretary, M. L. Fleischman, 2755 Webster Avenue, New York City; Treasurer, John J. Mullaney; Sergeant-at-Arms, M. Becker.

It was decided to call a meeting of New York exhibitors on March 26th, to be held at the Imperial Hotel. The hour will be 10 o'clock in the morning, and all exhibitors desiring to affiliate with the League will be welcome.

MASSACHUSETTS EXHIBITORS AT SPRINGFIELD.

Hold an Enthusiastic Meeting and Secure a Large Addition to the Defense Fund and the Memerbship.

THE first general meeting of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts ever held outside of Boston was called together at Springfield on Wednesday, March 4, and a most encouraging one it was. Among those making the trip from Boston were: E. H. Horstmann, Frank J. Howard, H. Sivoolos, "Nap" Demara, Simeon Frankel, Fred Swett, R. D. Marson, and the following exchange men: J. A. Eslow, Universal; Harry F. Campbell and Samuel Grant, Warner's Features; Jack Leonard, Famous Players; Fred B. Murphy, World Film; and Louis Machet, Standard Feature Film Company.

The meeting was called promptly at 2 p. m., in the offices of the Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company at their Broadway Theater. President Hortsmann, of the League, outlined what bills were now pending in the Massachusetts Legislature, explaining that a defense fund had been raised, wholly due to the efforts of Boston exhibitors and exchanges, and gave a résumé of the recent meetings of the League held in Boston, the details of which have been printed in the World's previous issues.

Frank Howard was the next speaker, and in his usual frank way explained that the Boston end of the business had been fighting the battles of all Massachusetts exhibitors, without any concrete help from the up-state managers. He clearly pointed out that the league could not continue to do this, unless it was assured of the moral co-operation and financial support of all exhibitors in the Bay State, and urged everyone present to join the league at once, and to contribute to the defense fund.

Harry F. Campbell reported on legislative matters, the substance of which has already appeared in these pages. Mr. Samuel Grant, chairman of the Operators' Committee, also rendered his report for the benefit of those present. Fred Swett, of the Nicholas Power Company, related conditions in general throughout the country.

A. Mandleberg, of the Princess Theater, Springfield, addressed the exhibitors, and promised that the small league which had lately organized in Springfield would join the big Massachusetts League, and vouched for its full co-operation. The Springfield League, which has about 20 members, was organized to fight the Sunday closing of theaters, and the barring of posters from theater lobbies, donated to the defense fund as a body, while Goldstein Brothers and other firms, also donated as individual firms.

Among those present from and around Springfield were: Manager Adams, Levin Theater; Manager Thomas, Globe; Manager Zimmerman, Gaiety; Manager Mandelberg, Princess; Manager Dexter, Lyric; W. Morton, Reel; H. Hudson, Hudson; Manager Farrell, Subway; Manager Graves, Mirror; A. N. Stebbin, Empire, West Springfield; Harry Lebinger, Star, Holyoke; H. J. Flebotti, Grand, Indian Orchard; Messrs. Zempft and Lower, Nelson Theater; Manager Wrighter, Poli's; Manager Goldstein, Broadway.

The meeting was considered distinctly successful by the league, and is a step forward in the plan to bring all Massachusetts exhibitors into the league, as a well-knit, strong state organization. On the return home, Messrs. Howard, Eslow, Campbell, Grant, Murphy and Marson put the finishing touches to a busy day by a dinner at the Cafe Hayward.

HENRY.

OPPOSE CENSOR LAW.

Pennsylvania Exhibitors Propose to Contest the Legislative Enactment in the Courts.

At a recent meeting of motion picture exhibitors held in Philadelphia, Pa., it was decided to make a fight against the law passed by the legislature of that state providing for the censoring of motion pictures. More than 100 exhibitors were present at the meeting, which was held at the law office of Samuel F. Wheeler, president of the Philadelphia Local of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and a committee consisting of James H. Buttner, V. R. Carrick, Harry Schwalbe, Marcus A. Benn, Edward A. Jeffries, George H. Roth and Samuel H. Wheeler was appointed to confer with the exhibitors in the western end of the state on the question on instituting a test suit to determine the constitutionality of the censor law.

According to the terms of the act the governor has appointed two persons to censor pictures for the entire state. It is contended that it is a physical impossibility for two persons to perform the duties required of them by the act.

It was also decided to contest the authority of the State Commissioner of Labor and Industry, whose inspectors are making recommendations relative to safety appliances to be installed in picture theaters. It is said that the Labor Commissioner is usurping the authority of the State Fire Marshall and, therefore, acting outside of his authority.

PROGRAM QUESTION IN PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia exhibitors are struggling with the question of the proper length of program to be run for 5 and 10 cent admissions. A special meeting of the Philadelphia League was held recently at which there was a large attendance and a full discussion of the subject. A committee of four, previously appointed to investigate the question, reported recommending four reels for 5 cents and up to eight reels for 10 cents admission. Matinees to be 5 cents. An amendment was made that full price of admission be charged for all children not in arms.

During the discussion that followed the matter of big features received a great deal of attention, with the conclusion that the big feature had come to stay.

The recommendations of the committee were adopted unanimously and an agreement drawn to go into effect April 3 for a period of three months, provided that 70 per cent of the exhibitors in Philadelphia, irrespective of the league, sign the document and abide by its provisions.

INTERNATIONAL EXECUTIVE MEETING.

A meeting of the board of directors of the International Motion Picture Exhibitors Association will be held at the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, Ohio, on Wednesday and Thursday, March 18th and 19th. Members of the board are Charles H. Phillips, president, Milwaukee, Wis.; Judge A. P. Tugwell, vice-president, Los Angeles, Cal.; Harold W. Rosenthal, secretary, New York; W. J. Sweeney, treasurer, Chicago, Ill.; S. H. Trigger, New York; Joseph B. Friedman, Buffalo, N. Y.; Dr. J. M. Rhoades, Indianapolis, Ind.; Thomas Furniss, Duluth, Minn.; Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Frank Howard, Boston, Mass. The meeting will be open to all exhibitors, and matters concerning the Association will be discussed. Details of the convention and exposition to be held in New York City will also be discussed.

NEFF GOES TO ROCHESTER.

After disposing of the situation in New York City, President Neff went to Rochester, N. Y., for a conference with the members of the Executive Board of the State League. At this meeting the resignation of Sidney Ascher as National Vice-President from New York State will be accepted and his successor pro tem probably appointed for the unexpired term.

TEXAS TO HOLD CONVENTION.

T. P. Finnegan, member of the National Executive Board, from Dallas, Texas, was in town last week looking for some good pictures for his new houses in Fort Worth and Waco. He announced that a convention of Texas exhibitors would be held sometime in May or June, for the election of delegates and the transaction of such other business as might be brought before the meeting.

FAVERSHAM TO ACT FOR PLAYGOERS.

William Faversham has signed a contract to participate in a mammoth photoplay production under the auspices of Daniel V. Arthur, general director of the Playgoers' Film Company. The play in which Mr. Faversham will make his film debut is not announced, but it is hinted that it will be one of the big dramatic successes in which the eminent actor-manager has appeared on Broadway and throughout the country during the past few seasons. Work upon the production will commence at once, and rehearsals of the interior scenes in the play will be held in the studio of the Playgoers' Film Company in Yonkers.

William Faversham.

Mr. Faversham's present endeavor is looked upon as one of the most potent developments in the history of motion-picture production, as he is universally recognized as one of the leaders of serious drama in America. The engagement of Mr. Faversham is in direct line with Mr. Arthur's expressed intention of introducing for the first time only Broadway stars and all-Broadway companies in the best Broadway successes.

"ROME OR DEATH" IS 5,000 FEET.

The advertisement of the E. & W. Transfilm Co., in our last week's issue, announcing the advent of "Rome or Death," through a typographical error, gave the length of this feature as 4,000 feet. Five thousand feet is the correct length. Exhibitors and exchanges please take note.

ANNA LITTLE JOINS UNIVERSAL.

THE Universal Company announces that it has secured the services of Miss Anna Little, who has been working with various picture companies on the Coast, but more recently with the Kay-Bee and Broncho Companies. Miss Little is a very handsome young woman, as we have had occasion to observe before in these columns, and has become well-known for her portrayal of Western girls. She has to her credit years of legitimate and stock experience, and outside of her portrayal of the Indian and cow-girl roles which made her famous, she has shown her accomplishment and versatility in many diversified characters.

Anna Little.

It is said there is not an animal on four legs that Miss Little cannot ride. Certainly, she is a past mistress in this direction, and aside from capitalizing this ability on the screen, she finds the keenest enjoyment in horseback riding as a recreation. She shoots with the steady hand and level eye of one who has felt the holster on the hip for a lifetime. She has known what it is to ride for days in the sizzling sun with a parched throat—to venture into rocky passes and up mountain sides where the false step of her mount would result in sure death. In fact, there is nothing that she fears or will not attempt, and this, combined with her delightful personality, exquisite beauty and matured dramatic expression, will place her in the foremost ranks of Universal stars.

As to who will direct Miss Little and what company will be accorded her has not been fully decided, but it is understood that she will continue in a series of roles similar to those that have made her the most widely known.

VERDICT AGAINST VITAGRAPH.

Louis M. Swaab, exchange man of Philadelphia, Pa., has been awarded a verdict in the sum of $20,424 against the Vitagraph Company, of New York, by a jury in the court presided over by Judge Barratt, in Philadelphia. The suit arose out of the replevin in 1909, of film leased to Mr. Swaab by the various Licensed manufacturing companies. The jury decided that the Vitagraph Company had no right to claim the reels and fixed the value of those replevined at $2,000. Mr. Swaab was allowed $8,424 damages for the retention of the reels, and was further awarded exemplary damages in the sum of $10,000.

SEAY WRITES ABOUT PICTURES.

Charles M. Seay, director and writer on many interesting Edison pictures, has contributed a four thousand word story entitled, "Interesting Facts About Motion Pictures," which appears in the March number of "American Boy," published in Detroit, Mich. Mr. Seay's long connection has enabled him to write most interestingly on his subject, and while he writes for the boy, his story will interest the "grown-ups." It will be found both amusing and informing.

CAMPBELL NO LONGER WITH EASTERN THEATERS COMPANY.

The Moving Picture World is in receipt of a letter from the Eastern Theaters Company, 18 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass., advising that Harry F. Campbell is no longer associated with them. Mr. Campbell was the advisory manager for that company. The Eastern Theaters Company operates five theaters in the New England states and is always adding to its circuit.

H. A. BODINE WITH RAW FILM SUPPLY.

H. A. Bodine, formerly connected with the Wollensak Optical Company, of Rochester, N. Y., has joined the forces of the Raw Film Supply Company, at 15 East 26th Street, New York, in the capacity of director of publicity and sales.

NEW HOUSE FOR DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D.

S. L. Wineman of Devil's Lake N. D. will build in that city a moving picture and vaudeville house to have a seating capacity of 800. Its dimensions are 40 by 140 feet.

"A Romany Spy"

A Three-Part Pathe Feature for Special Release by the General Film Company.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

A MORE finely finished production than this feature it will be hard to find. All the elements of a great and striking success are present in happy and harmonious combination.

Nothing could be simpler and nothing could be more powerful than the plot. A gypsy girl, untouched by the notions and refinements of our civilization, is traveling through Russia with others of her nomadic tribe. A number of officers of a neighboring fortress join the curious throng around the gypsy camp when the young girl sings and dances. Her wild beauty, her unconscious grace and charms arouse first the passions and then the chaster emotions of love in the heart of one of the officers, who, despite the warnings of his comrades, remains after the show is over and seeks the acquaintance of the dancer. The girl, careless, after all more child than woman, makes light of the officer's devotion and runs away.

Scene from "A Romany Spy" (Pathe).

Standing with the crowd about the gypsys' camp the spy of a foreign nation has observed the officers infatuation for the girl and he at once decides to profit by it for purposes of his own. He is most anxious to secure full plans of the fortress in which the officer is garrisoned. He watches the girl as she returns from her meeting with the officer to the camp of her tribe and offers her money if she will take advantage of the officer's love for her and assist in obtaining information as to the guns and fortifications of the garrison. The girl consents and is smuggled into the fortress by the officer. She measures the length of the outer wall and the great guns by her steps and returns with the information to her employer. The latter is well pleased, but thinking that there is a chance of obtaining all the plans of the fortress and other important military papers kept within its walls, offers the gypsy a very generous reward if she will go back and secure them. The gypsy again consents. She has been watched and it takes her utmost skill to elude the alert sentries, but she succeeds in reaching the window of the officer's room where he is confined for his former indiscretion in bringing a stranger into the garrison. The officer is overjoyed when he finds that the girl has come to him at so great a risk and unhesitatingly admits her to his room.

A great struggle now distresses the heart of the gypsy. She has begun to care for the officer. She will not, however, break her word to the spy. While she is thus fighting with her own emotions a comrade of the officer enters the room. The girl hides behind the curtains while her lover and his comrade withdraw into an adjoining alcove. While the two men are engaged in talk the girl steals out of the room, finds the office of the commander of the fortress, breaks open the lockers which contain the desired papers and returns with the papers hidden on her breast to her hiding place behind the curtains. She thinks that her absence has been unnoticed, but in this she is mistaken for her lover excusing himself for a moment to his comrade had looked behind the curtain and had found her gone. When the comrade at last withdraws the officer again steps behind the curtain and discovering the girl accuses her of having been away. He wants to know where she has been and what she has done. The girl deeply embarrassed looks down on the floor when the officer sees one of the plans which the girl in her haste had dropped from her breast. The officer begins to suspect and questions the gypsy. The girl, her love now blazing forth in a flame of remorse, tells all, and in great anger draws the money of the spy from her bosom and throws it away. She only realizes the danger in which she has placed the officer when the latter explains that he may become suspected of treason. A gypsy, she had no country, she could not understand the sentiment of patriotism and loyalty to country, but as a woman now passionately in love with a man she fully understands what terrible consequences her actions may bring upon his head. She is disconsolate. At this moment an alarm is sounded in the garrison. The theft of the plans has been discovered. The officer urges the girl to flee and she leaps out of the window. The next instant she is pursued by soldiers from whom she escapes only after a perilous chase.

Scene from "A Romany Spy" (Pathe).

In the meantime the commanding officer enters the room of the gypsy's lover, finds the plans and a large sum of money on the floor and accusing him of treason has him arrested. He is condemned and executed. Too late the distracted gypsy arrives upon the scene of execution throwing herself in an agony of despair upon the body of the unfortunate man. She is seized and after a heart-breaking struggle taken into the prison of the fortress leaving her fate in doubt.

The part of the gypsy girl was taken by Asta Nielsen and it may safely be said that this gifted woman never played with more art. She portrays the awakening of love in a woman's heart with an inspiration which amounts to genius. The other parts are all in competent hands; the settings are natural and effective, the groupings in the scenes where the dramatic and the spectacular united were most capably done. This is indeed a masterpiece.

RECEPTION FOR MR. AND MRS. LAEMMLE ON PACIFIC COAST.

Receptions, balls, luncheons, handshaking and exchange of compliments are the order of the day at the West Coast Studios of the Universal in honor and complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Laemmle and party who are visitors at the Hollywood Studios. Mr. Laemmle has been accorded such a welcome to the western Mecca of the motion picture industry as befits the president of the Universal Company.

On the evening of February 27th, the biggest reception and ball ever given by a motion picture company in the West was given in honor of Mr. Laemmle and party at the Hollywood Studios. Representative men of the industry and motion picture stars from all parts of the state, as well as every employee of the big western organization swelled the attendance to over 3000.

The ball and reception was held on the big stage at the Hollywood Studios. The stage was decorated for the occasion by Frank Ormston, technical director.

On the evening of February 25th Mr. Laemmle was the honored guest and toastmaster at a banquet at the Photoplayers' Club of Los Angeles. The evening was given over to fun, and the following photoplayers responded to toasts: Isidore Bernstein, C. A. Molloy, Fred Mace, Henry McRae, Herbert Rawlinson and Otis Turner.

On the evening of February 23rd, a formal reception and ball to Mr. and Mrs. Laemmle and party was given at the Hollywood Hotel by Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Bernstein. In attendance were all directors, stars and heads of departments of the Universal Pacific Coast studios, as well as Mr. Laemmle's party, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Fleckles, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Bryson, Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Van Husen, Mrs. Lesserman and Herman Fichtenberg. Mr. and Mrs. David Horsley were also present.

"Zingo, the Son of the Sea"

A Twelve Reel Ambrosio Subject to Be Released in Four Installments by Warner's Features.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

FANTASTIC tales well worked out have a new and most compelling charm on the screen. Good fantastic tales, in which humor plays a major part are rare in the literature of the world, which is the reason we do not see more fantastic films. A modern Italian writer, A. Robida, has evolved a most amusing and fantastic piece of fiction which he called "The Most Extraordinary Adventures of Farandoul." The Ambrosio Company used the novel for the production of this feature, which the Warners have bought and will release in four different chapters.

The release of multiple reel comedy is not exactly new, but it has never been attempted in such large installments.

The quality of humor in this feature is of the bubbling, rollicking variety; the situations are in the main naturally and extremely droll, the acting of the principals showed a peculiar talent for this sort of work, the handling of the crowds was particularly clever, the settings were of course amusingly and many times impressively original and the costuming all the way through is on a lavish and extravagant style. Farandoul is not only genuinely funny himself but his crew is just as funny as he is. The adventures portrayed on the scene are particularly interesting just because the funny crew is there at all times helping the captain sharing his joys and sorrows with unwavering loyalty. Mysora, the handsome woman whom Farandoul marries, is one of the distinct successes of the feature. There are touches of Marie Dressler about her. She is in the full bloom of youth and grace and enlist sthe attention and sympathy of the audience from the very first time of her appearance on the screen.

Scene from "Zingo, Son of the Sea" (Ambrosio).

The story is somewhat slow getting under way, too much time seems to be wasted on the Island of Monkeys and it does seem as if some of the scenes in which the monkeys examine the naked child and wonder at the absence of a tail and plan the inoculation of this appendage are just a bit too realistic for an American audience, though to be sure these very scenes might by some people be considered especially amusing. Once the story has started, however, it is swift, kaleidoscopic in its changes, constantly offering new and startling scenes and doing things which have never been attempted in motion pictures before. I thought the capture of Farandoul and his crew, their ruse to get free and their wonderful escape in barrels drifting down the stream were extremely laughable. The dining scenes were cleverly conceived and executed and I am still wondering how it was all done. The natural settings here help to produce weird spectacular effects. The scenes in the court of the King of Siam and indeed the whole long hunt for the White Elephant for whose recovery such a fabulous reward had been offered, were among the best things in this feature and will rouse any audience into prolonged spasms of laughter. The lion hunt in which real lions took such thrilling parts is another good scene. It would lead me too far afield to go into the details of all of these twelve reels; suffice it to say that the laughably fantastic standard is well maintained on the whole. It must be admitted that toward the end there is some weakening, and the part of the story dealing with the adventures in America is not by any means up to the standard of the rest.

The photography is of the best Ambrosio type. I am glad to add that with the possible exception alluded to there is nothing coarse in the performance. Nowhere will the spectator find an inch of vulgarity—it is all clean humor.

"Old Curiosity Shop"

Dickens' Famous Story Produced in a Five-Part Picture —To Be Released by Blinkhorn.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN some cases we may see Dickens to better advantage than we can read him, and no pains have been spared to make the leading characters of "Old Curiosity Shop" so real that we almost feel them. Nice attention to settings, to costumes, to an infinity of detail, afford an atmosphere of other value than that of supporting the narrative —the felicity with which they are presented records a historical period, offers strong contrast with present conditions and stimulates philosophical reflection upon their significance. From a purely impressionist point of view, I could feel the helpless plight of pureminded Little Nell in her pitiful struggle against the wretched greed of every one she knew, including the only one to whom she could turn, her last and only friend, her grandfather. Opposed to her sweetness and delicate sensibilities was a lust for money made hideous in Quilp, made amusing in others, made tragic in her gambling-mad grandfarther.

The difficult role of Little Nell, usually miscast, is in this case assumed by a girl who looks the part and who plays it without affectation and with sympathetic appreciation of its flower-like beauty—she is a drooping lily, though strong enough for a while to support the insufferable humiliations to which she is subjected. Her character, that of a simple, affectionate, true-hearted child, shines in her face and is revealed in her action. Not an extraordinary little girl, interest in her is slowly aroused by contrast, particularly after Quilp appears. Quilp in this version of "Old Curiosity Shop" is a most hideous piece of realism. He is undoubtedly the "Quilp" Dickens had in mind.

Scene from "Old Curiosity Shop" (Blinkhorn).

Quilp represents greed in the raw state. There is laid bare in him the same "human nature" that leads a politician to betray those who elected him to office, that transforms a blue-coated guardian of honest people into a guardian of crooks, that sends so many New York mayors to France for a life of self-coddling after one term in office, that enables our political bosses to buy castles abroad and our financial bosses to trade wealth for social position. The smiling broker who is sailing up the sound to his country residence after sandbagging his customers, the lawyer who goes to play golf after swindling his clients, these gentlemen are "Quilp" in distorted character, infinitely meaner in that they know the significance of humanity's loftiest ideals. Loathesome as is the body of this incarnation of greed, such is nothing more than the form of a crooked man's soul. He may see in this character what is repulsive in his own.

The other types in "Old Curiosity Shop" are admirably selected, inasmuch as they are easily distinguishable and seem to fit into their places without a lot of make-up. After the play gets well started, its construction is very much better than could be expected where characterization is the main issue. There is seen an element of suspense introduced for a while the "single gentleman's" pursuit of Little Nell and her grandfather. Dickens diverts attention from the main issue constantly, very effectively in the relations of Dick Swiveller and "The Marchioness," but the photodrama follows the central line of interest, merely introducing the well-known types where they are necessary. The play will please Dickens' many lovers and deserves high praise because it gives a living picture of the epoch in complete and artistic composition and form.

"The Impersonator"

An Edison Three-Part Feature of Surpassing Excellence—Clever Work by Players.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

ONE of the best Edison stories ever thrown on the screen, "The Impersonator," responds to nearly all requirements of what a feature film should be. It is one of the kind that I would like to see every day at the picture show, one of the kind that has made friends for the new art, one of the kind that brings audiences back again and again, no matter how often they are disappointed, and it is one of those leaders deserving encouragement because it sets a high standard of subject and treatment.

There is a vital meaning in "The Impersonator," which is taken, by the way, from a novel by Mary Imlay Taylor. The author brings about an intricate and interesting situation by very simple means, by means not half so strained and unnatural as those used in "The New Magdalen" of Wilkie Collins, which presents a similar case, and the interweaving of a second plot so heightens the effect that the story could be made to hold through five reels quite as well as three. The vital meaning is one easily recognized by all classes of people in a mixed audience, because the problem involved is universal—it is that of the human race in its entirety,

Scene from "The Impersonator" (Edison).

Gertrude McCoy assumes the leading role—the finest work she has ever done—which is that of a young girl brought up in an orphan asylum, where she was left by a dying mother. The girl's character is depicted one of tremendous mental and physical activity. She is naturally a girl of energy and resource, repressed, like millions of others, by the opposing forces of restrictive environment. While her religious environment may have preserved her native purity, it offered limited opportunity for development, and she finds herself at the dawn of womanhood tied down to an acquaintance in Paris with an artist, May Madding, her lover and another artist named Bishop. These three practically constitute her economic environment, and it is not of the best. She simply makes the best of it she can.

Miss Madding receives a letter from an aunt, Mrs. Whiting, in Washington, asking for a photograph, but Miss Madding shrewdly realizes that the face of the lovely young orphan would be more effective and persuades her to allow a sketch of herself made by Bishop to be sent as they desired. Startling result is a check from Mrs. Whiting and an invitation to visit her without delay. The orphaned girl gladly welcomes this chance to obtain a broader view of the world and goes to Washington as the impersonator of Mrs. Whiting's niece.

Mrs. Whiting is a true type, and the role is admirably depicted by Mrs. William Bechtel. Rarely has this accomplished actress had opportunity commemsurate with her gifts. She plays the grande dame with certain marks of good breeding ordinarily lacking in such roles, with an elegance and distinction born of experience. She has certainly found her natural place as Mrs. Whiting. The latter is an ambitious society woman of wide acquaintance, and she sees in the beautiful niece a chance to gratify her natural taste for matchmaking.

The lovely young orphan, in proof of her natural qualifications, proves to be a winning social card, and we are not required to strain our imaginations as to the reason. She looks the part and, with here and there a lapse into theatricalism, acts it in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. We are treated to some exquisite exteriors and tasteful interior settings in the visualization of Washington and political and social functions, all of which contribute to a sense of appropriateness and logic in the story. In the midst of a gay whirl, the newcomer carries herself with a lofty sense of her responsibilities to her supposed aunt and to herself.

Opposing influences are May Madding in Paris, now jealous of the purely individual success of her representative and determined to extort money from her under threats of exposure, a prying maid, the artist Bishop and finally the disillusionized aunt herself. The girl is but faintly supported by a young congressman who is in love with her and by an ambassador, Count Portucarrero. There is a mystery about the latter's interest in the young impostor which gradually becomes a promise of relief from the perils of an ambiguous situation. The count is the young girl's natural father, an unnatural one in treatment until at the point of death, when his confession solves her most hateful problem.

Scene from "The Impersonator" (Edison).

From a very delightful preparation, through a clear and artistic exposition, to the end, this visualization adequately presents the soul that animated the original story. The author's meaning is more than approximated—it is given even more vivid realization on the screen than is possible through the difficult medium of words. Strongly enforced is the vital meaning that the mere possession of inherent powers is not enough—they can only find release in what comes so rarely to any of us, adequate opportunity for their expression.

Scene from "Sacrificial Fires" a Three Part Balboa Production.

"The Silver Loving Cup"

Two-Reel Special of Great Merit Made by the Imp Company

Reviewed by Harry W. DeLong.

THE Imp Film Manufacturing Company has produced a very excellent photoplay that has been well acted, directed and photographed. Its theme is somewhat conventional, but it is so clean-cut and human that it goes to the heart and causes commiseration on the part of the spectator for the father and his little girl.

Dr. Harvey is a celebrated surgeon and is the head of a corps of others in a large hospital. He is so devoted to his duties that his wife imagines she is neglected by him. She prefers a social life and selfishly neglects their little child to gratify her own pleasure. The father adores little Nora, while the mother scarcely notices her. A scene where the child's nurse is preparing her for bed is very touching; she prays for her father and asks God to make her mamma love her as her papa does.

Scene from "The Silver Loving Cup" (Imp).

Her father is in the hospital being consulted by all. Lister, a friend of the wife, calls and escorts her to a social function—a bridge party. Dr. Harvey is presented by his fellow surgeons with a silver loving cup in honor of the fact that he has discovered a wonderful cure for cancer. This is a beautiful and impressive scene. Lister and a party of friends entice Mrs. Harvey into a private gambling den, where she loses and borrows money from Lister. Dr. Harvey leaves the banquet hall where he has been presented with the loving cup and returns to his home, discovering his wife is not there. His little girl welcomes her daddy and asks him about the big new cup he has brought home with him. To please her he orders some milk and drinks out of the cup with the child, explaining how it was presented to him by his associates. Mrs. Harvey returns with a party of friends, including Lister. After they have gone, the husband suspecting too much intimacy between his wife and Lister, upbraids her. She tells him that it is necessary to her happiness for her to mingle in society, and that she would prefer him to any other escort. Dr. Harvey consents and attempts to fulfill her wishes, thereby neglecting his patients.

A critical operation is on, necessitating his immediate presence at the hospital, and Dr. Harvey has escorted his wife to a ball. A messenger is sent for him; he excuses himself and returns home for his instrument case. There he finds his wife and Lister, who have preceded him, believing he had gone direct to the hospital. A scene occurs, after which Dr. Harvey repairs to the hospital to discover that his place has been filled by another. He returns to his home and finds that his wife has deserted him for Lister.

His little daughter, who is suffering from illness, leaves her bed, and while attempting to take some medicine he has prescribed for her accidentally overturns a screen which falls into the grate, setting fire to the room, and she is mortally burned. At the risk of his life he carries her from the burning room. He attempts to relieve her suffering, but she will take the medicine only from the silver loving cup; the child expires. Later the father goes out to a different life, having lost all; he seeks solace in ministering to the needy.

His wife realizing her mistake repudiates Lister, and alone comes to real want.

Dr. Harvey has accomplished some wonderful cures, one especially on the little brother of a maid in a family who moves in the society in which he once lived. He is induced to take the strange case. The subject proves to be the father of Lister. He discovers this just prior to the operation, which he performs successfully. Then he calls Lister to account and learns that his wife left him in the early stages of their infatuation; that she was pure at heart, but foolish. Dr. Harvey is reinstated in the hospital. A case is brought in and he attends to it. He finds the victim is his wife in a condition of starvation. They are reunited and in remembrance of past sufferings they both drink to the memory of their little daughter out of the silver loving cup.

The fading pictures of the doctor's memories on the loving cup are very beautiful effects.

"EAST LYNNE."

Three Parts in Six Reels (Apex).

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

"EAST LYNNE" is one of those perennial attractions that have their great strength in the story. A woman rather sinned against than sinning, a victim of fate more than of her own folly is always sure of the sympathy of an audience. With strong touches of the real melodrama, "East Lynne" is taken out of this conventional order of entertainment by its profoundly tragic ending. Indeed, one of the items of praise that have always been bestowed upon "East Lynne" is its avoidance of the artificial. With its great popularity as a basis for advertising, "East Lynne" has long been a favorite theme of the dramatist and latterly of the film producer.

This is the first time I have seen "East Lynne" in an all-British garb as far as actors and producers are concerned. Naturally, no country could furnish finer settings for an English story than the scenery of its native land. The exterior settings of this filmed version of "East Lynne" are, as a rule, well chosen, and carry the atmosphere. The scenes along the beach are particularly fine, though they, of course, were supposed to have occurred in France.

The adaptation of the immortal story was, on the whole, well done. As the feature has been put together, even he who has never read the story of "East Lynne," will have little difficulty in following the thread. This is no small praise and well excuses some of the liberties that have been taken with the story. Nothing on the screen brings out the fact that Lady Isabel was made unrecognizable through the accident on the railroad. An additional explanatory title will remedy this easily. The adapter showed excellent judgment in eliminating the non-essentials without sacrificing any of the inherent power of the story. The titles are very helpful, though by no means profuse. Profuse titles in nine cases out of ten are crutches for a lame story. The titles here always come at the right psychological moment and always mean something. Some of the situations are developed with skill; the motives and character of Levison, for instance, were worked out quite cleverly.

The acting, on the whole, was not inconsistent with good standards. The appearance of Carlyle and his impersonation will pass muster, the small but not unimportant part of Richard Hare was well taken as was that of Otway Bethel, and especially that of Mr. Dill, the old factotum in Carlyle's office. The part of Lady Isabel is one of the most thankful in the whole range of the popular drama, and at the same time, one of the most difficult. The actress in this production to whom this trying part was assigned, is earnest and ambitious, but does not always rise to the best traditional standards of the play. Barbara Hare, a strong but lovable character in the story, appears a trifle harsh and unlovable on the screen. The motives of her action are not always developed with that skill which the best art requires. There was a tendency to emphasize the ridiculous in the character of Carlyle's sister, for which, if I recollect the story aright, there comes little warrant in the novel.

I have no doubt whatever that this feature will appeal to many patrons of the motion picture theaters whether they have read the story or not. The magic of the story as it unfolds itself on the screen is irresistible. The action in this adaptation moves forward with commendable swiftness, and there are no evidences of padding. The final climax is not badly rendered, and the quotations from the novel when Lady Isabel is no longer able to disguise her identity are finely chosen and very touching.

The musical possibilities of the play are, of course, unusually great. The sweet pathos of the last scenes so strongly tinged with tragedy can be enhanced and emphasized by music skillfully played and well chosen.

The popular appeal of the story does not suffer to any extent in the filmed version, on the contrary, there are some scenes in which this appeal will prove stronger than ever the appeal of the original novel or of any of the older dramatized versions. The mother's bitter grief and agony gain in intensity through the silence of the screen, and no words could add anything to the feeling of the spectator when he sees the parting "more bitter and fearful than the parting caused by death itself."

"The Spartan Girl."

The Pasquali Company Releases an Interesting Five-Part Subject of Love and War.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "The Spartan Girl," a five-part subject released by the Pasquali Company, a young woman on two occasions hesitates between love and duty. In the first instance she chooses the latter, in the second the former. There will be scarcely a dissenting voice to the statement that she was wrong both times. Against the dictates of her heart she permits her father to force on her a marriage with a man she does not love, ignoring the man for whom she does feel deep affection. Six months after her marriage she clandestinely meets her old sweetheart, an officer in the Turkish army, as her husband is also a staff officer in the Greek army—and the two nations are at war. Ali Bey, on a threat of committing suicide, induces Helena to copy war plans intrusted to her husband's keeping. When the Turks checkmate the Greeks it is clear to the chief of the latter the plans have not been kept inviolate. The husband is demoted and ordered to the firing line. It is then the woman discovers that in truth she loves the man she has betrayed. In the attempt to undo the damage she has caused, to save the Greeks and protect her husband's honor, she meets her death.

Scene from "The Spartan Girl" (Pasquali).

The story will interest, especially the last half. The rescue of Helena and her little girl companion when they are threatened on the reef by the rising tide seems weak. The natural thing for Ali Bey would have been to swim to the drifting rowboat instead of losing precious time by running back to the hotel for a companion. The introduction of the two rivals later by the courtly father was splendidly handled. It did seem unnatural, however, on the part of the father, after discovering that his daughter was in love with the Turkish officer, to insist that the alternative of marrying the Greek was to take the veil. It seemed more unnatural that the mother should not openly espouse the cause of the daughter.

It seemed "cheeky" on the part of the Turkish captain to ask the woman to betray her husband. He had been so brusque, so business-like, so unloverlike. The scenes where the wife goes to the room of her sleeping husband and takes from his trousers the key of the vault and the later fevered copying of the document will hold tight. The best situation, or one of the best, and strongly dramatic is the parting of the wife from the husband ordered from staff duty to the front, the result of her disloyalty.

The last reel is filled with rapid action. When Helena, accompanied by her butler, has gone to the Turkish camp—and strangely and in most unsoldierly fashion been permitted to listen to the discussion of a council of war—and is told by Ali that the Greeks are bound to be defeated, she plans to destroy the bridge over which the Turks will pass. Where under her direction the butler is enabled to secure the dynamite we are not shown. The hurrying troops and the horsemen galloping over the great structure make a stirring picture. The destruction of the bridge is cleverly simulated. There is a thrill as the dying woman surrounded by the victorious soldiers absolves her husband from blame and an officer tears from its staff the national standard and places it over the body of the woman who has with her life atoned for her mistakes.

ECLAIR IN NEW QUARTERS.

Well-Known Company Transfers Its Executive Offices to the Leavitt Building.

THE Eclair Company opened on March 2 its new offices in the Leavitt Building, 126 West Forty-sixth Street, New York City, where with the entire fourth floor it will have abundant room for its expanding business. There are twenty-eight private offices, nearly all of them ranged around the sides of the floor. As one steps from the elevator he finds himself in a large reception room. The offices are reached by a hall extending along the north and east sides. The first room is the directors', where there is a large table in the wood that is to be found throughout the floor—in the partitions as in the desks and other furnishings and fittings—golden oak. Then comes the office of President Ch. Jourjon. Next are the quarters of the Peerless Features Producing Company, an organization in which Mr. Jourjon is interested, and which will be heard from in the near future.

Then in order are the Features Ideal and the Leading Players' Film Corporation, with Agnes Egan Cobb at the helm; the office of the secretary, C. Patin; General Manager Offeman, the sales department, the assistant general manager, the showroom, where will be found the Kineclair and the compact Gillon camera; Bert Ennis is next with his publicity department, and adjoining is the scenario department, with Mrs. Brandon in charge. Two offices as yet unassigned complete the string on the east. On the south are the rooms for the stenographers, several rooms for the accounting department and the cashier, a room for the office boys, and a small department for emergency film cutting and renovating.

In the center of the floor are the shipping department and poster room and a large film vault. There are two projection rooms—the first for public purposes and the second more for strictly company use. In the former are two Simplex machines and in the latter one Simplex. The three machines are in one spacious compartment, a floor-to-ceiling partition separating the two little theaters.

There is an air of simple elegance about the whole floor that will appeal to the business side of man or womau.

INDEPENDENT FEATURES COMPANY.

New Feature Concern With Branches in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo to Handle Ohio Business.

The Independent Features Company, Incorporated, is the name of a new company organized to handle a program of features for the state of Ohio. Its officers are Nelson F. Evans, president; I. W. McMahon, vice-president; C. F. Evans, secretary, and Jerome M. Jackson, treasurer. The company will have offices in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo and will distribute a feature program of twenty-six reels every week, with a daily change for all its patrons.

Messrs. Jackson, C. F. and Nelson F. Evans were in New York during the first week of March and made contracts for the entire program of the Exclusive Feature Service, Gaumont, Solax, Blache, Itala, Great Northern Special, Ammex, Great Northern Preferred, Film Releases of America, Helen Gardner, Gloria, Apex, Criterion, Kennedy Features and Pasquali. A buyer will be kept in New York continually to select features for the new service. All purchases will be made to include the exclusive control of the state of Ohio and pictures shown by pirates in that state will be confiscated on sight.

Most of the members of the company are well known to the theater managers of Ohio. Both Mr. McMahon and Mr. Jackson have been connected with the business for several years and at one time ran the Cincinnati-Buckeye exchange. Mr. Nelson F. Evans has been in the business for four years, part of which time he was with the American Feature Film Company. C. F. Evans is the father of Nelson, but has no previous record in the business.

The members of the company are very enthusiastic over the outlook for business.

MONTGOMERY AT ALBANY, GA.

On March 2 Frank T. Montgomery, the picture theater magnate of the South, opened a new house in Albany, Ga., under what he considers most favorable conditions. "The folks of the town are elated with the show and I am tickled with the outlook" he writes. It is a faculty Montgomery has of pleasing his patrons.

SIMPLEX IN DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

A Simplex projector has been installed in the United States Department of Agriculture, Division of Publication, 215 13th Street, Washington, D. C., through Mr. Williams, Educational Department, Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE BARBER OF SEVILLE" (Kleine Ambrosio).

"The Barber of Seville," scheduled for release through the General Film Company March 24, is in every way a worthy sequel to the feature film, "The Marriage of Figaro," which was recently released by Mr. Kleine and which elicited enthusiastic comment in motion picture circles. Like its predecessor it is characterized by beautiful photography, magnificent settings and acting of high quality. The scenario is based upon the opera story of Rossini and the original comedy of Beaumarchais. In its photodramatized form this charming story is more intensely amusing than ever.

Scene from "The Barber of Seville" (Kleine Ambrosio).

Figaro, the "Barber of Seville," is the confidant of all the lovesick men and maidens of that romantic city, and lovers in distress never fail to go to him for aid. How he assists the dashing Count Almaviva to win pretty Rosina from her testy old guardian, who also wants to marry her, makes a delightfully entertaining story.

PERSONNEL OF UNIVERSAL COMPANY FOR HAWAII.

The complete personnel of the company of Universal players which goes, under the charge of Henry McRae, director of 101 Bison dramas, to the Hawaiian Islands and produce a score or more of dramas of Hawaiian life, has just been announced by Isidore Bernstein, general manager of the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal.

The party is made up of the following well-known motion picture people: Marie Walcamp, Betty Shade, Lula Warrenton, Henry McRae, William Clifford, Sherman Bainbridge, Valentine Paul, Rex de Rosselli and son, Robert Ross, Faxon Dean, Allan Watt, and Mrs. Isidore Bernstein. The party sailed on March 5th, from San Francisco on the steamship Mongolia, and it is planned that they will remain in the Islands several months.

DENVER OFFICE OF GOLGATE FEATURE SERVICE.

President Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchanges, advises that their Denver office is now under the management of Mr. M. Calmy, formerly of their office in San Francisco. They desire to announce to the trade that they have absolutely no connection with an exchange in Denver, named the Film Rental Brokers, and also desire to announce to the trade that Mr. J. C. Butts, their former manager, is in no way connected with their company. This warning is published on account of a letter that has been circulated by their former employee.

CRYSTAL SECURES TWO NEW STARS.

The Crystal Film Company has secured the services of two of the best known and most popular film stars, to appear henceforth in Crystal films. The two artists engaged, in addition to Miss Pearl White and the regular Crystal Company, are Miss Vivian Prescott and Charles De Forrest.

There is perhaps no better known star in the business to-day than Miss Prescott, and her work with the Imp Company and with the Biograph Company more recently is still fresh in the minds of the photoplay fans. Miss Prescott is a real comedienne. Mr. De Forrest is also a well-known star, and his work with the Imp Company in the series of "Bink" comedies will also be favorably remembered.

"CLOSED AT TEN" (Beauty Films).

A delightful story from the experience of a co-ed. Marjorie Holmes, attending college, has her host of sweethearts, but foremost among these is Jack Bandle, who, confident of being accepted, provides himself with a marriage license. Being accepted, he displays his license, thereby arousing the ire of Marjorie. The affair is promptly broken off and Mr. Evans is given the privilege of escorting her home, much to the disappointment of Jack. The scenes that follow are highly amusing, as they depict the predicaments of all parties concerned. Miss Fischer makes a rather spirited co-ed and her characterization will be highly appreciated. Harry Pollard plays opposite and makes a splendid type of sweetheart. Excellent photographic quality prevails throughout. Beauty subjects have acquired a popularity because of their uniform merit and quality and exhibitors are highly anxious to book these subjects. Released March 11.

Scene from "Closed at Ten" (Beauty Films).

PAN-AMERICAN BRANCHING OUT.

The business of the Pan-American Film Co. has grown so rapidly within the last month that additional floor space was necessary, the company has taken over the shipping department, projection room, etc., of the World's Special Film Corporation, which previously occupied the westerly half of the ninth floor of the World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, New York City.

This will give the Pan-American Film Co. shipping facilities for fifty features in continuous transit. Mr. Edward King will be in charge of the New York Exchange, assisted by Harold B. Franklin. William Nuttall will be in charge of the shipping department and Mr. Lyall Dean will assist in the booking and correspondence.

A large number of features have been added and contracts entered into for additional companies in the manufacture of feature films which will bring releases up to about seventy features per year.

"THE GRIP OF IRON" (Apex).

"The Grip of Iron," distributed by the Apex Feature Film Company, is a five-reel drama of English life, and features Louis Baumeester, an actor of reputation and power. He is a Hollander and does some strong acting in this picture, the first to be made by the British Film Producing Syndicate. The story is interesting and has a tremendous situation which is also novel and this the leading player makes effective. The backgrounds are typically English—fields, lanes, a village church, a farm house and interiors. The photography is fair and many of the scenes are lovely. The cast is small and the characters easily distinguished from each other, and support the leader fairly.

Scene from "The Grip of Iron" (Apex).

The well-to-do farmer's son loves the daughter of the village inn-keeper who has given her affections to a criminal now in prison through an action taken by the farmer. The criminal escapes and again is recaptured with the help of the farmer, who has "a grip of iron." To be avenged on the farmer the girl now marries the son. The old man has become a helpless paralytic, who can hear and see, but can't speak. He has to watch the woman and the now once more escaped convict plot to kill the son, yet can give no word or intelligible sign to stop it, till just at the last moment his power comes back to him.

"THE THREE SCRATCH CLUE" (Essanay).

When Dr. Strong purchased a fifty-thousand-dollar copy of a rare publication, he had cause to worry. It was like guarding a safe full of gold, and when George Lynch introduced himself to the doctor, after saving the physician's daughter, he did not suspect for a moment that it was Lynch's intention of securing the book at all cost. Lynch was a gentleman crook, who had carried on many deeds that the police were still wondering over. The scenes throughout the entire two thousand feet contain thrills and mystery that is bound to keep the observer on edge. Dr. Strong's secretary has a personal disliking for Lynch, inasmuch as he is gradually taking the affections of Helen, the doctor's daughter, away from the secretary. It naturally creates an enmity. The production as a whole is superb. The photography is beautiful and the portrayal of characters in keeping with the excellent story. Francis X. Bushman, in the role of secretary, puts a natural feeling into the part that makes it distinctive. Bryant Washburn plays the part of the gentleman crook — and does it admirably. This production is booked for release Friday, March 27th.

AETNA FILM COMPANY NEW STUDIO.

Work is going forward rapidly in Newark, N. J., on the massive new studio of the Aetna Film Co., Inc., Long Acre Building, New York.

The very complete and comprehensive artificial lighting system is to be one of the several features which will help to make this one of the most efficient studios in America for the production of photoplays requiring special lighting effects.

It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy within two weeks so that the Aetna Company's producing cast, now in Florida, under the direction of Richard Sterling, will be able to complete inside scenes of their features immediately on their arrival, about March 10th. A very considerable local pride and enthusiasm has developed for the activity and enterprise which has characterized the Aetna Film Company's operations in Newark.

"THE SPIDER AND HER WEB."

Here is an old question that has been asked and answered many times in many different ways: "Does the end ever justify the means?" The present play is not going to attempt to make a definite answer to that question, but it is going to throw some illumination upon it. This is the play spoken of some time ago through the press which Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley, Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport combined to make. What with that splendid actor Rupert Julian and the agreeable Billy Wolbert, the piece has an all-star cast.

It is a virile story of ultra-modern high-life showing aspects of love, passion, vanity and fear as they are under the thin stratum of lackadaisical sentiment and false tradition. In good literature the figure of a woman is often met who is dazzlingly beautiful, who has a fascinating personality and who has everything that a woman should have except a heart; such a woman is a spider and causes good men to commit terrible crimes.

Scene from "The Spider and Her Web" (Rex).

Madame DuBarr, enacted by Miss Weber, is such a human spider, Miss Weber has never done a more impressive piece of acting in her career on the screen. Miss Weber is the author of the play and, with Mr. Smalley, is also the producer. And it is the greatest play the Smalleys have appeared in for months.

Madame Du Barr's salon is frequented by writers, artists, students and scientists. They first come to her affairs for an evening's diversion. Before the evening is over, one more fly is enmeshed in her web.

The reformation of this woman is the essence of the present play.

MORE NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY.

Eclectic Film Company, of 110 West 40th Street, has made an arrangement with the Hearst publications by which there will be published in the Sunday editions of the several Hearst dailies, a serial story entitled "The Perils of Pauline." The story was written by Charles Goddard, author and playwright, and the pictures will be made by the Pathe company at the studio in Jersey City.

The story begins in the Sunday American of March 14th, as announced in a two-page advertisement published in the American of Sunday, March 7th, last. To make the enterprise more attractive to the readers of the newspaper, an offer of $25,000 to be distributed in portions of $1,000 each week for the best explanation of some mystery in the picture.

Miss Pearl White, well-known to picture fans throughout the world, has been engaged to play the part of Pauline. Paul Panzer will play the part of Raymond Owen, the remarkable villain of the story, and Crane Wilbur plays Harry Marvin, an attractive lover. The story is said to be highly sensational.

JOHNS-MANVILLE CO. BRANCHES MOVING.

The necessity for larger space and better facilities to handle their increased business compelled the Indianapolis, Ind., and Louisville, Ky., branches of the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., to seek larger quarters. The new address of the Indianapolis branch is 408-410 North Capitol Avenue; that of the Louisville branch, 659-661 South Fourth Avenue. Both of these branches will include ample warehouse accommodations in addition to showrooms for the display and sale of this firm's varied line of asbestos materials, lighting fixtures, etc.

FILMING THE JACK LONDON STORIES.

Bosworth, Inc., arrived at Truckee, Calif., February 1 with the scripts for multiple reel productions of four of Jack London's stories of the Klondike. They found eight feet of snow on the level, fences being entirely submerged, and drifts hiding the eaves of some of the houses. Several storms since have given welcome opportunity for work in falling snow. The illustration shows the camera in operation and under an umbrella.

A storm means merely a welcome opportunity to get a scene in the falling snow.

The company's trained Alaskan dogs went wild with delight when they found themselves in the snow again; and the "Race for No. 3" incident in "Smoke Bellew" will prove a most realistic affair. Despite the exactions of the work the members of the company are getting a good deal of pleasure out of their two months' stay in these, to them, novel surroundings. Mr. London and Mr. Charles Van Loan, whose moving picture stories are famous, plan to visit Truckee before the company returns to Los Angeles.

LOEW'S FAMOUS PLAYERS' WEEK.

For the first time in the history of local theatricals, and probably marking a distinct evolution in the theatrical world, as influenced by the motion picture, Marcus Loew devoted his Broadway Theater in New York City the whole of last week to the presentation exclusiely of the productions of the Famous Players' Film Company. This event indicates in the most striking manner possible the graduation of the motion picture to a dignified, pretentious entertainment, equal in drawing power to a high-class vaudeville bill. The event proves conclusively that the Famous Players' program has sufficient variety and distinctiveness to interest for an entire week the most critical audience in the world—a Broadway audience.

The program at the Broadway Theater during Famous Players' week presented: Monday, Cecilia Loftus in "A Lady of Quality"; Tuesday, Mrs. Fiske in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles"; Wednesday, Mary Pickford in "Caprice"; Thursday, Cyril Scott in "The Day of Days"; Friday, Mary Pickford in "The Bishop's Carriage," and Saturday, Henry E. Dixey in "Chelsea 7750."

CRITERION FEATURE FILM CO. ELATED.

The Criterion Feature Film Company is elated at the success of its first and second releases. While the policy of making Criterion features, criterions, in fact, as well as name, insured the ultimate success of this brand of multiple-reel productions, the instantanious demand has exceeded all expectations.

All territory for "The Trap," the first release, has been sold. And "The Desert's Sting," the second release, has already been bought for about three-quarters of the territory, and inquiries are being made regarding the coming release, "The Outlaw." This proves a healthy condition in the film market, for releases that are of the better sort. Where the play is full of "snap" and "go," as are these Western subjects, backed up by clear, clean photography, there are ready buyers aplenty.

"AGAINST HEAVY ODDS" (Pathe).

A Pathe Western drama released Saturday, March 14, It is a story of a poor young Mexican, handicapped by birth and poverty, who proves himself loyal, brave and worthy, and so rises to higher things. From the time when at the risk of his own life he saves his employer from bandits until the end where he achieves success and a splendid marriage, the growth of his character is shown to be steady and consistent. There are several stirring scenes in the film.

"HEARTS OF OAK" (Mohawk).

"Hearts of Oak," now being produced by the Mohawk Film Company, Inc., will include Mr. Ralph Stuart, a successful leading man in a repertoire of plays, as Terry. James A. Herne, a pioneer of American playwrights, never in his most illustrous day ever supposed that his pet play, "Hearts of Oak," would have the stage setting and props that the Mohawk management is preparing for it. The real city, Gloucester, Maine, where the story happened, a real ocean, and a collision of two real fishing schooners, as well as the assistance of the government in saving lives of the characters of the play, are some of the features of the productive scheme.

Wray Physioc, with the assistance of Mrs. James A. Hearne, the wife of the author is directing and staging the production. Mrs. Hearne, who knows the thoughts and ideas of her husband better than any one, gives that little touch of heart throb and develops the very great sense of humor that her husband possessed in situations that she seems to think could only be interpreted by expression and not by dialogue. Mr. Physioc has directed a number of successful pictures.

The Mohawk Film Company, Inc., has offices in the Hines Building, New York. The sales department is in the hands of Harry S. Goldman.

"THE SECRET MARRIAGE" (Lubin).

This is a Lubin melodrama, very intense, full of action and vividly pictures the risks attached to a secret marriage. There is no villainy in the story, but many sorrowful circumstances, eventuate by natural causes, and a worthy husband and wife are lost to each other. One of the unfortunate incidents emanates from the fact of parents trying to make matches for their children. Many years of separation and privation pass before a final reunion comes by accident and all concerned in the drama are made happy. The best side of beautiful womanhood is called upon and not found wanting—all is truth and honesty and evidence of the fact that "One touch of nature make the whole world kin." The photoplay is taken at the Lubin Los Angeles studio, and for beauty of atmosphere and action is a credit to Wilbert Melville, director of the Lubin western company. The cast includes Dolly Larkin, Velma Whitman, Webster Campbell and a number of other Lubin favor players.

Scene from "The Secret Marriage" (Lubin).

JAMES H. WHITE SELLING BRITISH RAW STOCK.

Under the trade name "Brifco," a new raw stock is being offered American picture-makers by James H. White, representing the British Film Stock Company, of Ashtead Works, Surrey, England, oldest manufacturers of celluloid products in the world. Mr. White has taken offices at 602 New Longacre Building, 42nd Street and Broadway, New York, and reports sales to the leading motion picture makers. As agent for "Brifco," he should meet a warm reception in most of the American studios, for there are few men in the picture business to-day better equipped to talk interestingly and instructively to the men who handle the film. Mr. White is one of the original Edison men and has been handling films and cameras for many years.

SCHNEIDER GOES TO EUROPE.

Mr. Chas. E. Schneider, head of the firm of Chas. E. Schneider & Co., distributors for the Nicholas Power Company, and motion picture theater supplies, with offices in Springfield and New Haven, sailed Thursday, March 12, for Germany, to be gone two months. He has been called over by the death of a relative and has booked return passage on the Imperator early in May. Before returning he will visit Berlin, Paris and Copenhagen in the interest of his business.

Notes of the Trade

JOHN BUNNY, the motion picture star, now appearing in "The Honeymooners," a silent drama, at the Vitagraph Theater, has received an offer from Hugh J. Ward, the Australian theatrical magnate, whereby the comedian would present a repertoire of silent dramas in Australia and the Chinese and East Indian seaport towns.

* * *

Phillips Smalley is busy with the production of a one-reel Universal subject, entitled "In the Days of His Youth." It is the story of a father who has forgotten that he ever was young and he punishes his son for the very things that he did in his own youth. The son runs away from home and the father awakens to the injustice he is doing his boy.

* * *

Mr. S. C. Kingsbury, one of the original film men of Canada, succeeds Mr. Harry C. Kaufman, manager of the Toronto Branch of Warner's Features, Inc. Mr. J. L. Warner, succeeds Mr. H. M. Kohn, as Resident Manager of the San Francisco office.

* * *

Miss Gene Gauntier's latest release "Come Back to Erin," is her best Irish drama. She is ably assisted by Jack J. Clark, as Jerry, the village blacksmith, and Sid Olcott, who plays the stern father.

* * *

Wm. Shay, Imp Star, is being featured in a western play being directed by George Hall, entitled "The Stranger at Bone Gap Gulch." This is rather a new departure for Mr. Shay; western roles never having been considered a part of his repertory. Mr. Shay has only recently returned from Bermuda. His part in the present play is that of a revenue officer.

* * *

The shipwreck scene in "A Million Bid," which is now being presented at the Vitagraph Theater, New York, has made such an impression that the Vitagraph Company of America has purchased a manuscript calling for the actual wrecking of a large steamship, which will be completely wrecked. After going on the rocks, it will be blown up with dynamite, to depict the explosion of the boilers.

* * *

For the first time in their motion picture experience Lois Weber (Mrs. Phillips Smalley), and Phillips Smalley are each directing their own individual Rex company. Lois Weber plays leads in the company of Miss Weber. Heretofore these two stars have always co-directed their own productions.

* * *

A. J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Power Company, has been confined to his home for the past week with an attack of the grippe, but expects to be back on the job the coming week.

* * *

A human soul, rising like a beauteous, ethereal angel from the body of a dying woman and ascending slowly heavenward—this psychological scene forms one of the feature incidents in a series of moving picture views successfully recorded at the Long Beach studios of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company. The picture is to be a three reel production entitled "The Human Soul," written by Frank M. Wiltermood.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company has enlisted the services of several famous authors in its endeavor to offer motion pictures of more than ordinary literary values. Within the past few weeks, single reel pictures have been completed from stories by Louis Joseph Vance, Booth Tarkington, Ida Tarbell, Jack London and Ellis Parker Butler.

* * *

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has decided to give its writers credit for scenarios produced, both on the posters and advertising matter put out and upon the screen. No exceptions will be made.

* * *

The Renfax Musical Film Co. has installed a Power's Cameragraph No. 6A projecting machine.

* * *

The Independent Features Company, of Ohio, has contracted to release one feature a day of the Exclusive Program. Contracts were signed last week. The new company will have the privilege of booking in the Kentucky towns on the Ohio River. Offices will be opened in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Toledo. The Independent will take the entire Exclusive output.

* * *

Miss Lyda Borelli, one of the most famous actresses on the European stage, has been engaged by the Cines Company to play leads in a series of big productions to be called "the theatrical series." These productions will be taken from famous plays familiar to theater-goers the world over.

* * *

Mr. H. M. Goetz, assistant sales manager, returned a few days ago from an extended trip for Warner's Features, Inc. He reports an improved market for features South and West. He left Saturday, for Pittsburgh, where he will call all the branch managers, within a day's journey of Pittsburgh, together in that city, to outline a new selling plan.

* * *

The one month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Ayres was recently presented with a gold lined loving-cup by the "Flying A" players. It is needless to say that the pride of the parents, because of Ann Louise's popularity, knows no bounds.

* * *

By special order of the mayor and council, all work in the city of Venice, Italy, was suspended for several hours recently for the manufacture of a big multiple subject which Kleine is soon to be released in America.

* * *

Mrs. Carl Laemmle, wife of President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, made her first appearance in motion pictures at the Hollywood studios in California, on Feb. 21. However, Mrs. Laemmle had no intention of entering this field nor did she know that she was acting for the camera.

* * *

In several notices sent out by the George Kleine offices in Chicago, Mr. Melville G. Winstock, was given credit with being manager of the American Theater, at Butte, Mont., and the author of a unique street car advertising feat in connection with Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii." This was in error as Mr. Wm. Cutts is the manager of the American Theater in Butte, Mont.

* * *

The forces of the players appearing in Keystone comedies on the Mutual program were strengthened last Friday by the addition of Charles Murray, the Biograph comedian. Mr. Murray has appeared for a long time in the majority of the farces made by the Biograph Company.

* * *

"A Decree of Justice," "Flying A" release of Wednesday, March 25th, features Ed Coxen as lead and George Field as the deep dyed villain.

* * *

One of the most interesting series of commercial pictures produced during the year 1913 was a three thousand foot subject entitled "Building a Twenty-Inch Gas Main." This film was contracted for by the East Ohio Gas Company.

* * *

On Sunday, March 8, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, with a select number of his players, entertained royally at the Pleaides Club, at the Hotel Brevoort, New York City. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by a large and enthusiastic audience. There were many comments during the evening with regard to the high grade of projection, which was furnished by a Simplex projector.

* * *

Adolphus Busch, the multi-millionaire, and a party of friends, were visitors recently at the Universal ranch and animal farm in the San Fernando Valley, Cal. Members of the party displayed great interest in watching the production of Director Henry McRae's latest 101 Bison feature, entitled "Into the Lion's Jaws."

* * *

In Kleine's "For Napoleon and France," the battle of Austerlitz has been featured. The action occurs at the commencement of the second reel and continues through eleven hundred feet of film, and required the engagement of several thousand men in a very realistic and thrilling reproduction of the battle which decided Napoleon's future, and temporarily changed the boundries of modern Europe. The producers have kept close to authentic history.

* * *

Joe Ryan, leading man with the Colorado Motion Picture Co., who was badly injured a short while ago by a falling horse, will be out soon.

* * *

The "Great Leap" at the New York Theater, and "The Gangsters," at Weber's Theater, New York, are noticeable for their clear projection. Both of these productions use the Simplex projector.

* * *

Roy McCardell, the famous humorist, has written nearly one thousand motion picture scenarios. Strange to relate, only one has been produced by the Vitagraph Company. The one exception is "Love's Old Dream," in which John Bunny and Flora Finch played the principal roles. It was staged by George D. Baker, who directs all of the Bunny pictures.

* * *

Miss Ethel Grandin, the "Imps" of the Imp Company, is now playing under the direction of Ray Smallwood who is a graduate from the ranks of cameramen. Her latest picture "Little Miss Nobody from Nowhere," which was written by Monte Katterjohn, is in two reels and is adapted from the story by W. E. Wright.

* * *

George Kleine's offices, in a report from Minneapolis, state that starting at 2:30, "The Last Days of Pompeii" was run, at Deadwood, S. Dak., for five continuous shows. Says the report: "On Monday night they broke up everything that could be broken in front of the house trying to get in."

* * *

The Nicholas Power Company reports the shipment of three Power's projecting machines to Honolulu, Hawaian Islands.

* * *

The International Feature Corporation, Ltd., is the Canadian representative of the Exclusive Supply Corporation's Program and controls every release of the Great Northern Special, Great Northern Preferred, Solax, Blaché and Film Releases of America, also selected features from the factories of Gaumont and Blinkhorn brands including Hepworth, Florence Turner, Deer, and the General Film Agency of London.

* * *

The new studio of the Gene Gauntier Players, where photoplays of a distinctive character are produced for Warner's features, Inc., is completed and with its splendid lighting system and commodious rooms will rank second to none in the country.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Maurice, or "Mother," as she is called by countless thousands, owes her present world-wide popularity to the Vitagraph motion pictures. For many years "Mother" has been on the stage, but the incessant travelling on the road became tiresome and she naturally accepted an offer from the Vitagraph.

* * *

The business of the Pan-American Film Company has grown so rapidly that additional floor space is necessary, and they have taken over the shipping department, projection room, etc., recently occupied by the World Film Corporation, in the World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, N. Y. City, which has moved to the Leavitt Building, 130 W. 46th Street. Edward King will be in charge of the New York exchange, assisted by Harold B. Franklin. William Nuttall will be in charge of the shipping department and Lyall Dean will assist in the booking and correspondence.

* * *

Arthur "Sheriff Mackley," the famous Western actor and director of the well-known "Broncho Billy" pictures for the Essanay Company, is now directing and playing for the Mutual. He is hard at work with Couretnay Foote and Irene Hunt on a two reel Western drama to be released April 11th, "The Return of Col. Clauson," by Birdsall Briscoe from the Metropolitan Magazine.

* * *

Charles L. Gaskill, director-manager of the Helen Gardner Picture Players, has made arrangements for the enlargement of the studio at Tappan-on-the-Hudson. Business has outgrown the present capacity of the plant and a more capacious studio is needed to meet the increasing demand for Helen Gardner features.

* * *

Margaret Gibson, the leading lady of the Vitagraph Company, permanently located in Santa Monica, Cal., is confronted with a serious problem; whether it is better to pursue fame through the medium of the Vitagraph motion pictures or continue with her commercial business, which is most unique. In four years, Miss Gibson has built up a big mail order business in Japanese kimonas and jewelry.

* * *

The Anima Film Rental Co., of 110 West 40th St., New York, reports an unusually great demand for Albert Blinkhorn's seven part release "David Copperfield." This remarkably accurate version of Charles Dickens' famous work is very popular with motion picture fans. F. M. McClintic, manager of the Regent Theater, New York, has written the Anima Co. a most favorable testimonial on this feature.

* * *

Headed by Russell E. Smith, Marc Edmund Jones, Hettie Gray Baker, and other scenario writers whose work the Mutual Film Corporation has released, the Photoplay Authors' League was duly organized and incorporated in Los Angeles this week. It is the purpose of the league to do for photoplaywrights what the Authors' League of America is doing for other branches of the literary profession—to protect each other. Only photoplaywrights having ten or more produced scripts to their credit are eligible.

* * *

Phil Gleichman, vice-president of the World Film Corporation, has just completed arrangements with Harry C. Drum, formerly manager of the General Film Company's feature department, to manage the office of the World Film Corporation with headquarters in the Ideal Building, Denver, Colorado.

* * *

The past week has been especially important in the history of the Continental Feature Film Corporation. On Monday afternoon, March 2, two productions released by the Continental had their New York premieres at regular theaters on Broadway; "The Gangsters," at Weber's Theater, and "The Great Leap," at the New York Theater.

* * *

Ralph Ince, the Vitagraph director, has produced nearly all of the exceptional multiple reel pictures made by this company during the past three years. As one of their leading directors he produced: "A Million Bid," which has made such a wonderful impression at the Vitagraph Theater, where it is still attracting capacity business.

* * *

"The Turning Point" is a two-part American "Flying A" subject in which Sydney Ayres and Vivian Rich play opposites. They represent two extremes in the evolution of life, and the parts give ample opportunity to bring out rare treatment of an intricate plot.

* * *

Canon City, Colorado, is the motion picture man's paradise. The Colorado Motion Picture Co., whose factory and studio are located in that place, report that they have had sunshine every day for the past two months.

* * *

"The Town of Nazerette," a two-reel drama written by Marc Edmund Jones, will be released on Monday, March 30th. Edward Coxen and Winifred Greenwood play leads supported by George Field, Charlotte Burton and other popular "Flying A" Stars.

* * *

When John J. McGraw and the members of the White Sox and the Giants ball teams came down the gangplank of the "Lusitania" on their return from the globe-girdling trip they were met by Norma Phillips, "Our Mutual Girl."

* * *

On and after Saturday, March 7, the World Film Corporation will be found in their new quarters, at No. 130 West 46th Street, where they will occupy the entire third floor.

* * *

Mr. E. T. Peter, of the Texas Film Corporation, arrived in New York this week for the purpose of securing a number of high-class pictures for his territory. Mr. Peter feels gratified in securing the three-reel feature, Helen Gardner in "Fleur de Lys," and is now negotiating with the Helgar Corporation for the exclusive rights for the Helen Gardner productions in his territory.

* * *

Charles Kent, of the Vitagraph players, is justly called, "The Dean of the Screen," for he is one of the best known veterans of the photoplay. Prior to entering the motion picture field, he was a particularly able dramatic actor with a splendid reputation both here and throughout the British empire. He is an authority on Shakespeare.

* * *

Beyond all expectations the most favorable criticisms on the "Flying A" two-reel subject, "The Cricket on the Hearth," are being elicited from exhibitors and public. The public schools are much interested and the wide-awake exhibitors are taking advantage of this fact and arranging special matinees.

* * *

Augustus Carney, of "Alkali Ike" fame, who is being featured by the Universal under the character name of "Universal Ike," is making arrangements to purchase a bungalow in Hollywood, Cal., near the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal.

* * *

"The Range War," a three-reel Western, featuring Miss Josephine West, has just been completed by the Colorado Motion Picture Company at Canon City. It will be released through Warner's Features.

"Les Miserables" is still being exhibited at the Carnegie Lyceum, New York. This production is in nine reels and follows, with close fidelity, the wonderful story of Victor Hugo. Incidental music is specially arranged, and the projection, which is of high order, is furnished by two Simplex machines.

* * *

While touring in the San Fernando Valley, Cal., recently, accompanied by his wife and mother-in-law, Al. E. Christie, director of Nestor comedies at Universal Pacific Coast studios, lost his new Stutz seven-passenger touring car. It caught fire and was almost totally destroyed.

* * *

The Colorado Moving Picture Company opened a new studio in Canon City by giving a Tango tea. The guests were filmed by the cameraman as they executed the latest steps in the Argentine Tango, Maxixe, Hesitation, and One-Step. Some of the pictures taken are for scenes in a three-reel photoplay entitled "The Range War" that this company is producing for Warner's Features, Inc.

* * *

"Zingo," the twelve-reel production, reviewed on another page by Mr. W. Stephen Bush, is being pushed rapidly by Warner's Features. "Zingo" is the first reel of its kind—a highly sensational extravaganza. "Zingo" will be released in four parts, three reels each week for four consecutive weeks, and will receive a Broadway showing in its entirety.

* * *

In the future the American Film Mfg. Company will make its releases as follows: Mondays—two reel "Flying A"; Tuesdays—one reel "Beauty"; Wednesdays—one reel "Flying A"; every fourth Friday—one reel "Flying A."

* * *

One of the immense buildings of George Kleine's new Photo Drama Producing Company, at Turin, Italy, is practically completed. It is 330 feet long by 66 feet wide and will be used to accommodate the actor folk, their wardrobe and properties; also the kitchen and dining-rooms and to serve as a modern utility building.

* * *

Hobart Henley, popular throughout the country as a leading stock player and for some time under the management of David Belasco, is the latest acquisition of the Universal's Imp Company.

* * *

The unprecedented duration of rainy season on the Coast has added another week of rain and clouds, incidentally furnishing a week of idleness to the producing companies in California.

* * *

Francis X. Bushman, of the Essanay Company, of Chicago, will appear at the Magic Theater, at Ft. Dodge, Iowa, on Sunday, March 15, taking part in the program of that day.

State Right Purchases

NOTE.—Exhibitors are requested to keep this list on file or copy from it the names of purchasers in their particular territories. These lists will not be republished and we cannot undertake to furnish back information by mail to those who have neglected to keep a record. Contributors to this department are requested to have their copy conform to the style of the column.

THE MONEY GOD (Metropolitan—3 reels).—For New York City and New York State by the Emby Feature Film Corporation, 145 West 45th St., New York.

For Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, by Adams & Co., Waterbury, Conn.

For Ohio, by Independent Feature Co., Cleveland. This is the name of the new combination of McMahan and Jackson and the American Feature Film Company.

For Eastern Pennsylvania, South New Jersey, District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland, by Artistic Feature Film Company, Room 1011, 145 West 45th Street, New York City.

For Iowa and Nebraska, by the Herrick Feature Film Company, of Des Moines, Ia.

THANHOUSER STUDIO HAS A GREEN ROOM!

C. J. Hite, whose interest in his players is well known, figured that the high grade of actors that have been flocking from the legitimate stage to the studio stage of late deserve as fine accommodations for their comfort as the best legitimate houses ever provided. So the pretty green room under the new Thanhouser stage resulted. It is painted a real Emerald green and there are "comfy" chairs, books, magazines and palms.

NIAGARA SLIDES

Are what you want. They're the best made, and cost the least. This slide, as represented here, for 10c. and this advertisement. 350 stocks at $2.00 per dozen. Player slides, any company, $2.00 per dozen. Feature Announcement slides, any feature, 25c. each, or by the week. Some day you'll use Niagara Slides. Start now by sending your order to the

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY - Lockport, New York

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

Current Releases

MONDAY, MARCH 16th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Gentleman or Thief (Drama).....
EDISON—The Adventure of the Alarm Clock—Third of the Octavius Amateur Detective Series (Comedy).1000
KALEM—The Colleen Bawn (Special—3 parts—Drama)3000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 22, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Better Way (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
VITAGRAPH—Auntie (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, MARCH 17th, 1914.

CINES—Gypsy Love (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
EDISON—A Real Helpmate (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Oh! Doctor (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Laziest Man (Comedy).....1000
PATHE—Whiffles and the Diamond Pin (Comedy)....
SELIG—The Story of Venus (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Price of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18th, 1914.

EDISON—A Winter Holiday in the Bernes, Oberland, Switzerland (Scenic) 400
EDISON—A Boarding House Romance (Comedy)..... 600
ESSANAY—Luck in Odd Numbers (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The Award of Justice (Special—2 parts—Dr.)2000
LUBIN—The Weaker Brother (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
PATHE—Col. Heeza Liar Shipwrecked (Novelty).....
PATHE—Madura and Its Pagodas (Architecture).....
SELIG—The Cop on the Beat (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Ghosts (Comedy).....1000

THURSDAY, MARCH 19th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Restless Woman (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Single Handed (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—The Secret Marriage (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
MELIES—Winky Willy's Private Show (Comedy)..... 700
MELIES—Cupid's Window (Comedy)..... 700
PATHE—The Wasted Years (Special—2 parts—Drama)2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 23, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Evil We Do (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Idler (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, MARCH 20th, 1914.

EDISON—The Double Shadow (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
ESSANAY—Shadows (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
KALEM—The Family Skeleton (Comedy).....
KALEM—Cypress Logging In Florida (Industry).....
LUBIN—The Price (Drama) 1000
SELIG—Two Little Vagabonds (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—A Model Young Man (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, MARCH 21st, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Friend of the District Attorney (Drama)
EDISON—The Message in the Rose (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—A Hot Time in Snakeville (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—His Indian Nemesis (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—So Long Count (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—A Trip to the Moon (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—His Wife Wins (Special—2 parts—Comedy)..2000
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Old Reliable (Special—2 parts—Drama)2000

Advance Releases

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—An Hour of Terror (Drama).....
EDISON—Dinkelspiel's Baby (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The District Attorney's Duty (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 7—The Garden of Brides (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
VITAGRAPH—The Woman in Black (Comedy).....1000

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th, 1914.

AMBROSIO—The Barber of Seville (Special—3 parts—Comedy).....3000
EDISON—The Borrowed Finery (Comedy-Drama)....1000
ESSANAY—The Love Route Via Pittman (Comedy)..1000
LUBIN—A Deal in Real Estate (Comedy).....1000
PATHE—Trichinopoly, India (Scenic).....
PATHE—Workaday Scenes in a Flowery Land (Scenic)
PATHE—Strange Sea Water Creatures (Zoological)..
SELIG—In Remembrance (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Husband (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th, 1914.

EDISON—A Night Out (Comedy).....1000
ESSANAY—Bridget Bridges It (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The Refrigerator Car's Captive (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
LUBIN—Above the Law (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
PATHE—Old Streets of Cairo, Egypt (Scenic).....
PATHE—Whiffles, New Professor (Comedy).....
SELIG—While Wifey Is Away (Comedy).....
SELIG—Doc Yak, the Poultryman (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The Hall Room Rivals (Comedy).....1000

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Wifey's Visit Home (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—Never Shrink (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—The Atonement (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Game of Politics (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
MELIES—Handsome Harry's Wooing (Comedy).....
MELIES—Batty Bill's House "Rough House" (Comedy)
PATHE—The Constancy of Jeanne (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 25—1914 (News).....
SELIG—Cupid's Caprice (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Chanler Rao, Criminal Expert (Drama).1000

FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, 1914.

EDISON—The Brass Bowl (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
ESSANAY—The Three Scratch Clue (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
KALEM—And the Villain Still Pursued Her (Comedy).
KALEM—Phosphate Mining (Industrial).....
LUBIN—The Puritan (Drama).....1000
SELIG—The Story of Cupid (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Millions for Defense (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Battle at Elderbusch Gulch (2 parts—Dr.)
EDISON—Putting One Over (Fourth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series—Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's True Love (Drama).....1000
KALEM—A Leap for Life (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—Detective Short (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—The Bottom of the Sea (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—A Leech of Industry (Special—3 parts—Dr.).3000
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Never Again (Special—2 parts—Com.).2000

10 for 1, TEN BEAUTIFUL ONE SHEET POSTERS OF THE POPULAR LICENSED PLAYERS FOR $1.00, including G. M. Anderson, Maurice Costello, Lillian Walker, Mary Fuller, Arthur Johnson, Alice Joyce, etc., etc. Send stamps or money order with all orders.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

SAMSON

SAMSON

6 PARTS

PRESENTING
J. WARREN KERRIGAN
SPECIAL
UNIVERSAL FEATURE

SAMSON

Six Reels

I ask every exhibitor who books "Samson" (six reels) to charge at least twenty-five cents admission.

Every exhibitor who watches the market knows what the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. accomplished with "Traffic in Souls", its first six-reel feature. We made a fortune by booking it and charging from 25 cts. to $1.00 for admission. We proved we could do big things in a big way. We could easily repeat the success with "Samson", but——

We are going to give you the opportunity of doing it yourself. We are deliberately foregoing a big profit for ourselves by selling "Samson" to Universal exchanges so that you can reap a harvest.

All we ask in return is that you charge at least twenty-five cents admission! "Samson" warrants it! "Samson" is worthy of it! It is a film masterpiece—a gigantic production--a revelation.

Handle it as such a mighty production deserves to be handled. Book it for a week or two weeks or two months. Make all the money there is to be made out of it. Seize this opportunity to leave competition so far behind that it can never catch up.

Let your exchange know immediately that you want "Samson". Tell your exchange man that you want to see "Samson" at the earliest possible moment: also that you want to see the superb lithographs--the 16-sheets, 8-sheets, 6-sheets, 3 sheets, 1-sheets, half-sheets, window cards and photographs.

Then, book this tremendous film production and plaster your city or your neighborhood like a circus.

I urge you to be first to book "Samson" in your territory. I assure you there is no time to be lost in arranging matters with the nearest Universal exchange. The theatres which show "Samson" and which handle it properly are going to open for themselves a new era of prosperity!

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

MELIES "GENERAL" FILMS

BEGINNING APRIL 6th

2 Comedies Weekly

MONDAY AND THURSDAY

These are the result of the great and growing demand for Melies new "General" comedies. They bring results.

WINKY WILLY

Released March 19th Length 1000 feet

ON SAME REEL

WINKY WILLY'S PRIVATE SHOW and CUPID'S WINDOW

GENERAL

MELIES FILMS
204 E. 38TH STREET
NEW YORK

GENERAL

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, MARCH 15th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Kelly's Ghost (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—At the Court of Prince Make-Believe (Com.)
REX—The Senator's Bill (Drama) .....

MONDAY, MARCH 16th, 1914.

VICTOR—The Acid Test (2 part—Drama).....
IMP—The Gambler (Drama).....
POWERS—Hawkeye and the Cheese Mystery (Com.)..

TUESDAY, MARCH 17th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—Discord and Harmony (Drama) .....
CRYSTAL—Dazzle's Black Eye and Baldy Belmont Almost a Hero (Comedy) .....
UNIVERSAL—Universal Ike Has One Foot in the Grave (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18th, 1914.

NESTOR—The Way of a Woman (Drama) .....
JOKER—Won in the First (Comedy) .....
JOKER—A Visit to Mont St. Michael (Normandy France) (Scenic) .....
ECLAIR—When God Wills (2 parts—Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL—Universal Weekly, No. 106 (News)....

THURSDAY, MARCH 19th, 1914.

IMP—The Silver Loving Cup (2 parts—Drama).....
REX—A Pugilist's Romance (Drama) .....
FRONTIER—Colonel Custard's Last Stand (Comedy)..

FRIDAY, MARCH 20th, 1914.

NESTOR—Those Persistent Old Maids (Comedy) ....
POWERS—Hands Invisible (Drama) .....
VICTOR—Because She Loved Him (2 parts—Drama)..

SATURDAY, MARCH 21st, 1914.

JOKER—Mike and Jake Go in for Matrimony (Com.)..
FRONTIER—The Sheriff's Duty (Drama) .....
101 BISON—(Not Decided) .....

SUNDAY, MARCH 22nd, 1914.

CRYSTAL—The Fat and Thin of It (Comedy).....
ECLAIR—A Tale of the Desert (Drama).....
REX—Carlotta, the Bead Stringer (Drama).....

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1914.

VICTOR—A Woman's Honor (Drama).....
IMP—King, the Detective, in the Marine Mystery (Two parts—Drama) .....
POWERS—Too Much Married (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—The Mysterious Leopard Lady (Two parts—Drama) .....
CRYSTAL—Snookum's Last Racket (Comedy).....
CRYSTAL—Without Pants (Comedy).....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike in the Battle of Little Tin Horn (Comedy).....

WEDNESDAY, March 25th, 1914.

NESTOR—The Mountaineer (Drama).....
JOKER—Pay the Rent (Comedy).....
ECLAIR—Adrift (Two parts—Drama).....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 107 (News).....

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

IMP—For Life and Liberty (Comedy).....
REX—The Spider and Her Web (Two parts—Drama)..
FRONTIER—Black Hands and Dirty Money (Comedy)

FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, 1914.

NESTOR—The Wrong Miss Wright (Comedy).....
POWERS—Her First Arrest (Comedy).....
POWERS—U. S. Government's Instructions to Young Farmers (Agriculture) .....
VICTOR—Diplomatic Flo (Three parts—Drama).....

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

JOKER—The Head Waiter (Comedy).....
FRONTIER—The Girl Bandit (Drama).....

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, MARCH 15th, 1914.

APOLLO—Dad's Terrible Match (Comedy).....1000
MAJESTIC—His Little Pal (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Eugenic Boy (Comedy).....

MONDAY, MARCH 16th, 1914.

AMERICAN—A Modern Free Lance (2 parts—Drama).2000
KEYSTONE—His Faorite Pastime (Comedy).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl (No. 9—Drama).....

TUESDAY, MARCH 17th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Girl Who Dared (Drama).....1000
MAJESTIC—They Who Dig Pits (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Cat's Paw (2 parts—Drama).....2000

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Coming of the Padres (Drama)....1000
BRONCHO—Adventures of Shorty (Comedy).....1000
KOMIC—He Who Laughs Last (Comedy).....
KOMIC—Snowball Pete (Comedy).....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 64 (News).....
RELIANCE—The Smugglers of Sligo (2 parts—Dr.)..2000

THURSDAY, MARCH 19th, 1914.

DOMINO—The Bells of Austi (2 parts—Drama).....2000
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).

FRIDAY, MARCH 20th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Trap (2 parts—Drama).....2000
PRINCESS—The Grand Passion (Farce).....
RELIANCE—Messenger No. 845 (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—(No Release This Date).

SATURDAY, MARCH 21st, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).
MAJESTIC—(No Release This Date).....
RELIANCE—The Coming of the Real Prince (2 parts—Drama) 2000

SUNDAY, MARCH 22nd, 1914.

APOLLO—A Parcels Post Auto (Comedy).....1000
MAJESTIC—Atonement (2 parts—Drama).....2000
THANHOUSER—The Cousin from England (Comedy).

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Turning Point (2 parts—Drama)....2000
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl (No. 10—Drama).....

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Peacock Feather Fan (Drama).....1000
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Yet Announced).....

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th, 1914.

AMERICAN—A Decree of Justice (Drama).....1000
BRONCHO—The Relic (2 parts—Drama).....2000
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 65 (News).....

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

DOMINO—The Silent Messenger (2 parts—Drama)...2000
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....

FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
PRINCESS—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Yet Announced).....

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....

Exclusive Supply Corporation

MONDAY, MARCH 16th, 1914.

SOLAX—The Monster and the Girl (Four Parts—Dr.)

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18th, 1914.

ITALA—Buried Secret (Three Parts—Drama).....

THURSDAY, MARCH 19th, 1914.

GT. N. S. F.—Convict's Son (Three parts—Drama)..

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th, 1914.

F. R. A.—Coils of Calamity (Three parts—Drama).....

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

ITALA—Lost In the Darkness (Three parts—Drama).

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

BLACHE.—Moonshiners (Four parts—Drama).....

COMPETITOR PRAISES

Simplex

VAN-OS-COPEY IS THE ART OF CONTINUOUS NON-FLICKERING MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

TELEPHONE BRYANT 6126 — CABLE ADDRESS "VANOSCOPE"

VANOSCOPE COMPANY

MANHATTAN BUILDING CHICAGO — CANDLER BUILDING, 220 W. 42ND ST. NEW YORK

December 15th, 1913.

Mr. B. F. Porter,
No. 1465 Broadway,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

I hand you herewith our order for one (1) Simplex projecting machine for immediate delivery. I have made a close investigation of every machine in the market and am convinced that the Simplex machine is made on honor; and shows the result of a conscientious effort to make the best intermittent machine possible.

We are going to show it alongside the Vanoscope optical projector, to demonstrate the contrast between intermittent and non-intermittent projection, so that no one can say that we have not selected a high grade, up-to-date machine as a comparison.

Very truly yours,

William J. Johnson

The honest conviction of this experienced man who has made a deep study of motion picture projection is of great value.

The prospective purchaser will do well to be guided in his selection by this authority concerning this

Peerless Projector

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 EAST 34th STREET : : : NEW YORK

Send for Illustrated Catalogue A with Full Details

"THE PERILS OF PAULINE"

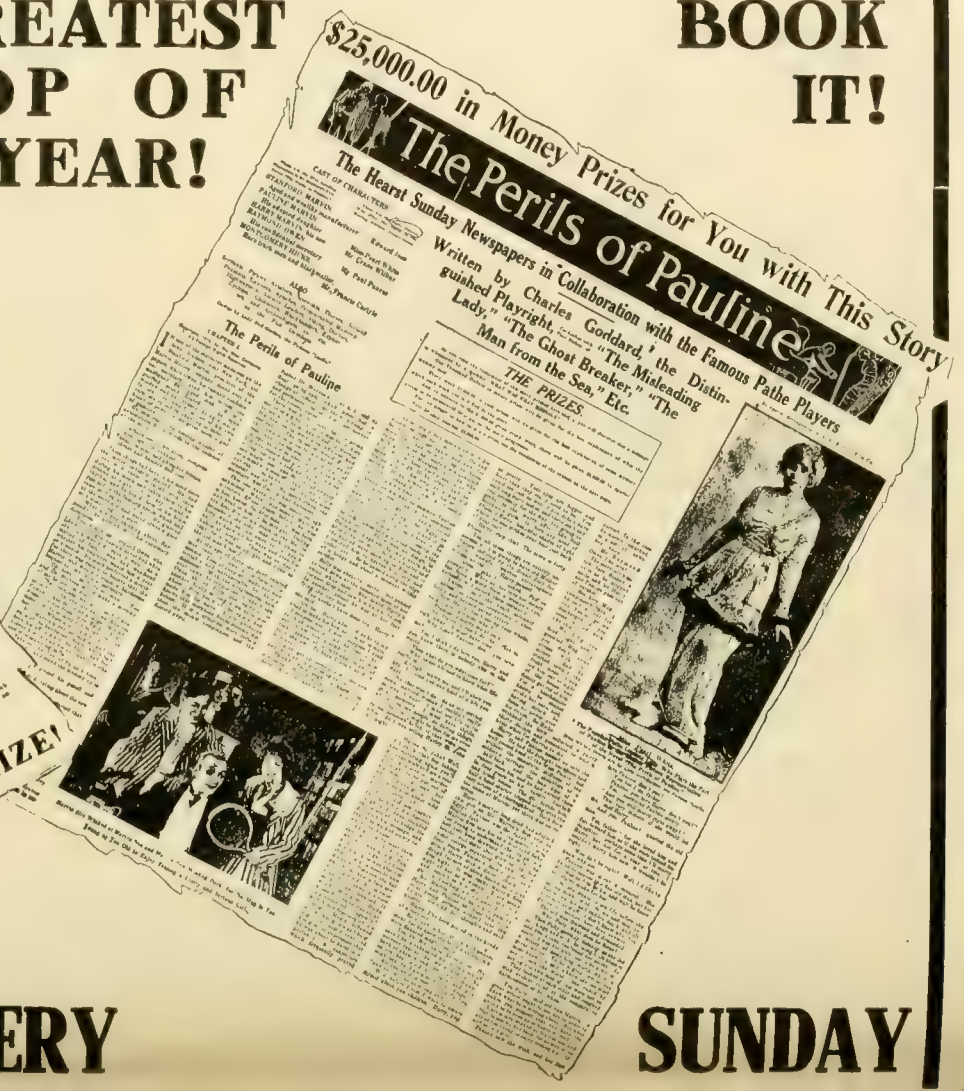
By CHARLES GODDARD, THE EMINENT PLAYWRIGHT, SPLENDID AS A STORY, WONDERFUL AS A PHOTOPLAY, IS APPEARING IN THE FOLLOWING HEARST SUNDAY PAPERS:—NEW YORK AMERICAN—BOSTON AMERICAN—SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER—LOS ANGELES EXAMINER—ATLANTA SUNDAY AMERICAN and DEUTSCHES JOURNAL.

BOOK IT!

THE GREATEST SCOOP OF THE YEAR!

BOOK IT!

Read It Here Now—Then SEE It All in Motion Pictures
An Enthralling Motion Picture Novel
HOW TO WIN THE PRIZES
Read the Next Instalment of the Story
Get Next Sunday's American AND WIN ANOTHER PRIZE!



$25,000.00 in Money Prizes for You with This Story
The Perils of Pauline
The Hearst Sunday Newspapers in Collaboration with the Famous Pathe Players
Written by Charles Goddard, the Distinguished Playwright, "The Misleading Lady," "The Ghost Breaker," "The Man from the Sea," Etc.
The Perils of Pauline
THE PRIZES

APPEARS EVERY SUNDAY

DON'T IMPERIL YOUR BUSINESS BY FAILING TO BOOK IT:—

"THE PERILS OF PAULINE"

FIRST RELEASE IN THREE PARTS

EVERY WEEK $1000 WILL BE GIVEN AWAY IN CASH PRIZES FOR THE BEST EXPLANATION OF SOME MYSTERY IN THAT WEEK'S STORY—$25,000 WILL BE THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF THE PRIZES.

THESE CONTESTS WILL AFFORD THE PUBLIC ITS FIRST OPPORTUNITY TO PARTICIPATE IN THE PRODUCTION END OF THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS. AN ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN TREMENDOUS IN ITS SCOPE AND COST WILL CROWD THE HOUSES SHOWING THESE GREAT PICTURES AS THEY HAVE NEVER BEEN CROWDED BEFORE. BOOKINGS CAN ONLY BE MADE THROUGH THE EXCHANGES OF THE

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

NEW YORK 110 West 40th St.
CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.
BOSTON 3 Tremont Row
MINNEAPOLIS 4th and Hennepin Sts.
ATLANTA Rhodes Building
DALLAS Andrews Building

WRITE!! WIRE!! PHONE!! CALL!!

FOR TERRITORY NOT SHOWN, WRITE NEW YORK DIRECT

PHOTOPLAY

RELEASED

JUDITH of BETHULIA

By Thomas Bailey Aldrich

From the story of the heroic defense of Judea by the Jews of Bethulia and their final triumph over the vast army of Nabuchodonosor after Judith had outwitted and slain his general, Holofernes.

Four Parts BIOGRAPH

THROUGH FIRE TO FORTUNE

or THE SUNKEN VILLAGE

By Clay M. Greene

A dramatic story of wonder moving occurrences, such as a mine explosion and the sinking of a whole village into the bowels of the earth.

Five Parts LUBIN

The LION and The MOUSE

By Charles Klein

The complete triumph of a clever and beautiful girl over a powerful money-mad financier who has ruined and discredited her father.

Six Parts LUBIN

Controlled Exclusively by the General Film Company, (Inc.)

GENERAL

MASTERPIECES

COMING

GERMINAL

or THE TOLL OF LABOR

By Emile Zola

Graphic story of a great labor strike and the harrowing experience of a man and woman entombed in a flooded mine.

Five Parts PATHE

LOST IN MID-OCEAN

By Clarence G. Babger

A love story full of sensational incidents.

Three Parts VITAGRAPH

ROMANY SPY

Romantic story full of action, acted by leading foreign actors.

Three Parts PATHE

Branches in all large cities. Main Office, 200 5th Ave., New York

FILM CO. [INC.]

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

CRYSTA

Another Uni

The Crystal Film Company
O

THE INIMITABLE QUEEN OF COMEDY

Vivian Prescott

There are no better known or more popular comedy exhibitors should be happy that they can again see their

First Release Featuring Miss Prescott

"LOST, STRAYED

A WHIRLWIND OF

WATCH FOR IT

EXHIBITORS: Keep posted on something big coming off by

THE CRYSTAL

430 CLAREMONT PARKWAY,

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

L FILMS

versal Scoop!

announces the engagement
f

THE PEERLESS MASTER OF SLAP-STICK FARCE

Charlie De Forrest

stars than Miss Prescott and Mr. De Forrest, and Universal favorites on THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM.

and Mr. De Forrest, Sunday, April 12th

OR STOLEN"

FUN AND MIRTH
AND DEMAND IT!
sending us the name of your theatre for our mailing list.

FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK U. S. A.

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

American Invasion

(UNLIM

A Brand New Idea

Twelve Masterful Pro

What can you do once a month with a masterpiece drawing power? These productions

The entire world has been searched for these "sure fire" successes;

All territory has been sold except Cuba, Mexico, Alaska, the United States. These are open to hustlers of known in high class theatres charging advanced prices. Releases preparation. Tickets for private

Watch for Announcement

Stars? Yes, of every country on the picture game, the fruit of evolution, a service. Act quick, before your

European Office: H. WINIK
35 Little Newport Street, London, England
Also in the market for QUALITY pictures for Europe for spot cash. Nothing too big!

by European Capital

ITED!)

For Real Live Ones —

ductions Every Year

that will eclipse anything ever seen in quality and consist of five, six, seven, and eight reels they justify on the screen for the brains and money expended!

Porto Rico, Philippine and Hawaiian Islands, Canada and reliability, subject to the restriction of being exhibited only covering seven months now ready for examination; others in exhibition furnished on request.

of the Plays and Players!

globe!! This is a big "corner" in the and the last chance to secure such competitor wakes up — write or wire

DeLuxe Attractions Film Co.

145 West 45th Street

New York City

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

E. I. BUTLER, manager of the Ishpeming Theater, at Negaunee, Mich., has added to his photoplay holdings by acquiring the Star Theater in that city, taking over the interests of both Jafet Rytkanen, owner of the block in which the theater is located, and August Allen, who for the last two years has been associated with Mr. Rytkanan in the management of the Star. As the house is in good shape, about the only change that will be made wil be to lower the stage for vaudeville purposes. Multiple-reel features wil be given a good deal of prominence by the new management. Mr. Rytkanen probably will open a photoplay house in some western city.

Manager Relf, of the Princess Theater, at Decorah, Ia., is installing a new front and lobby. The improvement comes because better entrances and exits were needed to handle his satisfactory crowds.

Fulton, Mo., is to have a third moving picture show, it is reported.

The Princess Theater, at Algona, Ia., is adding a vaudeville stage.

State officials of Iowa, who are now discussing the problem of preventing the migration of farmers to other states at a time when their own agricultural communities need development, have been given a hint by the Department of Agriculture to use moving pictures. The farming resources, it is pointed out, could easily be exploited in other states by films showing the possibilities of the Hawkeye state soils when scientifically cultivated.

Two hundred more persons may attend each show at the Lyric Theater, in Norfolk, Neb., when the forty-foot extension, begun by Al Koyen, is completed. In addition to increasing the seating capacity he is enlarging the stage.

The Columbus Theater Equipment Company, of Columbus, Ohio, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are C. C. and E. H. Walcutt and Leo B. Dwyer.

Commissioner Gillespie, of Detroit, Mich., is endeavoring to secure from the city council the appointment of four police women. The customary list of duties have been outlined for them—the conduct of visitors to dance halls and moving picture theaters.

Major Trump, manager of the Star Theater, at St. Joseph, Mich., recently closed his house all but Saturday and Sunday nights and in the intervals that the house was idle had the decorators at work.

L. W. Anderson, who recently disposed of his lease on the Mer-Mac Theater, at Menasha, Wis., to George Farmakes, is reported to be contemplating opening a new picture show in that city .

The recreation department of the Board of Public Welfare, at Kansas City, Mo., has been asked to outline for the Department of Public Safety, of Pittsburgh, Pa., its policy in regulating moving picture shows.

A. C. Larson, of Jewell, Ia., has purchased a building in Nashua, Ia., and will open a moving picture theater.

C. L. Otto Knop has opened a new moving picture theater at Griswold, Ia., making two photoplay houses for the town.

The new Rex Theater, on Fourth street, in Beloit, Wis., has been opened by J. V. Hogan. Two Power's 6A machines have been installed to insure good projection.

F. M. Spear, of Oelwein, Ia., has sold the Lyric Theater, in Albia, Ia., to F. R. Peake, who has been in the moving picture business at Belle Plaine, Ia.

The Temple Grand Theater, of Creston, Ia., used an entire page in a local daily to announce that moving pictures would be given every night that there was no other attraction. The Famous Players films were featured. A ten-cent admission will be secured.

E. J. Scott, of Emmetsburg, Ia., is disposing of his grocery stock to make room for a moving picture show.

The Wishard, the new theater which has been constructed at Bloomfield, Ia., had theatrical attractions the first two nights. Comment of a local paper is significant of the popularity of the photoplay. "Only ordinary crowds attended the opening nights. . . . Tuesday night was opening night for the Universal photoplays and the house was crammed." J. H. Newell is managing the house, which is an achievement in safety, convenience and beauty for a small city.

W. D. Warner has purchased a camera and expects to inject "local color" into the moving picture shows at the Winter Garden, in Westerville, Ohio.

Charles Q. Carlisle, E. C. Forrest and Harry Oppenheimer are the backers of the Mecca, a new moving picture theater to be opened about May 1 on South Washington avenue, in Saginaw, Mich. Architects are now drawing plans for remodeling the building into a theater seating 450 persons. The house will have a standard admission of ten cents, but may give some other acts in addition to the pictures. Mr. Carlisle, who will assume the active management, also will do the singing.

The Hocking Hall, at Hocking, Iowa, has been leased by Elias Garbett and Jack Harwood, who have opened the Union Theater, giving shows every night.

A building at Prescott, Ia., is being remodeled by Glen Bohannan and J. Sherwood, who will open a moving picture show.

Especial attention to its availability for a moving picture show will be given the opera house at Griswold, Ia., when the owner, F. W. Powder begins its remodeling. The place recently was damaged by fire. Meanwhile Powder and Glenn I. Boiler are operating a picture show.

Frank Shenhoff, 380 McMillan street, Detroit, Mich., has taken out a building permit for the construction of a one-story brick theater, 43 x 140, on the east side of Woodward, between Edmund place and Watson, in that city. William Huss, Michigan and Shelby is the owner.

W. H. Englert, of the Englert Theater, at Iowa City, Iowa, has cut down his vaudeville days to four a week, leaving the other three open for theatrical attractions and feature moving pictures.

The Midway Theater, at Centerville, Ia., has closed its doors, leaving the field to the Majestic and Orpheum and the Princess in South Centerville.

Mrs. S. B. McKenzie recently added some vaudeville numbers to the bill at the Casino Theater, in Charles City, Ia. Mrs. McKenzie recently was the victim of vandals or some person with a poor idea of practical joke. Emory dust was poured into the working parts of the machine and quite a little trouble was caused before it was cleaned.

The contract has been let for the new moving picture theater which will be operated in Cedar Falls, Ia., by Mrs. McClinton. The old opera house property, owned by J. G. Packward, will be remodeled for a home for photoplays.

Miss Mabel Robison has resigned her position as manager of the Majestic Theater, in Des Moines, Ia., and has purchased a half interest in a moving picture theater in Clarkesdale, Miss. She also will be the manager of an airdome there the coming summer.

The Royal Theater, at St. Joseph, Mo., has been remodeled and a new ventilating system installed. The orchestra also has been enlarged.

Otto Smallfield has opened his new photoplay house in the northwestern part of Davenport, Ia. The structure is 30 x 80 feet with a pressed cream brick front. It has a seating capacity of 400 persons and the proprietor boasts that each patron gets four inches more of seat room for his money than in any other theater in the city.

The fire department building funt, at Wymore, Neb., profited when Sunday picture shows were given in that city.

J. A. Knight, of the Majestic Theater, at Columbus Junction, Ia., will make a number of improvements to his house this spring. A one-story addition will not only make room for a stage, but will increase the seating capacity to 350.

Police Sergeant A. Samuelson, of Omaha, approves of the action of Major Funkhouser, of Chicago, in eliminating those portions of films which reflect upon the dignity of the policemen. "By golly, that fellow's got the right idea," was the comment for publication.

The Idlehour, a new moving picture theater, has been opened at Allegan, Mich.

George Graves has removed from Monroeville, Ohio, to Butler, Ind., where he will operate the Crystal Theater. Four nights in the week three reels will be given for five cents, but on Wednesdays and Saturdays, which will be designated feature nights, a five and ten-cent admission will be asked. Mr. Graves has been in the photoplay business nine years.

The Broadway Theater, in Detroit, Mich., which recently was taken over by Benjamin Fay Mills, who intended to make a motion picture theater de luxe, has been leased to B. C. Whitney, who also controls the Detroit Opera House.

The moving picture show which has been operated at Ralston, Iowa, by the Plumleys, has been sold to Norva and Earl Pound, who removed the outfit to Victor, Iowa.

J. M. Peters, of Dumont, Iowa, has purchased an outfit and opened a moving picture theater in the hotel block. He will give shows each Wednesday and Saturday night.

The opera house, at Kewanee, Wis., has been closed by the Sokol Society, its owners, because the city council placed an annual license fee of $50 on all halls and moving picture shows. The owners claim the place has not been self-supporting for years.

H. A. Chamberlain, of Standish, Mich., is reported to be interested in a project to remodel the old bank building in that city into a moving picture theater and public hall. D. C. Honley is said to contemplate taking a lease on the place.

Activities of the Commercial Club, of Cambridge, Ia., have resulted in the formation of a company which will erect a new opera house. Albert Hill is president and F. B. Tyler secretary and treasurer.

The Royal Theater, at Bloomville, Ohio, has been sold to E. J. Rust, of Tiffin. Shows will be given five times a week.

The Gem Theater, at Indianola, Ind., has been sold to Samuel Ryan, of Bloomfield, who has taken possession.

Undesirable censorship in Omaha, Neb., seems to have been averted by the commendable action of the exhibitors in taking a stand against the "wild-cat features." A conference with the Social Service board was held at which the ordinance proposed was discussed. Frank Harris, of the Empress, president of the Nebraska state association, acted as spokesman for the fifty exhibitors present, and declared the willingness of the photoplay managers to co-operate with the Social Service board. He did not think, however, that the class of pictures now running in Omaha warranted the appointment of a censor. One exception was noted—the wild-cat features, which are not passed by any board. The exhibitors agreed not only to eliminate these, but to report any house that attempted to show them. Approval of the prevailing policies was shown when the Social Service board agreed that nothing more would be done so long as the present high standard in the moving picture theaters is maintained. The meeting also developed a closer spirit of co-operation and the object of the service board—to secure more educational films—was furthered when the exhibitors decided to appoint a committee to discuss the advisability of a special educational program for children to be shown particularly in the outlying theaters.

Sunday shows have begun at the Majestic Theater, in Cheboygan, Mich. No admission is charged, but a collection is taken up and a portion of the money is given to some local organization of a semi-charitable nature.

The Woodland Theater Company has been formed by a number of young men of Dubuque, Ia., and has taken over the Woodland Theater, at 663 Julien avenue, which has been operated by Zangmeister & Ruchte.

The Colonial Theater, on Second street, Clinton, Ia., vaudeville and pictures, is being remodeled. The lobby is being made smaller to increase the seating capacity. The Orpheum, the new house which is being erected by Harry Sodini, in Clinton, soon will be open for business. It will be a handsome place, decorated in ivory and gold with electric fixtures in gold finish. Sodini has purchased three Simplex machines, one to be installed in the Orpheum and two for the Family, which is to be converted into a moving picture theater.

The Superba Theater, William Iverson, manager, Lyons, Ia., is being remodeled. Changes in the lobby will give more seating room. A new box office will be constructed and both the interior and exterior will be re-decorated. Construction on the new Parkside Theater, in Lyons, has been reported as progressing rapidly. A three-room apartment has been fitted up over the lobby, and it will be occupied by Manager Luhr and his assistants.

Arthur Holmdahl, of Kellogg, Ia., has purchased a moving picture show at Eldora, Ia.

O. D. Harman, of Solon, Ia., has purchased a moving picture theater at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Edward Fields has sold his interest in the Lyric Theater, at Rice Lake, Wis., to Bull & Overby.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

THE Gem Theater, at Caledonia, Minn., has been sold to G. E. Dorival.

Frank Maher is now owner of the Gem Theater, at Preston, Minn.

F. St. George and Wiliam Cook have begun the erection of a new moving picture theater at New Duluth, Minn.

The state fire marshal's department of Minnesota has announced the regulations which will govern moving picture theaters in the state. Each machine must be installed in a compartment of fire-resistive material not less than 5 x 5 feet for one machine, or 10 x 7 for two machines. Brick, tile or concrete booths must have walls at least eight inches thick, except reinforced concrete, which need be only four inches. Further precau-

A HELEN GARDNER PRODUCTION MEANS SUCCESS

FANTOMAS

THE CROOK DETECTIVE

SERIES №4

Reel 1

I BRING YOU LUCK

Full of great interest and excitement.

Reel 2

I AM A SATISFACTION GIVER

Positively compelling in interest and excitement.

Reel 3

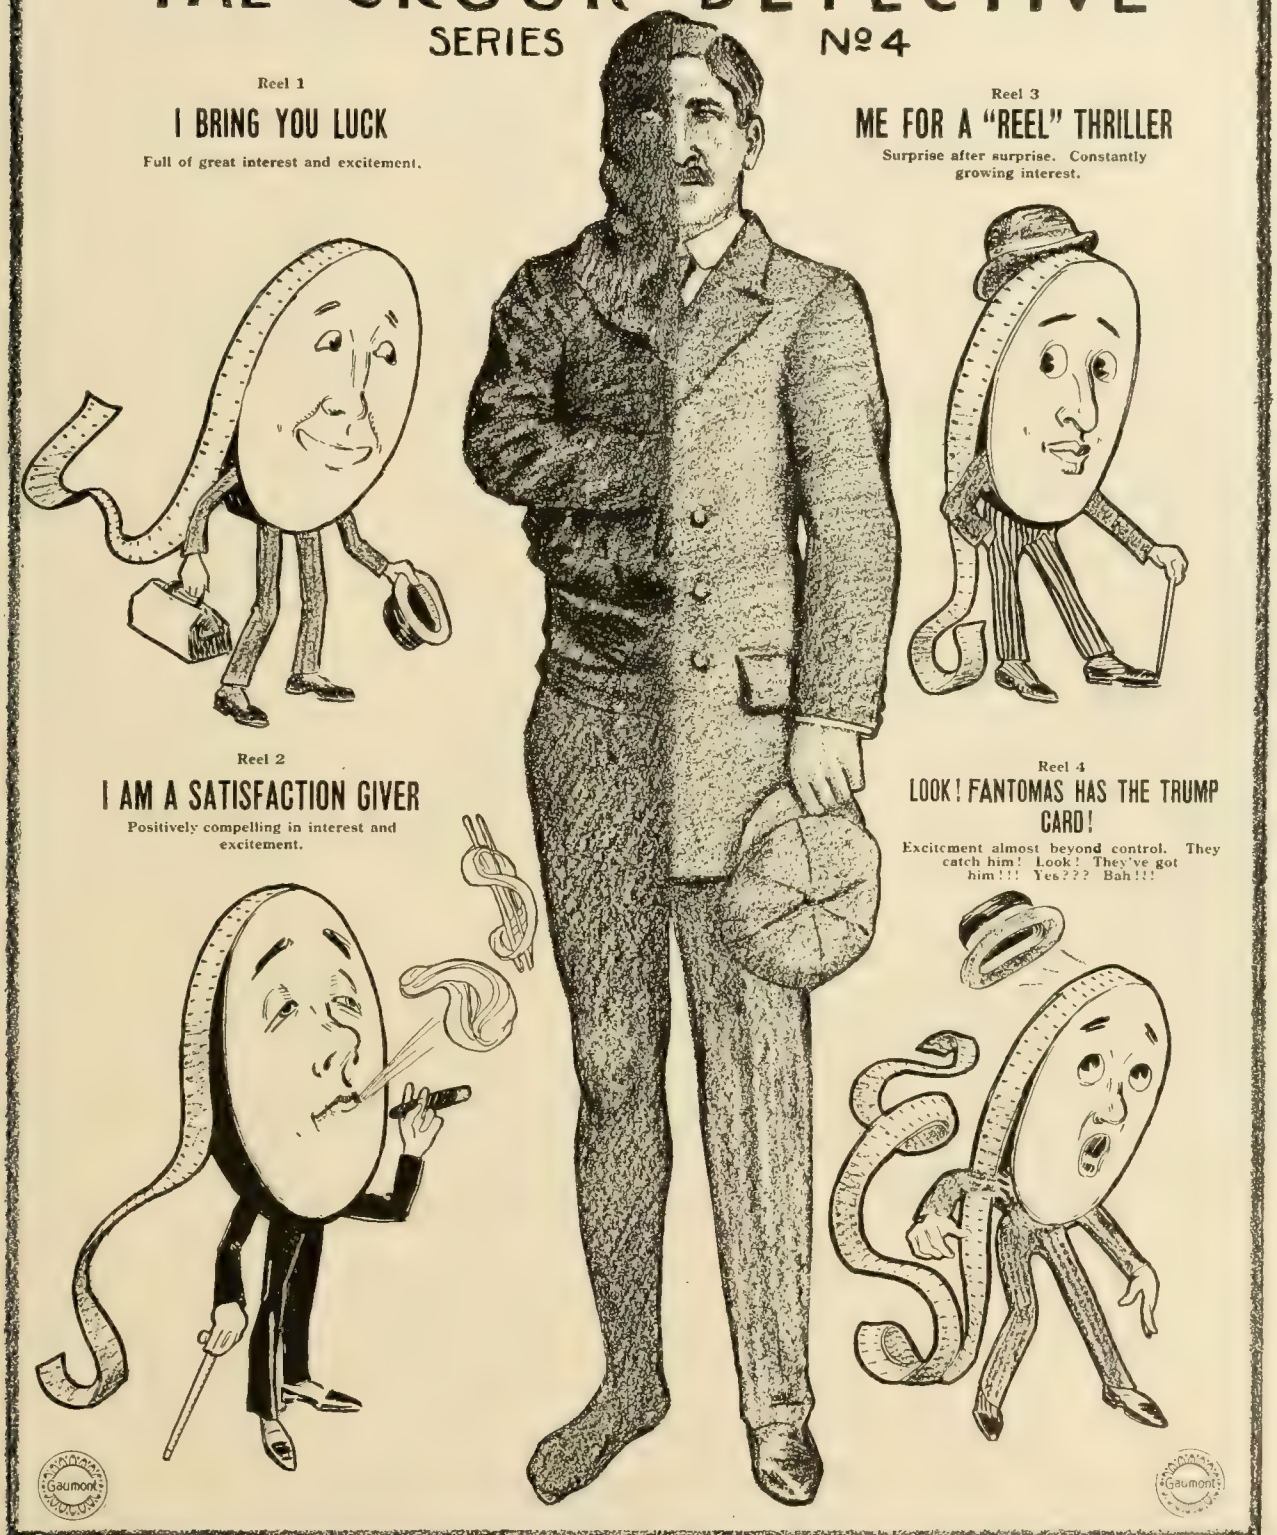
ME FOR A "REEL" THRILLER

Surprise after surprise. Constantly growing interest.

Reel 4

LOOK! FANTOMAS HAS THE TRUMP CARD!

Excitement almost beyond control. They catch him! Look! They've got him!!! Yes??? Bah!!!



110 West Gaumont Co. 40 St N.Y.

No. 1	No. 2	No. 3	No. 4
FANTOMAS	FANTOMAS	FANTOMAS	FANTOMAS
The Phantom Crook	The Man in Black	The Mysterious Fingerprint	The Crook Detective
THREE REELS	FOUR REELS	FOUR REELS	FOUR REELS

tions demanded are that the wiring must be brought into the booth in conduits and that no films be left outside of metal cases when not in use. In the theater proper, seats shall be not less than thirty inches, back to back, aisles shall be not less than three feet wide and shall lead directly to exits. No machine can be operated in a building that does not abut directly upon a street. The marshal has called the attention of the exhibitors to the fact that where a municipality has more stringent regulations than called for in this state order, the local ordinances will take precedence over the state ruling. Fire Marshal Keller makes plain his attitude by asking the co-operation of the moving picture men in making it the safest as well as one of the greatest forms of entertainment and education.

A site has been selected on the south side of Stark street in Portland, Oregon, for the new National moving picture theater to be erected by Melvin G. Winstock, at a cost of $100,000. It is planned to have the house opened by the coming of the Rose Festival in June. A number of distinctive features are included in the plans. Every seat in the house, whether on the first floor, balcony or gallery will be reserved. Two shows each afternoon and two each evening will be given. Elevators will carry the patrons to the balcony and gallery. The roof will be converted into a summer garden. The basement of the structure will be fitted up as children's playground and trained nurses will take care of the youngsters while their mothers are at the picture show, or even while they are shopping downtown. The place will seat 2,000 persons, leaving room on the first floor for eight storerooms. Mr. Winstock has been general manager for the People's Amusement Company, in Portland, since February, 1910, and when his resignation was received by the stockholders a resolution, expressing appreciation of his devotion, industry and ability to the company was spread on the records of the corporation. The new project is financed by a syndicate of Portland business men.

Earl Adams, of Huntley, Minn., has opened a circuit of picture shows at Kiester, Bricelyn and Frost, Minn., devoting two nights each week to each town.

The Dickerman Investment Company, of Duluth, Minn., will erect a combination moving picture theater, hotel and restaurant building, costing $30,000, on First avenue, West, between first and Superior street, in Duluth.

Recent bids for business by the Idle Hour Theater, at Aberdeen, S. D., included announcements that every picture was accompanied by appropriate music from a four-piece orchestra, that a special five-reel show was given for children on Saturday afternoons at five cents, and of participation in a Mysterious Mr. West contest, the mystery paying $25 to anyone who identified him and said the magic words.

The Cozy Theater, at Bowman, N. D., has been sold to A. Glasnapp.

The moving picture theater at Coggswell, N. D., has been purchased by Dr. H. L. Saylor and Editor Jordan, of the Coggswell Enterprise.

A new opera house and moving picture theater will result from the remodeling of the present opera house at Beach, N. D.

The Rose Theater property in Centralia, Wash., has been sold to Edward L. Prescott for $16,000. It is reported that the building may be razed to make way for a business structure.

Commissioner Jones, of the Washington State Exposition Commission has made plain the policy of that body in regard to its moving picture exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. The commission has contracted with the Educational Film Company, of Seattle, Wash., to furnish it with 5,000 feet of film, covering the principal industries of the state, such as the logging and the apple-raising industries. Individuals and commercial enterprises must secure their own films and the commission declares it has no disposition to urge any community or enterprise to spend money for films unless they are sure of getting their money's worth.

Manager A. E. Zabel, of the Acme Theater, at Olympia, Wash., gave a benefit performance for the Humane Society of that city.

Harvey Jewson, formerly of Mankato, Minn., has opened a moving picture theater at Montgomery, Minn.

Construction has begun upon Rubin & Finkelstein's new Palace Theater, at Fourth street and Hennepin Avenue, in Minneapolis, Minn. The theater will seat 1,800 persons. Stores will be located on each side of the theater.

An ordinance requiring more rigid inspection of motion picture theaters in St. Paul, Minn., has been drafted by Corporation Attorney O'Neill, of that city. It will call for daily inspection of fire-fighting apparatus in all showhouses, patrolling them every night, crowded attendance will be forbidden, patrons will not be allowed to stand in the aisles and the entrances must be kept clear at all times. The measure was framed at the request of Chairman Reuben Warner, of the Board of Fire Commissioners, who pointed out that certain phases of safety regulation in theaters which was now in the power of the building inspector should be transferred to the fire department. In Minneapolis, the twin city of St. Paul, Building Inspector J. G. Houghton has recommended to the city council that the construction of frame bulidings for moving picture theaters be prohibited.

A new opera house will be constructed at Sauk Centre, Minn.

The Cozy Theater, at Alexandria, Minn., has been taken over by the Empire Amusement Company; J. R. Sparling, manager.

The Gem Motion Picture Theater, at Adrian, Minn., has been sold to G. M. Bohrndt.

George L. Harrington has sold the Gem Theater, at Preston, Minn., to Frank Maher.

Rice Brothers have sold their lease on the Walker Opera House, at Walker, Minn., to Sol Newbury, of Minneapolis.

The Gem Theater has been opened at Stauton, Minn., by J. Johnson.

F. J. Jenkel has sold the Grand Moving Picture Theater, at Northfield, Minn., to John Marr, of St. Paul.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

NORTH WESTERN NEW YORK.

H. M. Warner, salesmanager for Warner's Features, Inc., recently visited the company's Buffalo branch, managed by D. J. Chatkin. He found business in excellent condition. He appointed A. Chatkin as traveling representative of this territory. Mr. Chatkin recently made an out-of-town trip and arranged for three three-house circuits for his company.

"Over Niagara Falls" in three reels, produced by the Sterling Camera & Film Co., and "Her Guilty Secret", a Gaumont feature, were recently shown to crowded houses by Manager Davis of Keith's Moving Picture Theater, Buffalo.

The new Elmwood Moving Picture Theater on Elmwood Avenue, near Utica Street, will open between April 15 and May 1. Frederick Ullman, president of the company constructing the house, says it will be one of the finest theaters in Buffalo. An expensive organ will be installed.

Manager Laughlin of the Majestic Theater, Buffalo, who occasionally uses moving pictures on Sundays, recently conducted a series of tango contests. They were featured at matinee performances of the Play "Where the Trail Divides". The public was invited to take part and young men and young women in the company gave exhibitions in dancing. The audience decided as to winners and valuable prizes were given.

The Victor Film Service, which handles the output of the Universal Co., in the Buffalo territory, has been incorporated. The directors are Arthur A. Schmidt, S. M. Klee and Josephine Ryan. The Victor headquarters at 35 Church Street have been enlarged and now occupy an entire building.

Manager Foster of the Family Theater, Buffalo, has introduced a novelty here by having five neat negro maids as ushers.

"The Chronicles of Cleek" Edison's serial subject in moving pictures has been drawing crowds to the Marlowe Theater, Buffalo. As a special attraction William Leyser, manager of the house, recently gave free to each adult patron a copy of the "Short Story" magazine, containing the "Cleek" detective stories. This plan proved very popular and increased attendance was a result. Mr. Leyser has also been showing lately "The Adventures of Kathlyn" Selig's serial picture and "The Lion and The Mouse", a five part Lubin picture.

"We shall continue to give the public the best features obtainable," Manager Leyser said.

E. Meadows, manager of the Special Features Department of the General Film Co., recently sent out several invitations to exhibitors, newspapermen and others to attend private exhibitions at the Strand Theater, Buffalo, of "Germinal" and, later of "Judith of Bethulia". The productions were enthusiastically received.

The process of manufacturing steel was shown in moving pictures at a meeting of the Buffalo Ad. Club. W. H. Miller of the United States Steel Corporation of Farrell, Pa., explained the pictures.

The Morton Amusement Co. has filed plans with the Bureau of Building for a moving picture theatre at 444-448 Connecticut Street, Buffalo. The house will cost $30,000.

Foster Moore, Buffalo manager of the George Kleine Attractions, has received congratulations from the main offices of his company in Chicago on the crowds which the picture "Between Savage and Tiger" is drawing to Shea's Theater, Buffalo, on Sundays. Special music by Director Herman Schultz and an orchestra of fifteen men is an added attraction.

The All-States Amusement & Realty Co. has bought the motion picture theater at 649 Main Street, Buffalo, formerly the New Theater. A formal opening was held recently by Francis Wilkins, manager. The ventilation, the lighting, and the heating system of the house has been improved. Cabaret performers who walk up an down the aisles and sing popular songs are a special feature. The directors of the company owning the house are W. J. Kress, president and general manager, Dr. V. Mott Pierce and William P. Morgan.

An "Infant Mortality Week" will be celebrated in Syracuse this month. According to Health Officer Sears of that city, among the features will be moving pictures showing the modern methods of caring for children.

A popular East Side moving picture theater is the Owl, on Jefferson Street, near Sycamore, Buffalo. The owner and manager is Michael Schwarzmeier, who has met with success in the moving picture business for the past five years.

The Globe Moving Picture Theater, 1555 Main Street, Buffalo, managed by S. S. Webster, is an attractive new house. The lobby is marble and tile, with the ceiling and side walls finished in old ivory and gold. Beautiful scroll work, frescoing and plastic relief are a feature of the interior decorations.

Warden Charles F. Rattigan of Auburn, N. Y. Prison has bought a moving picture machine for the benefit of the inmates. Pictures of an educational value will be presented. At first the operator will be an outsider but later a convict will do the work. The Mutual Welfare League, formed by prisoners, will have charge of the exhibitions.

The following have applied for permits to build moving picture theaters at these locations in Buffalo: Joseph A. Welte, High Street, near Maple Street; Frank M. Tretau, Broadway near Jefferson Street, and Anna S. Witting, 1084 East Delavan Avenue, Buffalo.

A new series of Selig's "The Adventures of Kathlyn" was shown recently by Manager Marsey of the Happy Hour Theater, Buffalo. Mr. Marsey is enlarging his house.

E. L. Neff is manager of the Oriole Moving Picture Theater at Genesee and Nevada Streets, Buffalo. He uses the General and Universal services.

Moving pictures and other theaters of Niagara Falls, which were closed during a smallpox epidemic there, are now open. Only persons showing vaccination certificates are admitted.

Manager Wallingford of the Hippodrome Theater, Buffalo, recently had as a lobby display for "Hunting Big Game in The Arctic", two Esquimaux in native costumes.

M. B. Schlesinger, manager of the Academy Theater, Buffalo, which plays vaudeville and moving pictures, recently had as a special attraction a real wedding on his stage. The contracting parties were Herbert Hassler, a Globe trotter, and Miss Marie Dorabella of this city. Mr. Hassler had visited Buffalo on a trip around the world and had met the young woman only a few days before their marriage. The ceremony was performed by Justice Bernard Fassett of this city. The manager of the theater was best man and the bride's sister was bridesmaid. Before the ceremony chimes played wedding music and the names of the contracting parties appeared on a screen. A large bell, made of flowers, and other floral decorations were shown on the stage. The house was darkened, then the lights were turned on, showing the effective setting. A crowd witnessed the ceremony. Mr. Schlesinger recently had a special tango contest in which only two couples, all experienced dancers, took part. Gold watches were given as prizes. Each side had its own following in the audience and there was plenty of applause.

Capacity houses were the rule when Dustin Farnum in "The Squaw Man" was recently shown at the Strand Theater, Buffalo. Manager Edel of that house arranged for special music furnished by an orchestra of ten pieces and by a pipe organ.

Manager Marcus of the Lyric Theater, Buffalo, is using as his slogan: "Eventually you'll join the crowd at the Lyric. Why not start now?" A picture of a Lyric patron, wearing a broad smile, is used by Mr. Marcus on his advertising.

BILLY BISON.

PHILADELPHIA.

UNUSUAL preparations are being mande by the Moving Picture Operators Union, Local No. 307 of the I. A. T. S. E., for the ball which will be held in Metropolitan Hall, Franklin Street and Fairmount Avenue, Tuesday, March 17. Music for the dancing which will start at eight o'clock and continue until three o'clock will be furnished by Prof. Murray's Orchestra.

A New York theatrical syndicate has purchased through Dakin & Kilpatrick, local real estate brokers, a site of gound east of Fifty-third Street on Market Street for a consideration said to be about $100,000, measuring 75 by 214 feet 6 inches. The lot will be improved by a theater to cost about $200,000, and the seating capacity of the proposed house will be close to 2,500.

Another chapter in the management of the theater at 519-21-23 East Girard Avenue, which has figured in the local courts for some time, was marked down in the litigation when Judge Ralston entered a final decree in the suit of John Meyers against Magdalane Hagner and Frank K. Brang, ordering the two defendants to render an account of the moving picture business conducted by them under a co-partnership agreement. The defendants are enjoined from selling any tickets, acting as cashier or in any other capacity. The Court appointed Henry I. Hynemann receiver, to take charge of the business until it could be satisfactorilly sold or wound up.

John J. Conner is having plans made for a moving picture theater which will be erected on a site of ground at Fifty-second Street and Greenway Avenue. The building will be of Colonial design and will be 43 by 110 feet. The cost, not including ground, will be about $15,000.

C. Wilbur Blake, for several years prominently identified with the moving picture trade, has purchased the properties at 532-538 Federal Street, Camden, N. J., on which site of ground he will erect a modern moving picture theater. The building will be of the most improved type and will have a seating capacity of about 700.

Julian M. Solomon, manager of the Susquehanna Theater, has been elected official press representative of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Mr. Solomon is well qualified for the position as his experience in this line has been very wide and successful.

Bring Box Office Results. The
Helen Gardner Productions

A HIGHLY ADVERTISED STAR

working under a poor director, with a weak scenario, dragging along a mediocre company, are methods that have never been employed by

THE NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.

To HOODWINK THE EXHIBITOR

Our strength lies in the fact that we made it a point to get PRODUCERS whom we knew to have great executive abilities in addition to being the World's

GREATEST DIRECTORS
THOS. H. INCE AND MACK SENNETT

who organized and built up stock companies which did not require any of these so-called STARS to make

KAY-BEE KEYSTONE
BRONCHO DOMINO

The Most Popular Brands of Film on the Market Today

8x10 PHOTOS of Kay-Bee leads, Anna Little, Clara Williams, Richard Stanton and "Barney" Sherry can be had by sending 50 cents to the Publicity Dept.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.
LONGACRE BUILDING, 42nd STREET AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK

KENTUCKY.

THE Owl Feature Film Company, of Louisville, recently sold a Simplex motion-picture machine to Clark & Estes, of Lebanon, for the new Alamo Theater, which opened March 1.

R. E. Gumm, of Chicago, was recently in Louisville, looking for a location for a new picture house. He has owned several houses in various parts of the country, but at present is a free lance. He formerly owned the Sylvia, of Chicago, the Diamond, of Duluth, the Bijou and the Diamond, of Cloquet, Minn., and several others.

J. B. Haney, of McConnell, was a recent visitor to Louisville. He bought equipment for a new picture house, which included a machine, a 6 kilowatt dynamo, and a 9 h.p. gasoline engine. Mr. Haney has to make his own power, as the town has no power plant.

R. B. Taylor, of Griffin, was recently in Louisville, where he purchased a metal machine booth, and a model "B" gas outfit.

D. L. Martin, manager of the Arcade, in Paducah, is building a nice business during the week, but is running a free show on Sunday, because the authorities will not allow him to charge for Sunday admittance. The Sunday show consists of a special big feature of three or four reels, which gives the house a good advertisement for the week-day shows.

Former Governor M. H. Thatcher, of Panama, who has recently returned to Louisville and has taken up the practice of law in the Paul Jones building, is attorney and stockholder in the new Rio Realty Company, of Louisville, which has bought out T. F. Sea's interests in the Parkland airdome. The new concern is floating stock, a good part of which has been taken up, and proposes to build a new picture house on the site of the old airdome at a cost of about $10,000.

The West End Colonels, a social club of Louisville, are making arrangements to put up an airdome at Twenty-eighth and Market streets. The organization is composed of about six hundred members, and the stock issue will be taken up by the club.

Mrs. E. G. Ayers, of Kokomo, Ind., a circus performer who was known as "Gipsy Jones" in the old days of the tents and sawdust, was a recent visitor to Louisville. She now owns the Ideal and Lyric picture houses in Kokomo, which are the only houses in that city. She is anxious to dispose of the two houses, which are doing a nice business, and are valued at $24,000 for the two of them. One is valued at $8,000 and the other at $16,000. She expects to go to Panama and put up an expensive house. While in Louisville she was looking for a Hungarian orchestra and some tango dancers to use as added attractions.

John Riordan has bought the interests of J. Wriech, his former partner in the Palace Theater, at Shelby and Rupp streets in Louisville, and will continue to operate the house himself.

The feature film, "Alaska Jack," was recently shown at the Hopkins Theater of Louisville. Previous to the showing of the picture a street parade was used to advertise it. Th eparade, however, was not very successful, as it was held during a severe blizzard. Women on horseback, dressed in Wild West costumes, were the feature of the parade.

The Westonian Airdome, of Louisville, has announced a change in its policy for the coming season. Good orchestras and singers will be employed, but vaudeville stunts will go by the board. Straight pictures will be the policy of the house hereafter. The people in the outlying districts are tiring of vaudeville, and this is the reason given for the change. The Westonian will be one of five picture houses in a radius of ten blocks in the West End. The other four are the Ideal, Norman, New Grand, and the new house to be put up by the West End Colonels.

M. Switow, president of the Switow Amusement Company, of Louisville, has been in Indianapolis almost constantly for the past two weeks. He is reported to have purchased the Gem and Manhattan theaters in Indianapolis, and has been offered the Ideal and Lyric theaters of Kokomo, Ind. Nothing has been done in regard to the latter two houses, however. Business on the whole Switow circuit is holding up unusually well, when the blizzards and storms of the past two weeks are taken into consideration.

The Owl Film Exchange, of Louisville, has put in a film renovator, which consists of nine polishing wheels and a brush. The film is run through a bath of cleansing fluid before going over the wheels, and is driven by a small motor.

The Louisville Photoplay Association met at the Novelty Theater building on Friday, Feb. 20. President L. J. Dittmar presided at the meeting. The legislative matters which had some of the members worried a few weeks ago have proved to be a mere bugaboo, and the members have decided that they have nothing to worry about. The talk of a bill regarding state censorship of films going through has died, and the bill is considered to be as good as dead already. Practically all of the members were present at the meeting. Among those in evidence were Lewis Steurl, H. B. Strube, L. D. Levinson, L. J. Dittmar, Max Simons, Jake Sollinger, Sylvester Grove, James L. Steurle, and several others.

The Novelty Theater, which ran the three-part Imp, "The Price of Sacrilege," on February 22, had to start off with the same reels on the following Monday, due to the fact that the trains were all late, tied up by snowstorms, and the pictures arrived too late for the opening of the day's run. Practically every house in town was tied up to some extent during the morning run.

Miss B. A. Plessinger, manager of the Independent Motion Picture Service Company, of Louisville, expected to move the exchange from the building now occupied to the Tyler building on the north side of Jefferson street, above Fourth. It was found, however, when the time for signing the lease came, that the underwriters had declared they would advance the insurance rate in the whole Tyler building, if the exchange was allowed to move in. The consequence is that the Independent will not move.

The Louisville Film Supplies Company, which started operations a few months ago under the management of Charles D. Sinai, has been sold by its owners, H. D. Ticknor and Miss B. A. Plessinger, to the Universal Film Company. The offices, which were next door to each other, have been joined, and Mr. Sinai will continue to manage the supply department.

Carpenter & Johnston, Louisville camera men, found enough sunlight one day last week to take a picture of the wreck of the "Queen City," a large Ohio river packet, which was wrecked on the rocks at the head of the Ohio Falls at Louisville, recently. The boat was blown on the rocks by a strong wind, and a heavy current kept her there. The picture will more than likely be shown over a good area, as the wreck caused a good deal of anxiety from Louisville to Pittsburgh, because of the fact that the boat had something over a hundred passengers on board at the time, who were going to New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras celebration.

The Majestic Amusement Company, of Louisville, has filed amended articles of incorporation, increasing the capital stock of the company from $30,000 to $150,000.

The Louisville Y. M. C. A. ran moving pictures at the quarterly meeting of the association recently.

Manager C. H. Berryman, of the Ben Ali Theater, of Lexington, recently issued a card which announced that no more Sunday shows will be given at the theater. This will end the question as to whether or not vaudeville shows will be given in the city on Sunday.

H. Kleymeyer, manager of the new Nickelodeon Theater Company, of Henderson, has had plans drawn for the new house by E. S. Trible, to whom the contract was also awarded. The new house will have a seating capacity of 520.

The Cherokee Amusement Company, of Louisville, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000. The new company will erect a building for a picture show house at once, with a seating capacity of 700 to 1,000. It will be of brick and fireproof construction, with a white tile front. The new house is to be erected at a cost of about $10,000. The capital stock of the company is divided into shares of $100. The incorporators are Carl Zang, Frank W. Huss, and Charles W. Krebs, each of whom holds three shares. The indebtedness of the company shall not exceed the amount of its capital stock. Carl Zang, superintendent of the Mellwood Distillery Company, is arranging the details. The plans have not been made.

Manager J. P. Masters, of the Columbia and Elite theaters, of Bowling Green, has returned to the city after an absence of several weeks, and is busy looking after the interests of the Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, which owns the houses. Manager Masters is very enthusiastic over the new building which the company is putting up in Bowling Green, as it will be a modern ground floor theater. The two old buildings which formerly occupied the new location have been razed and it is said that the new theater will be ready to open in about two months. A feature of the new building will be modern rest rooms for men and women. The house when completed will have an added attraction consisting of a five-piece orchestra, and will show the General Film Company's service. The company intends to show such features as "The Third Degree," "The Lion and the Mouse," and "The Battle of Shiloh." Manager Masters expects to give four shows daily, two in the afternoon and two at night, excepting dates on which long features will be shown, when only one show will be held afternoons and evenings.

Manager Stivers, of the Hippodrome, at Jackson, Ky., is trying out bargain weeks to his patrons. About every other week he runs five reels in place of his customary three. He recently played the Knickerbocker Stock Company for a full week, and drew good crowds.

The new theater building of Johnson & Kinner, at Hazard, is nearing completion, and is expected to open by the middle of March. The new building is two stories high and is of brick construction. The first floor will be used for vaudeville and moving pictures, while one of the partners, J. G. Kinner, who is also the local photographer, will occupy one of the offices on the second floor, which is to be fitted up as a small office building. The theater is to have a seating capacity of 250, and is said to be modern in every way. The curtains were painted by Kellogg, of Chicago.

Manager N. A. Wilkerson, of Mt. Sterling, who operates the Tabb Theater, of that city, has his second house under good headway, and will shortly start to run it as a five-cent house, as the Tabb is a ten-cent house. He has offered a prize of ten dollars for the most appropriate name for the new theater. Someone suggested that he call it the "Naw" as a compliment to his own enterprise, but Manager Wilkerson could not use the suggestion.

Manager Shrode, of the Rex Theater, of Hopkinsville, has made a hit with the fair sex of his town by installing box seats. The rear end of the theater, near the entrance, has been converted into a series of four boxes. Each box seats five persons, or a total of twenty. The box seats will be reserved, and a number of small theater parties will be held on the strength of the idea. A number of small air-purifiers was recently installed in the theaters.

Manager Bilger, of the Hopkins Theater, in Louisville, is still running the Mutual program, and is giving a good deal of attention to his press work, which consists mostly of boosting the "Mutual Girl," which is shown at the Hopkins every Saturday night. Colonel H. C. Steuver, of St. Louis, was a recent guest of Mr. Bilger's, and was very much interested in the production of "David Copperfield."

W. S. Pickett, of Chicago, representing the Independent Vaudeville Association, who is at the head of a chain of independent vaudeville houses throughout the South, was recently in Lexington and stated that he had made arrangements for a long-term lease for a theater in that city. Mr. Pickett said that the Lexington Theater would be the fifteenth of a string of twenty which his company is going to promote through the South, in such towns as Gulfport and Jackson, Miss., and Shreveport, La. It is proposed to give a vaudeville performance and three reels of pictures for ten cents, the admission to cover any seat in the house.

Motion picture photographers had a chance to get an unusual film or two here a few days ago, when the steamer, Queen City, which went upon the rocks in the shallow water above the Ohio Falls, immediately in front of the business section of Louisville, was pulled off, after some hard and exciting work. The local life-saving screw was employed, and several tugs lent their assistance, finally moving the steamer from her dangerous position and landing her safely at the wharf, where she will be fitted for a trip to a dry-dock for repairs. Local audiences will have a chance to see the pictures first, after which they may be sent to other cities.

Plans have been perfected whereby the City Salesmen's Club of Louisville will have the benefit of motion pictures and vaudeville performances at five local houses on the evening of March 17, the Ideal, the Broadway, the West Broadway, the Highland and the Crown are the houses which will participate. The plan is one which has been followed annually by the organization for several years past, the proceeds of the performances being devoted to charity. Attendance is always large, as the stunts pulled off, in which many of the salesmen participate, being out of the ordinary in a good many ways.

"The Winning Hand," a Pathe drama, was the feature at the Majestic, Louisville, March 1 and 2, winning the approval of large audiences, while a Famous Players production of "The Pride of Jennico," drew large audiences during the rest of the week, up to March 7. The prosperity which the Majestic has experienced by means of its unvaryingly excellent programs is indicated by the fact that it recently increased its capital stock from $30,000 to $150,000.

The Rex four-part production of "The Merchant of Venice," featuring Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, which is coming to the National Theater, of Louisville, shortly, in connection with the usual program of vaudeville, is awaited with much pleasurable anticipation by photoplay "fans" in this city.

The big four-part Imp feature, "Absinthe," featuring two of Louisville's prime favorites, King Baggot and Leah Baird, made such a hit at the Novelty recently that the management ran it March 3 as well. The special Universal features which are being brought out are meeting with as much favor as the rest of the Universal program, audiences apparently taking to the three and four-part productions even better than to the two-part plays, which were formerly the longest produced.

The West End Amusement Company, which owns the Westonia Airdome, and which is preparing to erect a handsome theater on its site, has made arrangements with the Central Film Service Company, of Louisville, for the Universal program. R. L. Shrader, manager of the company, reports that business is humming, despite the severe weather.

M. Zollinger, of the Hippodrome Amusement Company, Louisville, sustained painful, but not serious, injuries recently when he fell down a short flight of steps at the Novelty Theater, where he had gone to attend a meeting of the local association. Mr. Zollinger opened the wrong door, and the fall resulted.

The Independent Motion Picture Service Company, Louisville, will move shortly from its location on Jefferson street to the Intersouthern building, where handsome quarters on the sixth floor have been secured, much more satisfactory in every way than those now occupied.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

All Wise Fxchange Men Feature
Helen Gardner Productions

JESSE L. LASKY

PRESENTS

America's Most Popular Actor

DUSTIN FARNUM

—IN—

The most powerful drawing card in the history of famous plays on the screen

"THE SQUAW MAN"

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COMPANY UNDERSIGNED.

LOEWS CONSOLIDATED ENTERPRISES
PEOPLES VAUDEVILLE CO
LOEW AMUSEMENT CO
20TH CENTURY AMUSEMENT CO
N Y & FALL RIVER AMUSEMENT CO
MONARCH AMUSEMENT CO
MASCOT AMUSEMENT CO
COLUMBIA AMUSEMENT CO
DELANCEY AMUSEMENT CO
GREELEY SQUARE AMUSEMENT CO.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES.

Loew's Theatrical Enterprises
Capital $500,000
New York

INTERNATIONAL VAUDEVILLE CO
LOEW THEATRICAL CO
CAHN-LOEW THEATRICAL CO
MARCUS LOEW
MARCUS LOEW - WM MORRIS CONSOLIDATED BOOKING AGENCY
HUMANOVA PRODUCING CO
MOVING PICTURE CO OF MASS
BOROUGH THEATRE CO

AMERICAN MUSIC HALL BUILDING
260 W 42ND STREET.

March 11th, 1914.

Jesse L.Lasky Feature Film Co.,
220 West 48th St.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:-

We are now presenting your "Squaw Man" at our Shubert Theatre, which is the fifth theatre of our circuit where we have featured it.

Beyond a doubt, it is one of the best drawind cards we have ever played on our circuit.

Hoping that your future output will be as successful as "The Squaw Man", I am,

Respectfully yours,

SHM/AH

S. H. Meinhold.

Passed by Chicago Board of Censors as a magnificent Photo Play Production—"I enjoyed every moment of 'The Squaw Man,'" said Major Funkhouser.

UNSOLD

MISSOURI - KANSAS - IOWA - NEBRASKA

THE JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

JESSE L. LASKY	SAMUEL GOLDFISH	CECIL B. DeMILLE
President	Treas. and Gen. Mgr.	Director General

MR. EXHIBITOR

WE HAVE CONTRACTED WITH THE

Warner's Feature Film Co.

Apex Film Company

AND

The Film Lloyds

TO MAKE FEATURE FILMS

WE MEAN REAL FEATURES

We have secured the services of the greatest producer of the age, MR. BERT ANGELES, to be our principal director. This is a guarantee of class.

Look Out for Our First Production

The Historical Feature Film Co.

Fort Dearborn Bldg. JOHN F. BYRNES General Manager Chicago

ALL STAR FEATURE

RELEASED MARCH 16th

The World-Famed Lecturer, Author, War Correspondent and Actor

BURR McINTOSH

AS

JO VERNON (The Village Blacksmith, his original role)

In a Five-Part Moving Picture Presentation of

AUGUSTUS THOMAS'

Stirring Play of Rural Life

"IN MIZZOURA"

With an Exceptional Supporting Company of Broadway Stars

BOOK NOW OF OUR DISTRIBUTORS — THEY GIRDLE THE EARTH

Now Booking

DUSTIN FARNUM in
"SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE"—6 Reels

******

TULLY MARSHALL in
"PAID IN FULL"—5 Reels

In Preparation

EDGAR SELWYN in
"PIERRE OF THE PLAINS"

******

DIGBY BELL in
"THE EDUCATION OF MR. PIPP"

All Star Feature Corporation

HARRY RAVER
President

220 W. 42nd St., New York

AUGUSTUS THOMAS
Director-General

LICENSED FILM STORIES

SELIG.

THE BETTER WAY (Special—2 parts—Mar. 16).—George Ogden is cursed with a quick temper and well nigh ruined by his own self-indulgence. He marries a beautiful girl, Anna Wilson; but, after a few years, his fondness for whiskey overcomes his better traits, and life becomes almost unbearable for her. The beautiful home becomes a hollow mockery. Her husband's only sober hours are spent at his business—at home he is a grouch, and after a few drinks, becomes a snarling, disagreeable beast. Eventually this wears her out and wrecks her health. She is, however, brave and trustful and sticks by the man she wedded "for worse,"—but the cause is discovered by Dr. Phillip Grant, a friend of her husband, who attends her. He finds that her case is beyond medical aid, and takes it upon himself to administer a stinging reproof to Ogden, concerning the peril of his dissolute habits for his ultimate ruin. Ogden does not receive this advice in any kindly spirit; in fact, he grows wilder and drinks deeper and when the doctor calls the second time and speaks to him, he dashes the decanter to the floor, deserts his house in a furious heat, and in a wild, insane way, goes far away on a hunting trip, and leads a hermit's life in a mountain cabin.

In addition to firearms, he has a large supply of "fire-water"; so that what might have been a cure, sticks like a curse. One day, while hunting, he falls upon his gun, and the accidental discharge of the piece strikes him in the head and leaves him severely wounded and unconscious. Two farmers find him, take him to the house, summon medical assistance and eventually he is nursed back to life, the daughter of the family, Esther, being most assiduous in her attention, his recovery is shown as the scene dims.

Time passes quickly. Ogden has been restored to physical health, thanks to the splendid nursing and the alienation of the poison that sapped his strength, but his mind is entirely blank regarding the past. In the meantime, his wife in the big city house finds that he has not only lived up to his income, but was overliving it, and is seriously involved in debt. She has every reason to believe that he has basely deserted her, and starts out bravely to make her own living. At the suggestion of good old Dr. Grant, she enters a training school, studies nursing and eventually enters the hospital as a nurse where he is chief surgeon. There she meets Harold Scott, Dr. Grant's assistant, and friendship ripens into love. Several years have passed; Anna thoroughly believes that Ogden has deserted her, and she is granted a divorce.

In the interim, the one-time active city man of affairs and business, works out of doors on Caleb Jackson's farm, happy and thoroughly contented. His whole nature has changed, and in his simple, kindly manner, he woos and wins Esther Jackson. When he approaches her father regarding the marriage, the latter hesitates because he has no definate knowledge of Ogden's past. The fact is he is deficient, and the country practitioner who had his case in hand advises his friend to consult a city specialist. As a result of this, they take Ogden to a hospital—strangely enough that is conducted by Dr. Grant. He at once recognizes his patient; but at once decides it is best for all concerned not to reveal the knowledge of his identity. The doctor realizes that if an operation is successfully performed, the chances are all in favor of Ogden's former nature asserting itself. He takes the unusual stand that an operation in view of these facts might prove disastrous, and sternly advises against it.

Later, Anna and Dr. Scott are married, and the old doctor sees him off on their honeymoon. On his return to the hospital, he finds a letter from Caleb, asking whether or not Ogden's injury would be a bar to his marriage with Esther, and Grant, fortified in self-consciousness that his decision was the better way, assures him there will be no danger in such a union.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN, NO. 7—The Garden of Brides (Mar. 23).—The vengeful Umballah, having delivered his three bags of silver and secured Col. Hare as his prisoner, departs for the Palace of Allah, leaving Kathlyn and Bruce tied to the tiger cart with their backs to the savage beast and facing another death, at the hands of the brutal brigands. Hardly has Umballah got away before the turbulent members of the brigand band demand of the chief their share of the silver ransom on an equality basis. The chief refuses to do their bidding, simply tossing them one bag and reserving two for himself. This precipitates a bloody riot, and in the melee the mutinous members of the band release Kathlyn and Bruce from the tiger cart, and tie their own chief to the cart. The victorious fighters then rush into their cave to divide the spoils. The leader of the mutinous band next conceives a bright idea of liberating the tiger and allowing it to tear their late leader to pieces. The chief, however, manages to deftly slip his bonds and dart away into the jungle. The brigands, in the security of their cave, pull the rope of the cage door, the tiger dashes out, pursues the chief and eventually kills him. While the victorious thieves are looking to a furtherance of their own selfish interest, Bruce and Kathlyn find two loaded rifles, and taking advantage of the brigands, bar up the entrance of the cave, leaving them prisoners, and making their own escape. They go forward to a little village where they are given shelter. Having recuperated there, Kathlyn decides that she must liberate her father, so they engage camels and retrace their trail to Allaha. At the outskirts of the city they send a message to Ramabai and Pundita, requesting assistance and disguises.

The friends of the story being reunited, lay plans in train for the liberation of Col. Hare. Ramabai has already broached to the ambitious Umbalah, the idea of marrying Col. Hare, who has been forced upon the throne, to a native girl, which would further the nefarious plans of Umballah to a desirable culmination. The imposing coronation of Col. Hare, the pitiful scene of chaining him to his own throne, and giving him the empty honors of a potentate with the humiliations of a prisoner, serve a series of sensational scenes. Umballah has fallen in with the plan for the furtherance of his ambitions and greedily consents to the suggestion of Ramabai. Native girls, heavily veiled, are then paraded before the throne, and their choice is almost forced upon Col. Hare. Kathlyn has been disguised as one of these native girls; and when she discloses her features to her father, he at once recognizes some plan is afoot for his own deliverance, and elects her as his consort. Her veil drops and Umballah, who views the ceremony from a distance, is completely in the dark as to her identity. He goes to the treasure-room of the palace, which is guarded by leopards, and secures the betrothal chain of pearls, but in his haste, he leaves the outer-gate of the treasure-room open, and the leopards escape, rushing through the palace in different directions. The formal announcement of the wedding has hardly been made, before the alarm spreads, and there is a mad scramble for safety. In the panic that ensues, Kathlyn becomes separated from her father and Ramabai, and hides in a covered cart, in the Garden of Brides. In the interim, Bruce has prepared camels for the party to take flight to the coast, but when they assemble on the outside of the wall of the Garden of Brides, the party are woefuly disconcerted on learning that Kathlyn is the only missing member of the outfit. They are fearful that the leopards may have overtaken her. (To be continued.)

IN REMEMBRANCE (Mar. 24).—Jack Sterling from up York State marries the daughter of old Squire Merton, takes her back to the big city and later becomes affluent in business, but is not as attentive to his wife as he should be. Easily won wealth seems to lead him from home rather than attach him to it. He gets into fast society; he falls madly in love with a famous dancer, and unfortunately he spends a great deal of time at her apartments. Singularly enough, the dancer's birthday and Jack's wedding anniversary occurs on the same date. Jack remembers the former, but almost forgot the latter. He purchases a valuable diamond bracelet for the dancer, in which he has engraved: "In Remembrance." It is worth a prince's ransom, but he is careless of such things and loses the bracelet in the dining room of his own home before starting out to questionable company. His wife has prepared a dainty spread in honor of the event, but he has a previous engagement, which he is forced to keep. After he has gone, the wife finds the beautiful bracelet, and looking at the inscription, naturally believes it is an anniversary gift from dear old Jack.

At the dancer's party, where Jack meets rivals, he is duly laughed at, and then scorned by the imperious beauty because he endeavors to explain how he had lost an expensive gift purchased to commemorate the dancer's birthday. He leaves the house in hot haste and in hot anger. Returning home, he has cooled off, and finds a loving and unsuspecting wife coming to greet him graceously. She has the gift upon her right arm that encircles his neck. The keen-eyed Squire, however, who happens to visit the pair, finds the card accompanying the gift, realizes the truth and confronts Jack with his evidence. The latter confines the card to the grate and decares that never, never again will he wander from his own home and true wife.

WHILE WIFEY IS AWAY (Mar. 2.).—Dodd, elated over his freedom when his wife leaves for a few days' visit with her parents, plans a party for the first evening, and invites his neighbors, Jones and Smith, to a quiet game of poker. They send their respective wives word that they are detained from returning home through the serious illness of their friend, Dodd, and that they are now watching beside him. Both Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Smith grow lonely during the evening and visit. Comparing notes, each finds that her husband is watching at the Dodd bedside. Fearing that the neighbor is very ill, they amble over together to see if they can be of any assistance. Their presence causes much consternation in the card party. Smith and Jones rush poor Dodd up stairs, forcing him into pajamas, whitten his face with powder and then hang over his bed, weeping crocodile tears when the ladies are ushered in. They are at once thrown into wild alarm and call up the doctor. The doctor arrives, and is astonished to find the reported dying man perfectly normal. Later Mrs. Dodd beaks into the house and the doctor declares the case is smallpox, quarantine is necessary, and deputizes Jones and Smith to remove Dodd to the pesthouse. The doctor is a good old sport, however, and the four, having rid themselves of embarrassing attendants, play poker until morning.

CUPID'S CAPRICE (Mar. 26).—May Rich is secretly engaged to a manly young fellow, while her father and mother are incidentally encouraging her to accept the attentions of a typical effeminate social product. She will have none of him, as he soon learns, but he hangs on, encouraged by the heads of the family. Fascinated by her Jack, and delighting in mystery and the secrecy of it all, the romantic lovers devise a post-office in the hollow of a tree in a secluded part of the rich country estate adjacent to the home of Jack, the favorite suitor. Here meetings are arranged, more love letters are placed there, and eventually the engagement ring is there concealed. Marie, May's French maid, soon discovers this love route, and when the tell-tale missives are stolen, the lovers have reason to suspect Marie and are more concerned than ever because it puts them in her power.

When a valuable necklace disappears from her boudoir the police and detectives are put upon the case. Everything seems to indicate that Marie is the woman in the case, and a trap is set to catch her as she is packing her trunk for a hasty departure. Late at night, while the detectives are holding her in her room and are putting her through "the third degree," May appears and hastily leaves the house. She is a sonnambulist—she is in her night dress asleep. She treads the well-worn love route; she passes over a dangerous foot-bridge and by some miracle gets safely across and there at the hollow tree they find her and the missing necklace, which she placed there. The letters are accounted for; the maid's suspicious actions are explained as she has a package of letters and a love route of her own. She leaves to get married, so May's secret is not revealed.

THE STORY OF CUPID (Mar. 27).—Psyche, of the ranch, is so attractive, that all the impressionables worship her. Venus is jealous and induces her son, Cupid, to anoint the coquettish Psyche with patchoulli, but in this process he awakens her, and she immediately falls in love with him, and Cupid determines to win her despite the opposition of his mother, Venus. Eventually Pluto seizes Psyche and takes her to his palace. She does not know who has kidnapped her, as Cupid does not let her see him. She invites her two sisters to visit her. They fill her mind with suspicions that Pluto is a dangerous man, and that she will never be able to leave the palace unless she kills the monster. Accordingly, Psyche steals into the room where the kidnapper is sleeping. Instead of finding Pluto, as she expected, when she lifts the cloak, she observes Cupid. She drops burning oil from the lamp upon Cupid's shoulder, wounding him. He reproves her for taking advice from her sisters, who are jealous of her because of her great beauty, and sends her home with them.

Following, comes a series of scenes in which Psyche goes to Venus and asks what she can do to win her consent to marry Cupid, and she sets her three great tasks, each seemingly impossible of accomplishment, without aid—but Cupid adroitly assists in all of them. The first is, to husk the field of corn; the second, to get fleece from a flock of sheep; and the third, a beauty-box for Venus. She accomplishes all these tasks, with the cunning aid of Cupid, so Venus relents and Psyche and Cupid are happily married.

KALEM.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S DUTY.—(Special—2 parts—Mar. 23).—Ira Service is elected district attorney upon his promise to suppress gambling. Alice's father is the head of the party which fought to keep Ira from office. The district attorney is approached by Bill Savage, Sibley's henchman. The man tries to bribe Ira to allow gambling to continue. Ira cleverly arranges to have the man overheard offering the bribe, after which he has savage placed under arrest. Terrified, Savage tells of the most important gambling house in the city. The man gives Ira a pass which will admit a number of men into the place. Ira sends his men to the gambling house which is owned by Sibley. When the raid is made, Sibley escapes by a secret door. He is seen by the detectives, however. They report to the district attorney. Amazed at the discovery, Ira sets out for the man's home with a detective.

Sibley is making preparations to flee when Ira and the detective enter. Although it costs him his sweetheart, the district attorney orders her father arrested. Later, due to Ira's efforts, Sibley is sentenced to prison. Sibley's conviction causes every gambling house to close. Sick at heart over losing Alice, Ira resigns from office. As a private citizen, he sets about to secure the man's release from jail, believing that the disgrace of conviction has taught the man a powerful lesson. Ira secures a pardon for Sibley from the governor. Sibley's bitterness towards the man who brought about his

Invented by an Operator for Operators

The Marco Eye Protector

PATENTS PENDING

NOT MADE OF GLASS

AFTER three years of experimenting to devise an eye protector suited to moving picture operators' uses, we announce the invention of the Marco Eye Protector. The Marco Eye Protector is "all metal," and protects the eyes from the intense rays of the arc lamp "without the necessity of covering them," thereby affording perfect ventilation.

"A Marco Protector is Life Insurance to the Eyes"

Four reasons why every operator should wear a Marco Eye Protector:

1. The Marco Eye Protector protects the eyes from all the harmful light in the operating room, and absolutely removes the strain that they now have to contend with.

2. By being made of "All Metal" there is no fear of breaking. The Protector is made of the highest grade of material and by expert workmen.

3. The Marco Eye Protector is the only eye Protector ever invented that protects the eyes without the necessity of covering them.

4. Our Guarantee. We guarantee every Protector and will replace absolutely free, any Protector that shows inferior workmanship or material, within one year from date of purchase.

We will send the Protector and guarantee to any address in the United States and Canada postpaid upon receipt of $2.00, in currency, draft or money order.

MARKS BROTHERS

3005 N. Washtenaw Avenue CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Managers will please call operators' attention to this advertisement downfall vanishes when he learns that his freedom is due to Ira's efforts. When Alice returns home that evening, she finds her father seated in his old chair. She runs to him with a glad cry. Ira enters. Sibley tells his daughter of Ira's nobility. Alice, turning, sees her sweetheart standing in the doorway. Filled with love and gratitude, Alice responds to the entreaty in his eyes.

THE REFRIGERATOR CAR'S CAPTIVE (Special—2 parts—Mar. 25).—Crane and Buckley are rivals in love as well as in business. Buckley meets his first set-back when Crane refuses to sell him his orange ranch. The second comes when Delia, whom both love, promises to marry Crane. Furious, Buckley sows the seeds of dissension among Crane's men. Cranwood and Hillman, in Crane's employ, are Buckley's spies. These men help create trouble. Through the dastardly work of Buckley and his henchmen, four cars of fruit consigned to the East are side-tracked and ruined. Crane, however, presses a claim against the railroad and his rival's attempt to make him lose money fails. Cranwood and Hillman later succeed in getting Crane's men to go out on strike. Delia comes to her sweetheart's rescue by getting the women in the village to take the place of the strikers.

To turn Delia against Crane, Buckley gets an adventuress to pose as Crane's wife. Delia is horrified when the woman approaches and declares that Crane is her husband. Tony, a half-witted boy, comes to his employer's rescue when he announces that he had overheard Buckley employ the woman. Desperate, Buckley plans to cause Crane's death. At his orders, Cranwood and Hillman entrap Crane in a refrigerator car, which is then cut from the tain. The car runs away and dashes down the hillside. Tony witnesses the deed and goes for help.

Delia learns of her lover's peril. Summoning the sheriff, she goes in pursuit of the runaway, in an automobile. The runaway approaches a bridge, the tracks of which have been torn up by Buckley and his tools. A passenger train approaches from the opposite direction. Delia and the sheriff flag the train while Tony, making a flying leap, lands on the runaway car and applies the hand-brake. Crane is rescued just as he is about to become unconscious from the cold. Buckley, Cranwood and Hillman, lurking in the vicinity, are captured and placed under arrest.

AND THE VILLAIN STILL PURSUED HER. (Feb. 27).—John compels Geraldine to return a gown she has just purchased, declaring that he cannot afford to pay for it. Geraldine meets Reggie, a former suitor, who offers to loan her the money to pay for the dress. To quiet her husband's suspicions, Geraldine forges a note purporting to come from her Aunt Clara, and encloses the money given to her by Reggie. All goes well, until Aunt Clara unexpectedly arrives on a visit. To get out of the dilemma, Geraldine confesses to her soft-hearted Aunt. After administering a lecture, Aunt Clara gives Geraldine the price of the gown and orders her to return Reggie his money.

Geraldine attempts to hand the money to Reggie during a dinner party given by her husband. Reggie, however, tries to make love to her. Furious, the girl rips the dress off and with the idea of ending her obligation to him, throws it into his face.

John and his guests enter, attracted by the noise. Geraldine makes a clean breast of her folly. Turning upon Reggie, the guests take him to the edge of the town, strip him of his clothes and compel the man to don the dress that has caused the trouble. Clad in Geraldine's gown, Reggie slinks home.

PHOSPHATE MINING (Feb. 27).—Phosphate, the most valuable of all fertilizers, is made from the fossil remains of prehistoric animals. Vast deposits of these remains are to be found along the Eastern coast of the United States, and particularly in Florida. This feature gives a series of highly interesting views showing the successive stages in mining and preparing the phosphate for use. The raw material is dredged and pulled into the mills, where it is crushed, ground and otherwise treated. A comparison is shown between vegetables that have been planted in unfertilized ground and in ground treated with phosphate. The fertilized vegetables grow to several times the size of the vegetables that are not fertilized.

A LEAP FOR LIFE (Mar. 28).—Their demands for more pay and shorter hours having been bluntly turned down by Dell, the firemen declare a strike. The president promptly hires strike-breakers. Blanche, Dell's daughter, boards one of the crack trains for a trip to a distant city. Five minutes after the flyer pulls out, a freight train lumbers in. In leaning out of the cab, the engineer of the freight is struck by the arm of a water tower and seriously injured. In falling, the man pulls the throttle wide open. The freight dashes after the train on which Helen is one of the passengers. The fireman on the freight, a strike-breaker, unable to stop the runaway, leaps off in terror. A striker cuts the telegraph wires. The operator at a country station discovers that the passenger train is threatened with destruction by the runaway freight. Unable to get in communication with the station ahead because of the severed wires, the man phones to headquarters. Dell learns of his daughter's peril.

Wild with anxiety, the president leaps aboard a locomotive. By dashing along a disused and dangerous part of the road, he makes a short cut which brings him to a bridge at Millville, under which the runaway must pass. Climbing to the top of the structure, Dell crouches for a leap. The flyer passes under the bridge. The runaway is a mile behind. The freight rattles under the bridge at furious speed. Facing a terrible fate, Dell leaps for one of the flat cars. He escapes death by a miracle. Although badly bruised, the man crawls to the cab of the locomotive, just as it is almost atop of the flyer. With a desperate jerk, Dell closes the throttle.

The conductor of the passenger train discovers the freight behind and brings the passenger to a stop. Blanche, alighting to learn the cause of the delay, is seized by her father who is wild with joy because of her narrow escape. Impressed with the danger of employing green men in place of the strikers, Dell returns to the city. Sending for the striker's delegation, he announces that he has decided to accede to their demands.

VITAGRAPH.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK (Mar. 23).—On a rainy Sunday afternoon, Dick Coles, a young idler, finds himself bored and in want of excitement. He goes to a fashionable restaurant, where he meets McFall, who is apparently on the same quest. They strike up an acquaintance, and McFall soon has three other lonesome ones in the party. The conversation touches the lack of romance in great cities. Coles chances to see a weeping female on the other side of the room. Excusing himself to the others, he goes over to her, makes her acquaintance and proffers his sympathy. She at first refuses his kindly assistance, but calls him over again and suggests that he and his friends help her by accompanying her in a taxi for a short distance. McFall is the only one who is apparently unwilling, but finally they laugh him into coming too.

When they get out of the taxi and wait for her

"Hallberg

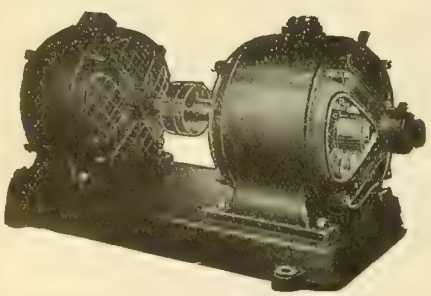
TALK No. 19

A Stitch in Time Saves Nine

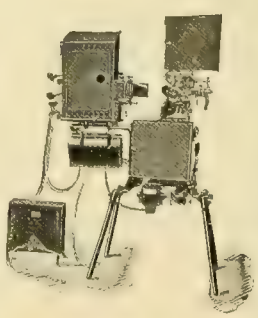
During the recent blizzard and snow storm many electric lighting plants were put out of business. The blizzard destroyed the feed wires, broke the poles and in other ways damaged the electric lighting systems, causing hundreds of exhibitors to be put out of business for several days. Those who had the "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER, illustrated below, helped themselves by putting a belt on the pulley in the center of the Economizer on to the fly-wheel of a gasoline engine, thereby securing an independent electrical supply for the moving picture lamp during this storm. You, Mr. Exhibitor, want to take this advantage into account when you buy an A. C. to D. C. equipment. When you have a Mercury Arc Rectifier, you are out of business when the current fails. With the ordinary motor generator, where the motor and generator are built close together, or with the rotary converter, you are also out of business if the electric current fails, as you could not drive these with a gasoline engine or other emergency power. With the "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER, or the "HALLBERG" D. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER for that matter, you have your own isolated plant, if you will only install an emergency gasoline engine with a belt which can be put on and started in two minutes' time. This is an insurance worth hundreds of dollars to you in time of need. I know some exhibitors who lost receipts amounting to nearly $1,000 during the recent storm in this part of the country. INSURE YOUR BUSINESS AGAINST THIS LOSS BY INSTALLING THE "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER. Then, at any time in the future, you can put in a gasoline or kerosene engine to drive this outfit in case of emergency, which will save you hundreds of dollars when your current supply fails. Write about it today.

Do you Want Business? Book the

HelenGardner Productions



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.



I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

Itala Film

Superb Three Part Drama

Exquisite Scenes And Photography

Lost in Darkness

A false husband loses his sight by an explosion. The other woman robs and deserts him; but his wife is loyal and the blind man regains his sight and happiness.

A sharp warning in dramatic form.

State Rights Selling.
Wire or Write.

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA

Candler Building HARRY R. RAVER, Director General New York City

to come back from some point around the corner, they discover that they have been robbed. All vow vengeance. Coles determines to land the offender. At police headquarters she is identified from Coles' description and her game is recognized as an old one. Cole is informed that her next stop is likely to be Philadelphia. By chance he connects McFall with the woman, and though nearly thrown off the track for a time, he resorts to disguise and lands both the woman and McFall, her accomplice.

HER HUSBAND (Special—2 parts—Mar. 24).—Tom Harcourt, a cadet at a military school, and Dora Allen, attending a nearby boarding school, are in love. In order to get away together for an evening, Tom forges a letter to her teacher, supposedly written by Dora's father. They overstay their time and she is locked out of the Seminary. Afraid her father will be notified and the forgery discovered, they get married and confront her father, who orders Tom from the house. Tom bids Dora choose between him and her father. She makes her choice, leaving with her husband. Later, their finances low, Tom pretends he is looking for work, but instead, is spending his time in dissipation. He finally takes Dora's necklace, sells it and raises the check from fifteen to fifteen hundred dollars. The forgery is discovered, and Tom is sentenced to prison. Dora, ashamed of her choice and realizing her husband's worthlessness, writes her father the consequences of her folly, but she will take care of herself, and make the best of it.

Dora, under the name of Miss Smith, becomes private secretary to John Darrell. He falls in love with her; she reciprocates his love, but refuses to consider his proposal of marriage; he is at a loss to understand her. Tom is freed before his time for good behavior and goes back to the old life. He goes to Darrell's office and finds Dora, who is closing the safe before leaving the office. Tom asks her for money, and being told she has none, he robs the safe and escapes. When the robbery is discovered, Dora keeps silent; when questioned by Darrell. She tells him there was no one in the office after he left. The watchman, having seen Dora receive Tom, denies her statement and Darrell cannot believe her emphatic denial, although he is convinced of her innocence. Allen, having received his daughter's letter, employs detectives to find her; they locate Tom and follow him in order to trace Dora. Having squandered the stolen money, Tom returns to Dora for more. Darrell, having engaged policemen, is in his office with them when Tom enters. Tom makes a dash for liberty, runs to the elevator door, opens it and plunges down the shaft to his death. Then follows a reunion of Dora and her father. The barrier lifted, Dora unhesitatingly declares her love for Darrell.

THE HALL ROOM RIVALS (Mar. 25).—Two typical sea captains apply for board at the home of the widow Tyrrel, and both soon become smitten with her charms. One of the old salts, Captain Greene, is assigned to the rear hall room, the other, Captain White, to the front hall room. The widow's room is between the two. They become intensely jealous of each other and each thinks the other the favored suitor. Both are utterly unaware of the presence of the widow's accepted suitor, Captain Smith, who calls regularly at her home. Captain White abruptly terminates a conversation between the widow and Captain Greene by dropping a few clods of earth from his window on Captain Greene's head. The widow one day receives Captain Smith in her own room and that gentleman is regaling himself with a good cigar when the other two Captains smell the smoke. Each thinks the other is enjoying the widow's company. Going out in the hall at different times, listening and returning to their rooms, they catch glimpses of each other and are more jealous than ever.

After more incidents of a like nature and much manoeuvering, Captain White thinks he hears his rival in the widow's room and looks through the keyhole. He can only make out that it is a man and, of course, decides it must be Captain Greene. On going back to his room, he decides to have it out with him, and behind his door, waits to spring upon him when he comes from the widow's room. Captain White also imagines he hears something and duplicates Captain Greene's actions. Captain Smith, in the widow's room, proposes marriage and she accepts him. He kisses her goodnight and steps out of the center door. As he does so, the two rivals rush forth, stop short and nearly collapse as the widow introduces her future husband. After Captain Smith has gone, the two former rivals look sheepishly at each other and retire to their respective rooms, meditatively pondering over the queer uncertainties of women.

CHANLER RAO, CRIMINAL EXPERT (Mar. 26).—Suffering from an obstruction in his throat, Chanler Rao, an Oriental hypnotist and magician, calls, with his son, on Dr. Warren Browne. For the doctor's entertainment, Rao produced a full-grown plant from an apparently empty flower-pot. The doctor is interested, but skeptical. He then performs a small operation on the magician's throat and removes the obstruction. He refuses payment and Rao thanks him profusely. The doctor discovers the plant they left behind is artificial. He laughs and decides Rao is a clever fakir.

Mrs. Thornton, Dr. Browne's sister, is showing her week-end guests a magnificent cluster ring, when she is called outside suddenly and in her haste, drops the ring which mysteriously disappears. Mrs. Thornton telegraphs for Dr. Warren. As the doctor is leaving, Rao arrives for his throat treatment. His pad exhausted, the doctor hastily writes Rao's prescription on the back of his sister's telegram. The magician discovers Mrs. Thornton's message and answers it, saying he will recover the ring. Mrs. Thornton, puzzled to know how Rao learned of the affair, has faith in the magician, but the doctor thinks of the plant trick and, smiling cynically, sends for Chanler Rao. As soon as Rao arrives he quietly tells the doctor to have a policeman there at 6 o'clock sharp. After a preliminary exhibition, Rao, gazing into his crystal, impressively announces, "In this hall, it points straight over there and an officer is on his way here!" Everyone is intensely interested, and when the policeman rings the bell, all are startled. Chanler then places a small capsule in the mouth of each servant, collects them again and drops them in a crucible. When the fifth is dropped, there is an explosion. Chanler points accusingly at the butler, saying, "That is the guilty one!" The butler confesses and Mrs. Thornton recovers her ring. Chanler has paid his debt of gratitude. Chanler later tells the doctor, "The capsuls absorb moisture. Fear parches the tongue of the guilty one and the capsule stays dry in his mouth, exploding in the crucible mixture." He also tells how he learned of the theft and leaves the doctor saying to himself, "Well, what do you think of that?"

MILLIONS FOR DEFENCE (Mar. 27).—Young, pretty and flirtatious, "Billie" is spoiled by too much attention. She refuses Arthur when he proposes, and later boasts to her girl friends she can make any man propose. Arthur's chum, Bob Clinton, is a millionaire, and, according to a newspaper article, a confirmed bachelor. The girls see this, and "Billie" immediately determines to make Bob propose. She sends Bob her picture and a declaration of war, reading, "I have decided to marry you!" Angry and worried, he replies, "Millions for defence, but not one cent for tribute." He then orders the butler, who is smitten with her picture, not to admit "Billie," should she call.

"Billie" goes to see Bob and talking sweetly to the butler, walks right by him into Bob's presence. He is greatly surprised and becomes rather frightened. Rushing outside, he calls up a detective agency and the manager sends a score or more plain clothes men for his protection. "Billie" says, "Shame, calling detectives!" and goes out, promising to call again. On her next visit she is unable to get in the house. She intercepts a telegram to Bob from his mother, gets an idea, and again visits Bob, disguised as his mother. She gets in all right and Bob is horrified when he discovers the deception. He calls up Arthur, requesting him to come at once, to take "Billie" away and marry her. Arthur arrives, adopts a butler's disguise and on "Billie's" next call, stops her and tries to kiss her. She slaps his face and runs out, but comes back later. After a chase, Bob has just succeeded in locking her in a side room, when his mother drops in. After many exciting and anxious moments, Bob decides to have it over with, and going into the room, proposes to "Billie," who turns him down. As they come out, "Billie's" father, who has learned of the incident, enters. In order to explain the situation, "Billie" and Bob pretend to be engaged. Their parents are surprised, but offer congratulations and depart. Finding they really love each other, Bob, after a genuine proposal of marriage, tenderly clasps her in his arms.

NEVER AGAIN (Special—2 parts—Mar. 28).—At the French Ball, Rufus Fletcher, a grouchy old hypocrite, meets Marie Dupree, and lets himself loose. He has no use for his son-in-law, Howard, and dislikes his daughter's suitors. Fletcher is called to Philadelphia, and his wife and daughters take the opportunity, in his absence, to call upon the married daughter, who is forbidden the house. Marie Dupree goes to Fletcher's home, to take the position as Mrs. Fletcher's maid, in place of Dora, with whom Marie is acquainted and who has been given notice by Fletcher. Fletcher misses his train and comes back home. Julian has a date that evening to take Dora and Marie to a masquerade, and promises to call at Fletcher's for them. Fletcher, on returning home, disgusted, is recognized by Marie, as her "Howard Hunt," the name he has given her.

Dora sees her chance to get even with Fletcher. Julian comes in with the costumes; finds "Howard Hunt" there, raises the devil and swears vengeance as he leaves. Fletcher is forced to consent to take the girls to the masquerade. Dora sends a note to the boys to come to the house. They lose no time in getting there. They learn of Fletcher's escapade, but promise to keep Rufus's secret if he will accept them as his sons-in-law. O'Flynn, the policeman, has been watching Julian's impatient antics across the street, as he watches for his rival, whom he is anxious to trounce. O'Flynn is convinced he is a "stool-pidgeon," and the boys are his pals. He arrests the three of them for attempted burglary. Mrs. Fletcher and the daughters

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

ACME FEATURES
Mr. Exhibitor: If you are not doing capacity business you are not satisfied, what you need is something to "Pull them in." Our unequaled features will double your receipts. Call or write at once for list and prices.
ACME FEATURE FILM CO. 37 S. Wabash Ave. CHICAGO
GEO. A. HUTCHINSON, Prop.

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS
are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world. We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment. Distributors for Eastman Raw Film. Send for Catalogues.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO.
Special Features and Regular Service
MACHINES--FILMS--SUPPLIES
50 Features and 100 Single Reels For Sale
WE ARE BOOKING HIGH CLASS PRODUCTIONS
Office: 133 N. Gay St. Baltimore, Md.

OUR CATALOGUE OF
Brush Electric Lighting Sets
contains more useful information about electric lighting in general than any other book ever issued. Write for it today.
THE CHAS. E. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES
Prompt delivery.
Write for illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1476.
T. D. HUME & CO.
Suite 513-522, 608 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St., bet. Lake and Randolph, Chicago, Ill.

NO Motion Picture is the acme of perfection, or has the elimination of haze, and the softness so delightful to the eye which makes projection an Art but those that are shown upon a "Mirror Screen."
Our New Prismized, Snow-White Surface has the World beaten. We will give $500.00 to anyone who can produce a surface equal to it.
Write for our new catalogue.
MIRROR SCREEN CO.
F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND.

No Favorites Like the
Helen Gardner Productions

THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER

Adapted to Motion Pictures from "The Premiere American Drama" by Bronson Howard

IN FIVE PARTS

Comedy, Drama, Sympathy and Human Emotion, all blended into one beautiful story.

A Stupendous Production. A Wonderful Cast. Staged by Wm. F. Haddock, Director of "Paid in Full."

Beautiful original one, three and six sheet lithographs. Photos, Lobby Displays and other advertising matter.

State right buyers write or wire territory desired.

Life Photo Film Corporation

102-104 West 101st Street New York City

arrive, but Dora saves the situation. The boys are released by O'Flynn after explanations, and arrive at the Fletcher home, to meet their respective sweethearts. Mr. Fletcher has another narrow escape when the costumes are found, but manages to get out of it by the skin of his teeth. He had his dance, paid the fiddler, and solemnly vows, "Never Again!"

EDISON.

DINKLESPIEL'S BABY (Mar. 23).—The one tender spot Mr. Dinklespiel had in his heart was for children. He did not care a bit for dogs, and was rather unpleasant when his wife insisted that her pet, "Raus," should be taken into the bosom of the family. Mr. Dinklespiel did not object particularly to dogs in their place, but it seemed to him that it was going a little too far when the dog was encouraged to sit at meals with them. One day, after a particularly distressing recontre with the dog, Mr. Dinklespiel walked out and sat in the park. A small boy who had been left in charge of a baby by the nurse was in turn anxious to be relieved of his responsibility that he might play ball. Accordingly, he asked Mr. Dinklespiel to "mind" the baby. Mr. Dinklespiel good-naturedly complied.

After some time, the baby began to cry. Mr. Dinklespiel cleverly suspecting hunger, took the child in his arms and went in search of milk. During his absence, a poor mother, at her wits' ends to discover means to support herself and her child, came upon the empty go-cart, and left her baby in it, with a note pinned to its clothes. Mr. Dinklespiel returning was met by an indignant maid who snatched her charge away from him and gave him the poor woman's child. Dinklespiel read the note, and was touched. His kindly heart jumped at the prospect of having a child in the house. Unfortunately, he knew that there would be considerable opposition from his good wife, so he concocted a plan.

Buying a clothes basket, he placed the child in it and left it on his own doorstep. Mrs. Dinklespiel found it, read the note, and in her turn was touched. When Mr. Dinklespiel entered the house and sternly demanded what it all meant, Mrs. Dinklespiel begged him, with tears in her eyes, to allow her to keep the child. After a few moments of angry refusal, Mr. Dinklespiel granted her request. Two years later we are shown a picture of the baby at the breakfast table, and "Raus" out in a doghouse in the yard.

THE BORROWED FINERY (Mar. 24).—The only thing in the world old Grouchy, the stage-door keeper at the Zephyr Theater cared about was his little granddaughter, Dolly. Dolly loved the theater. The music, the bright lights, and, above all, the beautiful dresses worn by the actresses, filled her with delight. One day Dolly heard Paul, a boy actor, who played the part of a little girl, complaining bitterly upon the distastefulness of his task. His masculine sense of superiority was offended by the necessity of wearing girl's clothes. Dolly heard him and was astonished. It seemed absolutely incredible to her that anybody should object to the inestimable privilege of wearing the beautiful dresses assigned to Paul's part.

That evening the leading lady was late for the second act. Making up hastily, she forgot to remove her jewels, until she was on her way to the stage. Since there was no time to take them back to her dressing room, she put them in the first object that presented itself—the coat of Paul's costume, which was hanging on the wall of another room. That night when she had finished, the actress went home, completely forgetting all about the jewels.

That same evening Dolly stole into Paul's dressing room and abstracted his clothes. She ingenuously argued that since he did not want them, there could be no possible harm in her taking them. The next afternoon she arrayed herself in the clothes and set out for a walk. Shortly after she had left, the actress remembered her jewels. When she went to look for them, and discovered that the coat was missing, she insisted on an immediate clearing up of the mystery. When Dolly came back from her walk she was just in time to extricate her grandfather from the embarrassing position, the finding of some of the clothes in the closet where Dolly had hidden them, had placed him.

A NIGHT OUT (Mar. 25).—It was a curious fact that Mr. Jessup and Mr. Vincent, buying overcoats on the same day, should each have the rather bad taste to buy coats of exactly the same flamboyant pattern. After they had bought the coats, each man went on an errand for his wife. Mr. Jessup took a pink slipper, his wife wished to have repaired, and Mr. Vincent burdened himself with a baby's nursing bottle, which had to be changed. As it happened, the two men took lunch in the same restaurant. They checked their coats at the door.

While Jessup and Vincent were in the restaurant a person lighted a cigarette and threw the still burning match on the floor. A lively little blaze ensued, and a robust little panic among the guests folowed. Jessup and Vincent fought their way to the door, and grabbed coats each fondly imagined was his own. In the street they came upon the joker who threw the match. A very fair general mixup resulted immediately. As a result, Jessup and Vincent were both hauled off to jail and confined in separate cells.

The next morning both men were released and allowed to return to their weeping wives. Each wife, naturally enough, wanted to know where her husband had been. Each husband, naturally enough, did not care to say he had spent the night in jail. When Mrs. Vincent discovered a woman's pink slipper in her husband's pocket her worst fears were realized. Even more terrible suspicions were aroused in Mrs. Jessup when she found the nursing bottle. The men were rescued from their awkward fix by the sudden discovery that the coats did not fit. A chance meeting led to a general explanation and the husbands were led home by their rejoicing wives with no ill effects from their adventure apart from two class A colds.

THE BRASS BOWL (Special—2 parts—Mar. 27).—When "Mad" Maitland coming home unexpectedly to his bachelor apartment after a long absence, met a girl coming out of the front door of the building he was somewhat surprised. He was more surprised when he saw the impression of a woman's hand in the dust of his library table. To preserve the print for future reference, he inverted a brass bowl upon it, and gave strict instructions to his valet that the bowl should not be touched on any consideration. That evening Maitland dined at his club with his attorney. During their discussion of Maitland's suit against a man named Graeme, the attorney strongly advised the young man to bring his jewels from his country house into the city. The impulsive Maitland decided to bring them in that very evening.

On his way to his country place, Maitland came upon a stalled automobile containing the girl he had seen on his apartment house steps. He helped her start the machine, and discovered that she thought he was Handsome Dan Anisty, a notorious cracksman. When he arrived at his house, he found the girl engaged in opening his safe. Acting in the assumed role of Anisty, he offered to go halves with the girl. While they were talking, the real Anisty arrived. Maitland overpowered him and fled with the girl, who insisted that he should keep the booty. On the strength of his remarkable resemblance to Maitland, Anisty escaped from the former's servants, came to the city, knocked Maitland unconscious, and dressed in Maitland's clothes, kept his luncheon engagement with the girl. Fearing arrest, he gave the girl the jewels which he had taken from the unconscious Maitland. The girl, suspecting the truth, took the jewels back to Maitland's apartment instead of keeping an appointment with Anisty.

Maitland called from his club by a cry across the telephone wire, came home in time to save the girl from the enraged Anisty. He allowed them both to escape, and owing to his resemblance of Anisty, was nearly arrested by the police. The story concludes with a sensational fight in an office building wherein Anisty is killed. Maitland discovers that the girl, instead of being an ordinary thief, is Sylvia Graeme, daughter of the man he is suing. When he learns that all she wanted has been a certain paper, Maitland burns the paper and begins the one real romance of his life.

PUTTING ONE OVER (Fourth of the Dolly of the Dailies—Mar. 28).—When Miss Mindel, president of the Reform League, received a pathetic letter from certain tenants of the Union Realty Company, complaining of unsanitary living conditions and unjust rents, she wrote a sharp letter to the president of the Realty Company, threatening action in the courts unless improvements were made. James Boliver, the president, had put his company into its position of prominence, largely through his entirely unscrupulous method of dealing with any type of opposition to his plans. Briefly summing up the probable results of any action on the part of the Reform League, he decided that it must be prevented at any cost, so he decided to bribe Miss Mindel.

Miss Mindel did not understand the carefully couched letter she received from Boliver, asking her to come and see him. She felt that she was getting into deep water, and decided to appeal to the newspapers, before taking any action. At the office of "The Comet," where she went first, Miss Mindel met Dolly Desmond, and with characteristic impulsiveness, told her the whole story. Dolly immediately hit on a plan, which she confided to Miss Mindel. That good lady, after some thought, consented to it. She was personally unknown to Boliver, and there seemed no reason why the plan should not succeed. In accordance with it, Dolly presented herself at the Union Realty Company's office as Miss Mindel. Mr. Bolliver was very nice to her, indeed, and, finding her even more compliant than he had hoped, gave her a check for five thousand dollars, and allowed her to write him a receipt on the typewriter.

Dolly made a carbon copy of the receipt, thanked Mr. Boliver, and turned to go. At the door she met Mr. Browngrass, her late employer, who hap-

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

50 features for sale with paper
10 second-hand machines
Lot commercial reels
ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

FIRE & LIABILITY INSURANCE
HENRY GERSTLE'S SON
Specialists and Experts
45 BROADWAY, N. Y. Phone, Rector 1215 Established 186
FOR THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

FILM TITLES DEVELOPING and PRINTING
Prices right; work guaranteed.
Send us your negative—Give us a trial.
Can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
5 South Wabash Avenue Chicago,

A G-E Rectifier
will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.
General Electric Company
General Office Schenectady, N. Y.
4498

FILMS MADE TO ORDER
DEVELOPING, PRINTING, PERFORATING, TINTING
BY MY NEW FILM FINISHING PROCESS.
Film Titles, Plastic and Regular Lantern Slides.
38 PATENTS. 30 YEARS EXPERIENCE.
Don't Entrust Your Film Work to Amateurs Using Junk Cameras
I EXCLUSIVELY USE AND SELL THE Junior Professional Camera
GREATEST CAMERA ON EARTH
NEGATIVES REALLY BEAUTIFUL
Exclusively used by the U. S. GOVERNMENT, Museums, Institutions, WAR DEPT., PATHÉ FRERES, Travellers and small Mfgrs. Developing Outfits, Printers, Polishers, Counters.
RAW FILM, ALL SUPPLY. Orig'nal CARL ZEISS TESSAR LENSES. All Repairs.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUES Kinema Laboratories Eberhard Schneider 219 SECOND AVE. New York

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT
DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS
EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED
COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY
WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN. THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF GOOD PROFITS WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG
Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P. 537 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

CROWDS FLOCK WHERE
Helen Gardner Productions
ARE SHOWN

Our Policy—Safe and Sure

Releasing Weekly
Features that are Features

Distributing

The Exclusive Supply Corporation Program

Blache—Solax—F.R.A.—Gaumont—Itala—Ramo—Great Northern

Supplying the Best Theatres on the Pacific Coast

San Francisco
Los Angeles
Portland
Seattle

THE WORLD'S GREATEST
GOLGATE FEATURE SERVICE
FEATURE PRODUCTIONS.

Denver
Salt Lake
Phoenix

OFFICES CONTEMPLATED IN EVERY LARGE CITY IN THE UNION

pened to be one of the directors of the company. Since Browngrass recognized her immediately, there was nothing left for Dolly but flight via the fire-escape. The enraged directors pursued her, but without result. She got her story in in time to go to press, and we leave Dolly glancing affectionately at the staring headlines of her "scoop."

GEORGE KLEINE.

THE PRICE OF SILENCE (Celio—Special—2 parts—Mar. 31).—Richard Gillett, a young medical student, has won the love of pretty Mollie Dupont, daughter of a wealthy country gentleman and heiress to a considerable fortune. Mr. Dupont has every respect for the clean-cut young man, and heartily approves the match, so the course of true love runs smoothly along until the appearance of Lathrop upon the scene.

Lathrop, a gentleman crook of the "Raffles" type, is also a keen sportsman, and one day, while fox-hunting near the Dupont estate, is thrown from his horse and painfully injured. He is carried to the home of Mollie and her father, and is nursed back to health and strength by the girl herself. Dreaming of the possibility of a rich marriage, he does not let this opportunity escape. He exerts himself to charm the girl and succeeds in making a profound impression upon her. Richard soon notices the gradual change in his sweetheart's attitude toward him and her growing tenderness for the handsome stranger. Finally he finds himself entirely supplanted, and in despair leaves for a distant city to seek forgetfulness in the enthusiastic pursuit of his medical studies.

Five years pass. Richard is now a highly successful practising physician and Mollie is married to Lathrop, knowing nothing of his shady past. Naturally, his former accomplices try to draw the greatest profit possible from the good fortune of their old friend, and when at last the man refuses longer to pay "the price of silence," rebelling at being blackmailed by his former pals, there is an encounter in which he is seriously injured. It is impossible to conceal the truth from Mollie any longer. Overcome with grief, she takes refuge with her father, who buys up all existing proofs of her husband's former rascality, and then forces the man to give his daughter a divorce.

Two years later we find Mollie at the bedside of her sick child. A doctor is sent for, and it is Richard who answers the call. The young doctor succeeds in restoring health to the child and wins first the gratitude of the mother and, after the violent death of the adventurous Lathrop, the love of the sweetheart of his boyhood days.

ESSANAY.

THE LOVE ROUTE VIA PITTMAN (Mar. 24).—Hazel and Glenn are both studying "Pittman" at business college and incidently fall in love with each other. After graduation, Glenn secures a position, but Hazel fails to find anything to do. She is forced to leave her boarding house, being short of funds. Glenn finally secures a position for Hazel and is greatly disappointed a few days later to find her employer making love to her. Glenn becomes disgusted and instead of taking Hazel to the theater that evening, he presents his bookkeeper with the tickets. Hazel enters Glenn's office just as the bookkeeper is embracing the latter. Many complications arise which make this comedy very interesting.

BRIDGET BRIDGES IT (Mar. 25).—Mrs. Henry Van Zandt decides to give a bridge party and invites her dear friend, Mrs. Studyvesant. At the same time Mrs. Van Zandt writes a letter to Bridget O'Grady, telling her to come and do the washing. In mailing the letters, the invitation is placed in the washwoman's envelope and the note to the washwoman in Mrs. Studyvesant's envelope. Bridget is delighted with the invitation, while Mrs. Studyvesant becomes indignant. Mrs. Van Zandt calls Mrs. Studyvesant up on the 'phone and apologizes to her for the mistake. Bridget goes to the party—the hostess humors her. What is their surprise when Bridget captures the prize—an electric automobile. Many amusing situations take place in Bridget's handling the new vehicle, which will keep an audience convulsed with laughter.

THE ATONEMENT (Mar. 26).—After spending several months in prison on account of stealing, Jim Marvin is freed and immediately leaves for the West. Years later we see him the sheriff in a small town, married and the proud father of a charming young daughter. One evening a traveler comes to town—the high altitude is too much for him and he is taken sick. He entrusts his money to the sheriff, who puts it away in a dresser drawer. When the traveler calls for the money it has mysteriously disappeared. The sheriff is stripped of his star and accused of stealing. Maizie, the sheriff's daughter, saves her father from a prison cell by admitting that she had taken the money—a victim of heritage.

BRONCHO BILLY'S TRUE LOVE (Mar. 28).—Broncho Billy is in love with Marguerite Clayton, who is devotedly fond of him. Broncho asks her to go to a dance with him, but when he meets Elsa Larimer, who is on a visit from the East, he forgets his promise to Marguerite and takes Elsa to the dance. Marguerite's heart is broken, and Elsa finding her weeping, discovers that she is the cause of Marguerite's sorrow. She decides to sacrifice her happiness for the little girl of the West, so when Broncho Billy proposes to Elsa, she shows him a ring and tells him that she is engaged to a man back East. All ends happily when Marguerite takes Broncho Billy back to her heart.

THE THREE SCRATCH CLUE (Special—2 parts—Mar. 27).—Dr. Strong, a fanatic on the subject of old and valuable books, purchases for $50,000 the only authentic copy extant of a very rare and old edition, the book filling the one vacancy in his otherwise complete set of this edition. At the same time, Gideon Lynch, a gentleman with in inborn instinct of a crook, and also a lover of the rare treasure of the art preservative, makes a clean getaway from the minions of the law, who have just captured him, his identity, however, being unknown. Later, in his handsome apartments, he reads of Dr. Strong's purchase and immediately a desire takes possession of his heart to possess this famous book, the one book needed to complete his own otherwise complete edition.

Dr. Strong's secretary, Norman Arnold, is in love with Dr. Strong's daughter, Helen. Helen, however, is a girl of peculiar ideas, and, although admiring Norman very much, tells him that she cannot become his wife until he has aroused in himself more of the man. Meanwhile, Lynch, parading in best society, meets and is immediately charmed with Helen, who, witnessing a display of real nerve on his part, takes a genuine liking for him, much to Norman's distaste.

Lynch is invited by Helen to her home, where he meets Dr. Strong. Dr. Strong at once takes a liking to him, because of his broad knowledge of rare editions and is enraptured to show him his latest purchase, the $50,000 book.

This makes matters rather easy for Lynch, giving him a complete insight into the situations existing in Strong's home. As Dr. Strong keeps his rare and valuable books, which he prizes above all things, securely locked in a wall safe of large size, the problem confronts Lynch of obtaining first a key that will fit the door of the library, and second, the combination of the safe which holds the treasures of old editions. Having entry to Strong's home as he does, the first offers few difficulties to Lynch, he obtaining a key to the library from the old man's key ring. The second, however, is a matter of more serious aspect, but which he finally solves by renting, under pretext of an ordinary boarder, a room in the building opposite Strong's home, and which faces Strong's library. Regularly each night he lays in wait, knowing that sooner or later Strong will open the safe under the strong light that always floods the library. At last, after several attempts, he secures the complete combination of the safe, reading the numbers easily through a small telescope from the opposite window.

On the night he plans for the execution of the deed, he goes to see Helen and proposes. She, really having a deep affection for Norman, cannot make up her mind to consent, and tells him he must wait.

Meanwhile Lynch returns to his apartments, and calling up Dr. Strong, tells him that he has just received a book of rare quality and invites him over. Dr. Strong goes, leaving Norman, who, as soon as Strong is well on his way, locks the library and goes to Helen.

Lynch, having invited Strong to his home, goes out, leaving a note for Strong to the effect that he was suddenly called out for a few moments and will return shortly. He then adopts a disguise and starts for Strong's home.

Norman meanwhile has again asked Helen to become his wife and she is just on the point of refusing again when a noise is heard that startles them both—the sound of a key being inserted in a lock. Knowing that her father is out and that they are the only persons in the building, she tells Norman that now is an opportunity to show his mettle. Norman leaves Helen and goes to the library, the door of which he finds open. Knowing that he left the door locked, he is sure that the intruder is at work.

He enters the room and confronts a man in a long black robe, dark mustache and a felt hat pulled down closely over his face. This person has the safe opened and holds in his hand the $50,000 book. Norman makes a spring for the intruder and there is a desperate struggle in which Norman receives a smashing blow, which knocks him to his feet. Helen meanwhile has crossed the hall and is at the door just as the thief rushes from the room. She attempts to stop him, but he easily thrusts her from him and made good his escape, just as Norman comes from the library and dashes out after him. On the street Norman sees no one

BRASS FRAMES RAILINGS OF QUALITY

You will admit a fine lobby display draws business. Our goods are the best and at prices that are right. Get our new catalogue and quotations before you place an order. We can give you a one-sheet easel-poster frame of brass, complete with glass front and compo board back No. 12.—for $7.00. No. 8, as illustrated, with compartment top for announcements, $10.00.

No. 8

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO.
1232 East 3d Street Cleveland, Ohio

FILM TITLES
6c PER FOOT
POSITIVE PRINTING
5c PER FOOT
1000 feet, 4½c ft. 5000 feet, 4c per ft.
Negatives Developed Free
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th Street
NEW YORK CITY

Our Supreme Program Includes
FOR ILLINOIS AND WISCONSIN
ALL HELEN GARDNER RELEASES
ALL FLORENCE TURNER RELEASES
ALL KENNEDY'S FEATURES, INC.
ALL CRITERION FEATURES
A Feature Every Day or Any Day
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.
POWER'S BLDG. CHICAGO

COMPENSARC
That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our
Booklet 15018
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
733

Originality the Keynote—the
Helen Gardner Productions

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

MR. EXHIBITOR, THIS—

Allow Us to Book You for Greater New York or New York State

The World's Most Famous Actresses in a Photographic Representation of the Alexandre Dumas and Victorien Sardou Plays in which they have enthralled audiences all over the World

SARAH BERNHARDT

And Her All Star Company from the Theatre Bernhardt, Paris,

IN

CAMILLE

AND

THE CELEBRATED FRENCH ACTRESS

MME. REJANE

IN

MADAME SANS GENE

Victorien Sardou's Greatest Comedy

FEATURING

NAPOLEON

"The Man of Destiny" Showing Him Not as a Warrior, but as a Human Being.

Every Foot Alive with Action

Audience Held Spellbound Until the Finish

TWO OF THE GREATEST PICTURES Before the Public

Playing week of March 30th in Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, New York City

A Full Line of Artistic Paper

ARCHIE H. ELLIS FEATURE PLAY CO.

44 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Sole Owners

BOB RUSSELL, Genl. Representative

in sight except a driver of a taxicab. Going quickly to him, he questions him, asking if he saw a man come from the house. The driver nods assent and upon Norman asking the direction in which he went, is told. Jumping quickly into the machine, Norman bids the man to follow. The driver of the machine is really Lynch.

BIOGRAPH.

GENTLEMAN OR THIEF (Mar. 16).—To the newsboy who held his horse each morning he was the gentleman, the king of the street. In reality, he was young Raffles, preying on his society friends and living an idle life at his club. Suddenly out of the darkness, the boy learned Raffles' true character and saved him from discovery. His honest, outspoken heart became an unconscious means toward Raffles' awakening.

THE RESTLESS WOMAN (Mar. 19).—Possessed of the mind that ever yearns and still knows no settled desire, the impulsive discontented woman, longing for peace, married the country doctor. It proved short-lived and the applause of the public claimed her again. The song of the tenement mother aroused true longings at last, but they came too late.

A FRIEND OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY (Mar. 21).—Used to the comforts wealth seems to bring, she married the mayor-elect. He needed such a wife to maintain a successful position. Later, the district attorney found her in his own apartments—his friend in the room beyond dead from an accident. What was his duty toward the mayor?

THE BATTLE AT ELDERBUSH GULCH (2 parts—Mar. 28).—On the day of the dog feast at the Indian encampment, the waifs arrived at Elderbush Gulch. Their pet pups came with them. "Now we eat," said the chief's son, when he saw the pup's fat little hides, but he met his death instead. "The blood of the whites!" cried the redmen, and all on account of two small dogs, the settlement at Elderbush Gulch was wiped from the map. Yet many strong searts lived to tell the tale, along with the dogs, the waifs and the baby.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 19—1914 (Mar. 5).—Los Angeles, Cal.—Boost, boys, boost! Who's doing all this boosting? Why, the Boosters' Club of San Francisco, here to boost the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915. Mayor Rose greets them.

Dresden, Germany.—Fantastic are forms and odd the shapes of the built-up bobsleds entered in the great annual carnival here.

Paris, France.—One hundred thousand persons mourn the death of Paul Deroulede, famous duellist, writer and politician. A throng such as even Paris seldom sees fills the streets during his funeral.

New York City, N. Y.—New York is going to the bow-wows again—some two thousand bow-wows brought together by the Westminster Kennel Club in the greatest dog show ever held here.

Palm Beach, Fla.—Surfeited with sunshine and sea bathing, society seeks new thrills here by going up in the air. Steve MacGordon, birdman, takes Mrs. H. Clayton Dix, Philadelphia social leader, for an air ride over the ocean.

Atlanta, Ga.—Swing your partners! Tumpty-tumpy-tum-tum! Tumpy-tumpy-tum! Back to back. All together, now boys, for here's the Southern Fiddlers' Convention playing that jig-time rag.

Kieff, Russia.—The soldiers of the Czar test the qualities of a new explosive, believed to be more terrible than any hitherto discovered. A quantity that a man could put in his pocket does the damage shown here.

New Orleans, La.—Bigger, brighter, better than ever before is the merry Mardi Gras, New Orleans' famous fete, when dull care is banished the city and high revelry holds undisputed reign.

Baltimore, Md.—The red menace of the flames threatens Baltimore again when fire breaks out in a big factory building on North Paca Street. Seven were injured and eighty girls were rescued by firemen.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 20—1914 (Mar. 9).—Chartres, France.—Newest of the engines of war is the bullet proof biplane. As it soars in the air immune from sharpshooters, it could easily destroy a hostile army by hurling bombs below.

I'M BACK

from a visit to the Universal ranch, out West, where I saw Universal producers working on some regular program features that will fairly set the picture world afire with enthusiasm; features that NO OTHER COMPANY CAN AFFORD TO PRODUCE, and yet they are going to be on the REGULAR Universal program. Once more I advise exhibitors who are NOT using that Universal program to CONNECT WITH ONE OF MY OFFICES BEFORE YOUR COMPETITOR BEATS YOU TO IT!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

"Traffickers on Soles"

In Three Reels

Meeting with great success Everywhere.

"The Great Lure of Paris" In Three Reels

"JUSTICE or LOVE?" In Three Reels

All acknowledged successes of the season. Further particulars at

Feature Photoplay Co.

220 W. 42nd St., Candler Bldg., New York City
Phone, Bryant 8486

WE BUY, SELL and RENT

moving picture machines, films and chairs.

THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

London, England.—Britain hears the rumble of approaching conflict between capital and her army of labor, united as never before. Strikers of many callings meet at Trafalgar Square and are exhorted by leaders to remain firm.

New Orleans, La.—The King of the Mardi Gras travels with a train attendant to the Court of his Queen as a noisy throng of merry-makers proclaims him Monarch of Mirth.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Swollen rivers, fed by a three-day downpour, sweep unchecked through towns and cities, bearing destruction on their crest. Hundreds are made homeless and millions of dollars' worth of property destroyed.

Paris, France.—Faster than man ever propelled himself before goes the rider of the new torpedo-bicycle, recently invented by M. Bunau-Varilla. Many world's cycle records have been broken by the new machine.

Tampa, Fla.—Shades of Gasparilla and his crew, pirates dead 300 years, "capture" Tampa once more and the joyous inhabitants are so happy that they entertain the horrid pirates with a carnival.

Ottawa, Canada.—The best ski-ers of the Western World demonstrate their skill before the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, at the international meet here, last of the winter season.

New York City, N. Y.—The worst blizzard in a generation blankets New York with 15 inches of snow, paralyzes street traffic, ties up railroads and reduces telegraph wires to a broken, tangled mass of metal.

Vera Cruz, Mexico.—Rear-Admiral Fletcher, commanding the fleet of American warships and thousands of marines aboard them here, transfers his flag from the Rhode Island to the Florida.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 21—1914 (Mar. 12).—Paris, France.—Here are the latest modes from Paris. Low-crowned, rakish hats set on the head with a slant all their own, and modifications of the minaret gowns of other days predominate.

Santa Monica, Cal.—The Vanderbilt Cup Race, famed in song and story for its thrills and dangers, is won and lost under smiling skies and before a throng of many thousands.

Las Vegas, New Mex.—High on the healthful hills here, the Order of the Moose plans to build the largest sanitarium in the world to help their white plague sufferers back to health.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The city streets run deep with a flood from a cloudburst that sets a new high record for rapid rainfall here. Nearly two inches of rain fell during the storm.

New Orleans, La.—Sir Lionel Carden, British Minister to Mexico, comes here from Vera Cruz to visit President Wilson at Washington and consult with him regarding Huerta.

San Francisco, Cal.—"One year hence and San Francisco will be the capital of the world"—this is the burden of the big celebration held on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Port Jervis, N. Y.—A picture with a moral—a workman, making a railroad snowplow, made it a bit wrong; the defect caused it to open a switch when the plow was used. See what happened.

Mobile, Ala.—Soldiers, sailors, warships, cannon—flowers, floats, streamers, ribbons—sunshine, music, mirth, and mischief—mixed and stirred in a rollicking crowd and you have Mobile's great Mardi Gras.

El Paso, Tex.—Here is a brace of Uncle Sam's noted Mexican prisoners who would face a firing squad if Villa could get at them—General Salazar, Ojinaga refugee, and Maximo Castillo, bandit leader.

TRICHINOPOLY (India—Mar. 24).—This quaint and ancient city of southern India is the capital of the district of the same name and has a population of 105,000. Besides being a military station it is a manufacturing center of some importance. Here is shown the thronging life of the city streets with people and costumes seemingly from another planet. Here also are strange buildings—pagodas and temples.

WORKADAY SCENES IN A FLOWERY LAND (Mar. 24).—The folk life of a foreign country is always interesting, especially when that country is as little affected by western manners and customs as is China. Here we get intimate views of various little industries and professions well known to Europe and America, but here disguised almost beyond recognition.

The Helen Gardner Productions Bring Box Office Results

STUDIO FOR RENT

On account of leaving the city for several days to take scenes in another part of the country for several big features that we are soon to release, we will rent our studio for a limited time to responsible parties only.

We have 64 lamps, consisting of Cooper-Hewitt, Chrome Actinic and Klieglight with a 50 x 80 trolley system. We have one of the best equipped studios, consisting of large and small sets of scenery, all kinds of furniture, bronze statuary, draperies and bric-a-brac; building 165 ft. long, located in Yonkers, N. Y.

Address: MITTENTHAL FILM CO., Knickerbocker Theatre Bldg. Annex, N. Y. City

ZINGO ZINGO

ZINGO

The Most Marvelous, Stupendous Burlesque Extravaganza Ever Produced in Motion Pictures.

12 — REELS — 12

of Rollicking Wholesome Fun —Not an Inch of Vulgarity.

Read the Review by W. Stephen Bush on another page.

HOW YOU WILL GET

ZINGO

In Four Chapters—Three Reels Each. These Chapters Will Be Released One Week Apart —Each a Complete Story in Itself.

Get the First ZINGO and You'll Want the Series

We Certainly do Furnish the Features

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

130 West 46th Street, New York

ZINGO ZINGO

PLAYGOERS FILM COMPANY

DANIEL V. ARTHUR, MANAGING DIRECTOR

LYRIC THEATRE 213 WEST 42nd STREET NEW YORK

TELEPHONE—BRYANT 874-875. CABLE ADDRESS, DARTHUR, NEW YORK.

WALLACE EDDINGER

GAIL KANE

ANNOUNCE WITHOUT RESERVE

That Their Presentation of the Melodramatic Play

The Great Diamond Robbery

WITH WALLACE EDDINGER AND A CAST OF

DISTINGUISHED PLAYERS, ALL OF WHOM ARE FEATURE ARTISTS IN BROADWAY ATTRACTIONS AT $2 PRICES

WILL BE THE

Best Acted, Best Picturized, Most Elaborately Staged, and Grippingly Interesting Photo-Play That Has Yet Been Given to the World.

Why Not?

Staged by . . . . . Daniel V. Arthur
Art Direction of . . . . . Edw. A. Morange
Picturized by . . . . . Herbert Hall Winslow

The CAST

WALLACE EDDINGER	CHAS. J. ROSS	ELITA PROCTOR OTIS
GAIL KANE	MARTIN J. ALSOP	DOROTHY ARTHUR
P. R. PRATT	EDWARD GILLESPIE	FRANK HARDY
STAPLETON KENT	HERBERT BARRINGTON	R. E. GRAHAM

6 Parts — 250 Scenes

STATE RIGHTS NOW—Released March 23rd

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN THE WORLD

LINA CAVALIERI

PRESENTING

Manon Lescaut

SIX PARTS
250 PEOPLE

LUCIEN MURATORE

THE GREAT FRENCH TENOR and LYRIC ACTOR

ELITA PROCTOR OTIS

IN APRIL

STATE RIGHTS NOW

CHAS. J. ROSS

TO BE FOLLOWED BY AMERICA'S FOREMOST ACTOR

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM

IN A SIX PART PLAY

Title and Date of Release Announced Later

STRANGE SEA WATER CREATURES (Mar. 24).—Here we get a peep at the strange creatures and wonderful organisms that throng the depths of the sea. Through such remarkable and scientifically accurate films as this a conception is gained of the works of nature that would be impossible through the medium of text books however well illustrated.

THE CONSTANCY OF JEANNE (Special—2 parts—Mar. 26).—Jacques Bernard, a celebrated painter, with his daughter, Yvonne, is spending the summer at a rural village near the sea. His great love for the water and its artistic possibilities draw him frequently to the shore where he one day meets Jeanne Bordas, dreaming of her absent sailor lover, in its rock-bound solitude. Some time later the artist's admiration for the simple peasant girl has prompted him to engage her as a model. Jeanne is poor and her father's death left her with little but his old debts. These she is able to pay through the income from her work with Bernard in addition to which the wages, though small, afford greater comfort than had hitherto been possible.

About this time Henri returns from his long sea trip on the "Amphitrite," the joy of the reunited lovers being complete. The furlough is short, however, and the girl is soon left to herself. She again takes up her congenial work with Bernard, where interruptions are made pleasant by the association with the daughter, Yvonne. A shadow soon darkens the happiness of the girl, for news comes that the good ship "Amphitrite" has gone down with all on board. Bernard, attracted by the youth of his model, has eventually become a slave to her charms. He is called back to his city home and persuades Jeanne to accompany him.

Working together, the man and the maid, Bernard's love deepens till he dares hope for a happy future, but news of the rescue of the girl's former lover threatens destruction to his love dreams. Jeanne in the meantime takes up her daily task, having long since given up any thought of seeing the loved one again. Henri finally succeeds in reaching his sweetheart's home, only to find it deserted. Hoping against hope, he seeks her at the home of her benefactor to find it, too, deserted, but his quest promises fair of success, for he obtains there the city address of Bernard, where he goes in search of Jeanne. The sumptuous surroundings under which he finds his sweetheart arouse the jealousy of the already over-wrought man, but the true qaulity of her constant devotion disperses the fears that would come between them and their joy in the unexpected reunion knows no bounds.

A LEECH OF INDUSTRY (Special—Three parts—Mar. 28).—Old Romanoff has found Russia too hot for a person of his political beliefs and activities and has come to America with his sons. The boys obtain jobs in a factory, where are employed many of their own race, and Alex soon becomes acquainted with Irma, whose charms make a deep impression upon him. Of glib tongue and good looks, he easily wins the unsophisticated girl and they plan marriage in the not far distant future. Margaret occasionally calls upon her father at his office and seeing her, Ivan builds castles in the air and hopes to one day so advance himself that he may aspire to her hand.

A few months later Irma's dream of happiness is shattered. Alex is killed in a factory explosion and too late the girl realizes that relying too much on the coming marriage she had become indiscreet and that the man was dead who could save her good name. She tells her father of her misfortune and the angry old man determines with his son to see that the injury is avenged or righted. Ivan is told and he begs that his feeble old father be not informed of the wrong. To save the day he consents to marry the girl himself, though he realizes that by so doing he is destroying his castles in the air. They marry and when Margaret again re-visits the factory she learns the news and realizes that the ambitions and worthy young Russian-American had become dear to her and is now lost.

Some years later Ivan has branched out for himself and come into keen competition with his former employer. Both men are ardently desirous of getting a certain very large contract and realizes that it has narrowed down to a question as to which one of them shall get it. Ivan has figured out his bid and risks his entire fortune on getting the contract.

Irma's brother, Roalf, because of extravagant habits finds himself in need of immediate financial aid. To secure it he allies himself with Ivan's competitor, who bribes him to secure a copy of Ivan's bid. With the assistance of Margaret and the ungrateful brother-in-law the conspirators plan to encompass Ivan's ruin. A compromising letter is written and Roalf brings it to his sister's attention. Convinced of her husband's infidelity Irma gives her brother the coveted copy of the bid, which he turns over to the conspirators. Armed with the figures Margaret's father is in a position to underbid his competitor and put him out of the way.

Margaret, who has been used as a decoy, is in a fair way to win back the affections of her old lover when he accidentally reads a letter to her from the conspirators, asking her to keep Ivan engaged so as to have him out of the way. He discovers the plot and ha snow the only recourse of reaching the state capital before the rivals can get there. He employs a special train while his rivals use an automobile. The wagon road runs beside the railway tracks and there is an exciting race between train and motor car, which ends only when the automobile attempts to cross the tracks in front of the train, is struck and the occupants killed. In the meantime Irma has learned the truth and, when her victorious husband returns, confesses all. To the surprise of each a mutual love is disclosed and they see before them a happier life and a better understanding.

"NEWMAN"
BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

No. 998
One Sheet Wall Frame
Size 28 x 42. Without glass
PRICE $3.00

WRITE FOR NEW 1914 CATALOG
They are different

The Newman Mfg. Co.
CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. | NEW YORK 101 4th Avenue | CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Established 1882

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new
SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER
Manufactured by
J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.,
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

Machines and Genuine Parts
Edison--Powers--Simplex
Motiograph--Edengraph
Sold cash or time
Send for new catalogue today.
Bargains in Rebuilt Machines
Photo and Poster Frames,
Curtains and Screens
Write us today what you are interested in.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.
"Everything from screen to booth"
160-A No. FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO

LUBIN.

A DEAL IN REAL ESTATE (Mar. 24).—Deacon Ezra Gregston has long coveted the property known as "Hillcrest," the old homestead of the wealthy Toombs family. For years the mansion has remained unoccupied. The deacon believed the property a good buy at $50,000 and makes an offer of $30,000. Toombs eagerly accepts the offer, so much so in fact as to raise, in the deacon's mind, the suspicion that Toombs is hard pressed for money. In his library the deacon schemes to bring about a better deal, and finally conceives the idea of installing a "ghost" in the mansion to give the place the reputation of being "haunted."

About this time Riley Leigh, the newly installed city editor of the "Tribune," receives a warning from his publisher that the next libel suit brought against the paper will result in his dismissal. Leigh, who has been courting Ruth Gregston assiduously, clandestinely meets the girl in her father's garden and they are discovered by the deacon. He drives Leigh from the premises. A week later Oaklawn is greatly excited over tales of strange doings at the old Toombs house, and finally the story creeps into print in the columns of the "Tribune." The day the item appears Toombs receives a note from Deacon Gregston declaring that he would not give more than $20,000 for a house handicapped with the reputation of being haunted, and refers Toombs to that morning's issue of the "Tribune." Toombs on reading the article rushes off to his lawyer and instructs him to institute a suit for libel against the paper. Sunday morning Leigh, opening all editorial mail, finds the threat of Toombs' lawyer to bring suit for $10,000 damages within ten days if claim is not settled. Leigh and officer Harrigan watch the "haunted" house, and, seeing the grotesque dance of a white robed figure with a death's head before the windows of the second floor, rush to the house, finally reach the "ghost" room and fall upon the "ghost." The disguise is torn away and Deacon Gregston is discovered. The deacon begs for mercy and is finally taken by his captors to his own home for a conference. Here he signs a letter addressed to Toombs, stating that if the suit against the "Tribune" is dropped he will pay the full $30,000 agreed upon. The officer beckons him to "come to the station." The deacon collapses and appeals to Leigh to save him. Leigh and the officer step aside and after an argument the officer is seen to nod and grin. Leigh then tells Deacon Gregston that at present he had no reason to protect him, "But as your son-in-law, I would hide the family disgrace." The deacon bursts into anger, but finally cools down and with very bad grace calls in his daughter, who appears in charming negligee and hands her over to the young city editor.

ABOVE THE LAW (Special—2 parts—Mar. 25).—Paul Hunt, a degenerate son of a New York detective, is accidentally injured in the mountains, where he has fled for safety following an attempted safe robbery in Chicago. His father,

EVERYTHING IN PROJECTION APPARATUS AND SUPPLIES
WE MANUFACTURE | Get Our Estimate | WE REPAIR
HENRY MESTRUM SUCC. TO C. B. KLEINE
ESTABLISHED SINCE 1865
385 SIXTH AVENUE, Bet. 23d & 24th Sts., NEW YORK

"HIGH JINKS!"

Watch

"Our MUTUAL Girl"

This Week, in the Ninth Reel of the Greatest Series of Motion Pictures Ever Produced, and See What a Perfectly Corking Time She Has with the Girls from That Broadway Musical Hit.

"High Jinks," the Big Show That Is Drawing Crowds to the Casino

The ENTIRE "HIGH JINKS" COMPANY appears on the Screen, Doing the Two Numbers Which Have Made the Piece Such a Success! Also, Margaret, who is always right up to the minute in the latest fashions, goes to Hepner's, the famous hair-dressing establishment, and is provided with one of those amazing new wigs, the latest Parisian Creation.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL is an acknowledged favorite, so are all these other members of the MUTUAL family. For instance, those absolutely convulsing and inimitable masterpieces, "The Keystone Comedies."

We don't mind admitting that some little recent changes will make them Better than Ever. Mack Sennett, the real producer of these International hits, is now playing the leading roles with Mabel Normand, as well as directing. Some pictures! Then we have the "Beauty Films," which are all real beauties and belong well in the forefront of the finest now being made.

These are only a few.

JUST KEEP YOUR EYES WIDE OPEN

for any films bearing these brands, too!

NO PROGRAM IS GENUINELY COMPLETE WITHOUT THEM

THANHOUSER	RELIANCE	KOMIC	APOLLO
MAJESTIC	KAY BEE	DOMINO	and
AMERICAN	BRONCHO	PRINCESS	ROYAL

BRANCHES IN 49 CITIES MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION NEW YORK

the detective, has had no word from the scapegrace since his departure from home several years before, and does not know he is a crook. In the mountains Hunt is cared for by John Rand, a woodsman, and Rand's daughter, Meg, falls in love with him. Rand objects to Hunt as a husband, wishing Meg to marry Jim Dreer, a young woodsman. Meg eventually elopes with Hunt, who finally drifts to New York; he abuses Meg and leaves her in poverty.

Rand, frantic with grief over his daughter's absence, is notified by Meg's landlady in New York of the young girl's plight. There is only one law in the mountains, and Rand, selling his scanty possessions, starts for New York to recover Meg and eke out justice to her betrayer. He is, however, unable to find Meg, who has changed her lodging. As days pass on Rand is arrested for vagrancy, and in the police court comes face to face with Meg, arrested on a similar charge. Their story touches the heart of the judge, who releases them.

William Hunt, the detective, not being aware of Rand's identity, gives him some money to help him to get upon his feet again. Rand pledges himself to repay the detective as soon as possible. He soon has the opportunity. There is a reward offered for members of a gang of crooks, of which young Hunt is a member. Paul and his pals effect a safe robbery and in a quarrel following the division of the spoils, Hunt kills one of the gang. He accidentally encounters Rand in his flight, and not recognizing him in the darkness, he accepts Rand's invitation to hide him. Here is the chance of the grim old mountaineer. Rand leaves Hunt locked in his room and telephones the detective that he has the man who has just committed the murder; he wants the detective to come and claim the reward. Thus will he repay the loan due the detective. Rand returns to his room, and after a terrific struggle kills Hunt. The detective, with other officers, hurries up a moment later only to find that his own son has been killed by Rand. Then Rand, for the first time, learns of the detective's identity. It is a plain case of self-defense and Rand is soon released. He returns to the mountains with Meg, and Meg accepts Jim as her husband.

THE GAME OF POLITICS (Special—2 parts—Mar. 26).—During one of the campaigns in a large city Fred Stanford, candidate for mayor on the Temperance ticket, gave his manager, Homer Nichols, an unscrupulous politician, orders to secure the services of young Dick Ryder, a promising young politician, and sweetheart of Stanford's daughter, as "glad-hand" artist for his campaign. Nichols sends a note to Ryder, telling him to report for duty at once. He gives Ryder a roll of money, which he is to use to entertain voters. Accompanied by Ryder, Nichols pays a visit to one of his paying contract jobs and orders Ryder to give his foreman some money for the men on his job. From there he takes young Ryder to one of the saloons and invites most of the working men to join them in a drink. The bartender inquires of Ryder what he will have. He answers that he does not drink. Nichols calls him aside and impresses it upon him that it is his duty to drink and show himself a good fellow. This is the start of a downfall. He goes from bad to worse, and when Stanford is elected, he calls upon the campaign manager and asks him concerning a job that had been promised. Nichols, seeing that he is drunk, orders him from his office. Ryder then calls upon his sweetheart in her home, but is driven from there by her father. Later, as Ryder and his mother are facing starvation he determines to do something for her sake. He goes to Stanford's house, but has not the nerve to enter. He is about to leave the grounds when he accidentally glances into a room and sees Stanford with a large amount of money in his hand. Stanford carelessly lays the money on his table while signing a receipt book for a messenger. He leaves the room and lets the money lie on the table. Ryder climbs into the window and is about to take the money when Stanford returns. He is about to place young Ryder under arrest when he is told that pulling votes was the cause of his downfall. He has compassion for Ryder, gives him some money, and tells him to return the next day. Ryder goes to a saloon and there overhears a plot between Nichols and his ward heeler, Tim Landers, to assassinate the mayor because he has given evidence to the newspapers showing how Nichols had attempted to bribe him for a big paving contract. Nichols and Landers leave to carry out their plans. Ryder immediately telephones the police to go to Stanford's house. He rushes there himself and arrives just in time to jump in between Nichols and Stanford and receives the bullet intended for the mayor.

THE PURITAN (Mar. 27).—Evelyn, in order to care for her invalid mother and young sister, for some time has been a cabaret performer at the restaurant of Brady, a dissolute and repulsive brute, who has taken a fancy to the girl and, in order to secure a firm hold upon her, has advanced her money. Worn out by her battle, Evelyn goes one Sunday morning to a village near the city to seek repose and, in the absence of the organist of the village church, volunteers to take her place. She meets Abner Duncan, comparatively young and wealthy, but through training a stern Puritan. Unconsciously they fall in love, but neither realizes this for some time. Evelyn continues to come to the village and is presently the subject of gossip, as she discloses nothing whatever concerning herself, and even Duncan in his narrowness has not faith enough in his own heart to accept her. Evelyn ceases to go to the village, and Duncan begins to realize that without her his life is sad.

Evelyn has been told by the doctor that the only hope of saving her mother's life lies in sending her to the South within two months. Evelyn attempts to borrow the necessary money from Brady, but he refuses, telling her, however, that he will make her a wedding present of $1,000. Duncan is a large contributor to the Society for Moral Uplift, and is appointed a member of the Investigating Committee, which is looking into the matter of cabaret shows. On his first tour of inspection, Duncan sees Evelyn and is horrified. Thereafter he sternly attempts to put the girl out of his mind, but fails. At last he yields to his love and determines to marry her. Going to the city, he seeks information at the restaurant, and is directed to the apartments upstairs. Here he finds Evelyn, and recklessly declares his love. Evelyn pulls aside a pair of curtains and discloses the repulsive form of Brady, sprawling in a drunken stupor. She tells Duncan that his awakening is too late—that for a week she has been the wife of Brady. Crushed, Duncan stumbles away. Evelyn smooths out and re-reads a crumpled telegram from her sister in the South, which tells her that, after all, her terrible sacrifice was in vain, that her mother died that morning.

DETECTIVE SHORT (Mar. 28).—Jim Short, a little runt, loves Bess Belding. Dick Davenant also loves her. Dick has just been made the representative of a national detective agency because of his clever handling of a case assigned him. Short thinks it is the badge rather than the man, and works his political pull to get a local detective badge. He also lays in a few disguises of the sort Old King Brady used to wear. He trails a man he thinks to be a dangerous criminal, but the suspect turns out to be John Mason, a banker, and a policeman chases Short away.

Later Dick sees Sam Jones, the banker's double, who is badly wanted for forgery, and trails him. Short supposes it to be the bank president still. Dick arrests the man, but through Short's interference Jones gets away. Bess trips him up with her parasol and they take him to the station house. Short follows to see what happens, where they discover that it is the bank president. But Dick was right and the entrance of Mason to complain of Short is the last straw. The chief decorates Short with all of his disguises and kicks him into the street. Short sits on the steps of the station house and figures it all out, but finds that as a detective he is a dead failure and that Bess is on to him.

THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA (Mar. 28).—Three travelers board a submarine. A man and woman go out fishing in a little boat and the woman casts her line overboard. The hook becomes attached to the submarine in the bottom of the sea. A man in a diving helmet opens a porthole of the submarine, untangles the line and pulls the woman out of the boat above down through the sea and into the porthole. The fishing boat capsizes and the man saves himself by clutching the legs of a big flying bird which bears him off. The girl, meanwhile, is made love to by the three men in the submarine. She fights them off, knocking them insensible. She pulls the lever and the submarine ascends to the surface. The girl appears on deck; the bird with the man clinging flies by the girl, catches hold of the man's legs and is carried aloft with the submarine in pursuit. As the bird flies over an island the shots of the pursuers kill it, leaving the man and girl unharmed. A soldier from the fortress fires a cannon at the submarine, which sinks. At the bottom of the sea foolish looking fishes frisk about, retreating in terror when the submarine comes on and discharges two men in diving helmets. They shoulder guns and march off. Later, after they shoot a brood of baby sharks, the mother swallows the hunters. From the submarine the remaining traveler hurries to their rescue. He finds mother shark weeping copiously and sponging away her tears with seaweed. After a fight the man cuts open the fish and rescues his two companions, alive. No sooner have they returned to the submarine when a whale swallows the craft, finally coming to the surface near the island where the girl and her lover are. The whale ejects the submarine, the lover and the soldier break it open with an axe and the three occupants are marched away to prison. Presently an aeroplane sails by with an anchor dangling from it, which catches hold of the island and flies off with it. The prison slides off and drops into the sea. The lover and his sweetheart climb up the anchor rope to the aeroplane, followed by the soldier. There is a fight in mid-air for the possession of the airship, which finally plunges into the sea, where all are rescued by a pursuing vessel.

Many Fatally Wounded In Realistic War Scenes

"ON THE FIRING LINE IN TRIPOLI"

FIVE PARTS

READY FOR DELIVERY

State Right Buyers know that "Mundstuk knows what's what."

That's the reason territory is going fast.

Get busy, write or wire immediately for your exclusive territory, and avail yourself of a "Reel Moneymaker."

A few States are left for the superb four-part feature

"THE WHIRL OF DESTINY"

MUNDSTUK FEATURES

909 Longacre Building

NEW YORK

Psychological Moment!

"Cowboys in Mexican Raid vanish after they bring Vergara's Body to Border."
Headline Daily Papers

Exhibitors Book the Five-Reeler

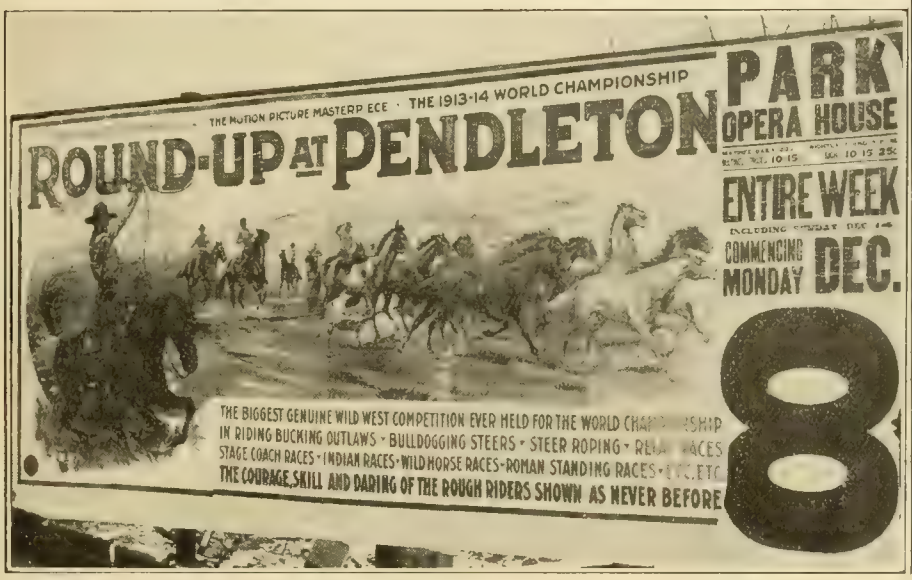
The 1913-14 World's Championship

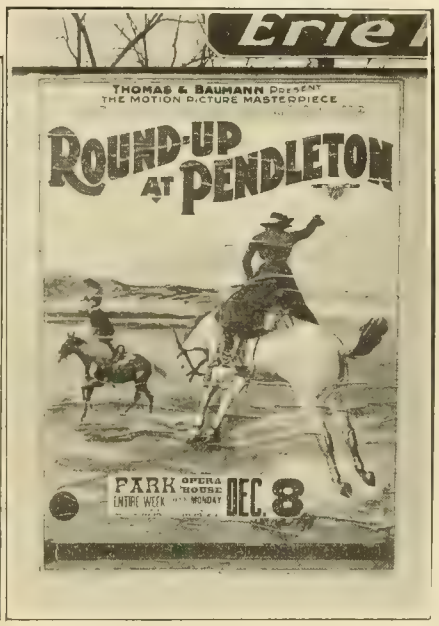
Round-Up at Pendleton

The record-breaker drawing card



THE MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE · THE 1913-14 WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP
ROUND-UP AT PENDLETON
PARK OPERA HOUSE
ENTIRE WEEK
COMMENCING MONDAY DEC.
8
THE BIGGEST GENUINE WILD WEST COMPETITION EVER HELD FOR THE WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP
IN RIDING BUCKING OUTLAWS · BULLDOGGING STEERS · STEER ROPING · RELAY RACES
STAGE COACH RACES · INDIAN RACES · WILD HORSE RACES · ROMAN STANDING RACES · ETC. ETC
THE COURAGE, SKILL AND DARING OF THE ROUGH RIDERS SHOWN AS NEVER BEFORE

24 Sheet Lithograph



8 Sheet Lithograph

A 1913-14 Round-Up Picture Audience

Always the case wherever the pictures are shown.

Advertising Material

2	Styles	1	Sheet	Lithos
2	"	3	"	"
1	"	8	"	"
1	"	24	"	"
5	Styles	1 Col.	Newspaper	Cuts
4	"	2 "	"	"
1	"	4 "	"	"
18	Advance		"	Notices

4 Page Herald; Advance Slides; Banners; Photo Frames.

REX THEATRE, Eugene, Ore.

State Righters: We have some fine territory left at pretty cheap prices. Connect with us—wire.

THOMAS & BAUMANN,

R-205 Bennett Bldg., 99 Nassau St.
NEW YORK

Western Office: 312 Stock Exchange Bldg., Portland, Oregon

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL.

GOLD SEAL.

DISCORD AND HARMONY (Three Parts—Mar. 17).—Joy reigns in a colony of struggling artists because Old Felix, a composer, has at last sold one of his symphonies. The night of its initial hearing at the grand opera house the members of the colony turn out en masse. Too poor for orchestra seats, they gather in the gallery around the old composer. The old composer is happy almost to tears, and when the last note has died away there is a cry for the composer. Felix attempts to utter a few words of thanks, but is smothered with flowers.

At his studio his friends have prepared for his welcome, and it is upon his arrival there that he feels the happiness which comes of success. However, at the other end of the hall another different drama is being enacted. A girl sits beside her stricken mother, and as the merriment in the studio reaches its height, the soul of the mother departs from the body.

After all his friends have left the disconsolate girl seeks the help of Felix. The old musician is touched and all of his flowers, tributes to his success, he carries into the room of death and lends the girl as much financial assistance as she needs. The following day Felix adopts the girl as his ward. Lon, a sculptor, is impressed by her simplicity and beauty, and falls in love with her. Forrest, an artist, a malapert young man, patronizes the girl, and is repulsed in his advances. Felix puts up the money for Lon to go to Europe and study, and Lon, as a means of insuring the girl to himself when he returns, marries her secretly, but with Felix' consent.

Forrest overhears when Lon and the girl are discussing their future happiness, and being ignorant of their marriage, he takes a jealous pleasure in the thought that all is not proper. He circulates gossip to the girl's discredit, and finally on the eve of Lon's departure, he convinces Felix' friends that he is right. The old musician is at work on a second symphony, and is utterly oblivious to what is going on; he scarcely notices that he is deserted by his friends. The friends hold a council, and decide to tell Felix the kind of woman he is harboring.

Old Felix, after fully grasping what they mean, drives them from his studio. However, he is rendered more feeble by the reaction of his violent emotions and the contemplation of the foul suspicions which have separated him from his old friends. Thus he labors with feverish haste to complete his last symphony. But work and worry and forgotten favors are too much for the old man. His mind begins to wander. He staggers to his bedroom and dies.

The girl finds him there, and carries the message of his death to his old friends. They congregate around his bedside, and that his soul may hear and forgive them, they play his last symphony.

Lon, the sculptor, has returned from Europe, famous, and while the party of friends are yet beside the death-bed, he enters and greets the girl as his wife. The friends understand the injustice of their treatment of Old Felix, and again gather around his bed.

CRYSTAL.

SNOOKUM'S LAST RACKET (Mar. 24).—Snookum comes home drunk. His wife determines to frighten him. She fires off a revolver. When she comes downstairs he says that he is shot. She decides to make him think that he is dead. When he speaks to her, she doesn't answer. She dresses in black. The maid and her beau went to a masquerade ball that evening. She was dressed as an angel and he was dressed as a devil. Snookums sees the maid and thinks she is from heaven. He follows her into the kitchen. There he tries to kiss her and upsets a lamp. The maid's fellow beats him up. He is convinced that the devil has come for him. He is completely reformed.

WITHOUT PANTS (Mar. 24).—Jack and Fred are in love with Mabel. Jack is with her when Fred calls. Jack leaves. As he does Fred takes a photo of a girl from his pocket and inscribes a message to Jack on it. Mabel finds it. The next time Jack calls she will not talk to him. He decides that Fred is to blame. He waits for him and chases him home. He hires a tough guy to beat him up. Fred asks Mabel to go to a matinee. He sends his trousers out to be pressed. The tough sees them, steals them and runs away. Fred gives chase. Finally he is arrested for running through the streets improperly clad. Mabel sees him. Jack takes her home, and explains that the picture was not his, but Fred's. She capitulates. Fred languishes in jail.

AUNTIE'S ROMANTIC ADVENTURE (Mar. 29).—Claribel's beau, Mortimer, is disliked by her father. He kicks him out of the house. Her old maid aunt, Lucy, having read romantic novels, is ripe for a romantic adventure. Mortimer writes Claribel a letter telling her that his friend, Gayboy, will meet on a certain corner with his automobile and that they will elope. The messenger drops the note. Two Italian brigands find it and determine to kidnap the girl and hold her for ransom. They then send the note to the address given. Aunt Lucy gets the note and makes up her mind to take Claribel's place. The blackhanders kidnap her. Aunt Lucy is tickled to death over her romantic adventure. The brigands telephone Claribel's father. Pa gets the money; also a policeman and goes to the place. Meanwhile Claribel and Mortimer are having a merry chase around town. Finally she goes to his house and calling up a minister they are married. Pa faints when he finds that he nearly paid real money to get Aunt Lucy back. Pa is wild when he learns his daughter is married.

FRONTIER.

BLACK HANDS AND DIRTY MONEY (Mar. 26).—Capt. Pretzel, of the police force, is warned by the mayor that the blackhands in Bungleville must be exterminated. Jimmie courts Molly. He is looked upon with scorn by Pretzel and his wife. A burglar chases Pretzel into the blackhands' den. He tells them that he has dropped in to talk over terms. Pretzel is given hush money. Afraid to take it home, he buries it. Both the mayor and his daughter see the treasure being cached.

The leader of the blackhands meets Molly and later demands that Pretzel give him his daughter's hand in marriage. Pretzel under the threat of death, agrees. Jimmie is notified by the blackhands that unless he produces a million dollars by night he will be blown up. The mayor goes to dig up the buried treasure. So does Molly. The mayor has removed the money and Molly falls in the hole. The cops run on to the blackhands, who chase them. Pretzel's wife learns of the buried treasure and forces Pretzel to lead her to the spot. Jimmie finds a lighted bomb tied to his back, and in running across the country to find a pool, falls in the hole. Molly takes the bomb from his back and throws it out of the hole. It falls near the cops, who have been captured by the blackhands.

POWERS.

TOO MUCH MARRIED (Mar. 23).—On the eve of his wedding day, Ganthong Dippell enters into one grand celebration of departing bachelorhood. At his club he takes a bracelet from Tottie Coughdrop, an entertainer, and refuses to return it. On the following morning he awakens at 11:30 o'clock with a severe attack of Katzenjammer. The wedding is to be held at noon and he hurries to get ready. Tottie, however, calls for her bracelet and as he has no recollection of the affair, he denies that he has it. She steals his wedding clothes as security for her bracelet and gets away from the apartment before he notices the theft. The bridegroom, attired in his bathrobe, runs after Tottie and his clothes. He is arrested and released a half dozen times, until he turns up for his wedding in a bathrobe. The wedding guests are thrown into confusion. In his bewilderment, the minister places the hand of the bride's mother-in-law in his and begins the ceremony. At this point in the proceedings Ganthony Dippell loses consciousness.

HER FIRST ARREST (Mar. 27).—Miss Oakley, supporting the Womans' Reform League ticket, is pulling for the position of chief of police. Hickman, in love with Laura, is the incumbent chief of police and belongs to the opposition party. The political battle becomes so hot that they break off their engagement. Laura besets Hickman at every move. Election day arrives. The Woman's League is victorious and Laura succeeds her lover as chief of police. As she enters the station, she drops her purse. Hickman finds it and puts it in his pocket. He then tries to drown his political defeat in drink. That night he comes to his apartments tipsy. He gets into the wrong apartment, Laura's apartment. She sees him drop her purse and arrests him. She hauls him to the police station, and there learns his identity. They are married by the desk sergeant.

NESTOR.

THE MOUNTAINEER (Mar. 25).—A young mountaineer loves Dorothy, daughter of a backwoodsman. An artist comes into the district to paint and falls in love with Lucille, Dorothy's sister. Dorothy is interested in the artist on account of her sister's love for him, and she poses. The young mountaineer sees his sweetheart sitting for the artist, and as he is naturally suspicious of the well-dressed city man, he misunderstands the situation. As a result, he has words with Dorothy. The two become estranged. The artist, in searching for wild nooks, discovers a moonshiner's still. The moonshiners believe him to be a U. S. Revenue agent, and they capture him. Lucille carries the news to Dorothy. Dorothy goes to the mountaineer and begs him to save the artist. Believing that his action will insure the happiness of the woman he loves, he consents. The mountaineer surprises the moonshiners and liberates the artist. He then turns the artist over to Dorothy and prepares to return to the cabin. However, instead of Dorothy, Lucille rushes into the artist's arms. For the first time, the mountaineer sees that it is Lucille and not Dorothy who loves the new-comer.

THE WRONG MISS WRIGHT (Mar. 27).—Daisy's maiden aunt, Miss Wright, is an advocate of equal rights. While addressing a street meeting her heated words cause a riot, which results in Miss Wright's arrest. Daisy hastens to the city jail with an attorney and secures her aunt's release. A half dozen newspaper reporters besiege the agitator, but she refuses to be interviewed and to dodge the undesirable notoriety of the situation, she flees to her country home with Daisy. When all others have failed, the club reporter is instructed to camp upon Miss Wright's trail until he gets a photo and an interview. He lays siege to the woman's country home. On each of his attempts to enter he is forcibly ejected.

Finally Daisy decides to take a walk in the fields. Believing that she is the agitator, the reporter forces an interview from her, and takes her picture as she is escaping over the fence. Daisy returns and tells her aunt of the happening. In the meantime the reporter has written his exclusive story and it is ready for the press when a wire arrives from the agitator saying that the reporter interviewed the wrong Miss Wright, but that if he will call, he will be granted an interview and given a photograph of the real agitator. The cub again calls at Miss Wright's country home. This time he interviews Daisy, knowing she is not the right party. And he just keeps on interviewing and interviewing and interviewing.

VICTOR.

DIPLOMATIC FLO (Three Parts—Mar. 27).—At an embassy ball Flo is introduced to Carlos Luria, ex-president of San Bernardino. Carlos is attracted to her. At tea, to which her lover, Dick, brings Carlos, she notices Carlos give their Jap butler a card. Making an excuse, she takes the cigarette case from the Jap, which Carlos had sent him for. Inside is a note, making an appointment at the Hotel for the next afternoon. Florence goes to the hotel, and through a ruse, succeeds into gaining entrance to Carlos' room. She hears Carlos coming and rushes into the closet. Carlos enters in with the Jap. The Jap pays Carlos the money for the bill of lading on a shipment of arms and ammunition which are being smuggled out of the U. S. to Central America as Baked Beans and Shoes. In the meantime Dick and his aids have followed Carlos. Dick comes to the door of Carlos' room just as the Jap is giving the money for the bill of lading. Carlos, not wishing Dick to see the Jap, forces him into the closet, where Florence is hiding. The Jap is confronted and held up by Florence, who takes the bill of lading from him. Carlos, anxious to get rid of Dick, asks him downstairs. Florence, still covering the Jap, backs out of the closet and locks the door. Downstairs she meets Dick and Carlos and despite their protests, makes them both accompany her home to tea. At home she puts the bill of lading with an anonymous note explaining about the smuggled arms in an envelope and gives it to Dick. While drinking tea, the maid enters and gives Dick the letter. Dick excuses himself and reads the note. It is the evidence he wanted.

Carlos, after Dick leaves, excuses himself and hurries to the hotel to see what became of the Jap. Dick hurries to the dock and with the help of an inspector, breaks open a box of baked beans and finds cartridges, in the shoe box he finds rifles. He calls up the superintendent and instructs him to send men to Carlos' room. Three agents rush to the room just as Carlos and the liberated Jap are struggling. The Jap imagines the hold-up in the closet a trick of Carlos'. They are separated and taken to the superintendent's office. They refuse to confess. Florence calls up to hear the result and Dick proudly tells of the successful capture. The superintendent congratulates Dick. Florence also congratulates him and she rests satisfied in the thought of having helped her sweetheart to success, without his knowing the part she played.

A HELEN GARDNER FEATURE
—Guaranteed Money-getter

ONE GLANCE AT THE PICTURE after putting a

Gundlach Projection Lens

on the machine shows you it makes a sharper and more brilliant picture. We only ask you to give a Gundlach Projection Lens a trial and see for yourself how much it improves the picture. All Film Exchanges take orders for them. Specify Gundlach Lenses when buying any kind of a new machine. You must have Gundlach Lenses to get the best result.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

The Newspapers Everywhere

are now helping your business. Take advantage of the space the news columns give to the "Pictures" and to the "Players" by giving the public a Photo Post Card of their favorites. You cannot give a more timely piece of advertising for your house.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 350 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards
For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards
For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 350 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Hand Colored Pictures of Favorites.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 350 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights and we will send you a remedy.

You must buy a FOTOPLAYER to get a double-tracker

There is only one FOTOPLAYER

Allows immediate change from one music selection to another without discord or interruption and uses ordinary 88-note player piano roll.

Full Orchestral Effect BUILT FOR THE MOVIES Fits the Pit

REED ORGAN, PIANO, ORGAN PIPES, DRUMS, CYMBALS, CRASH, WIND, WHISTLES, TRAPS OF ALL KINDS

PRICE RIGHT BUILT RIGHT TERMS RIGHT

AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER COMPANY Factory and Offices: Berkeley, California

Erker's

For "EVERYTHING" IN THE MOTION PICTURE LINE

Write for Catalog

608 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, Mo

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height.....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name.....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—6 E. 39th St.

ECLAIR.

ADRIFT (2 parts—Mar. 25).—In a little town in the Canadian woods a boy and girl live and love. Her father and his mother, nursing a life-long feud, forbid the two to associate. However, love finds a way and when the play opens we find them seated by a stream in the woods, casting sticks into the water. But the father learns of the clandestine meetings and decides to send his girl away to an aunt's to live. The boy and girl meet for the last time. Like the two sticks in the stream which drift away from each other, they must part with the hope of meeting again some day.

Meanwhile the father, missing his daughter, goes to the young trapper's house. The latter' smother forces him out of the door with a broom. Like two children they cannot forget their petty grievances, although lurking underneath is something more than friendship. That night the young trapper goes to the general store with his mother. While there the girl's father enters. His anger bests him. He attempts to draw his gun. There is a struggle, the gun is exploded and the boy's mother falls. Believing that he has killed her the man fights his way out and takes to the trail. The mother is only shocked, however, and after being carried home, she begs her son to go after the old man. On the trail of "The Little Sticks" the old trapper has penetrated far into the north. Having lost his way he is slowly freezing to death. The boy starts, following the trail. After weary hours he is about to give up when, glancing down he sees a man struggling on the icy rocks underneath the rapids. He makes his way down and attempts to drag him up. The ice and cold are too much. He loses his footing and locked in each other's embrace they crash down the bank over the rocks and into the water. Half dead, the young trapper struggles with the man to the opposite bank and falls into a boat which is drawn up. He has just enough strength to push her off and they float down the river towards the waterfalls and certain death. The mail driver, making his round, sees the floating boat. Watching his opportunity he drags it to the bank and, lifting the prostrate forms out, throws them on his sleigh and drives to town. Meanwhile, a party finding his coat and hat bring them back to his mother, who believes her son frozen to death.

Meanwhile, the girl has received a cold reception at her aunt's. She returns to her home the next day. The two men, recovered, also return. As the young trapper is making his way down the trail, he sees the girl coming toward him. Another minute and they are in each other's arms. They sit down contentedly watching two sticks floating by which have gradually gone together until they become entwined. Her father is bending over the boy's mother, while they see the dawn of something more than renewed friendship shining in each other's eyes.

A MARRIAGE FOR MONEY (Mar. 29).—Farmer Rondillard is notorious throughout the neighborhood for his bad temper and his miserliness. Rondillard tumbles into a pond near his farm and his servant, Martha, helps him out. The old farmer is overwhelmed by her kindness and he gives her a a shilling, with instructions that she is to buy a ticket in the National Lottery. He learns the number of her ticket is eighty-nine. Some time later, the farmer hears that eighty-nine has won a prize of $8,000. Thereupon the wily old man determines to keep Martha in ignorance of her good fortune, and to make her his wife. So he makes advances. Shortly afterwards she consents to marry him. He is thinking of the prize she is entitled to, and she is thinking of his reputed wealth. After the festivities are over Rondillard deems it an opportune moment to speak of the lottery ticket. Great is his dismay to learn that Martha has never had a ticket. With his shilling she has bought a highly-colored pair of stockings, which she delightedly holds up for his inspection.

SOCIETY AT SIMPSON CENTRE (Mar. 29).—A most beautiful series of drawings showing the doings at the small village of Simpson Centre. The town cut-up, the village Beau Brummel, the village Belle and several other very funny characters are shown in a series of funny incidents.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 105.—(Mar. 11).—Baseball Globe Trotters.—The New York and Chicago clubs return after a tour of the world to educate foreign countries how to play our national game—New York City. Sub-title—Ban Johnson, president of the American League. Sub-title—John J. McGraw is greeted by enthusiastic fans.

Disastrous Flood in California.—Heavy rains cause much damage as streams overflow, destroying valuable crops and property. Sub-title—Freight cars valued at $10,000 each are dumped into the river in an attempt to divert its course.

Great Swiss Festival.—Historical centennial procession to commemorate the regaining of Geneva in 1814—Geneva, Switzerland.

Cans Canned by Court Order.—Uncle Sam destroys 40,000 cans of condemned tomato pulp unfit for food—Cincinnati, Ohio.

Bread Line for Park Squirrels.—Their winter food supply lost through heavy snowstorms, the city takes care of the little pets—Central Park, New York City.

Sports in the Philippines.—Spanish-American War veterans hold barbecue and witness exciting sparring match—Manila, P. I.

Fashions.—Coats to wear over the summer frocks. (Made from Ladies' Home Journal patterns).

Heavy Blizzard Causes Wreck.—Many persons injured as two locomotives and train crash through factory in blinding snowstorm—Port Jervis, N. Y.

With the Elks in Boston.—Governor Walsh and his staff review Elks as they march before City Hall—Boston, Mass.

Fire Destroys Laundry.—Seventy-five girls narrowly escape as flames completely destroy five-story building—Baltimore, Md.

Opening of Parliament.—Loyal subjects watch as the King and Queen in the royal state coach are drawn to the House of Lords to open the Fourth Session of Parliament -London, England.

Great Movie's Comedian.—Ford Sterling signs contract with President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Mfg. Company to appear in Universal comedies.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist, Hy. Mayer, Editor-in-Chief of Puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

PRINCESS.

THE GRAND PASSION (Mar. 20).—Boyd secretly loves Muriel, whose preference is Joe, and upon her birthday the office force presents her with a lavalliere, while Boyd's gift is a flower. Enthused at the gift she wants to kiss everybody but Boyd, knowing that a kiss from her would mean a lot to him, he refrains from taking a kiss so lightly given. The crowd looks on his action as an insult to Muriel and bind him, while Muriel kisses him thrice, and with the last kiss goes the hate of a woman's scorn. His flower gift to her is used to slap his face after the third kiss. Enraged, the crowd starts to assault Boyd, taking their cue from Muriel's treatment, but she prevents. Later, with hope and spirit crushed, Boyd takes to drink, and, leaving the barroom, falls and his head is injured. When he recovers his mind is a blank, and it is only when Muriel insists that the scene of the birthday kissing be enacted that his memory is restored.

MAJESTIC.

HIS LITTLE PAL (Mar. 13).—Helen Kerns is the little daughter of a miner. Gentle and unaffected she wins the hearts of all who know her. One day she meets a fugitive, an escaped convict, and hides him in a cave while the sheriff's posse search for him in vain. She contrives to bring food to him day after day and a strong affection springs up between the convict and "his little pal," as he calls her.

The child's father strikes a rich vein in his mine, and news of his success reaches several hardened characters in the little settlement. While Kerns is away with the posse which is still trying to capture the convict, desperadoes break into the cabin and seek to discover his treasure. Failing to do so, they threaten Mrs. Kerns and her little daughter, and only the opportune arrival of the convict and his ultimate success in the fierce struggle which ensues, save the woman and child from injury. The convict's brave action wins a pardon for himself, and an interest in the mining claim.

Norman's suspicions are aroused at the driver of the machine, who commences to speed up and pays no attention to his questions. Norman leans over and is about to speak, when he sees upon the floor a false mustache. He is more suspicious, and leaning over the driver's shoulder sees the hands on the driving wheel. One of them bears the three long scratches which Norman gave the thief in the struggle. Norman is now sure that this is the thief and demands him to stop. Lynch, realizing that he is caught, grapples with Norman, who drags him over into the rear of the car. A terrific struggle takes place in the car, which is now running wild, and they, leaning against the half-opened door, falls into the road and over the steep embankment, just as the runaway auto dashes into a tree and explodes.

Helen meanwhile has called her father up and briefly explained. Dr. Strong immediately gets a car and rushes to his home, where he picks up Helen. They follow the general direction, but are finally lost. They are about to give up the search, when they hear a terrific explosion. Quickly going to the place they come upon the remains of the car.

The Orpheum Feature Film Company wishes to get acquainted with the Greater New York and New York State Exhibitors.

As an introduction we are offering two of the most sensational features produced in photoplay form.

"Evangeline"

Longfellow's greatest masterpiece, in two epochs and five parts.

And

Magda

A Modern Madame X

In Four Parts

The above features are conceded by press and public to be second to none both in acting and photography. Both features are playing to S. R. O. signs continuously. Exhibitors get in touch with us for early booking.

WONDERFUL PAPER in all sizes.

Extensive advertising matter.

THE ORPHEUM FEATURE FILM COMPANY Candler Building

220 West 42nd Street

PHONE 715 BRYANT New York City

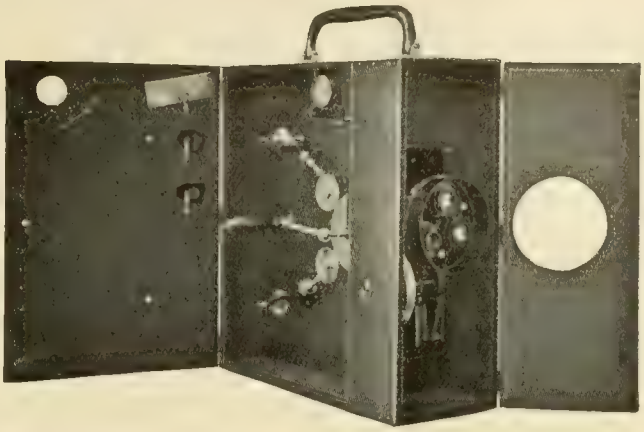
THE ONE BEST BET—

Helen Gardner Productions

ERNEMANN

Model B

Is the only machine for the experienced camera man. Unexcelled for workmanship and mechanism.



Model B

Known all over the civilized world. Film capacity, 400 feet. Fitted with Double Anastigmat F: 3.5, 2 inch focus. Sold any dealer's.

Send for free Catalog

Price with one lens, $300.00 With three lenses, $374.50

When you buy a Motion Picture Camera ask for an Ernemann Model B, and refuse inferior make

Photo-Kino Works ERNEMANN Photo-Kino Works

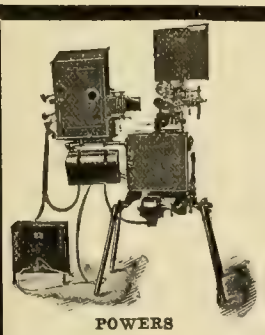
114 Fifth Avenue NEW YORK 114 Fifth Avenue

Telephone 7643 Chelsea



POWERS

Distributors for the

POWERS
SIMPLEX
MOTIOGRAPH
EDISON MACHINES

Get Our Estimate

Yes! We Have It

And You can get it when YOU want it.

We carry the most complete line of Motion Picture Theatre Supplies and Furnishings in America.

Call for It
Write for It
Wire for It

You Will Get It

Everything but Films and Posters. Try us once, you'll convince yourself.

SIMPLEX

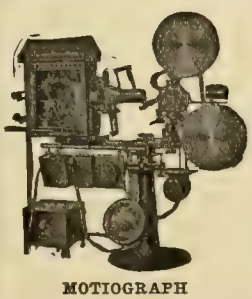
Our Feature the

P. T. E.
CONDENSER

Guaranteed not to Color

$1.00 Each

Try it. You Risk Nothing



MOTIOGRAPH

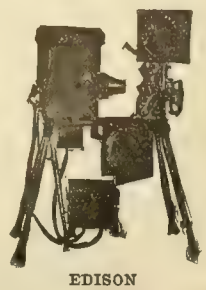
We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street New York City

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

HAVE YOU VISITED OUR SALESROOMS?



EDISON

Norman and Lynch meanwhile have rolled to the bottom of the embankment and both are stunned by the fall. Lynch regains consciousness first and is about to diabolically end Norman's life by dropping a heavy rock upon his head, when Norman comes to himself just in time to avoid being crushed. There is another struggle, in which Norman is victorious and succeeds in holding Lynch just as Helen and her father come up, together with a policeman they picked up on the way.

Lynch, of course, is arrested and pays the penalty. The book is restored to Dr. Strong, and Helen throws herself into Norman's arms in a loving embrace.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 62 (Mar. 4).—President Reviews Parade.—In a snow storm he visits Alexandra, Va.

Long Island Town Celebrates.—Children of Riverhead, N. Y., march on Washington's Birthday.

The Hand-Cuff King.—A French expert performs marvels in Paris.

A Seminary Consumed by Flames.—New Rochelle, N. Y., private school is wiped out by fire.

Coxey Plans New Army.—Ohio "General" expects to move on Washington with unemployed hosts.

Honolulu's Mid-Pacific Carnival.—Ocean crossroads city is scene of gay festival.

Dartmouth's "Misleading Lady."—College boys produce theatrical success at Hudson Theater, New York.

Buddhas Snowed In.—100 of them at Niko, Japan, border a Winter road.

A Cross-Country Run.—Los Angeles athletes compete in exciting race.

Military Day in Berlin.—German city celebrates a Winter festival.

Broncho Busting in Texas.—State Corn Show at Houston brings out some vicious animals.

Oil Tanker Launched.—"Frank H. Buck," largest afloat, is christened at Union Iron Works, San Francisco.

Alumni at Columbia College.—Minute men on parade on Washington's Birthday at New York University.

Alps' Trains Snowed In.—Switzerland's railways battle against hardships of Winter.

Fire Costs Two Lives.—Tenement house blaze in New York makes spectacular blaze.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 63 (Mar. 11).—"Movies" Get Big Theaters.—Million dollar Broadway houses change from drama to motion pictures.

An Exciting Steeplechase.—Big event at Windsor, England, ends in disaster.

Wild Floods Spread Terror.—Los Angeles, Cal., has record season of rainfall

Oldest Steamers Last Cruise.—S. S. "Collier," launched in 1848, goes ashore on English coast.

The New Orleans Mardi Gras.—Rex arrives and thousands view the parade.

Dogs vs. Hares.—"Tolstoi" wins in mighty contest at St. Cloud, France

All Kinds of Weather in California.—Truckee in the mountains is the scene of winter festivities.

Gasperilla in Tampa.—Florida City Carnival runs New Orleans a close second.

Baseball Practice in South.—St. Louis "Browns" and Chicago "Cubs" warming up in St. Petersburg, Fla

Digging Out the Union Pacific.—Six engines push a snow-plow through Western snowdrifts.

"White Sox" and "Giants" Are Back.—World girdling baseball players home from long journey

THANHOUSER.

THE EUGENIC BOY (Mar. 15).—Cyril Reginald Pointdexter, the eugenic boy, is kept strictly clean, and is brought up in a manner much to his distaste. Cyril longs to be out in the streets playing ball with the other boys of his age, but Cyril's mother and father wouldn't allow their child to associate with such dirty little urchins. Everything is most sanitary and up-to-date and Cyril is provided with a great deal of toys, which he cares nothing about. Cyril is dressed in a Lord Fauntleroy suit of velvet with a deep lace collar and cuffs, etc., and has long blond curly hair. One day the nurse takes Cyril out in the park for a walk. She sits down on a bench and reads, while Cyril on seeing his opportunity, slips away. Mike Googan, a very ragged, very dirty and very tough boy, with tangled red hair and wearing an old straw hat without a brim, with two front teeth missing, comes along, and makes fun and laughs at Cyril. They quarrel and agree to fight it out. Cyril wins the fight, and asks Mike if he has had "enough," to which Mike readily agrees, and Cyril lets him up. They then shake hands and vow eternal friendship. Cyril's father has been an unseen witness to the fight and he greets Cyril rapturously. On their arrival home to mother, who is in a state of collapse because of her darling's disappearance, papa says, "In spite of all your foolishness we have a real boy." Mother agrees to his living the life of a real boy in the future.

THE CAT'S PAW (2 parts—Mar. 17).—In this adventure the diplomatic free lance and his brilliant aid in war. Nan Tremain, are again pitted against their relentless enemy, Pfaff. England and Japan have entered into a secret treaty, and extraordinary precautions are taken to prevent anything about it leaking out. The Marquis Yato, the Emperor's diplomatic adviser, brings the treaty from England, but comes in the guise of a captain of a cruiser which forms part of a squadron dispatched to Great Britain. The arrangements are that the message shall be delivered to a cabinet minister, Lord Faresdale, whose comfy home is near Clovelly, where the squadron is to anchor. Lord Faresdale goes aboard the cruiser, receives the copy of the treaty and then places it for safe-keeping in a safe in his library. In some way Pfaff has learned about the treaty and just the manner in which it would be delivered. Two of his spies are in Lord Faresdale's home as guests, one an Austrian general and the other a young noblewoman. These two dragged into the plot Capt. Mandeville, an Englishman, who is in love with the girl. By tricking him in cards and telling him false stories concerning Lord Faresdale, they secure his aid, he believing that the package he is to steal from the safe contains love letters foolishly written by the noblewoman's sister. Fortunately for the cause of England, Lord Trevor and his ward are at Faresdale's house during this time and their suspicions become aroused by certain peculiar incidents. In the end the diplomatic free lance and his ward give aid in the nick of time and even Mandeville, the poor cat's paw, did not suffer while Pfaff and his conspirators are driven from the field.

BEAUTY FILM.

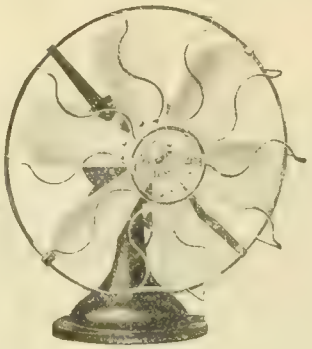
THE PEACOCK FEATHER FAN (Mar. 24).—John Keith, a successful musician, sits in his studio smoking. He takes a broken peacock feather from his table drawer and in a vision the scenes of his life pass before him. He with his friend Billy, whose studio is just across the hall from John's, goes to tea at the Barton's studio, where Billy introduces John to his life-long friend, Polly Bainbridge.

John falls in love with her and though Martin Courtland has loved her since she was a child, she prefers John. Courtland makes way for the younger man. Mrs. Willing, a beautiful widow, tries to flirt with, first Courtland, who calmly ignores her, and then John, who is frankly absorbed in Polly, then Billy, who responds to her advances. The Bartons give a dance and Polly appears in a black gown carrying a peacock feather fan. John takes her into the conservatory and proposes to her. Polly accepts him and he takes her in his arms. In doing so the fan is crushed between them and the girl, smiling ruefully shows him a broken feather. John detaches the feather and puts the detached part into his pocket.

Then one afternoon some two weeks later Mrs. Willing calls on Polly and asks her to loan her the peacock feather fan as it matches the gown she intends wearing that evening. Polly complies. Later the same afternoon John calls up, and Polly tells him she won't be able to see him that evening as she has such a dreadful headache.

John asks Billy to go to the theater with him, but Billy declines; so John goes alone. Returning at about half past eleven as he passes Billy's door he sees silhouetted against the glass Billy with a woman in his arms. In a spirit of teasing, thinking it some model, he knocks and Billy, answering the knock, seems so desirous of keeping him out that John, in order to give him a bad moment or two, goes in.

Billy is uncomfortable. John walks about as if he knew nothing and whenever he approaches a large screen, Billy tries to steer him away. Suddenly he stops, for on a model stand lies a peacock feather fan. He picks it up and finds the telltale broken feather. Without a word he leaves the room.



The Fan That Does While Others Buzz

The Westinghouse Electric Fan has a long record for quietness, economy and durability. You know when it is running by its breeze, not by its noise. It uses little current and requires no attention from the beginning of the season to the end.

Send for Fan Folder

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

FEATURE BUYERS
TAKE NOTICE

We will sell the following desirable features with rights, including excellent 1, 3 and 6 sheet posters, perfect condition:

INTRIGUES, RUSSIAN COURT
3 reels $150.00
MAN WITH SEVEN FACES
3 reels (Detective) $125.00
UNLUCKY DIAMOND
3 reels $140.00
MYSTERIOUS SHOT
4 reels $170.00
IN THE GRIP OF THE PASHA
3 reels $160.00

We will also sell 25 other selected features, including paper, in perfect order, from $40.00 up.

[illegible] commercials, excellent order, many desirable subjects, at $4.00 per reel.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS
5 West 14th Street :: New York

WHY SHOW A
Jumpy—Flickery—BUSINESS KILLING Picture?
WHEN YOU CAN
HAVE YOUR MACHINE FIXED AS GOOD AS NEW. WORK GUARANTEED.
We sell all makes of machines, new and second-hand. Also machine parts, supplies, tickets, carbons, etc.
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.,
87 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

The Helen Gardner Productions
Mean Standing Room Only

Grease It

THE IDEAL LUBRICANT
Is the best Life Insurance for your Projector Gears and Bearings.
Wears Longer and is more efficient than ordinary Oil or Grease.
If your dealer cannot supply, we will forward a tube by mail on receipt of 25 cents.
GENERAL LUBRICANTS CO., - - - Milford, New Jersey

THE TIGER
IN 4 PARTS

ARS-VERITAS

THRILL AFTER THRILL

ENDING WITH A CLIMAX OF PRODIGIOUS EXCITEMENT, A REAL BOX OFFICE MAGNET. YOUR TERRITORY IS OPEN NOW, IT MAY NOT BE NEXT WEEK.

GLORIA AMERICAN CO.

110 WEST 40th ST. NEW YORK.

M. Ray Harrison

That night he packs and leaves for a trip around the world, after writing a note to Polly, breaking off everything. He tries to forget the girl and the friend who has betrayed him, but cannot. At the end of a year he returns. Billy explains that it was not Polly behind the screen, but it is too late, Polly has married Courtland.

And now, he sits, a famous man, lonely in his studio, staring moodily at a broken peacock feather.

DOMINO.

THE BELLS OF AUSTI (Mar. 19—2 parts).—Jose, son of wealthy plantation owner, Don Luis, gambles. Pedro, who keeps the gambling hall, and Paquita, a pretty dancing girl, plan to ensnare him. Jose owes them money. They demand payment, but Don Luis will not give the money. Jose is betrothed to Mercedes, the daughter of Don Rafael. A new mission is being built at Austi. Jose promises to pay his debts on a certain night and when he does not meet Pedro, the latter goes to his home and sees Don Luis secreting his money in a desk. Later he is in the act of taking the money when Jose, hearing a noise, comes and makes Pedro give up the money and also him the I O Us. Pedro then makes his getaway. Don Luis comes upon the scene and mistaking his son for a burglar shoots him; when he discovers the I O Us in Jose's hand he thinks that Jose was attempting to rob him. Pedro flees with Paquita and becomes the head of a bandit outfit who are informed of a caravan with rich furnishings for the new mission. They capture this, but one priest escapes and informs the Padre in charge of the mission. He calls the people together and with Don Luis at their head, they capture the bandits, and Pedro is wounded. Dying, he asks for Don Luis and Mercedes, who upon the death of the lover, has become a sister. To them he confesses his part in the killing of Jose and thus the name of Jose is cleared from the stain.

BRONCHO.

WOLVES OF THE UNDERWORLD (2 parts—April 1).—Julius Adler, a poor East Side Jew, is robbed by a gang of toughs who, at the appearance of officer Maloney, made a quick getaway. Maloney takes the Jew to the police station and reports the case to the chief, who orders the gang arrested. They get Dan Kelly, who is a well known leader among the toughs, and he is sentenced to five years up the river. He swears vengeance on Maloney. The Jew is so elated and pleased with the protection given him by Maloney that he gives Maloney's daughter, Mary, a bracelet with the work "Mizpah" engraved on it. Ten years pass and Dan Kelly, now a leader of politics, frames up a job on Sergeant Maloney. Gambling is tabooed in town, but Dave Monte, a confederate of Kelly's, reports a gambling house running full swing, and when the proprietor, who is Kelly, is arrested he claims to have paid Maloney for protection and has Dave Monte as a witness. Maloney is discharged in disgrace from the force. He is unable to find work and becomes very ill. The agent of the apartment house gives them two days to pay their rent or get out. Mary decides to see the owner of the house and asks for an extension of time. She finds that the landlord is the old Jew, who recognizes her when he sees the bracelet. He is now a rich man and succeeds in clearing Maloney and having him reinstated.

KAY-BEE.

DESERT GOLD (2 parts—Mar. 13).—John Carson and Jim Hardy are prospecting in the desert when, one day while alone, Hardy discovers a skeleton and a tin box containing some very rich nuggets and a note giving to the finder the rich placer claim. Hardy is very greedy and when he recalls that John has taken from him Mary, the girl he loves, he resolves not to tell John of the rich find and discovers some way of getting rid of him. During the night he takes the burro, some provisions, and filling the water hole with sand, leaves his partner and goes to the rich claim, working same. When John awakens he is astounded when he realizes the treachery of Jim. He endeavors to return to the settlement, but becomes lost. He is found, however, by a wagon train, who take him back to the settlement and Mary. When he is strong again, John starts out to find Hardy. Hardy in the meantime has mined considerable ore, and is returning to the settlement when he is overtaken by a terrible sandstorm. His burro gets away from him, and dying, Hardy writes a note to be delivered to John, in which he asks his forgiveness and tells him of the location of the rich mine. John also is caught in the storm and finds the dead body of Hardy and the note.

AMERICAN.

THE TURNING POINT (Mar. 23—2 reels).—Dayton Reeves, the son of an aristocratic California family, inherits a taste for drink. He is a man of prominent club life—sincerely devoted to his [illegible] mother and only sister. Nan Clark, of the underworld, is the only child of a poor and devoted mother. In the poorest section of a big city, this girl is surrounded by crooks of every type. One, Chic Fagan, induces her to make the first leap into a criminal life. He persuades her to burglarize the Reeves' home and so lift herself and struggling mother out of their poverty, making it clear to the desperate girl that it is the "easiest way." Dayton Reeves, leaving his mother, departs for an evening of gambling and drink at his club. Catharine Reeves, a heavy loser at a recent progressive bridge whist party, tries in vain to obtain from her mother an addition to her monthly allowance in order to free herself of her financial obligations to Mrs. Chandler. Mrs. Reeves cannot comply with her daughter's wishes, and sits alone. Nan enters the house by a rear window and stands breathless before entering the dining-hall. Dayton Reeves departs from his club under the influence of liquor. Entering his home he is distressed to find an unwelcome visitor, whom he takes pity upon, telling her if she will promise never to steal again, he will let her go free and not warn the police. Dayton, in the act of consuming a glass of whiskey, is stopped by the gentle hand of Nan, who offers a compact. If Dayton will stop drinking, she will stop stealing.

After a brief elapse of time Dayton Reeves decides to give Nan her chance in life, to take her into his mother's home as a companion for his mother. Catherine Reeves, to meet her financial obligations, pawns her jewelry to free her from debt. A progressive whist bridge party is held at the Reeves homestead. Catherine Reeves is a heavy loser and is almost panic stricken. Seeing her opportunity, she steals from a guest a small silver purse, containing a large amount of money. Mrs. Filkins discovering her loss, is deeply incensed and demands of Dayton Reeves that he send for a detective to clear the matter then and there. Nan, who has now become like one of the family, is in the room at the time of the theft, and by a natural coincidence sees Catherine Reeves take the purse. The arrival of the detective creates excitement and as Dayton Reeves is explaining the serious incident, the detective notices Nan Clark, once of the underworld, and in his mind, "he need look no further." Nan persuades Catherine to quickly pass her the purse. The detective requests a woman to search Nan. Wrapped in her handkerchief, clasped tightly in her hand, is found the missing money. Dayton Reeves can scarcely believe that all his efforts to reform Nan have failed. He tells the detective to take her away. After Nan's departure, the guests, having dispersed, Catherine's conscience becomes her master. Falling upon her knees before her brother, she tells of the loyalty of Nan and of her own guilt and the reason that prompted it. The butler is quickly followed to summon the detective and bring back Nan, who enters the Reeve's homestead, not as the companion of a dear and loving mother, but as the sweetheart and loving wife of Dayton Reeves.

A DECREE OF JUSTICE (Mar. 25).—Will Markell, a happy-go-lucky, careless sort of a fellow, arrives home about 2 a. m. in a half intoxicated condition, throwing a pack of cards and some dice on the library table. His brother, Ed, has been waiting for him and tells him he had better go West and try to make a man of himself. Ed, a studious, ambitious fellow, is working on a safety bank vault door device. Will in the West has used up his money and as a last chance tries his luck with his last few coins in a crap game and loses all. He receives a letter from his mother, telling him of Ed's final success with his patent. Will decides to return home and feign blindness, to learn of the mechanism of Ed's safety device. The installation of the device is made, the president, cashier and board of directors being present, also Mrs. Markell and her two sons, Ed and Will, the latter, everyone believing to be blind. Mason, Ed's private secretary, the only person that he has trusted with his plans, takes them from the safe to refer to them. This Ed learns through his stenographer.

A month later, Ed, Will and their mother are seated at breakfast when Ed is notified by telephone that there has been an attempted robbery at the bank, the burglars being partially successful in opening the vault. Ed immediately suspects Mason, who is discharged. Ed is requested to try to effect a more complete safety device. This he does, after hours of work, but drops into a dose about midnight. Will enters from the garden through the French windows and still feigning blindness, convinces himself that Ed is asleep and sees and learns of the complete mechanism of the safety device.

The next night Will enters with a skeleton key. The bank watchman is napping. Will approaches the vault. Quietly but quickly he opens the outer vault door and is about to open the second steel bar door to which is attached the safety device when "nature intervenes" and Will is actually stricken blind. Strain on the optic nerve through feigning blindness has been too great. He unknowingly grasps the safety device. The police officers are summoned through it, but he finds his way home before they arrive. They follow in his footsteps immediately. He enters the same French window, staggers, actually falling over the library table, the same one that he had previously always seen, but apparently did not see. The noise summons his brother. The officers enter and are about to take him away, when their mother coming downstairs is stopped by Ed. He draws the portieres covering Will's fate from her view. The officers take Will, he pleading with Ed, "For God's sake, do not tell mother!" And their mother never knew!

RELIANCE.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Chapter 9—Mar. 16).—Our Mutual Girl visits a hospital for crippled children in the Bronx and as the little ones sit around in wheel chairs on the porch she distributes the dolls she dressed the night before and also flowers, dresses and money. Then she goes with her aunt and footman in the big touring car down to the crowded tenement district of the lower East Side along First Avenue. Here she jumps out of the tonneau into the dirty street filled with push carts and distributed dolls and money as the great unwashed crowds around her. From there she visited the Little Church Around the Corner, where so many celebrities have been married, in Twenty-ninth Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues. Going uptown, "Our Mutual Girl" went by the famous Casino Theater, where "High Jinks" was playing. Her aunt promised to take her that evening. Then came a visit to Hepner, the famous wig maker, where "Our Mutual Girl" and her aunt selected colored wigs.

Continuing uptown "Our Mutual Girl's" party got in a taxi jam at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue. Then they stopped at the home of Dorothy Dix, the famous authoress, who showed "Our Mutual Girl" a copy of her latest book, "Mirandy." That evening "Our Mutual Girl" and her aunt went to the theater in their colored wigs. Later, tired out, she fell asleep and dreamed she was playing a principal part in "High Jinks."

THE SMUGGLERS OF SLIGO (2 parts—Mar. 18).—An Irish smuggler of a hundred years ago has a beautiful daughter whom the mate of the smuggling ship loves. She loves a revenue officer. Her father quits smuggling for his daughter's sake. The mate gives up all hope of winning the girl and saves the life of the revenue officer by rescuing him from the sea where the smugglers had cast him. The mate is killed by a stray shot. The revenue officer is accused, but later is cleared of all blame and wins the girl.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

METROPOLITAN FILM CO., INC.

THE MONEY GOD; or DO RICHES BRING HAPPINESS (Five parts).—At the Millionaires' Club, Lord Chester and Admiral White become involved in a discussion: "Do riches bring happiness?" by reason of an advertisement reading: "A FORMER SHIP CAPTAIN NOW IN POVERTY SEEKS EMPLOYMENT. JOHN PALMER, 124 SMITH ST."

The members of the club are brought into discussion. Some declare every poor man can be made happy by money, whereas others are of the opposite opinion. Lord Chester, a man of tremendous wealth, proposes a wager that the advertiser would be made more unhappy by wealth. Admiral White and the members of the club accept the wager upon the following conditions: 1. Lord Chester binds himself to carry it out within two years. 2. The wager refers to the advertiser. 3. The winner receives $500,000.

Disguising himself as a "gang" boss, Chester calls on John Palmer and offers him employment. Palmer, living with his wife and daughter, Ethel, is in dire need and has been gladly availing himself of the proffered financial assistance of Dick, Ethel's sweetheart, an honest young blacksmith.

Chester secretes $100,000 in gold in an abandoned sewer, and after a day of toil goes to the inn with Palmer and spends money recklessly. He feigns intoxication and when admonished by Palmer drops hints of his hidden store of wealth. As Chester expected, Palmer's cupidity is aroused and he follows Chester and discovers the gold, which he loses no time in appropriating. Palmer explains his sudden wealth by an alleged legacy and sets up a magnificent establishment in which Chester succeeds in obtaining a position as a butler—having discarded his disguise of a laborer. Palmer becomes fired with a desire for great riches and seeks opportunities for making usurious loans. Owing to infected waters the fishermen are prevented from plying their vocation and Palmer loans them money. Later, when fishing is again permitted the fishermen have been unable to repay their loans and Palmer enforces his rights to the letter and seizes their property. Through such

A Sure Moneymaker—
A Helen Gardner Feature

MOVING UNIVERSAL PICTURES

WE ARE ON OUR WAY TO LARGER QUARTERS!

The oldest office of the UNIVERSAL is forced to move—we have got to get larger quarters, that's all. This Saturday is the day—and we are going from to the largest and finest quarters ever occupied by a film exchange in New York.

111 EAST 14th STREET

Our new offices are five times the size of our other offices, but that is not our reason for moving. We are now more central, have better facilities for business, and can give our patrons better service.

FOR SERVICE SEE M. H. HOFFMAN, Manager,

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK
115 EAST 23rd STREET NEW YORK CITY
PHONE, STUYVESANT 1000

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL MOTOR CO.
379 East 145th Street NEW YORK

Motion Picture Machines
REPAIRED, REBUILT and REMODELLED

Repair Parts for All Makes Carried in Stock

Electrical Repairing and Armature Rewinding Motors, Economizers, Transformer Coils, Arc Lamps, Fans, Resistance Grids, etc.

QUANTITY + QUALITY
at 10c per copy is poor ECONOMY

Subscribe for one year and get 52 issues of the

Moving Picture World

DOMESTIC	CANADA	FOREIGN
$3.00	$3.50	$4.00

BIO
RECOGNIZED STANDARD CARBONS

GREEN, BROWN, BLUE, OR BLACK AND WHITE or any other color makes no difference to

BIO Carbons

They are the only carbons that bring out

WELL DEFINED

all lines of a picture

"They Are the Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

New York	Milwaukee	San Francisco
165 Greenwich St.	114 Huron St.	163 Second St.

And All Live Film Exchanges and Supply Dealers

methods Palmer amasses sufficient money to secure control of a steamship company. Ethel has never ceased to love Dick, who writes her a happy little letter that he is coming to ask her father for his consent to their marriage. He receives a terrible setback when he learns that the wealthy John Palmer refuses to accept a poor blacksmith as a son-in-law.

Palmer meets Sir Gilbert—a wealthy man—and encourages him in his attentions to Ethel, who, at her father's command, becomes engaged to her unwelcome suitor. On the wedding night, as the time for the ceremony is at hand, she tears off her bridal finery and goes to Dick, and the two are married. Palmer is incensed, and commands his wife never to mention his daughter's name again, or to communicate with her. She secretly sends her blessing to Ethel, and receives a reply from the girl. Palmer catches his wife reading the letter, forcibly takes it from her, and when he sees the contents, is wild with anger. After a big scene he drives the woman—who suffered poverty with him—from his palatial home. Burning with injured vanity he goes to his office and finds a telegram from Captain Evans, reading "The Ship Victoria is unseaworthy and I will not take command." Palmer loses no time in getting to the dock where the vessel, with a heavy list of passengers, is awaiting the order to start. He summarily discharges the captain, takes command himself and starts on the voyage.

Captain Evans' misgivings were not unfounded. The vessel springs a big leak and the water pours into the boiler rooms. Herculean efforts are made to stop the leak and, with the aid of pumps, to keep the water from reaching the red hot boilers. The effort is useless, and terrific explosions scatter scalding steam and burning coal. The fire is kept below the hatches by the crew, while the officers battle with the frenzied passengers on deck. The wireless sends out its sharp call for help, but the ship is doomed. Overcome with horror, Palmer staggers to his cabin and sinks into a chair. With death staring him in the face he realizes the falseness of his life.

Like a mad man he plunges into the malestrom of death. The crew follow him, and many an unconscious form is carried through the boiling waters and blistering flame to the decks above. The captain seems to bear a charmed life, but he is finally laid low, and is carried dying to his cabin.

A wireless is received from the steamer Empress that she will reach the wreck in a few hours. Delirious with the pain of his burns Palmer sees a vision of the devil spring out of a huge trunk which suddenly appears before him. The devil grins sardonically as he picks up hands full of gold and lets them filter through his fingers. Palmer fights like a demon himself to attack the apparition, and after a terrific struggle with a half dozen seamen who seek to restrain him he drops dead.

Chester has been a passenger—in disguise—and as he sees the terrible ending of the wager his heart is filled with anguish. The rescue ship arrives and no time is wasted saving the bodies of the dead in the frantic haste of rescuing the living. The next day the captain's cabin is seen on the derelict, filled with water, on which gruesomely floats the figure of John Palmer. Chester writes the Club a report, and ends his letter as follows: "I have won but regret it deeply. What profits it a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Please devote the stakes to the relief of the victims of this disaster."

ITALA FILM CO.

LOST IN DARKNESS (Four Parts).—A story which hinges upon the effect produced by the sudden accession to affluence of a comparatively poor man. A young engineer in a country town receives the good news of his appointment to an important position in a large city. His first impulse is to promise his young wife all sorts of luxuries in his new-found promotion. He becomes a rich and prosperous inventor and attracting the attentions of a young woman of fashion, neglects his young wife. This girl, however, is of a forgiving disposition and a reconciliation ensues. But the husband is disloyal and reverts to his fashionable enchantress. An explosion at his works blinds him. The wife in disguise engages herself as his nurse and the fashionable woman deserts him, not, however, before descending to the meanness of attempting to rob her blind victim of the remains of the money she had helped him dissipate. A fortunate restoration of his sight reunites him to his always forgiving wife.

ECLECTIC.

ESTHER (Three Parts—Mar. 20).—In the days of King Ahasueras, who reigned over all the provinces from India to Ethiopia, a feast was given to show the riches of his kingdom. Thinking to display the great beauty of his queen, Vashti, the king commanded her to appear before him. But Vashti refused to obey the king's command, which greatly angered him. The wise men of the kingdom counseled the king that he should punish the queen for her disobedience lest all the wives should rebel against the will of their husbands. So it was decreed that Vashti should no longer be queen. Then the officers of the king gathered together the young girls of the kingdom so that he might choose a new queen.

Now, there was a certain Jew named Mordecai in the palace and he had brought up Esther, the daughter of his uncle. And when the king beheld her, he was well pleased and chose her from among all the rest to be queen, instead of Vashti. But Mordecai charged her not to reveal that she was a Jewess. And it chanced that one day Mordecai learned of a plot against the king's life, and this he told to Esther, who informed the king. The plotters were hanged and Mordecai's name was written in the king's book of chronicles.

There was in the kingdom a prince, Haman, who was held in high esteem by the king. And all the king's servants reverenced Haman, but Mordecai would not bow before him. Then was Haman angered against him and he induced the king to order the destruction of all the Jews. When Mordecai learned of this he sent word to Esther, beseeching her to influence the king in behalf of the Jews, her people. But there was a law in the land forbidding anyone to go before Ahasueras, unless ordered to do so, and Esther feared the wrath of the king. However, Mordecai persuaded her and she appeared before the king and was received by him. Esther invited the king and Haman to a banquet the next day. Haman was much pleased to be thus honored.

When he beheld Mordecai at the king's gate, he ordered gallows to be erected that the Jew might be hanged thereon. But the king desired to honor Mordecai for his deed in warning him of the plot to murder him, and asked Haman how he might reward a faithful servant. Haman, thinking that the king wished to honor him, suggested great honors. When he learned that it was Mordecai who was to be rewarded, Haman was in great fer lest the king should hear of his intention to hang Mordecai, who was then arrayed in the king's apparel and the royal crown was placed upon his head. Then Haman led Mordecai through the streets of the city, proclaiming that the king thus honored the Jew.

On the next day, when the king attended the banquet, Esther told him that she was one of the Jews and that Haman had sought to destroy all of her people. Then was the king angered against Haman and ordered him to be hanged on the gallows, whereon he had sought to hang Mordecai. Mordecai was then given the house and lands of Haman and was made a great man in the kingdom. And so also was Esther greatly honored and peace was declared unto all her people.

Wire for Unsold Territory — the
Helen Gardner Productions

Perfect Positive Printing

References from the largest feature concerns in the business, on request. Our factory force is composed of experts of long experience. All work is absolutely guaranteed.

PRICE, 4c PER FOOT

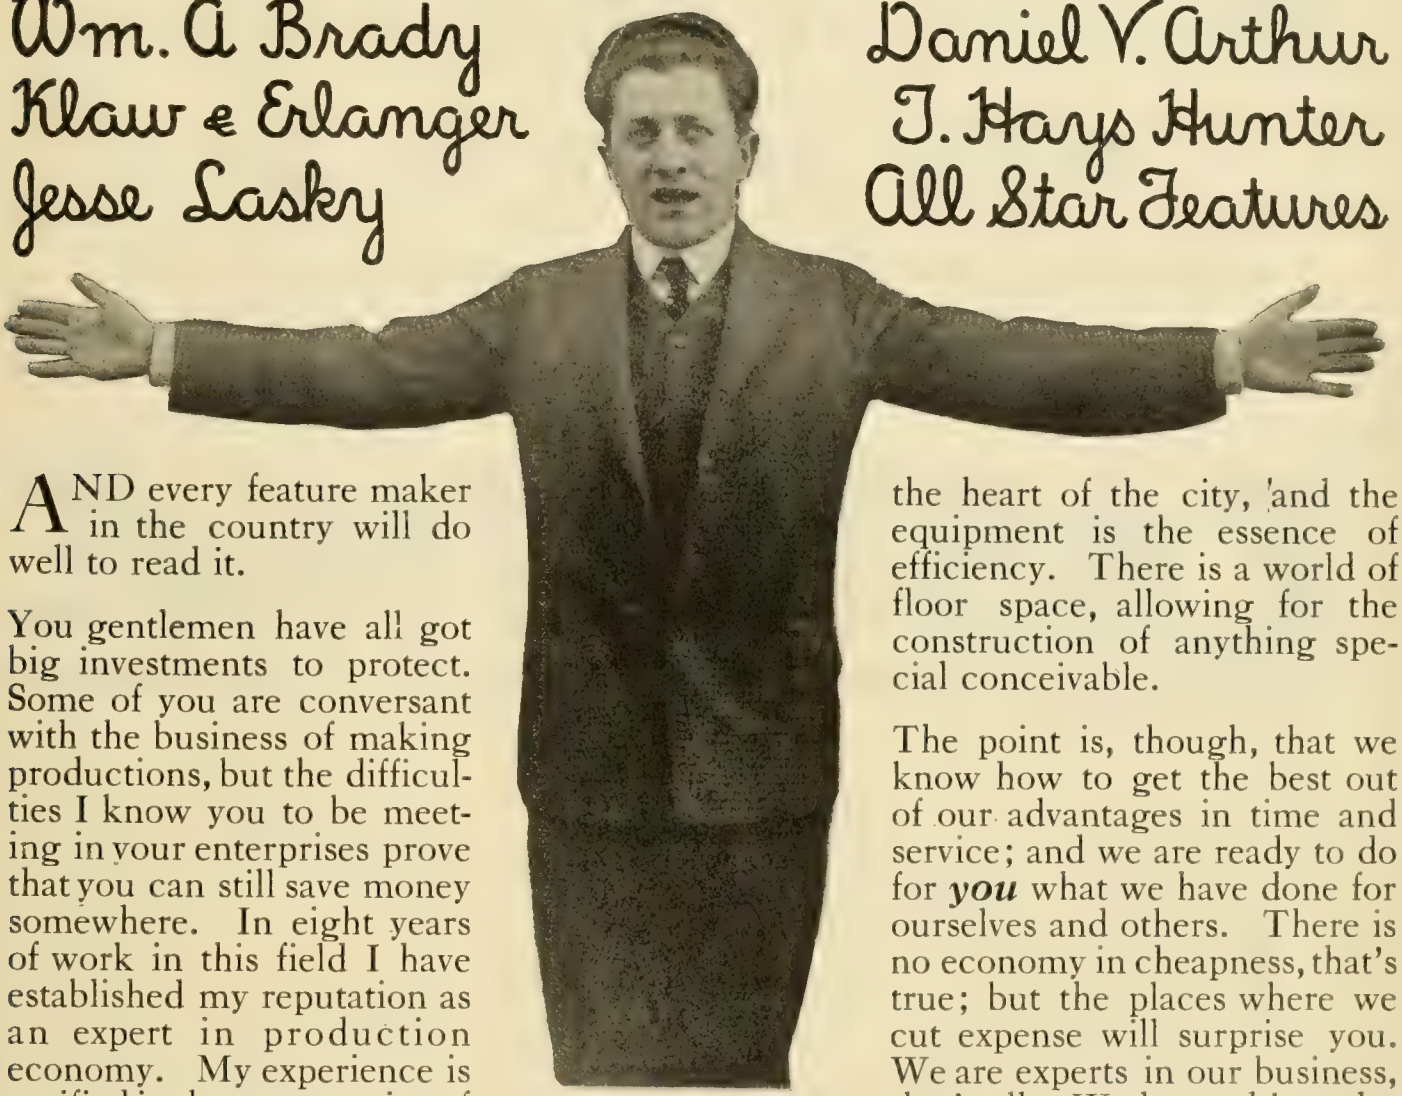
Not cheap work, but assurance that the finest possible results will be obtained from negatives.

WHYTE MOTION PICTURE ENTERPRISES ::

110 West 40th Street
New York City

Here's a Ruby ad written specially for

Wm. A Brady
Klaw & Erlanger
Jesse Lasky
Daniel V. Arthur
J. Hays Hunter
All Star Features



AND every feature maker in the country will do well to read it.

You gentlemen have all got big investments to protect. Some of you are conversant with the business of making productions, but the difficulties I know you to be meeting in your enterprises prove that you can still save money somewhere. In eight years of work in this field I have established my reputation as an expert in production economy. My experience is typified in the construction of the Ruby Twinplex Studio, which expensive producers have pronounced the last word in economy of operation. I built it in the heart of the city, and the equipment is the essence of efficiency. There is a world of floor space, allowing for the construction of anything special conceivable.

The point is, though, that we know how to get the best out of our advantages in time and service; and we are ready to do for you what we have done for ourselves and others. There is no economy in cheapness, that's true; but the places where we cut expense will surprise you. We are experts in our business, that's all. We learned it under the most trying conditions the industry ever saw, and that's the story of our success. You can profit by it.

Let our big seven-passenger Pullman call for you and your party. Let us show you through the studio. You will be bewildered and you'll hate to leave it. You will find us ready to talk production with you differently from the wild, fantastic way the average film man talks. We're with you for business—right now. One consultation is all you need—we're economic in time and lung-power, too. And, even if we don't deal, you will never regret your visit; you're just as welcome.

RUBY TWINPLEX STUDIO Direction, Leon J. Rubinstein

217 East 24th Street, New York City

NOW READY

TO PROJECT ON THE SCREEN
TO DELIVER TOMORROW
TO PROVE AN ELDORADO FOR

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS

BARKER'S GREATEST MASTERPIECE,

The Wonderful Seven Reel Emotion Picture

EAST LYNNE

Based on the most widely read book and frequently played drama in the English language —a poem of smiles and tears.

"Tried out" at Shubert's Princess Theatre, Montreal, for one week only — receipts $3817.50 at 25, 50, 75c — double the "take" of any picture ever exhibited in Montreal, and the big ones have all played there!

After this demonstration of the "drawing power" of this big subject we will positively dispose of all territory within two weeks in order to concentrate all energy on other productions.

European Office, H. WINIK, 35 Little Newport St., London, England

ALSO IN THE MARKET FOR QUALITY PICTURES FOR EUROPE FOR SPOT CASH. NOTHING TOO BIG!

"EAST LYNNE" is equipped with the most complete and beautiful line of paper ever made for a picture—one twenty-four-sheet; three six-sheets; two three-sheets; three one-sheets; one six-sheet streamer; one four-sheet streamer; three window cards. All pictorial, and subject to being "bunched" or "built up" in combinations from 32 sheets down.

A Real "Find" for Real Showmen.

THE FOLLOWING TERRITORY SOLD WITHOUT ADVERTISING OR SOLICITATION

New York State — WM. FOX, 126 West 46th Street, New York City

Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia — APEX FEATURE SERVICE, 315 Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut — FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. OF NEW ENGLAND, 31 Beach Street, Boston, Mass.

Illinois, Wisconsin — CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO. (ALFRED HAMBURGER, Pres.), Schiller Building, Chicago, Illinois

Ohio — H. R. ASHBROOK, 413 Summit Street, Toledo, Ohio

California, Arizona, Nevada — I. C. ACKERMAN, Humboldt Bank Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Offers Invited for Each Remaining State and Canada

Others are looking for a chance like this so be wise—Act Quick

THIS IS A NOW OR NEVER PROPOSITION!!

P. P. CRAFT, 145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK CITY

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY.—A motion picture theater manager, excellent advertiser, can get results. Desires to locate a permanent position anywhere in U. S. or Canada. Salary or salary and commission. Eight long years of successful experience, live and energetic. Has own original ideas. Strictly sober and reliable. Address all communications to P. O. BOX 213, York, Pa.

CINEMATOGRAPHER.—Technical expert in all branches of the trade. Employed by the best studios for the past five years. Wishes to connect with concern or individual just starting, or, contemplating the manufacture of motion pictures wanting a high-class man. O. P. J., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

LICENSED OPERATOR.—Neat appearance, seeks position. A1 recommendation. Address O. WEIGEL, Dolgeville, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—April 4 picture pianist improviser and sight reader, allround man who understands the picture business from A to Z in addition to my music. All letters answered, but information seekers save stamps. Kansas, Colorado, Missouri or Oklahoma preferred. Old friends write. CRAZY CROSON, 606 Mathewson Ave., Wichita, Kan.

OPERATOR AND ELECTRICIAN—Experienced on all machines, Mass. license, desires position as operator or assistant in Boston or vicinity. 3 years' experience. E. E. SHINDLER, 99 Leverett St., Boston, Mass.

OPERATOR—Trained in Mirror Screen Demonstrating Theater of F. J. Rembusch. Thoroughly competent, steady and sober. Address OTIS WERTZ, Shelbyville, Ind.

AT LIBERTY—A1 trap drummer. Long experience. Complete outfit, traps, effects, bells. Salary reasonable. WARD, 5033 Lake Ave., Chicago, Ill.

YOUNG LADY STENOGRAPHER—And Double Entry Bookkeeper. Knowledge of Film Business. Desires position requiring competency and reliability. Address Y. L., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

DIRECTOR AND WRITER—Of own scenarios. Comedy subjects. Engaged with city firm. Wishes to make a change. Long experience producing; good material. Address J. D. G., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

PIPE ORGANIST—One of the cleverest picture organists in America desires to change location. Unlimited repertoire and eight years' experience. Manager wishing musicians who will get business, write. ORGANIST, care Edward Kellies, Booking Offices, Seattle, Wash.

OPERATOR—With long experience in show and moving picture work, advertising and managing, would like to connect himself with some good house or will travel. Have my own machine, can manage house or traveling show. Address W. D. HODGSON, West Chester, Pa.

BARATOLA AND PIANIST—Pictures only. Cueing a specialty, member A. F. of M. Don't like present location. References exchanged. Address CUE, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Expert operator and electrician with Power's 6A Compensarc, swell equipment; steady and reliable. CLYDE WILSON, Monticello, Iowa.

OPERATOR—Desires position anywhere. Eight years' experience. I deliver the goods. References. C. C. NEWMAN, Ionia, Mich.

HELP WANTED.

CAMERAMEN.—Everywhere, except local, owning outfit, can learn of valuable service now being established for weekly news pictures. MITCHELL, 929 Tribune Bldg., New York.

WANTED.—A combination operator and billposter. Must be good reliable man. BROWN & DION, Kane, Pa.

WANTED PIANISTS—Have positions for two A1 pianists for motion picture theaters. References required. State salary and experience in first letter. Address CHAMBERLAIN AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES, Shamokin, Pa.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

WANTED.—Exhibitors of western Pennsylvania to write when in need of an experienced architect for moderate priced photoplay theaters. FLOYD MEALS, 1100 Woodland Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

FOR RENT—Theater that seats 550 can be used for vaudeville and picture house combined. Fully equipped, located in thriving town of 3,000 in Southern Mich. Address MISS CORA PRATT, 1243 Washtenow Ave., Ann Harbor, Mich.

WHAT HAVE YOU TO OFFER—I am first-class operator, 10 years' experience in theaters and with road shows. I have $1,000 to invest; single, sober, responsible. Will buy theater or traveling outfit. Would like to hear from good feature film proposition. Will consider salary, percentage or partnership. Address J. B. FIELDING, Arcade Hotel, Omaha, Neb.

WANTED—Financial assistance to build moving picture theater in Chicago, partner or straight loan. M. S. JOHNSON, 860 North Sacramento Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

MADE TO MEASURE—Now running business connected with the moving picture industry has a real opportunity for man with motion picture acquaintance and hustling ability. Investment of $2,000 or more. Active part and controlling interest if desired. Headquarters New York. Investigate immediately. Large profits assured. C. R. L., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

PICTURE THEATER WANTED—In Conn., Mass. or R. I., seating 800 to 1,200. City of 10,000 to 15,000 preferrd. All particulars in first letter. Address H. A. D., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

TO BUY—Or lease a moving picture theater in town of five thousand or over. South preferred. C. H. PRONTY, Westbrook, Me.

WANTED TO RENT OR LEASE.—Opera house or M. P. Theater of 500 seating capacity or more. Must be in A-1 condition, location the best. State all in first letter, including opposition. Address J. H. DARGUSCH, Mays Opera House, Piqua, Ohio.

WANTED.—To buy a moving picture show. Location in north western Ohio preferred. Address Box 112, Waynesfield, Ohio.

THEATRES FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Seating capacity 300 to 1,200—some suitable or vaudeville—guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation ordinance. HUME, Room 513, 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

FOR SALE.—M. P. Theater, seating 350, live town of 5,000. N. Y. State. Ground leased for long term. Building and equipment new, doing good business; must sell on account of other business interests. Price sacrifice. Address W. L. S., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, concrete building, 416 seats. Heat, electric light and fans. Located on one of the best streets. WESTERN AMUSEMENT CO., 412 Caswell Block, Milwaukee, Wis.

FOR SALE.—Exclusive picture theater in one of the best railroad towns in the state of Iowa. Population 4,000, practically new latest improvements. Seating capacity 350, open to rigid investigation. Unless you mean business save your stamps. Address D. F. LEDERMAN, Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines, Ia.

PICTURE SHOW.—For sale in good live Nebraska town. Excellent reasons for selling. Address P. H. H., c o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

THEATRE.—300 seats, family patronage in a growing Chicago neighborhood, clearing $75 week, no competition, good lease, $5,000. Open to rigid investigation. P. S., 428 So. Harvey Avenue, Oak Park, Ill.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—First class feature films to book on commission up state. We are an established feature exchange with large clientle and know the state thoroughly. We are booking goood subjects nearly solid at top market price. New York state right buyers and manufacturers with cold copies should communicate with UPSTATE c-o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE.

FILMS.—Bought, sold and exchanged. 300 commercial films in good condition with posters for sale cheap. EXHIBITORS FILM EXCHANGE, Garfield, Wash.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED.—Moving picture camera, projector or printer. Address WM. MOGEY, Plainfield, N. J.

WANTED.—A professional camera holding at least two hundred feet of film. Also tripod and tilt. Must be in first class condition. State all particulars in first letter. E. C. SCHOETTNER, Butte, Mont.

WANTED.—A black tent in first class condition for moving pictures. Must be about 20x60 feet. E. D. MACFEE, Jr., Petersburg, Pa.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

$55.00 FLAMING ARC LAMP TEMPORARILY FOR $20.00.—Overstock, 26-hour, 3,000-candle power. Here is quotation from letter just received from B. F. Enos, owner of Savoy Theater, Toledo:—"Gentlemen: Enclosed find check for $59.95, payment for two Luminators recently sent me. I have them installed. They are a surprise to everyone: nothing could be finer. They burn without flutter and light is steady. I am delighted. (Signed), B. F. Enos." Write or wire for details. LORD MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Bush Terminal No. 7, Brooklyn, N. Y.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Edengraph Machine with rheostat and extra lenses, A1 condition, $50 complete. VERNON THEATER, Long Island City, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Edison, Powers 5, Lubin machine. Large exhaust fan, Oscillating and Ceiling direct current. Steel Asbestos Board Booth, Ticket Chopper. Want to buy a compensarc. A. LICHENTHALER, 341 Eighth Street, Lebanon, P.

FOR SALE.—Wonder Clock-Lamp. Used only once, $50 cash. OTIS RENNER THEATRE CO., Lyric Theater, Hackensack, N. J.

FOR SALE.—Powers 6 complete. Also Screen. Carbons, Tickets, etc. GEO. BARKER, 803 N. 4th Street, Estherville, Iowa.

FOR SALE.—Powers 6A with A. C. Motor 110 Volts, complete all attachments. Four 16-inch Oscillating fans (General Electric) Regulation booth. Equipment used 60 days. Best cash offer takes part or whole outfit. T. K. THRASHER, Confluence, Pa.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

CAMERAS.—First-class second hand Motion Picture Camera outfit in perfect order taken in trade, including tripod, extra magazines, F. 3.5 lens; originally sold for $135.00; the first order with deposit of $10.00 takes it for $80.00. MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO., 5 West 14th St., New York City.

FOR SALE.—1 Pathe camera with two 350-foot magazines, 1 Urban camera with two 350-foot magazines, $50 each. 101 RANCH, Bliss, Okla.

BRAND NEW—Professional Urban Camera, tripod tilt, four retorts, Zless two inch lens F3-5, $230. Will ship subject to examination. CAMERAMAN, 286 Stanton Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—$125 cash buys a Lapin Dramagraph (Sound Effect Machine) made by Excelsior Drum Works of Camden, N. J. Machine practically new. Original cost $200. Address, PICTURELAND THEATER, Reading, Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FEATURE LECTURE SLIDES.—Mexican War or Panama Canal, 30 beautifully colored slides. Printed lecture, 5 one sheets, $15. GORDON, 263 W. 34th St., New York City.

EXHIBITORS.—If you have your own printing outfit send 50c. in coin for full directions how to print slide plates. We send twelve blank plates and printed sample free. Anyone can make slide plates with my instructions. LEWIS H. ROSSITER, 109 Asylum Street, New Haven, Conn.

FOR RENT.—The Passion Play, Pathe, hand colored, guaranteed condition, 3 full reels, $10 per day. WILLIAMS FEATURE FILMS, 330 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

The DIAMONDS OF DESTINY

OR

A SCENTED CLUE

A DISTINCTIVE DETECTIVE DRAMA

A GRIPPING STORY REPLETE WITH SENSATIONAL INCIDENTS COMING TO A CLOSE IN A STIRRING CLIMAX

PRODUCED BY

THE IMPERATOR FILM CO.

In Four Great Parts.
Each Part a featue

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Some territory still open on

THE MASSIVE FOUR PART SENSATION

LIFE'S TEMPTATIONS

A powerful story of a man's one great sin and the restitution he made.

MIDGAR FEATURES

TELEPHONE BRYANT 4985

NEW YORK	LONDON	BERLIN
135 W. 44TH ST.	114 MAYES RD.N.	228 FREDRICHSTRASSE

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS....1516
ANNA LITTLE JOINS UNIVERSAL....1531
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES....1542
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..1544
CHICAGO LETTER....1528
"CLOTHES" (Famous Players)....1527
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....1524
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)...1525
"CRIMINAL PATH, THE" (Ramo)....1509
"DREAM WOMAN, THE," (Blache)....1508
"EAST LYNNE" (Apex)....1535
EXHIBITORS NEWS....1554
FACTS AND COMMENTS....1503
FAVERSHAM TO ACT FOR PLAYGOERS....1531
FEATURE FILM STORIES....1586
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES....1514
HIPPODROME'S "AMERICA" IN PICTURES..1510
IMPERATOR PROJECTOR, THE....1510
"IMPERSONATOR, THE" (Edison)....1534
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES....1578
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES....1596
INQUIRIES....1519
LICENSED FILM STORIES....1562
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....1598
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....1537
MASSACHUSETTS EXHIBITORS AT SPRINGFIELD....1530
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..1530
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR....1512
NEW YORK LOCAL REORGANIZED....1530
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....1511
"OLD CURIOSITY SHOP" (Blinkhorn)....1533
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE....1518
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT....1520
QUALITY'S DEADLIEST FOE....1504
REX E. BEACH....1506
"ROMANY SPY, A" (Pathe)....1532
"SALVATION OF NANCE O'SHAUGNESSY, THE" (Selig)....1507
"SILVER LOVING CUP, THE" (Imp)....1535
"SPARTAN GIRL, THE" (Pasquali)....1536
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....1562
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....1578
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)....1586
"VAMPIRES OF THE NIGHT" (Aquila)....1513
WHEN FEATURES ARE FAILURES....1505
"ZINGO, SON OF THE SEA" (Ambrosio)....1533

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.

KIEWERT, CHARLES L., CO....1587
REISINGER, HUGO....1611

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO....1608
BELL & HOWELL....1609
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO....1607
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO....1568
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS....1611
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO....1607
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO....1570
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO....1568
HALLBERG, J. H....1564
HOKE, GEO. M., SUPPLY CO....1566
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO....1600
MESTRUM, HENRY....1576
M. P. APPARATUS CO....1607
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO....1583
SPECIAL UNIVERSAL MOTOR CO....1587
SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS....1609
SPRELINGER, CHARLES A., CO....1566
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO....1584

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.

ACME FEATURE FILM CO....1566
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION....1561
AMBROSIO-AMERICAN CO....1492
ANGLO-AMERICAN CO....1602
APEX FILM CO....1488
BLINKHORN, ALBERT....1489
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS....1595
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO....1566
COMMERCIAL MOTION PICTURE CO....1567
P. P. CRAFT....1590-1591
CRYSTAL FILM CO....1550-1551-1609
ECLECTIC FILM CO....1490-1491-1546-1547
DRAMATIC SUCCESS FEATURE FILM CO.1552-3
ELLIS, ARCHIE H., FEATURE PLAY CO....1571
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO....1486-1487
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO....1572
FEATURES IDEAL....1600
GAUNTIER STUDIO....1606
GENERAL FILM CO....1548-1549
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO....1613
GLORIA-AMERICAN CO....1585
IDEL-GAR CORPORATION....1484-1485
HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO....1560
ITALA FILM CO....1565
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURES....1559
MASKO FILM CO....1602
METROPOLITAN FEATURE FILM CO....1601
MIDGAR FEATURES....1593
MITTENTHAL FILM CO....1572
MOHAWK FILM CO....1599
MUNDSTUK FEATURES....1578
ORPHEUM FEATURE FILM CO....1582
PAN-AMERICAN FILM CO....1608
PASQUALI AMERICAN CO....1605
PLAYERGOERS FILM CO....1574-1575
RAMO FILMS CO., INC....1599
UNION FEATURES....1603
U. S. FILM CO....1601
VERO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY....1601
WARNER'S FEATURES....1573
WORLD FILM CORPORATION....1493

FILM EXCHANGES.

AMUSEMENT SALES CO....1576
BRADENBURG, G. W....1607
BRILLIANT FILM CO....1613
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO....1584
GOLGATE FILM EXCHANGE....1569
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO...1598
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....1584
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....1572
LAKE ERIE FILM EXCHANGE....1609
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION....1577
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM CO....1566
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO....1568
UNIVERSAL EXCHANGE....1587
WEINZ, ISIDOR, FILMS CO....1566

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO....1597-1605
GAUMONT FILM CO....1555
NEW MAJESTIC FILM CO....1614
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP....1557
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION....1478
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO....1480-1481-1482-1483

LENS MANUFACTURERS.

FORD OPTICAL CO....1611
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO....1581

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.

EDISON, THOMAS A....1494
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1479
KALEM FILM CO....1502
KLEINE, GEORGE....1499
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1498
MELIES FILM CO....1543
PATHE FRERES....1495-1496-1497
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO....1615
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA....1500-1501

MISCELLANEOUS.

AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER CO....1581
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO....1606
BURKE & JAMES....1608
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS....1592
CORCORAN, A. J....1568
EASTMAN KODAK CO....1607
GARDNER, ZAY....1610
GENERAL LUBRICANT CO....1584
GERSTLES, H....1568
GUNBY BROTHERS....1570
HORSLEY, DAVID....1610
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO....1581
LEAVITT STATIONERY CO....1613
MARKS BROS....1563
NATIONAL THEATRE....1613
NATIONAL TICKET CO....1596
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO....1581
ROCHESTER BRASS WORK CO....1610
RUBY STUDIO....1589
SARGENT, EPES WINTHROP....1613
SHERWIN WILLIAMS CO....1612
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO....1594
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE....1572
THEATRE RECORD CO....
THOMAS & BAUMAN....1579
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO....1609
U. S. FILM CO....1601
WESTERN SLIDE COATING CO....1608
WHITE, JAMES H....1604

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO....1566
ERNEMAN PHOTO KINETO WORKS....1583
PHOTO CINES CO....1612
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD....1568

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

DEAGAN, J. C....1611
HUME, T. D. CO....1566
SEEBURG, J. P. PIANO CO....1576
SINN, CLARENCE E....1613
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....1613

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS

ANDREWS, A. H. CO....1613
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO....1613
STEEL FURNITURE CO....1613
WISCONSIN SEATING CO....1613

POSTERS AND FRAMES

A. B. C. CO....1612
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO....1542
ERIE LITHOGRAPH CO....1612
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO....1576
THEATRE SPECIALTY CO....1570

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....1604
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO....1609
POWER'S, NICHOLAS, CO....1616
PRECISION MACHINE CO....1545

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN & SUPPLY CO....1608
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO....1610
GENTER, J. H. CO....1603
MIRROR SCREEN CO....1566

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES

CUT OUT SLIDE CO....1607
ERKER BROTHERS....1581
NIAGARA SLIDE CO....1541
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO....1608

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS

DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO....1611

BRAND
NEW
Davids' Glassine
Announcement Slide Ink
Put up in boxes containing six one-ounce bottles of different colors, viz.: Red, Green, Blue, Violet, Black and White. Price per box, $1.00. This ink can be used with an ordinary pen and is manufactured by the oldest ink and adhesive concern in America. Established 1825.
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.
Main Office & Factory, 95 Van Dam St., New York
Western Branch and Warehouse
18 West Kinzie St.
Chicago, Ill.

William FOX Features

Box Office Attractions

EXHIBITORS! PACK YOUR THEATRES TO THE DOORS

Three sure-fire attractions that will act like magnets on your box office. Exceptionally attractive paper. Large multi-colored photographs with wonderful attention value. Business-developing heralds—the very best produced in the United States. Everything ready for immediate use. Remember these titles:

"THE LOTUS DANCER," a brilliant four-part photo-play that will capture the interest of everybody.

"BY WHOSE HAND," one of the most powerful three-part features ever contributed to the silent drama.

"VENGEANCE BEQUEATHED," a thrilling three-part picture wonder—one of those dramas that is absolutely irresistible.

For New York City and State, Northern New Jersey and all of New England.

'Phone, wire, write or call and make arrangements for these house-packing features.

LOBBY FRAMES—Beautiful folding lobby frames with interchangeable spaces for six pictures 11x14 inches, and two pictures 22x28 inches, now ready for delivery at net cost to us.

Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co.

130 West Forty-Sixth Street, New York City

WILLIAM FOX, President TELEPHONE, 7340 BRYANT

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

March 14—A Story of Little Italy (Drama)....1000
March 16—A Modern Free Lance (2 parts—Dr.).2000
March 18—The Coming of the Padres (Drama).2000
Mar. 23—The Turning Point (2 parts—Dr.)....2000
Mar. 25—A Decree of Justice (Drama).....1000
Mar. 30—The Town of Nazareth (2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 1—The Certainty of Man (Drama).....1000

APOLLO.

Feb. 15—Black Hand Conspiracy (Comedy)....
Feb. 22—Up In the Air Over Sadie (Comedy).
Mar. 1—Village School Days (Drama) .....
Mar. 8—Rafferty's Raffle (Comedy).....
Mar. 15—Dad's Terrible Match (Comedy).....

BEAUTY.

Feb. 25—The Professor's Awakening (Drama).
March 4—Italian Love (Drama).....1000
March 11—Closed at Ten (Comedy-Drama)....1000
Mar. 17—The Girl Who Dared (Drama) 1000
Mar. 24—The Peacock Feather Fan (Drama) 1000

101 BISON.

Feb. 28—Legion of the Phantom Tribe (2 parts—Drama) .....
March 7—The Yaqui's Revenge (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 14—From the Lion's Jaws (2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 21—In the Wolves' Fangs (2 parts—Dr.).2000

BRONCHO.

March 11—A Barrier Royal (2 parts—Dr.)..
March 18—The Adventures of Shorty (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 25—The Relic (2 parts—Drama).....
April 1—Wolves of the Underworld (2 parts—Drama) .....

CRYSTAL.

March 3—Some Pull (Comedy) .....
March 8—A Strange Bird (Comedy).....
March 8—Lizzie and the Ice Man (Comedy)..
March 10—Bimberg's Love Affair (Comedy)...
March 10—Baldy Belmont Breaks Out (Com.)..
Mar. 15—Kelly's Ghost (Comedy) .....
Mar. 17—Dazzle's Black Eye (Comedy).....
Mar. 17—Baldy Belmont Almost a Hero (Com.)
Mar. 22—The Fat and Thin of It (Comedy)....
Mar. 24—Snookum's Last Racket (Comedy)..
Mar. 24—Without Pants (Comedy).. .....
Mar. 29—Auntie's Romantic Adventures (Com.)

DOMINO.

March 5—For the Wearing of the Green (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 25—The Silent Messenger (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 19—The Bells of Austi (2 parts -Drama)
Mar. 26—The Silent Messenger (2 parts—Dr.).

ECLAIR.

Mar. 1—The Heart of Carita (Drama).....
March 4—The Diamond Maker (Three parts—Drama) .....
March 8—Birds of Passage (Comedy).....
March 8—Orchids (Horticulture) .....
March 11—Into the Foothills (2 parts—Dr.)...
March 15—At the Court of Prince Make-Believe (Comedy-Drama) .....
Mar. 18—When God Wills (2 parts—Drama)...
Mar. 22—A Tale of the Desert (Drama).....
Mar. 25—Adrift (2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 29—A Marriage for Money (Drama)....
Mar. 29—Society at Simpson Center (Comedy).

FRONTIER.

March 5—Pretzel Captures the Smugglers (Comedy) .....
March 7—The Mystery of Buffalo Gap (Dr.).
March 12—The Colonel of the Nuts (Comedy)..
March 14—His Younger Brother (Drama)....
Mar. 19—Colonel Custard's Last Stand (Com.)..
Mar. 21—The Sheriff's Duty (Drama) .....
Mar. 26—"Black Hands" and "Dirty Money" (Comedy) .....
Mar. 28—The Girl Bandit (Drama)

GAUMONT.

Feb. 10—Tiny Tim and the Lion (Comedy)...
Feb. 10—Scenes in Costa Rica (Travel).....
Feb. 12—Simple Simon Deals in Antiques (Comedy) .....
Feb. 12—Excursions in Old Paris (Travel)....
Feb. 17—Two Miniatures (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Magic Salesman (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Bee Farming (Industry).....
Feb. 26—A Tiff—and After (Comedy).....
Feb. 21—Judgment of the Jungle (Drama).....
Feb. 24—The Missing Pearl (Drama).....
Feb. 26—A Tiff—and After.....
Feb. 26—Manana-Land .....
Feb. 28—The Better Man .....

GOLD SEAL.

Feb. 3—In the Fall of '64 (2 parts—Drama).
Feb. 10—The Bride of Mystery (3 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 17—Honor of the Mounted (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 24—Captain Jenny, S. A. (3 parts—Dr.)..
March 3—By Radium's Rays (2 parts—Dr.)
March 10—The Twin's Double (Three parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 17—Discord and Harmony (Drama).....
Mar. 24—The Mysterious Leopard Lady (2 parts—Drama) .....

IMP.

Feb. 16—The Box Couch (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—The Price of Sacrilege (3 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 23—The Touch of a Child (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 26—Rounding Up Bowser (Comedy).....
March 2—Testing Bill's Courage (Comedy)....
March 5—The Opal Ring (2 parts—Drama)..
March 9—The Flaming Diagram (2 parts—Dr.)
March 12—Jealousy and Giant Powder (Com.).
Mar. 16—The Gambler (Drama).....
Mar. 19—The Silver Loving Cup (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 23—King, the Detective in the Marine Mystery (2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 26—For Life and Liberty (Comedy).....

JOKER.

March 4—Sheridan's Pride (Comedy).....
March 7—Some Boy (Comedy).....
March 11—A Mexico Mix (Comedy).....
March 14—Won in the First (Comedy).....
Mar. 18—Won in the First (Comedy) .....
Mar. 18—A Visit to Mont St. Michael (Normandy, France) (Scenic) .....
Mar. 21—Mike and Jake Go in for Matrimony (Comedy) .....
Mar. 25—Pay the Rent (Comedy).....
Mar. 28—The Head Waiter (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.

Feb. 6—Secret Lode (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Colonel's Adopted Daughter (Drama)..
Feb. 13—Arrow Maker's Daughter (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 20—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 26—North of 53 (2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 6—The Path of Genius (2 parts—Dr.)..
Mar. 13—Desert Gold (2 parts—Drama).....

KEYSTONE.

Feb. 21—Love and Gasoline (Comedy).....
Feb. 23—Twixt Love and Fire (Comedy).....
Feb. 26—Little Billie's City Cousin (Com.)..
Feb. 28—Between Showers (Comedy).....
Mar. 2—A Film Johnnie (Comedy).....
Mar. 9—Tango Tangles (Comedy).....
Mar. 16—His Favorite Pastime (Comedy).....
Mar. 19—A Rural Demon (Comedy).....

KOMIC.

Feb. 19—A Birthday Present (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Getting a Suit Pressed (Comedy).....
March 5—The Impostor (Drama).....
Mar. 12—The Yegg and the Eggs (Comedy)....
Mar. 14—The Moonshiner's Daughter (Comedy).
Mar. 18—He Who Laughs Last (Comedy).....
Mar. 18—Snowball Pete (Comedy).....

LUX.

Feb. 13—An Elopement by Aeroplane (Comedy) 475
Feb. 13—Animal Export from Algiers (Travel). 450
Feb. 20—Shortsighted Miss Prim (Comedy).... 520
Feb. 20—Boating on the Seine (Scenic)..... 870
Feb. 27—Pat's Motor (Comedy)..... 595
Feb. 27—Lakes and Falls (Scenic)..... 310
March 6—Bill's Day Out (Comedy)..... 575
March 6—A Stone Quarry in Belgium (Ind.).. 420

MAJESTIC.

Feb. 28—The Rival Barbers (Comedy).....
March 1—(No Release This Date.)
March 3—The Glory of Whitney Durkel (Dr.)
March 7—The Rector's Story (Drama).....
Mar. 8—The Stronger Hand (2 parts—Drama)
Mar. 10—His First Love (Drama) .....
Mar. 14—The Moonshiner's Daughter (Drama)..
Mar. 15—His Little Pal (Drama).....
Mar. 17—They Who Dig Pits (Drama).....

NESTOR.

Feb. 20—Scooped By a Hen Coop (Comedy)...
Feb. 25—Breed O' the Mountains (Drama)....
Feb. 27—One of the Finest (Comedy).....
March 4—The Voice of the Viola (Drama)....
March 6—She Was Only a Working Girl (2 parts—Comedy) .....
March 11—The Mexican's Last Raid (Drama).
March 13—What a Baby Did (Comedy).....
Mar. 18—The Way of a Woman (Drama).....
Mar. 20—Those Persistent Old Maids (Com.)..
Mar. 25—The Mountaineer (Drama).....
Mar. 27—The Wrong Miss Wright (Comedy)...

POWERS.

Feb. 27—Tightwad Buys a Laundry (Comedy)..
March 2—The Tale of a Dog (Comedy).....
March 2—Trieste To Porto Rose, Austria (Scenic) .....
March 9—A Murderous Elopement (Comedy)..
March 13—The Faith of the Two (Drama).....
Mar. 16—Hawkeye and the Cheese Mystery (Comedy) .....
Mar. 20—Hands Invisible (Drama) .....
Mar. 23—Too Much Married (Comedy).....
Mar. 27—Her First Arrest (Drama).....
Mar. 27—U. S. Government's Instructions to Young Farmers (Agriculture).....

PRINCESS.

Feb. 20—All's Well That Ends Well (Comedy)
Feb. 27—The Hold-Up (Drama) .....
March 6—Her Way (Comedy-Drama).....
Mar. 13—Billy's Ruse (Comedy) .....
Mar. 20—The Grand Passion (Comedy).....

RELIANCE.

Feb. 28—The Green-Eyed Devil (2 parts—Dr.).2000
March 2—Our Mutual Girl (Chapter 7—Dr.).
March 4—A Lesson in Bridge (Drama).....
March 7—When Fate Frowned (Drama).....
Mar. 9—Our Mutual Girl (Chapter 8—Dr.)...
Mar. 11—Caught in the Web (Drama) .....
Mar. 14—Red the Mediator (Drama) .....
Mar. 16—Our Mutual Girl (No. 9—Drama)....
Mar. 18—The Smugglers of Sligo (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 21—The Coming of the Real Prince (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 23—Our Mutual Girl (No. 10—Drama)....

REX.

Feb. 15—An Old Locket (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Boob's Honeymoon (Comedy)....
Feb. 22—Woman's Burden (Drama).....
Feb. 26—For the Family Honor (2 parts—Dr.)..
Mar. 1—The Weaker Sister (Drama).....
March 5—The House Across the Street (Dr.).
March 8—A Modern Fairy Tale (Drama)....
March 12—Heart of the Hills (2 parts—Dr.)..
March 15—The Senator's Bill (Drama).....
Mar. 19—A Pugilist's Romance (Drama) .....
Mar. 22—Carlotta the Bead Stringer (Drama)..
Mar. 26—The Spider and Her Web (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 29—In the Days of His Youth (Drama)..

THANHOUSER.

Feb. 27—Their Best Friend (Drama).....
March 1—The Scientist's Doll (Drama).....
March 3—The Desert Tribesman (2 parts—Dr.)
March 6—(No Release This Date.)
Mar. 8—Guilty or Not Guilty (Drama) .....
Mar. 10—Kathleen, the Irish Rose (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 13—(No Release this Date) .....
Mar. 15—The Eugenic Boy (Comedy).....
Mar. 17—The Cat's Paw (2 parts—Drama)...
Mar. 20—(No Release This Date.)
Mar. 22—The Cousin From England (Comedy).

UNIVERSAL IKE.

Mar. 10—Universal Ike's Wooing (Comedy)....
Mar. 17—Universal Ike Has One Foot in the Grave (Comedy) .....
Mar. 24—Universal Ike in the Battle of Little Tin Horn (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.

March 2—The Man Between (2 parts—Drama).
March 6—The Nemesis That Passed (Drama).
March 9—Hearts and Flowers (Drama).....
March 13—The Honeymooners (2 parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
Mar. 16—The Acid Test (2 parts—Drama)....
Mar. 20—Because She Loved Him (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 23—A Woman's Honor (Drama).....
Mar. 27—Diplomatic Flo (3 parts—Drama)....

A. BLINKHORN.

Jan. 12—Jean's Evidence (Turner Films, Ltd—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 19—Motherhood or Politics? (Hepworth's—2 parts—Comedy-Drama).....
Feb. 23—Blind Fate (Hepworth's—2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 2—Justice (Hepworth's—4 parts—Drama)
Mar. 9—The Cloister and the Hearth (Hepworth's—3 parts—Drama) .....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand	- -	$1.25
Ten Thousand	- -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand	- -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand	-	$5.50
Fifty Thousand	- -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand	-	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST-

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

The TURNING POINT

TWO PARTS

A Physiological Drama of the Underworld

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Photos, Slides and Heralds.

RELEASE MON. MAR. 23, 1914.

"A DECREE OF JUSTICE"

DEPICTING IN A THRILLING DRAMA THE UNDOING OF AN UNPRINCIPLED CULPRIT

One and Three Sheet Lithographs

RELEASE WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th, 1914

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Pathe, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Feb. 26—The Massacre (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 28—Chocolate Dynamite (Comedy).....
Feb. 28—Because of a Hat (Comedy).....
March 2—A Bunch of Flowers (Drama).....
March 5—Politics and Suffragettes (Comedy).
March 5—Pa and Ma Elope (Comedy).....
March 7—Children of Destiny (Drama).....
Mar. 9—For Auld Lang Syne (Drama).....
Mar. 12—Her Hand (Drama).....
Mar. 14—Shorty Makes a Bet (Comedy) .....
Mar. 14—Blame the Tailor (Comedy) .....
Mar. 16—Gentleman or Thief (Drama).....
Mar. 19—The Restless Woman (Drama).....
Mar. 21—A Friend of the District Attorney (Drama) .....

EDISON.

Mar. 17—When the Cartridges Failed (Dr.)...1000
March 9—The Sultan and the Roller (Comedy).1000
March 10—The Mexican's Gratitude (Drama)..1000
March 11—Andy, the Actor (Fourth of the Andy Series) (Comedy).....1000
March 13—The Price of the Necklace (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 14—An Affair of Dress (Third of the Dolly of the Dailies Series) (Com.).1000
March 16—The Adventure of the Alarm Clock (Third of the Octavius Amateur Detective Series) (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 17—A Real Helpmate (Drama) 1000
Mar. 18—A Winter Holiday in the Bernese Oberland, Switzerland (Scenic)..... 400
Mar. 18—A Boarding House Romance (Com.).. 600
Mar. 20—The Double Shadow (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 21—The Message in the Rose (Drama)....1000
Mar. 23—Dinklespiel's Baby (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 24—The Borrowed Finery (Com.-Dr.)....1000
Mar. 25—A Night Out (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 27—The Brass Bowl (Spe.—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 28—Putting One Over (Fourth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series) (Com.).1000

ESSANAY.

Mar. 4—"Presto" Willie—Magician (Comedy).1000
Mar. 5—The Conquest of Man (Drama).....1000
Mar. 6—Chains of Bondage (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 7—Sophie's Birthday Party (Comedy)...1000
March 10—The Counter Melody (Drama).....1000
March 11—The Girl, the Cop, the Burgler (Comedy) 1000
March 12—The Warning (Drama).....1000
March 13—Grass County Goes Dry (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
March 14—The Interference of Broncho Billy (Drama) 1000
Mar. 17—Oh! Doctor (Comedy) 1000
Mar. 18—Luck In Odd Numbers (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 19—Single Handed (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—Shadows (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
Mar. 21—A Hot Time In Snakeville (Comedy)..1000
Mar. 24—The Love Route Via Pittman (Com.).1000
Mar. 25—Bridget Bridges It (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 26—The Atonement (Drama).....1000
Mar. 27—The Three Scratch Clue (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 28—Broncho Billy's True Love (Drama).1000

KALEM.

Mar. 4—The Intrigue (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Mar. 6—Hiram's Hotel (Comedy).....
Mar. 6—Beauty, the Educated Horse (Edu.).
Mar. 7—The Hopi Raiders (Comedy).....
Mar. 7—Unveiling the Maine Monument (Topical).....
March 9—The Secret of the Will (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 11—The Medicine Man's Vengeance (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 13—Her Fallen Hero (Comedy).....
March 13—Looking For a Fortune (Comedy)...
March 14—The Race for a Mine (Drama).....1000
Mar. 16—The Colleen Bawn (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000
Mar. 18—The Award of Justice (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 20—The Family Skeleton (Comedy).....
Mar. 20—Cypress Logging in Florida (Industry)
Mar. 21—His Indian Nemesis (Drama).....1000
Mar. 23—The District Attorney's Duty (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 25—The Refrigerator Car's Captive (Spe.—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 27—And the Villain Still Pursued Her (Comedy) .....
Mar. 27—Phosphate Mining (Industrial).....
Mar. 28—A Leap for Life (Drama).....1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Feb. 3—The Marriage of Figaro (Special—2 parts—Ambrosio—Drama) .....
Feb. 10—After Death (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—The Artist's Model (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 24—The Money-Sharks (Cines—Three Parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 3—The Diamond-maker (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 10—The Greatest Gift (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
March 17—Gypsy Love (Cines special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 24—The Barber of Seville (Ambrosio—Special—3 parts—Comedy).....

LUBIN.

Mar. 4—In the Gambler's Web (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 5—His Wife (Special—2 parts—Drama).2000
Mar. 6—A Romance of the Northwest (Dr.).1000
Mar. 7—When Dooley Passed Away (Comedy).1000
March 10—A Dangerous Case (Comedy)..... 400
March 10—Slumberville's Scare (Comedy)..... 600
March 11—A Cruel Revenge (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 12—A Strange Melody (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 13—The Tell-Tale Star (Drama).....1000
March 14—Just a Note (Comedy)..... 400
March 14—She Wanted a Count (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 17—The Laziest Man (Comedy) 1000
Mar. 18—The Weaker Brother (Special—2 parts Drama) 2000
Mar. 19—The Secret Marriage (Special—2 parts Drama) 2000
Mar. 20—The Price (Drama) 1000
Mar. 21—So Long, Count (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 21—A Trip to the Moon (Comedy) 600
Mar. 24—A Deal in Real Estate (Comedy)....1000
Mar. 25—Above the Law (Spe.—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 26—The Game of Politics (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 27—The Puritan (Drama).....1000
Mar. 28—Detective Short (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 28—The Bottom of the Sea (Comedy).... 600

MELIES.

Feb. 5—Playing With Fire (Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 5—Winky Willy's Disappearing Stunt (Comedy) .....
Feb. 5—Dippy on the Boston Dip (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Com.).
Feb. 19—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
Feb. 19—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700
Feb. 26—Winky Willie's Arithmetic (Com.).. 300
Feb. 26—Batty Billy and His Pal's Legacy (Comedy) 700
March 5—Winky Willy and the Telephone Crime (Comedy) 300
March 5—A Village Scandal (Comedy)..... 700
Mar. 12—Love's Oblivion (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 12—One On Batty Bill (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 19—Winky Willy's Private Show (Comedy) 300
Mar. 19—Cupid's Window (Comedy)..... 700

PATHE.

Feb. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 15—1914 (News)
Feb. 19—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 21—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 16—1914 (News)
Feb. 24—The Winning Hand (Drama).....
Feb. 25—September Morn (Comedy).....
Feb. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 17—1914 (News)
Feb. 26—The Devil's Assistant (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 28—The Parasites (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 2—Pathe's Weekly, No. 18 (News).....
Mar. 3—The Second Generation (Drama).....
Mar. 4—Hogan's Alley (Comedy).....
Mar. 5—The Brother Counts (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 19 (News).....
Mar. 7—On the Altar of Patriotism (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
March 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 20 (News)....
March 10—The Hunting Spiders (Zoology).....
March 10—The Picturesque Coast of Catalonia—(Scenic) .....
March 11—Abide With Me (Drama).....
March 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 21 (News).....
March 12—A Spoiled Life (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
March 12—Making Lace Fans (Industry).....
March 14—Against Heavy Odds (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
March 14—A Trip to the Great Nile Dam (Travel) .....
Mar. 18—Madura and Its Pagodas (Arch.)....
Mar. 19—The Wasted Years (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 23 (News).....
Mar. 21—His Wife Wins (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....
Mar. 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24 (News).....
Mar. 24—Trichinopoly, India (Scenic).....
Mar. 24—Workaday Scenes in a Flowery Land (Scenic) .....
Mar. 24—Strange Sea Water Creatures (Edu.).
Mar. 25—Whittle's New Profession (Comedy).
Mar. 25—Old Streets of Cairo, Egypt (Scenic)
Mar. 26—The Constancy of Jeanne (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 25 (News).....
Mar. 28—A Leech of Industry (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000

SELIG.

Mar. 4—The Countess and the Burglar (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 5—Little Lillian Turns the Tide (Dr.)..1000
Mar. 6—The Renegade's Vengeance (Drama)..1000
March 9.—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 6—Three Bags of Silver—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 10—Suppressed News (Drama).....1000
March 11—The Speedway of Despair (Drama)..
March 11—The Cathedral and Leaning Tower of Pisa (Travel) .....
March 12—Kid Pink and the Maharajah (Dr.).1000
March 13—Elizabeth's Prayer (Drama).....1000
Mar. 14—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News)..1000
Mar 16—The Better Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 17—The Story of Venus (Drama) 1000
Mar. 18—The Cop on the Beat (Drama).....1000
Mar. 19—The Evil We Do (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—Two Little Vagabonds (Drama).....1000
Mar. 21—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News)..1000
Mar. 23—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 7 (The Garden of Brides) (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 24—In Remembrance (Drama).....1000
Mar. 25—While Wifey Is Away) (Comedy)....
Mar. 25—Doc Yak, the Poultryman (Comedy).
Mar. 26—Cupid's Caprice (Drama).....1000
Mar. 27—The Story of Cupid (Drama).....1000
Mar. 28—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News).1000

VITAGRAPH.

Mar. 2—Buffalo Jim (Drama).....1000
Mar. 3—The Sacrifice of Kathleen (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 4—A Pair of Frauds (Comedy).....
Mar. 5—Silent Trails (Drama).....
Mar. 5—Scenes In Norsland (Scenic).....
Mar. 6—The Speeder's Revenge (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 7—The Mischief Maker (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 9—Ginger's Reign (Drama).....1000
March 10—The Portrait (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 11—Art for a Heart (Comedy).....1000
March 12—The Way to Heaven (Drama).....1000
March 13—Mrs. Maloney's Fortune (Comedy)..1000
March 14—An Officer and a Gentleman (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 16—Auntie (Drama) 1000
Mar. 17—The Price of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 18—The Ghosts (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 19—The Idler (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—A Model Young Man (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 21—Old Reliable (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Mar. 23—The Woman in Black (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 24—Her Husband (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 25—The Hall Room Rivals (Comedy)....1000
Mar. 26—Chanler Rao, Criminal Expert (Dr.).1000
Mar. 27—Millions for Defence (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 28—Never Again (Spec.—2 parts—Com.).2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company

All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York

Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

TRADE MARK

ALWAYS A HEADLINER

RAMO

KING OF ALL FEATURES

Leaders in American PHOTO PLAY Productions

THE CRIMINAL PATH In Four Reels

If your Exchangeman cannot serve you, get in touch with us direct

RAMO FILMS, Inc. Sales Offices, Columbia Theatre Building NEW YORK
C. Lang Cobb, Jr., Manager Sales and Publicity

MOHAWK FILM COMPANY, Inc.

RELEASE SOON "A HUMAN INTEREST STORY, WITH HEART THROBS AND LAUGHTER"

HEARTS OF OAK

By JAMES A. HERNE

With RALPH STUART as Terry Dennison

IN FIVE PARTS

Reserve Your Territory Now—Wire—Write—Call

MOHAWK FILM COMPANY, Inc. TIMES BLDG. NEW YORK

MOHAWK FILM COMPANY, Inc.

MOHAWK FILM COMPANY - INC.

MOHAWK FILM COMPANY - INC.

MLLE. ADRIANA COSTAMAGNA

IN

MEPHISTOPHELIA

3 ACTS

BEST EVER PUT ON THE MARKET

SENSATIONAL POSTERS

AN INVESTMENT THAT WILL DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BEFORE YOU REALIZE IT

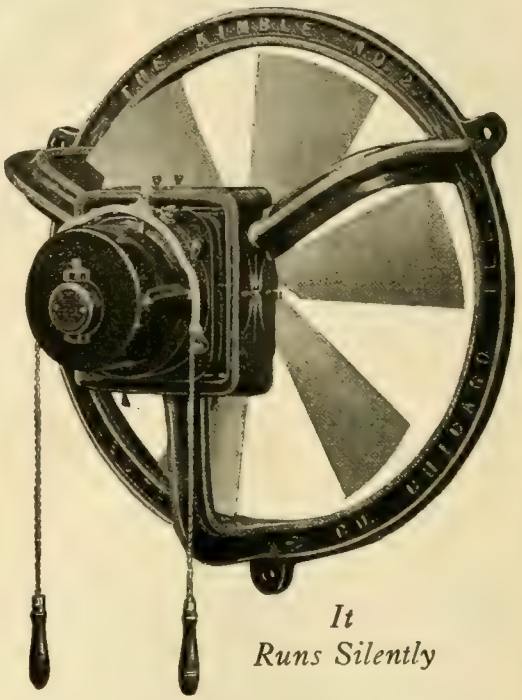
HURRY!

HURRY!

HURRY!

FEATURES IDEAL, 126 West 46th Street NEW YORK CITY

Make Yours the Best Ventilated House in Your Community— at Less Cost



It Runs Silently

KIMBLE

Alternating-Current FANS

You can run a Kimble Fan at high speed, low speed, or any speed between. Suit the amount of air to the number in the house and to the weather.

When you run a Kimble at half speed it uses only half maximum speed current. It is the only a-c fan that reduces current consumption in direct proportion to every speed reduction.

You can use the Kimble Fan for drawing in fresh air or forcing out foul air. It is either intake or exhaust. You can change it instantly by merely pulling the chain. No other a-c fan has this feature.

You save money—you get better ventilation—certainly these are excellent reasons why you should install a Kimble Fan. Just write for the Red Catalog and let us give you the complete facts.

Kimble Electric Co.

KIMBLE MOTORS The Alternating Current Fan Specialist KIMBLE MOTORS

633 Northwestern Avenue, Chicago

WILL BUY — Negative or Positive Print Showing Scenes, Operations, etc., on Sugar Cane Plantation.

Write, stating what you have and price wanted

UNITED STATES FILM COMPANY, Flatiron Bldg., New York City

"THE MONEY GOD"

A STUPENDOUS PRODUCTION

IN FIVE REELS

TERRITORY GOING FAST

New York City and New York State—Emby Feature Film Corp., 145 West 45th Street, New York City.

Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island—Adams & Co., 844 Bank Street, Waterbury, Conn.

Ohio—Independent Features Co., Inc., Cleveland, Ohio.

Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland—Artistic Feature Co., 145 West 45th Street, Room 1011.

Iowa and Nebraska—Herrick Feature Film Co., Des Moines, Iowa.

State Rights Now Selling

METROPOLITAN FILM COMPANY, Inc.

HANS BARTSCH, Pres. H. J. STREYCKMANS, Sales Mgr.

6th Floor, World's Tower Bldg., New York City

The Colosseum in Films

These motion pictures are the first in a gala series of truly educational films entitled

THE GLORIES OF ROME

The pictures were made with special permission of the Italian Government and according to instructions of W. Stephen Bush of The Moving Picture World, who was in Rome at the time. The Vero Educational Society has purchased the negative.

Every point of interest in the immortal edifice is covered in a most entertaining way, bringing back memories of the wonderful days when 80,000 spectators looked down upon the struggles in the arena.

There are four divisions:

I. The Exterior and Entrances, together with views of Rome from different stories of the Colosseum.
II. The Lower Floor and the Arena.
III. The Stories and Lodges.
IV. What was hidden beneath the Arena.

The total length of the pictures is three thousand feet. Title and all printed matter have been prepared by Mr. Bush. The titles are full and exact, and a lecture goes with certain parts of the film. The photography is of a high standard, and portions of the films are suitably tinted. For all further information address

The Vero Educational Society Room 704, World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, City
TELEPHONE BRYANT 578

HERE ARE A COUPLE OF GOOD NUMBERS:

FOR APRIL

The LEGION of HONOR

A Film D'Art Masterpiece. Approximate Length 3,000 Feet

Staged amidst the picturesque surroundings of Algeria and Morocco.

PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY WELL ACTED STRONG DRAMA

FOR MAY

THE CONVENT GATE

Scenario by Marchioness Townshend. Approximate Length 2,800 Feet

A MOST APPEALING DRAMA --- A SENSATIONAL FIRE SCENE

Advertising matter for the above of our usual high standard.

Let us have your name and the territory you are interested in. We will be pleased to send literature, etc.

WATCH FOR OUR BIG SPECIAL

MASKO FILM COMPANY 145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

THE 3 MUSKETEERS

(The Original Film d'Art Production) of Alexander Dumas'

IN EIGHT REELS

Broadway's Greatest Pictorial Success entering its third crowded week at the New York Theatre, the largest play-house devoted exclusively to screen dramas.

Do not confuse this Film d'Art Classic with any other production of the same name.

Anglo-American Film Corporation 126-128-130 W. 46th ST. NEW YORK CITY

Watch for our first announcement concerning State Rights of SIXTY YEARS A QUEEN, a superb film production

THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION

IN THREE ACTS

FEATURING

MONS. VILLENEUVE

THRILLING! HIGH CLASS! AND YET A REAL GALLERY SENSATION!

HYPNOTIZING POSTERS - 'NUFF SED!!

WRITE! WIRE! TELEPHONE!

UNION FEATURES, - 126 West 46th Street, New York City

Surely, What Your Eyes See You Can Believe!

$1,000 THAT MIRROROIDE IS SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER PROJECTION SURFACE NOW BEFORE THE PUBLIC, BARRING NONE.

MIRROROIDE is the screen that made daylight pictures famous.

We sell and produce more MIRROROIDE SCREENS in one day than all our competitors can produce in a month. Our output, a complete screen every twenty (20) minutes.

35,000 square feet of floor surface—screens only. Price right.

$3.00—PER SQUARE YARD—$3.00
33⅓c—PER SQUARE FOOT—33⅓c

Get our large Free Samples.

Realize we back our screen up with a five-year guarantee. Will our competitors do likewise? Well, we don't knock, but letters like this the world over will show you the evidence of your own eyes.

Now Read This:

THE MORGAN THEATRE
60-62 Genesee Street
Auburn, N. Y., March 6, 1914.

J. H. GENTER CO.,
Newburgh, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Having sold my Syracuse Theater, I began building a house in Auburn last fall, and before it was completed I started to make my own curtain, but on account of pressing business demands, I yielded to the arguments of Mr. Frank Spreter of the Auburn Film Company, your agents in this territory, to try a Mirroroide curtain, much against my own wishes. Installing a motor generator set similar to the one I had used in my Syracuse Theater, I was astounded at the excellent picture I obtained on the Mirroroide curtain.

My house is light enough to read a newspaper in, and yet my picture is the clearest I have ever seen. It shows a soft, pleasing picture, perfectly distinct, yet without the dazzling brightness so many curtains have.

My theater seats 1200, and there is absolutely no difference in the picture looking at it from any seat. If an exhibitor wishes to save money, time and trouble and still get the best curtain made, he can't do it any easier than by purchasing a Mirroroide.

Any exhibitor whom you send to inspect my curtain will be gladly welcomed, and if he is at all experienced, he will grasp the opportunity of using the Mirroroide curtain. If he does his part by installing the right equipment in his operating room, there is no doubt about your curtain doing the rest.

I would be pleased to have any of your company pay me a visit if ever in this vicinity.

Respectfully yours,

GHM/K GEO. H. MORGAN.

Agencies: Every important city in the States. Also from General, Mutual and Universal Film Exchanges, Berlin, France, England, Hong-Kong, Japan, Australia, Porto Rico and Ireland.

Get our samples. Test, compare with any screen or curtain in the world. Realize, act, judge for yourself.

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.
NEWBURGH, N. Y., U. S. A.
Patents Pending

"BRIFCO"

PHONE 2283 BRYANT

RAW FILM STOCK PAR EXCELLENCE

Compares favorably with the most reliable brand on the market today.

USED BY EUROPE'S LEADING MANUFACTURERS

Every Foot Guaranteed

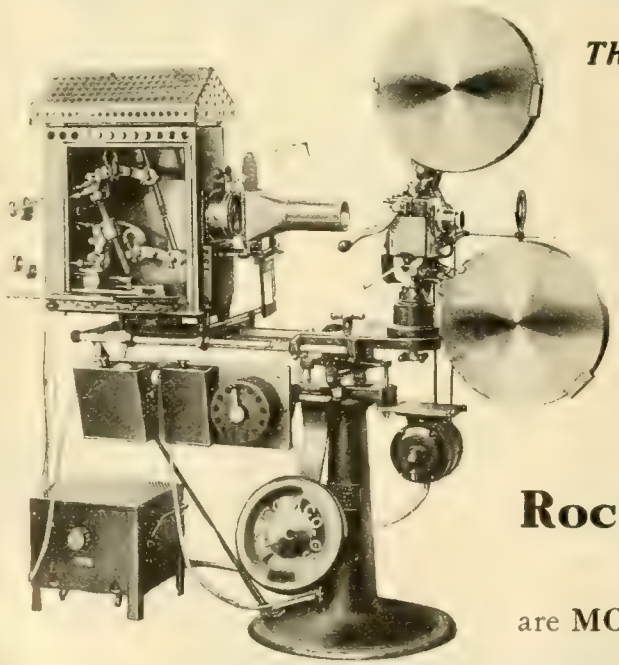
SEND FOR A TRIAL ORDER AND BE CONVINCED

Suite 602, Longacre Bldg., B'way at 42d St., New York City

SOLE AGENT

JAMES H. WHITE

THE 1914 MOTIOGRAPH IS READY FOR DELIVERY



The Improvements Are:

Star and Cam of tool steel, hardened and ground. (Grinding done on specially designed machine to insure absolute accuracy.)

Bushings for both Cam and Intermittent Sprocket Shaft are made of hardened steel.

Lamp House Support Frame is braced to prevent the possibility of slight vibration.

The above improvements can be furnished for 1912 and 1913 models.)

Rock Steady Pictures Long Life Sold with a Guarantee

are MOTIOGRAPH QUALITIES. Write for particulars.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

EASTERN OFFICE: 21 East 14th Street, New York WESTERN OFFICE: 833 Market Street, San Francisco

BEAUTY FILMS

"The Peacock Feather Fan"

A Dramatic Gem—Pathetic—Sentimental—Convincing and Appealing.
Featuring the World Famous Photo Star and Beauty.

MARGARITA FISCHER

Supported by HARRY POLLARD and a large cast

Remember the Release Date—Tuesday, March 24, 1914.
Ask For BEAUTY PENNANTS, $1.00 Each.

PRODUCED BY

American Film Mfg. Company, Chicago

PASQUALI AMERICAN CO. Inc.

110 W. 40th St.
2004 World's Tower Building
New York City

G. ALBERT AMATO, Pres.
WILLIAM J. LEE, Mgr.

Now Ready to Show. Ready for Delivery, March 20th

THE SPARTAN GIRL

An Episode During the Greek and Turkish War

IN FIVE PARTS

A story of a Greek girl who is in love with a Turkish officer, who has saved her life; but she is compelled by her parents to marry a Greek officer, and finds herself, at the breaking out of the Greek and Turkish war, the wife of a Greek in love with a Turk. She knows the movements of both armies. She can save her country by destroying a bridge over which her lover, leading the Turkish cavalry, is to pass. This she does, at the sacrifice of her life.

A DARING RESCUE FROM THE SEA
A BRIDGE FULL OF CAVALRY BLOWN TO ATOMS
The HORRIBLE DEATH of a HEROINE

ACTION IN EVERY FOOT
NO DRAWN-OUT SCENES
SUPERB PHOTOGRAPHY

P A

ALL
PASQUALI PICTURES
COPYRIGHTED

PHOTOS, HERALDS, SLIDES 6, 3 and TWO KINDS 1 SHEET POSTERS

At "Home" Under Any Flag

Miss Gene Gauntier

The Most Versatile Actress in Picturedom

Now Starring In Her Own Feature Productions

As Peggy in "Come Back to Erin"

Gauntier Studio: 515 West 54th St., New York

The 68th St. Play House, New York City, seating 450, admired by all, uses the Automatic.

Features—

RAPID, SAFE and CONVENIENT.

ISSUES, COUNTS, REGISTERS and PROTECTS.

1800

Moving Picture Theatres in the United States and Canada

USE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTERS WHY NOT YOU?

If you are interested in

Moving Picture Theatres
Amusement Parks
Baseball Parks
Dancing and Bathing Pavilions
Railways and Ferries
Soda Fountains

Write for Prices and New Booklet which explains fully

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK
3RD NAT'L BANK BLDG., ST. LOUIS

BARGAIN BUSINESS BOOMERS

To convince exhibitors of the drawing power of our UP-TO-THE-MINUTE SYSTEM to advertise in advance your DAILY PROGRAM, we have organized a 30 DAY CREDIT DEPARTMENT for the United States and Canada.

Our Slide Service is for the General, Mutual and Universal releases. 75c. is the price of Entire Weekly Set, including all two and three reel features of either of the above Companies. Filing cabinet and complete outfit Free with first shipment.

Special Slides for two and three reel features only, with synopsis and date to be shown, 10c. each.

Any Announcement Slides, your own wording, in either English, German, French or Spanish, for 10c. each.

Send us your "Dope Sheet," and we will do the rest. All orders must be signed by Owner or Manager.

We know that our Weekly Slide Sets are the greatest Photo-play advertisers in the world—and it would be folly to make the above offer if we did not have the proper goods to deliver.

CUT OUT SLIDE CO., EMERSON TOWER BUILDING Baltimore, Md.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

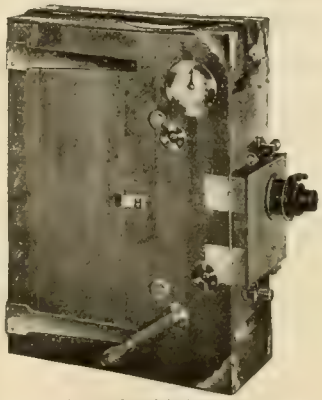
EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

NO WAITING

if you order a

CAMERA or TRIPOD

from us



Prestwich Model 5, $250.00.

English Prestwich, Pathe Professional and Moy

Motion Picture Cameras

ALWAYS IN STOCK

See Display at Sherman Hotel, in Chicago, March 24 to 27

Motion Picture Apparatus Co., Inc.
810 Broadway, New York

G. W. BRADENBURGH

802 Vine Street Philadelphia, Pa.

Films for sale in first-class condition, 1c per foot. Also feature films from 2c per foot upwards. Posters for all films.

THE PICK OF THE PRODUCTIONS OF AMERICA AND EUROPE

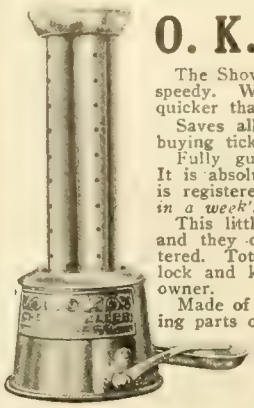
Wanted, Branches in all the leading cities of the U. S. Applicants must have experience and be able to furnish security. 500,000 feet first-class films available.

BARGAIN-MACHINES-BARGAIN

Order one for Emergency. Slightly used machines, in first-class running condition. Powers No. 6, $135.00; Edison Model B, $150.00; Edison Exhibition Models, $50.00, $60.00 and $75.00. All complete with lenses, rheostats. Ticket Choppers, Mirror Screens, Chairs, etc.

Order at once. First come, first served.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO., Inc.
1301 Race St., Philadelphia



O. K. Check Seller

The Showman's cash register—sure and speedy. Will take care of patrons 50% quicker than by any other way.

Saves all the trouble and expense of buying tickets.

Fully guaranteed or money refunded. It is absolutely accurate, and every sale is registered. Has often paid for itself in a week's time.

This little machine holds 1000 checks, and they cannot be issued unless registered. Total amount of business is under lock and key and can be seen only by owner.

Made of brass, nickel plated, and wearing parts of tool steel. Send for special circular and prices.

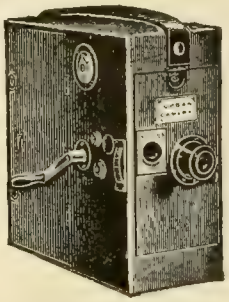
Made only by

Amusement Sales Co. Check Taker

Woodward and Warren Aves. DETROIT, MICH.

WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY ON

High Grade Motion Picture Apparatus



Write today for our Catalog A, describing a complete line of URBAN BIOSCOPE AND ERNEMANN CAMERAS. EDISON, SIMPLEX AND ROYAL PROJECTORS. GOERZ, VOIGTLANDER and DALLMEYER LENSES. POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE FILM, AND MANY OTHER SPECIALTIES.

Every piece of apparatus sold by us is of standard quality and is fully guaranteed. Our prices are figured on the new tariff, and we give the consumer the benefit of the recent reductions in duty.

BURKE & JAMES, Inc., 246-258 E. Ontario St., Chicago

Headquarters for Motion Picture Apparatus

...is showing them with... special fund in the army for this pur... an advantage over it as it has a special ... fund."

Motion Pictures in Army Camps.

Motion pictures are now being used to entertain Uncle Sam's boys of the 27th Infantry located at Texas City, Texas. A new Radium Gold Fibre Screen has been installed for use this summer so that they can show pictures out doors immediately after supper. Chaplain Geo. Rice is in charge of these troops and is using two makes of motion picture machines. With the aid of the new screen, outdoor matinees are also being given.

A Model Theater.

...boasts of a model "Little Theater" at ... It is intended as a mod...

Show Your Pictures In A Daylight House

INCREASE your box office receipts by insuring the safety of your patrons.

The Radium Gold Fibre Screen

will allow you to show your pictures with the house lights on.

The above extract from a recent issue of a motion picture journal proves our assertion.

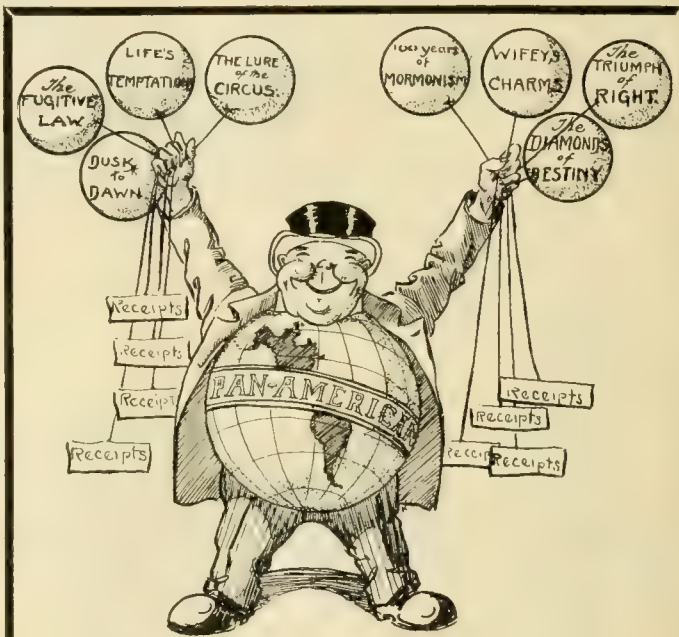
Write department 17 for full particulars.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Co.

Nulsen Bldg. Sixth and Olive Sts. St. Louis, Mo.

Pittsburgh Office: Suites 9-10 Hartley Bldg. 405 Fourth Ave.

New York Office: 2nd & 3rd floor Candler Bldg. 220 W. 42nd Street



When These We Release, Up Go Your Receipts

Also the following FEATURES are on our list:

"Native Life In the Philippines"

"A Boy and the Law" (Restricted territory)

Pasquali American Co.'s

"The Power of Innocence"

"The Brigand's Daughter"

"For High Treason"

Direct Dealings with the Exhibitor Everywhere

PAN AMERICAN FILM COMPANY, Inc.

110 West 40th St. Telephone Bryant 6578 New York City

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

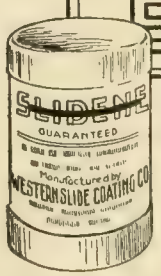
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

SLIDENE

THE RELIABLE SLIDE COATING



Make Your Own Slides Less Than 1¢ Each.

Exhibitors everywhere are now making their own slides for less than 1 cent each by using our new preparation.

SLIDENE

PACKED IN 25c., 50c. AND $1.00 CARTONS.

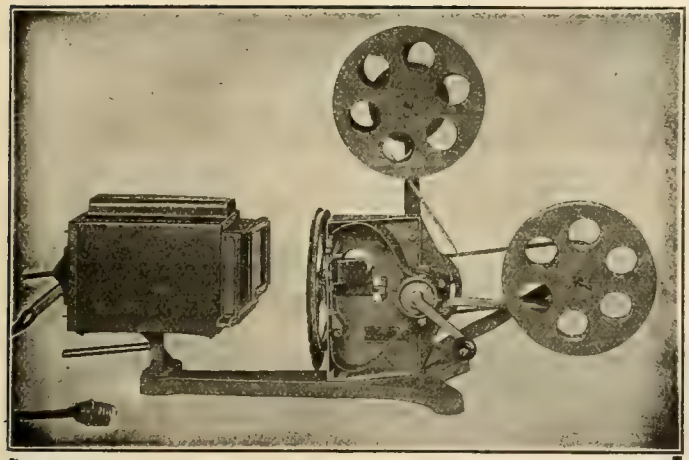
If your exchange or supply house has not as yet stocked up on Slidene, send us the price and we'll prepay you a package.

Note.—Slidene is not an ink, but a powder compound which when mixed with water makes a perfect slide coating—cheap but efficient. Send us a dollar bill today for a big pound box—enough for hundreds of slides.

WESTERN SLIDE COATING CO.

Spokane Theatre Bldg., Spokane, Wash.

Exchanges and Supply Houses Write for Sample!



THE PHANTOSCOPE means motion-pictures in your office.

The PHANTOSCOPE means motion-pictures in your library.

The PHANTOSCOPE means motion-pictures in your church work.

The PHANTOSCOPE means motion-pictures in your school work.

The PHANTOSCOPE means safety, simplicity, and satisfaction.

The PHANTOSCOPE means—but send for a catalogue and see what it does mean, unless you'd rather do as have so many others, send us a small deposit and let us send it C. O. D. privilege of examination.

$100 complete in traveling case

THE PHANTOSCOPE MFG. CO.

Bond Bldg. Washington, D. C.

The New SPRAGUE ELECTRIC OZONATOR

Is Now Ready FOR Your Theatre

Its use eliminates "crowd" and tobacco smoke odors and keeps the air pleasant and wholesome.

Combination—OZONATOR and ELECTRIC FAN

Approved and listed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters

Send for Bulletin No. 49,000

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
MAIN OFFICE:
527-531 West 34th St., New York, N. Y.
Branch Offices in Principal Cities

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 8,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
817 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

FEATURES FEATURES

Emotional Dramatic Melodramatic 2-3-4-5 reelers

All makes of European exclusives
Write for list and prices

LAKE ERIE FILM BROKERS
No. 229 ERIE STREET TOLEDO, OHIO

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

Wanted: Experienced PROPERTY MAN

FOR MOVING PICTURE STUDIO. One with a knowledge of draping and stage and window dressing preferred. Apply by letter only.

CRYSTAL FILM CO., 430 Claremont Parkway

"NONE IS SO BLIND AS HE WHO WON'T SEE"

THE LIST OF THE LIVE, WIDE-AWAKE, WELL-KNOWN EXHIBITORS WHO HAVE ALREADY ADOPTED THE

"THE PEERLESS" — DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN — "THE PIONEER"

READS LIKE AN UP-TO-DATE EDITION OF "WHO'S WHO" IN THE THEATRICAL WORLD

IT DID NOT TAKE THEM LONG TO SEE IN

THE SCREEN OF QUALITY — THE SCREEN DE LUXE — THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM

THE REAL MONEY-GETTER THE REAL MONEY-SAVER

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL PICTURES ON RECORD AND THE LOWEST AMPERAGE ON RECORD

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE BRANCH OFFICES AND DISTRIBUTING CENTERS AT ARRANGE FOR TEST

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

THE WINNIPEG STAMPEDE

GREAT 3 REEL FEATURE

THE WORLD'S GREATEST FRONTIER DAYS' CELEBRATION

RELEASED, MARCH 5th

6, 3 and 1 SHEETS. DESCRIPTIVE SHEETS and PHOTOGRAPHS

Showing the Re-union of the old-timers from the Rio Grande to the Peace River. Featuring the cream of exponents of dare-devil feats of horsemanship, and all the sports and pastimes of the Rangeland. The successful contestants are awarded world's Championship and largest cash prizes ever offered, viz.: $20,000.00.

The finest picture ever offered to State Right buyers.

The only picture of Lucille Mulhall, the world's renowned lady steer roper.

Other features include the champions of all the western lands, in competition before three hundred thousand persons.

The only seven-day Frontier picture.

Wire or Write

ZAY GARDNER, McALESTER, OKLA.

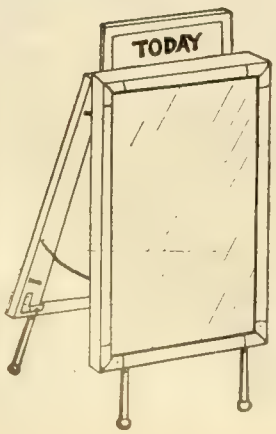
You SHOULD Worry

if your pictures are not the best. Competition is so keen these days that only the best pictures are considered by buyers. The unusually brilliant photographic results obtained on Lumiere film will make the buyers look very favorably on your product.

DAVID HORSLEY

American Agent for Lumiere Film

NEW YORK - - - Mecca Building
CHICAGO - - - Schiller Building
LOS ANGELES - - - Higgins Building

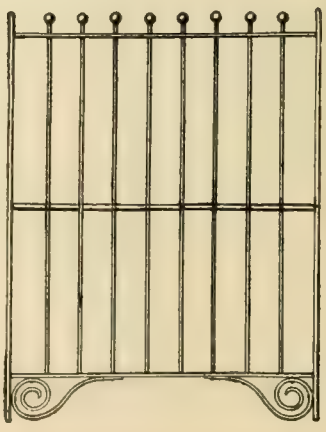


BRASS POSTER FRAMES

RAILINGS
WINDOW GRILLES
PIANO PIT RAILS
KICK PLATES

Add immeasurably to the drawing power of your posters, and make a bright and attractive lobby. We make a number of different styles to meet your requirements, and our prices are as attractive as the goods.

Write to-day for our illustrated list.



ROCHESTER BRASS AND WIRE WORKS CO.

76-84 Exchange Street, Rochester, New York

Start 1914 with a real system in your theatre, it can be done for $2.50—invested in a Theatre Record. I publish a Theatre Record Ledger that is now used in over 50 % of the vaudeville and motion picture theatres in the country today. With my Theatre Record Ledger you can keep an absolute account of every ticket sold day or night, besides a complete record of every dollar spent; also record vaudeville and motion picture subjects and the weather. A whole year's business under one cover. Take me up at my proposition and send me $2.70 (20 cts. for postage) and let me send you a Theatre Record Ledger with the distinct understanding—if not what you want your money will be hustled right back to you.

J. V. Bryson, Pres., Theatre Record Ledger
256 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis

SAVINGS $ BY SYSTEM

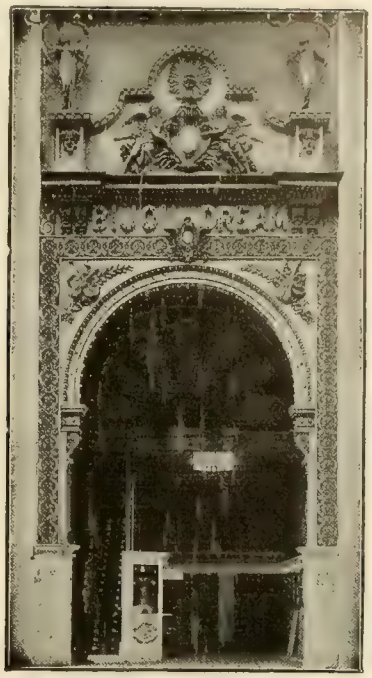
SHOW THIS TO YOUR EXCHANGE — SENT FROM MY MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 Berteau Ave.
Chicago, Ill.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St. CHICAGO, ILL.

INFORMATION

Just out, Bright, Interesting, right up to date

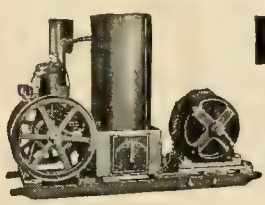
A Practical Book on MOTION Picture Photography

With Illustrations and Formulas

Explaining Camera, its Construction, Taking, Developing and Printing.

By a Camera Man of 20 Years

Sent Prepaid 35 Cents FORD'S Denver, Colo.



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:

"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."

Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.

(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

THE CARBON FOR PERFECT PROJECTION

ELECTRA

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway NEW YORK

FILM COMPANIES CONTRACTING WITH US FOR THEIR

POSTERS

Erie LITHOGRAPH CO.
12TH & PARADE STS.
ERIE, PA.

get the HIGHEST QUALITY and LOWEST PRICES. MOTION PICTURE LITHOGRAPHING and PRINTING our SPECIALTY

SERVICE and QUALITY GUARANTEED

Get our prices before contracting for your next supplies. Get in touch with our NEW YORK OFFICE

F. J. WALKER, Jr., Mgr.
World's Tower Building, 110-112 W. 40th St.
New York City Phone, 7160 Bryant

GOING to DECORATE YOUR THEATRE?

SEND us photographs or blueprints and our Decorative Department will work out an attractive color scheme for the interior of your theatre. The plans will include color elevations and complete painting specifications. This service is absolutely free. We offer it as a means of acquainting you with Sherwin-Williams Paints and Varnishes, but your acceptance of our suggestions in no way obligates you to use them. Your request for decorating helps will have our most careful attention.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS & VARNISHES

Address all inquiries to Decorative Dept.
774 Canal Road, N.W. Cleveland, O.

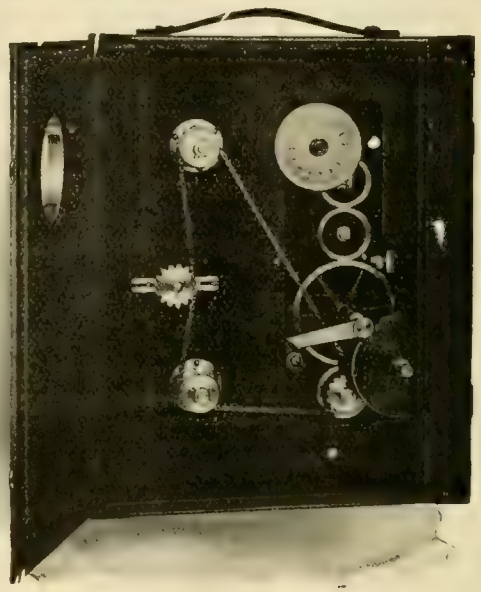

PHOTO-CINES, ERNEMANN, EMPIRE

CAMERAS

WRENCH TRIPODS

AUSTIN EDWARDS RAW FILM

PHOTO-CINES CO., 24 East 13th Street, New York

One, Three and Six Sheets Now Ready

FOR THE FOLLOWING

BIOGRAPH'S Two Part release of Mar. 28
THE BATTLE AT ELDERBUSH GULCH

KALEM'S Monday, Mar. 23
THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S DUTY

KALEM'S Wednesday, Mar. 25
THE REFRIGERATOR CAR'S CAPTIVE

LUBIN'S Wednesday, Mar. 25
ABOVE THE LAW

LUBIN'S Thursday, Mar. 26
THE GAME OF POLITICS

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Do not overlook the fact that we have beautiful one sheets, in colors, of the following photo-players. Blanche Sweet  Lillian Gish  Alice Joyce  Henry Walthall  John Bunny

A. B. C. COMPANY Cleveland, Ohio

IMPERATOR MOTION PICTURE CAMERA

A Guaranteed Instrument
Producing Pictures of Brilliancy and Detail
Special advantages not offered on any other low priced camera:

Focusing Tube Film Measuring Dial
200 ft. Magazines Large Handle
Pathe Style Take Up
Genuine Morocco Leather Covered

Price $94.00 Complete, including Zeiss Tessar 1 C. F. 3.5., one of the fastest Lenses made by Bausch & Lomb.

Ask your dealer for catalogue, or write to

Motion Picture Camera Company
5 West 14th Street Inc. New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.
Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So
San Francisco Office, 788 Mission St.

Improve your SLIDES "Spot-Light" Slide Ink

will not blur, spread, peel or crack; gives clean, clear color on screen; put up in 1 oz. bottles. Violet, white, black, green, red and blue. Money back guarantee.

Set six colors, $1.25
LEAVITT STATIONERY CO.,
208 No. Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Steel or Iron STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 31-33 East 32nd Street, New York City. Telephone 1488 Murray Hill.

California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

Steel standards will not break.

The Wisconsin Seating Company, New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Boston: 69 Pearl St.

Sargent's Photoplay Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

FILM TITLES
5c per foot, tinting free

DEVELOPING & PRINTING at 4 1-2c per foot on Eastman Stock

All Work Guaranteed

BRILLIANT FILM CO.
148 W. 45th ST. NEW YORK

NATIONAL THEATER
Being Built at Portland, Oregon
Seating 2000. Opening in June

Contracting for Every Real Big Thing in Motion Pictures and high grade Musical Turns.

MELVIN G. WINSTOCK, President and General Manager

315 Selling Building, Portland, Oregon

REAL MONEY PAID FOR IDEAS

Every Day 1,500,000 People

IN Motion Picture Theatres

of the United States listen to the Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra. Have you one? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES
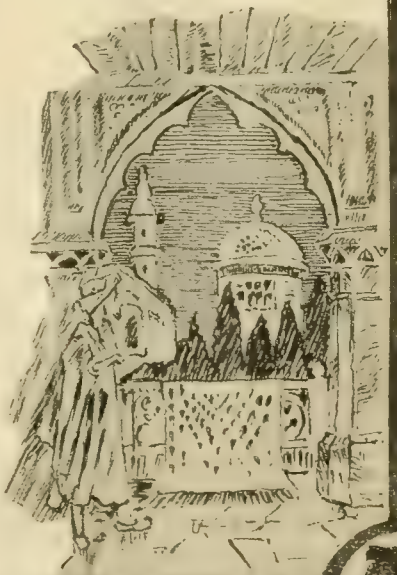
CINCINNATI

"In a Hundred Years From Today They Will Erect a Monument on Boston Common to THE AUTHOR OF 'IMAR THE SERVITOR!'"

That's what John Macy, literary critic of the Boston Herald, said of Daniel Carson Goodman, the great New Majestic writer who gave the world the scenario of "Imar the Servitor." AND "SAPHO" AND "RUY BLAS," THE TWO MAJESTIC SPECIALS THAT WENT BEFORE, WERE FILMATIZED BY ANOTHER WRITER OF INTERNATIONAL NOTE. Can you blame New Majestic for being proud of its writers? Can you blame us for our pride in a masterpiece like "Imar the Servitor" THAT WAS CUT DOWN TO

FOUR REELS

FROM SEVEN? Can you imagine what a chance a "feature padder" would have in our organization WHEN THREE THOUSAND FEET OF FILM IS CUT OUT OF ONE SUBJECT? We are proud of this subject as an ALL-ACTION picture, proud of the work of William Garwood, the most popular man in pictures, who has the title role; PROUD OF THE ENTHUSIASM OUR "DEATH-TO-PADDING" STAND HAS EVOKED! Better see Mr. Continental today!



The regular one-reelers are "His Little Pal," out Sunday, March 15, featuring Elsie Greeson, "Miss Cuteyful"; and "They Who Dig Pits," out Tuesday, March 17, featuring Francelia Billington, "the girl the critic found." Insist.

"NEW MAJESTIC"

"There Are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites"

All-Year-Round Studios: Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.
Business Offices: New Rochelle, New York.

Selig

"The Adventures of Kathlyn" No. 7

"THE GARDEN of BRIDES"

The heroine, lashed to the cage of a hungry tiger in the brigands' camp, makes her escape to meet worse peril in The Garden of Brides surrounded by a horde of leopards.

IN TWO REELS — RELEASED MARCH 23rd

March 24th "IN REMEMBRANCE"

A neglected wife, receiving a present designed for another, becomes reconciled to her husband.—A touching, domestic drama.

March 25th "WHILE WIFEY IS AWAY"

A rip-roaring comedy in which the festive game of poker figures merrily. On the same reel, with "DOC YAK, THE POULTRY MAN."—A funny one.

March 26th "CUPID'S CAPRICE"

A charming young sleep-walker awakens a sensation.—Ingenious comedy.

March 27th "THE STORY OF CUPID"

An up-to-date romance with dreams in "dissolves."—Highly diverting.

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL is the most unique, attractive, and up-to-date pictorial vitalization that has ever been shown; bound to be popular, amusing and informing. A business getter. Released every Saturday.

N.B.—SELIG color-printing is beautiful work. Get it and give your lobby an air of beauty. One-sheets for all single reels; threes and sixes for all multiple reels.

TRADE S MARK THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY TRADE S MARK

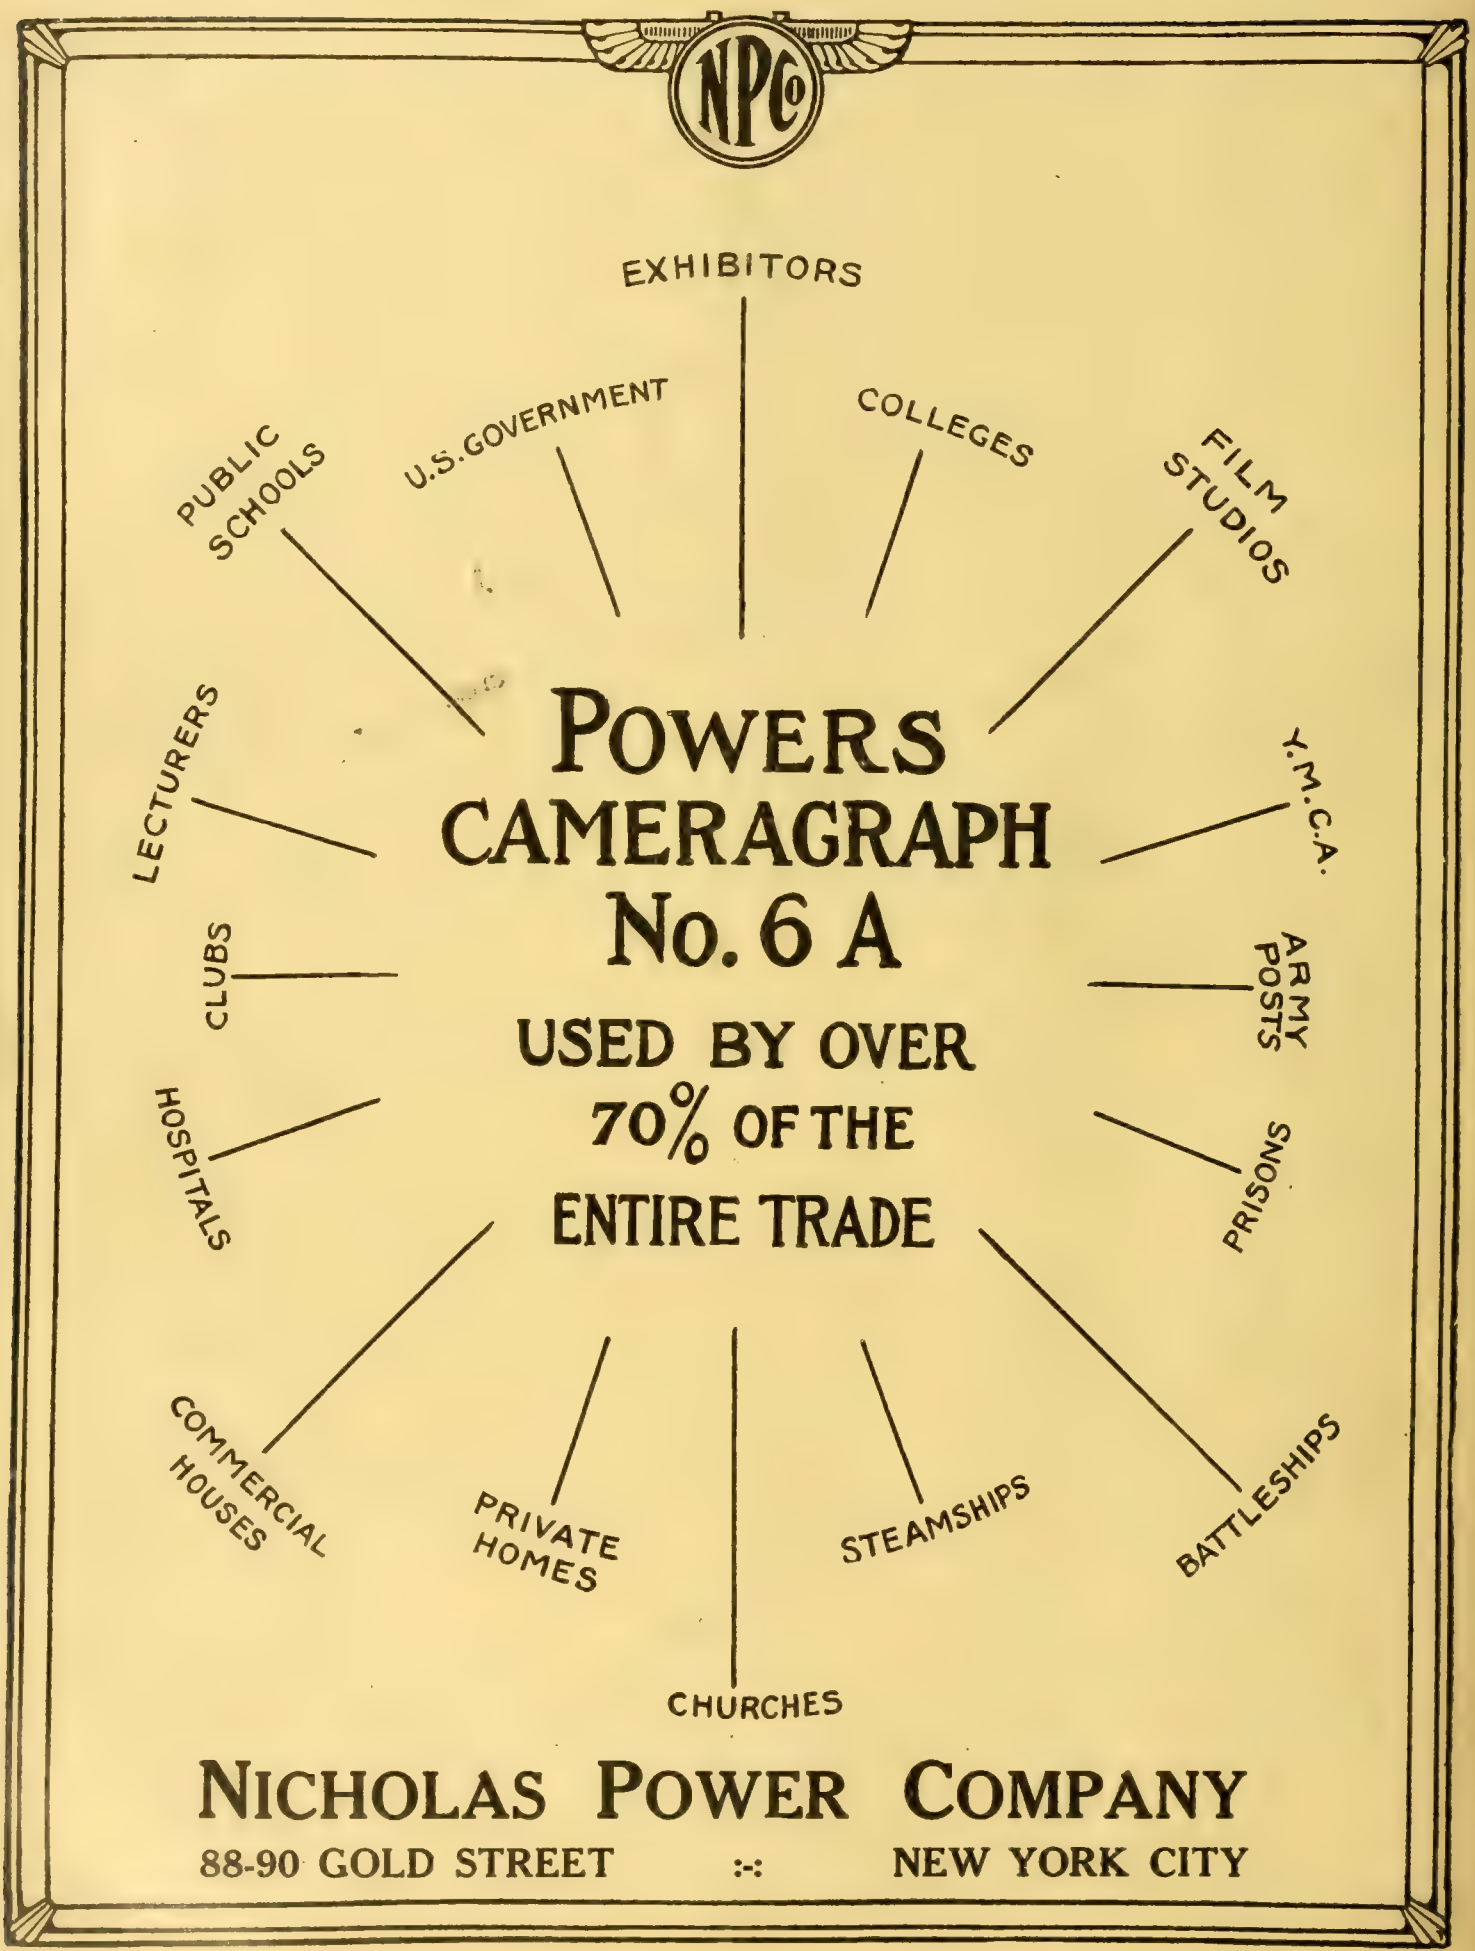
CHICAGO



POWERS CAMERAGRAPH No. 6 A

USED BY OVER 70% OF THE ENTIRE TRADE

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

88-90 GOLD STREET :-: NEW YORK CITY

Vol. 19. No. 13 March 28, 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Squaw Man" (Lasky)

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

There'll be a Rush and Crush to See CRUZE and LA BADIE in "Cardinal Richelieu's Ward!"

Because of the name of the stars and the fame of the story. The very word "Richelieu" suggests a most important and interesting period in history and the mere mention of James Cruze and Flo La Badie means an artistic and popular performance. Remember, all four reels of this "Big Production" were made in the new Thanhouser Studio. And don't forget to see that nearest Continental or Mutual office for the attractive arrangement that gives you for exclusive first-run use for a full-year in your locality. Absolute protection is yours under this system. No more advertising a feature heavily to learn the fellow down the street is going to get it, too. All in four reels and all BIG in story, cast and settings.

"Thanhouser 'Big' Productions"

FOR MARCH

"CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S WARD"

with JAMES CRUZE and FLO LA BADIE

The Thanhouser Three-A-Week

Sunday, Mar. 22nd,—"THEIR COUSIN FROM ENGLAND," one of the Cyril Chadwick comedy series, featuring the really funny antics of the "silly ass" comic from the legitimate. The American cousins are played by Dorothy Jordan, Lydia Mead, Billy Noel and James Dunne. A smashing comedy hit!

Tuesday, Mar. 24th,—"THE MISER'S REVERSION," THREE REELS, shows the famous make-up feat of Sid Bracy, who plays the miser, wherein he turns into an ape! It is the most lifelike ape that ever walked onto a studio stage and you'll marvel, gasp and exclaim at the transformation! Supporting Mr. Bracy are Harry Benham and "Miss Beautiful."

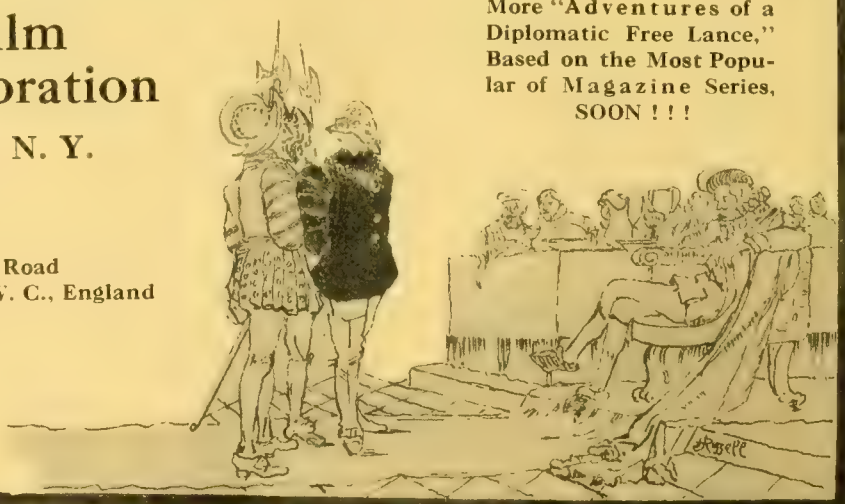
Friday, Mar. 27th,—NO RELEASE because of extra reel subject of preceding release day.

Thanhouser Film Corporation

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Head European Offices:
Thanhouser Films, Ltd.
100 Charing Cross Road
London, W. C., England

More "Adventures of a Diplomatic Free Lance," Based on the Most Popular of Magazine Series, SOON ! ! !



Essanay
Five-A-Week

COMING
FRIDAY, MARCH 27TH

"THE THREE SCRATCH CLUE"
(IN TWO PARTS)

This is positively a feature drama containing more exciting and eccentric situations than one would imagine. An aristocratic society "Raffles" creates an atmosphere of mystery which is sustained throughout the entire depiction. The photography is superb and the action great.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN FEATURED.

"BRIDGET BRIDGES IT"

Released Tuesday, March 24th.

"THE LOVE ROUTE"
Via Pittman

A splendid comedy-drama, featuring Beverly Bayne.

Released Wednesday, March 25th.

"BRIDGET BRIDGES IT"

A screamingly funny comedy which has to do with an Irish washerwoman getting into society.

Released Thursday, March 26th.

"THE ATONEMENT"

A heart interest Western drama which depicts the heritage of evil.

Released Saturday, March 28th.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S TRUE LOVE"

A feature Western drama with the world's most popular photoplayer.
G. M. ANDERSON

COMING FRIDAY, APRIL 3rd

"THE WEDDING OF PRUDENCE"
(IN TWO PARTS)

Photographically, this subject is a masterpiece. Dramatically, it is without a question of a doubt the most pleasing and entertaining story in a long time. This is a comedy-drama of Colonial days that is an absolute FEATURE.

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors. You can order these from your exchange or direct from the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. STATE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.
521 First National Bank Bldg. Chicago

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.
Branch offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

PLAYGOERS FILM COMPANY

DANIEL V. ARTHUR.
MANAGING DIRECTOR

LYRIC THEATRE 213 WEST 42nd STREET NEW YORK

TELEPHONE—BRYANT 874-875. CABLE ADDRESS, DARTHUR, NEW YORK.

WALLACE EDDINGER

GAIL KANE

ANNOUNCE WITHOUT RESERVE

That Their Presentation of the Melodramatic Play

The Great Diamond Robbery

WITH WALLACE EDDINGER AND A CAST OF

DISTINGUISHED PLAYERS, ALL OF WHOM ARE FEATURE ARTISTS IN BROADWAY ATTRACTIONS AT $2 PRICES

WILL BE THE

Best Acted, Best Picturized, Most Elaborately Staged, and Grippingly Interesting Photo-Play That Has Yet Been Given to the World.

Why Not?

Staged by . . . . . Daniel V. Arthur
Art Direction of . . . . . Edw. A. Morange
Picturized by . . . . . Herbert Hall Winslow

The CAST

WALLACE EDDINGER
GAIL KANE
P. R. PRATT
STAPLETON KENT
CHAS. J. ROSS
MARTIN J. ALSOP
EDWARD GILLESPIE
HERBERT BARRINGTON
ELITA PROCTOR OTIS
DOROTHY ARTHUR
FRANK HARDY
R. E. GRAHAM

6 Parts — 250 Scenes

STATE RIGHTS NOW—Released March 23rd

ELITA PROCTOR OTIS

CHAS. J. ROSS

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN THE WORLD

LINA CAVALIERI

PRESENTING

Manon Lescaut

SIX PARTS
250 PEOPLE

LUCIEN MURATORE

THE GREAT FRENCH TENOR and LYRIC ACTOR

IN APRIL — STATE RIGHTS NOW

TO BE FOLLOWED BY AMERICA'S FOREMOST ACTOR

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM

IN A SIX PART PLAY

Title and Date of Release Announced Later

"ZINGO"

WHO IS HE? WELL, LISTEN!

"The most remarkable adventures that have ever been depicted upon the screen."—The Morning Telegraph.

"There is real humor throughout—'Stuff' that cannot help but draw a laugh."—Motion Picture News.

TO BE RELEASED IN SERIAL FORM

ZINGO
THE SON OF THE SEA.
In Four Parts

ZINGO'S
WAR IN THE CLOUDS.
In Three Parts.

ZINGO
AND THE WHITE ELEPHANT.
In Three Parts.

ZINGO
IN AFRICA.
In Three Parts.

When are YOU going to use WARNER'S FEATURES?
START NOW!

BRANCH OFFICES OF WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

Atlanta, Ga.	319 Rhodes Building
Boston, Mass.	207 Pleasant Street.
Buffalo, N. Y.	23 Swan Street, West
Chicago, Ill.	37 South Wabash Avenue
Cincinnati, Ohio	111 West 5th Street
Cleveland, Ohio	112 Prospect Street
Dallas, Texas	Main and Akard Street
Denver, Colo.	304 Ideal Building
Detroit, Mich.	30 Campau Bldg.
Indianapolis, Ind.	106 East Market Street
Kansas City, Mo.	921 Walnut Street
Los Angeles, Cal.	527 West 8th Street
Minneapolis, Minn.	354 Temple Court
New Orleans, La.	826 Common Street
New York, N. Y.	126 West 46th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.	1202 Race Street
Pittsburg, Pa.	406 Ferry Street
San Francisco, Cal.	217 Taylor Street
St. Louis, Mo.	207 Benoist Building
Seattle, Wash.	600 Union Street
Washington, D. C.	420 9th Street, N. W.

CANADA

Montreal	360 St. Catherine Street, W.
Toronto	37 Yonge Street

Are You a Baseball Fan?

Of course you know that McGraw is back with Comiskey, Callahan and all the other heroes of the diamond. But have you heard that was the first person to meet them at the Cunard Dock when they came home to little old New York?

"Our MUTUAL Girl"

This is all shown in the tenth reel of the world's champion motion picture series.

The ever-busy Margaret also sees the new $6,000,000 postoffice, has tea with Lieut. John C. Poste of the British Navy, who is going to attempt an aeroplane flight across the Atlantic, and manages to spare the time to take a lesson in the Maxixe from A. Baldwin Sloane and Grace Field.

AND WHILE

"Our MUTUAL Girl"

is safe in New York having all these good times, courageous camera men of the Mutual Film Corporation are in the front ranks at the Battle of Torreon

getting the first actual picture record of this desperate conflict to complete the

LIFE OF VILLA

which is now being prepared for release.

The following honor-list of producers should be in the hands of every exhibitor. Remember the names and the Mutual clock:

AMERICAN	THANHOUSER	BRONCHO	MUTUAL WEEKLY
RELIANCE	MAJESTIC	KOMIC	KAY BEE
KEYSTONE	BEAUTY	DOMINO	PRINCESS
ROYAL			APOLLO

BRANCHES IN 49 CITIES MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION NEW YORK

William FOX Features

BIG, INSTANTANEOUS
MONEY-GETTING ATTRACTION
READY FOR IMMEDIATE BOOKING

Box Office Attractions

"WIVES"—in three parts

It's a Ramo film in which the director of that famous studio accomplished the greatest results of his entire career.

There's a rainstorm and lightning scene that's a moving picture wonder. Thrilling burglar chase that ends in the wreck of an automobile. Broker wreaks vengeance on a rival speculator who would wreck his home. True wife trapped by her former sweetheart who has fallen into evil ways.

Clear, vivid pictures reflecting the earnest work of a company of sterling players.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE IN FURIOUS ACTIVITY

A riotous scene in which a mad day on 'change is graphically depicted by the motion picture camera. It has been declared by experienced brokers to be the most realistic photographic record ever made. The nearest approach to this marvelous reproduction of panic was staged in "The Pit," and scored a tremendous hit.

A Masterpiece of Motion Picture Perfection

This extraordinary production is an intense domestic drama that will keep audiences thrilled from the moment the first scene is flashed upon the screen to the very last.

Controlled Exclusively in New York City and State, Northern New Jersey and New England.

The Exhibitors' Bulletin Sent Free

The Exhibitors' Bulletin, a magnificent monthly publication, carefully edited for the benefit of exhibitors, unbiased, filled with valuable information, sent free to exhibitors in New York State, Northern New Jersey and all of the New England States for one year upon request. A postal will bring this magazine to you.

Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co.

130 West Forty-Sixth Street, New York City

WILLIAM FOX, President — TELEPHONE, 7340 BRYANT

Itala Film

A Film Like Tigris

A Play of Plotting

Tracked Across the Desert

An absorbing drama of adventure on two continents. A fight to the death between a girl and the man who covets her money. Scenes on board ship and in the desert are crowded with thrilling action.

State Rights Selling.
Wire or Write.

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA

Candler Building HARRY R. RAVER, Director General New York City

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

COMING: William Farnum in "The Redemption of David Corson."

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents
America's Most Famous Film Actress,

MARY PICKFORD

In The Famous Tale of a Woman's Heroism,

"TESS of the STORM COUNTRY"

By Grace Miller White
In Motion Pictures.

Released March 30th
In Five Reels

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

COMING:
Malcolm
Williams in
"The Brute."

"30
FAMOUS FEATURES
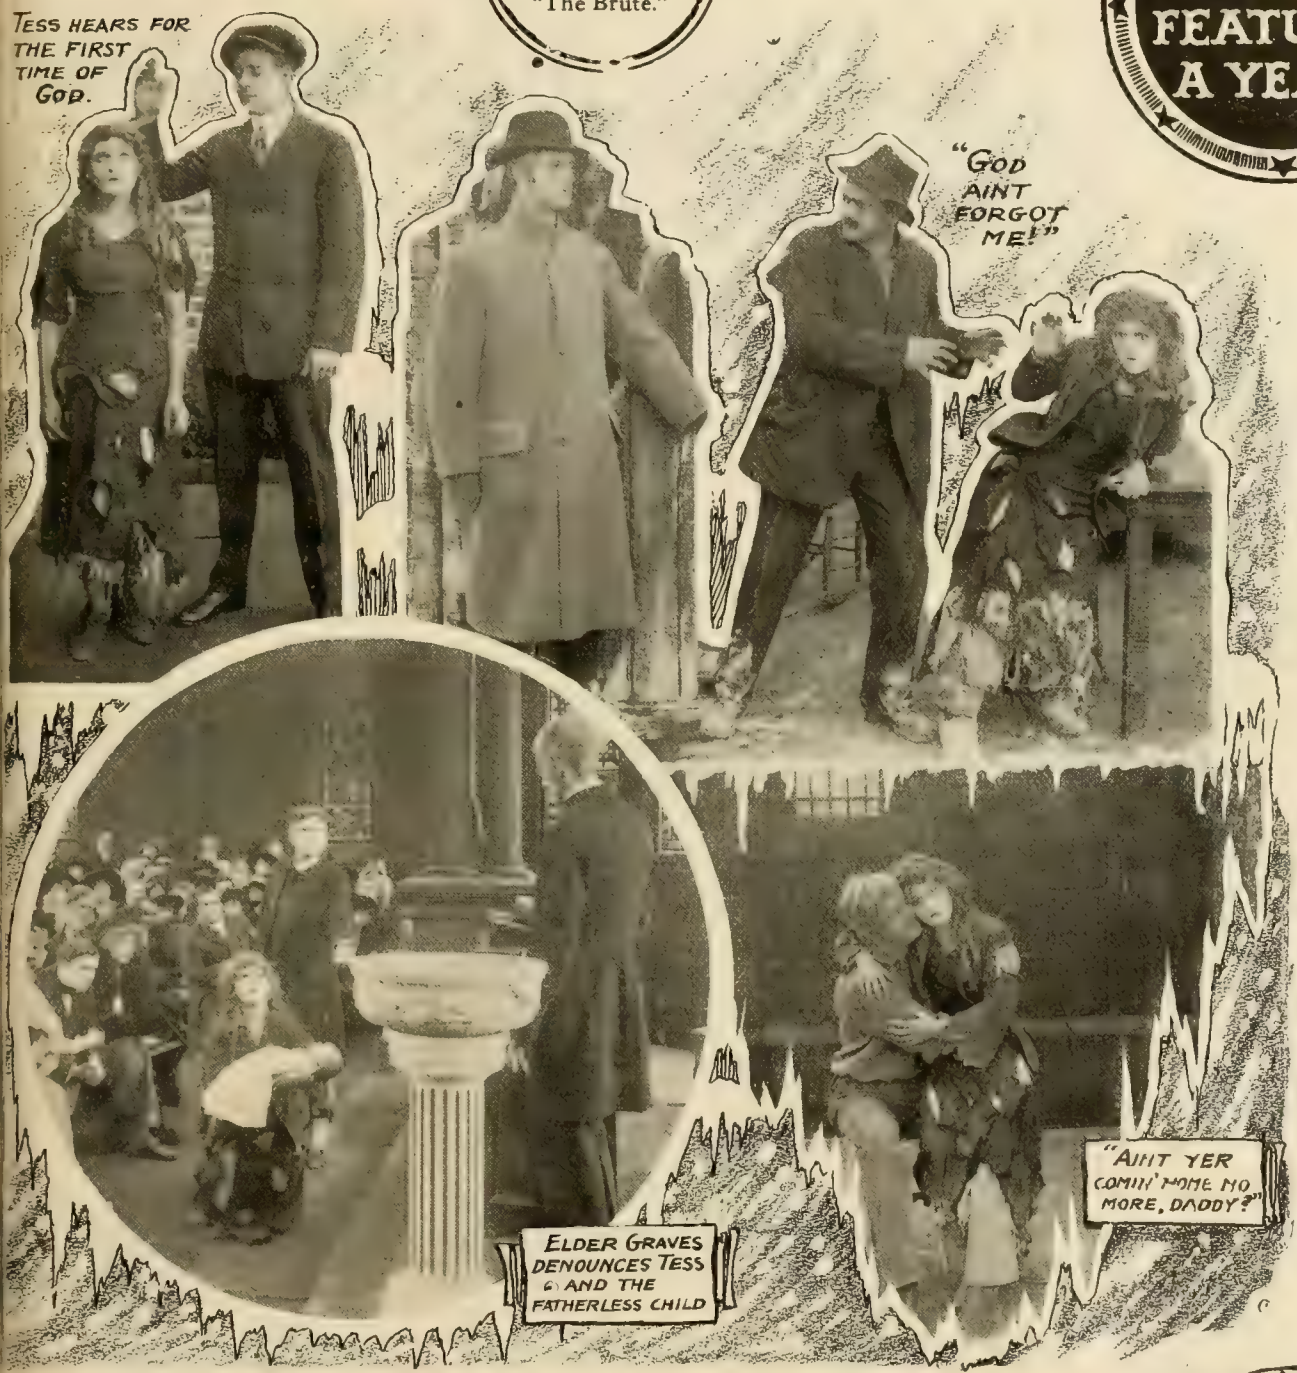
A YEAR"



TESS HEARS FOR THE FIRST TIME OF GOD.
"GOD AINT FORGOT ME!"
ELDER GRAVES DENOUNCES TESS AND THE FATHERLESS CHILD
"AINT YER COMIN' HOME NO MORE, DADDY?"

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"30
FAMOUS FEATURES
A YEAR"

GREAT TRADE MARKS

THE SPLENDID REPUTATION OF

KAY-BEE KEYSTONE
BRONCHO DOMINO

IS THE RESULT OF PUTTING FORTH THE BEST PICTURES

Everywhere the exhibitor knows they are the best. He knows this because he has used his brains and does not need to be yelled at.

He also knows that the school is greater than its pupils; that defection from its ranks of a few actresses and actors has absolutely no effect upon its firm establishment and steady progress.

He knows good pictures are made in the studio, not by hysterical advertising and ridiculous and ruinous salaries. He knows that KAY-BEE, BRONCHO, DOMINO and KEYSTONE pictures will continue to be the best, because the same stock companies built up by MR. THOMAS H. INCE and MR. MACK SENNETT will go right on producing them, and as we have implicit faith in the exhibitors' intelligence, we shall continue to appeal to it with good pictures.

This is our final word upon a hysterical situation, which we regard as detrimental to the entire industry.

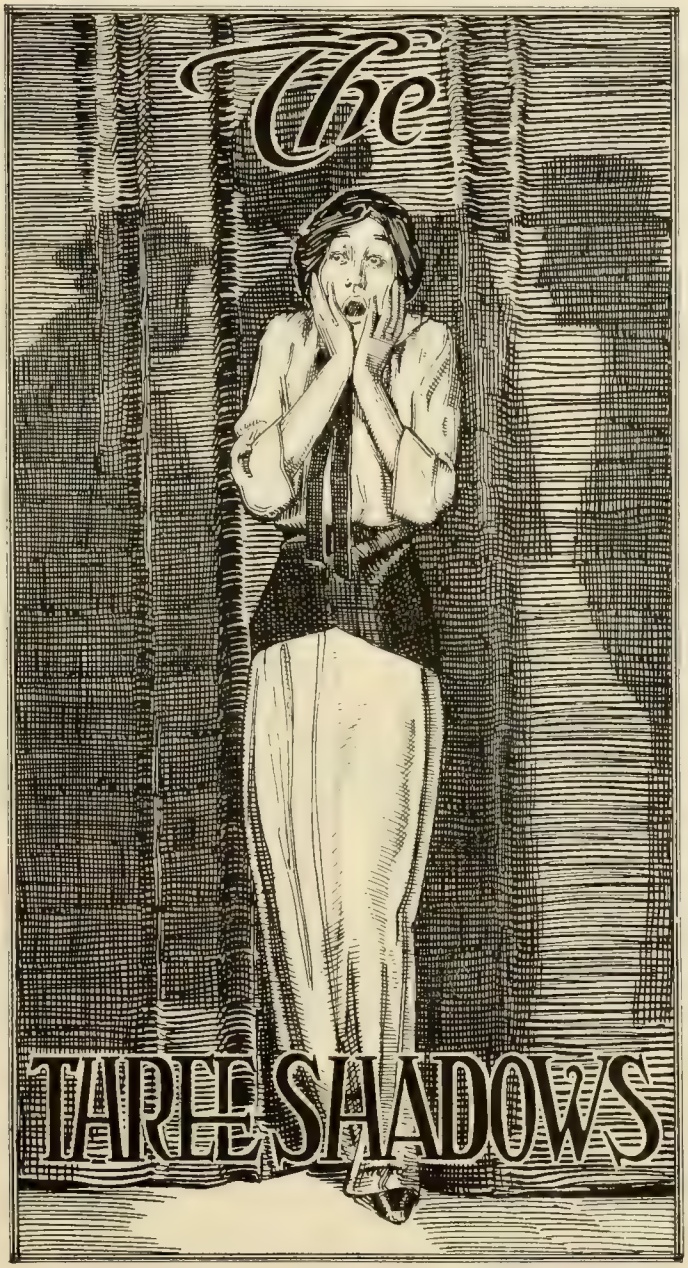
8 x 10 Photos of Clara Williams, Richard Stanton, J. "Barney" Sherry and Chas. E. Ray can be secured by sending 50 cents to the Publicity Dept.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.

LONGACRE BUILDING, 42nd STREET AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK

The Gaumont Company

PRESENTS



A Sure Seller

Strong
Attractive
Mysterious

Gorgeous
Dance Room Scenes

Beautiful
Photography

Well Staged

For a thrilling, dramatic story that's different, you must get

"The Three Shadows"

There is something doing every second. Dramatic? Well, we should say so! Posters? Original! Yes, again! And different? Absolutely! They are the last words. Please don't forget that it's sure to sell quickly.

IN THREE PARTS

OUR POSTERS

These are the strongest posters ever offered to exhibitors. They were made especially to attract trade to you. 1—3—6 sheets.

GAUMONT CO., 110 W. 40th St., New York City

THE RECORD NEW YORK HIT OF 2 FIRST-CLASS BROADWAY THEATRES

JOE WEBER'S THEATRE
The Home of Photo-Dramatic Hits

NEW YORK THEATRE
Most Important New York Theatre Offering Pictures

THE GREAT LEAP

Or—UNTIL DEATH DO US PART

Staged by W. CHRISTY CABANNE, under supervision of D. W. GRIFFITH

CLINGING TOGETHER ON A MADLY GALLOPING HORSE

HE and SHE

DRIVEN TO THE LAST EXTREMITY
DESPAIRINGLY EMBRACE AND DASH OVER THE CLIFF'S BRINK
DOWN FIFTY FEET INTO THE DEPTHS OF THE RIVER BELOW

This positively unparalleled feat of daring, which comes as the final climax to the most realistic and thrilling feud-drama of love and hate in the Kentucky mountains ever shown on any screen, makes

THIS CONTINENTAL FEATURE FILM CO. DRAMATIC MASTERPIECE

THE GREAT LEAP FOUR REELS

ABSOLUTELY THE MOST SENSATIONAL

BOX OFFICE MAGNET

NOW BEING RELEASED IN AMERICA

(Can be obtained only through Continental or Mutual exchanges)

HELEN GARDNER
PICTURE PLAYERS

A NAME THAT BRINGS A CONTINUOUS FLOW OF MONEY INTO THE BOX OFFICE

SCENE IN "FLEUR DE LYS"

SCENE IN "PIECES OF SILVER"

SCENE IN "A PRINCESS OF BAGDAD"

Important Information

No name to the moving picture patron inspires greater confidence than that of Helen Gardner. The moving picture exhibitor throughout the country recognizes the fact, as every feature made and released by the Helen Gardner Picture Players bears the brand of quality. Therefore, Mr. Exchange Man, the Gardner productions mean money to you. Some splendid territory still open for alert, wide-awake state right operators who can sense the value of these productions.

Wire At Once

THE HELGAR CORPORATION

WORLDS TOWER BLDG., NEW YORK CITY, U.S.A.

PHONE, BRYANT 7697-8 SOLE SELLING AGENTS CABLE ADDRESS "HELGAR"

GENERAL

ROMA

3 Parts PAT

A CELEBRA

4 Parts KAL

FILM CO. (INC.)

NY SPY

HÉ Drama

TED CASE

EM Drama

The Molinari Masterpiece—

ROME OR DEATH

In Five Massive Parts

A film record of the thrilling struggle for Italian independence of 1867-1870, characterized by one historian "as the most remarkable event the history of the world has known."

THE AWE-INSPIRING ATTEMPT OF SEVENTY PATRIOTS TO SEIZE ROME

THE BATTLES AT ST. SEBASTIEN GATE, ST. PAUL AND VILLA GLORI

BATTLE SCENES SUCH AS ONLY THE GREAT MOLINARI IS CAPABLE OF HANDLING

FEATURING

G. CATTANEO

AS

THE WORLD PATRIOT

GARIBALDI

CATTANEO'S BEST WORK AFTER HIS SUCCESS AS NERO IN "QUO VADIS" AND NAPOLEON IN "FOR FRANCE AND NAPOLEON"

ALSO

SIGNORA de LEONARDIS

THE DISTINGUISHED EMOTIONAL ACTRESS

STATE RIGHTS NOW OFFERED

The following territory already sold:—

New England
New York
Greater New York
Pennsylvania
New Jersey
Delaware
Maryland
District of Columbia
Virginia

Inter-Continent Film Co., Inc.

PRINCIPAL OFFICES: World's Tower Bldg., 110-112 W. 40th St., New York City

HER LIFE FOR LIBERTY IN THREE PARTS, and No. 1 of the Garibaldi Historical Series of which "Rome or Death" is No. 2. Everything sold but a few states. Wire.

·LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·VIENNA·BRUSSELS·ROME·MILAN·HAMBURG·

PATHÉ

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·ATHENS·ROSSTOFF·SYDNEY·ALGIERS·SINGAPORE·SHANGHAI·MANILA·CAIRO·HONGKONG·BACOU·

·BUENOS AIRES·MEXICO·RIO JANEIRO·BARCELONA·BELGRADE·BUCAREST·ZURICH·WARSAW·SOFIA·MARSEILLES·BUDAPEST·

HE SAVES HIS SWEETHEART'S CHILD FROM HER FATHER

HIS SWEETHEART'S CHILD

A TWO PART DRAMA

A STORY OF EVERLASTING LOVE THAT DOES NOT LESSEN EVEN THOUGH UNREQUITED

THE PASSING YEARS BRING REPENTANCE AND HAPPINESS

Released Thursday, April 2d

IN TANGLED WEBS

A TWO PART DRAMA

A STRONG STORY OF THE EVILS OF GAMBLING

Through his fatal habit the gambler loses self respect, sweetheart, and life itself.

Released Saturday, April 4th

INSIST UPON THESE FILMS AT YOUR EXCHANGE. IF YOU CAN'T GET THEM WRITE US AND WE WILL HELP YOU

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE WHOLE WORLD

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST., JERSEY CITY. N.J.

·ST PETERSBURG·STOCKHOLM·DRESDEN·MADRID·ODESSA·MOSKOW·KIEW·

LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·ROME·MILAN·VIENNA·MADRI

TRADE MARK

PATHÉ

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL

·KIEV·CAIRO·BOMBAY·SHANGHAI·SINGAPORE·HONGKONG·SMYRNA·ALGIERS·

THE ROM

THREE

THE SPY AND THE OFFICER ARE BROUGHT BEFORE THE COMMANDANT

A SPLENDID AND REALLY THRILLING
ENT PHOTOGRAPHY AND INTENSELY
FEATURE OF WHICH
TO BE RELEASED THROUGH THE
AS A SPECIAL FEATURE

TRADE MARK

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·MARSEILLES·NOUMEA·ZURICH·ODESSA·MOSCO

PETERSBURG·DRESDEN·HAMBURG·BRUSSELS·STOKHOLM·ATHENS·

PATHÉ

CITIES OF THE WORLD

BARCELONA·MEXICO·BUENOSAIRES·RIO JANEIRO·SYDNEY·MANILA·

ANY SPY

REELS

PRODUCTION. SUPERB ACTING, EXCELL-
INTERESTING STORY MAKE IT A
TO BE PROUD.
GENERAL FILM CO. MARCH 26TH
PHOTOPLAY MASTERPIECE.

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

WHOLE GLOBE

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST. JERSEY CITY, N.J.

TOFF·WARSAW·BAKU·BELGRADE·BATAVIA·BUCAREST·SOFIA·

MR. OPERATOR: JUST TRY A SAMPLE OF

"Electra" Pink Label Carbons

You know that the clearness, steadiness, and uniformity of light depend entirely upon the carbons. Therefore it does not pay to use inferior carbons when "Electra" Pink Label Carbons can now be had at lower prices than ever before.

The new prices of "Electra" Pink Label Carbons make them the most economical of any carbons on the market, considering length of life, intensity of light, and their low current consumption. Large stocks of all sizes are carried by the leading Film Exchanges and Supply Houses throughout Canada and United States.

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway, New York

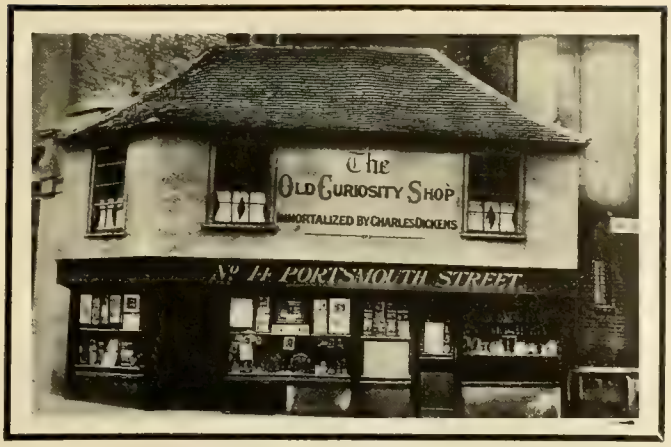
COUPON

Kindly send me samples suited to the following conditions:
A. C. or D. C. current .....
Voltage .....
Amperage .....

Very truly yours,

.....
.....
.....

Guaranteed to be Authentic in every Scene



AS SEEN IN THIS PRODUCTION)

Actual Surroundings as they exist today featuring THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP

Hepworth's Pictorial Revival

as Immortalized by

CHARLES DICKENS

The Old Curiosity Shop

Produced in England by Famous Dickensian Character Players by T. J. Bentley

Publicity of the Highest Class

24, 6, 3, 1 Sheet Lithographs, Special Heralds and Booklets, Photographs, Cuts, Slides, etc.

In 5 Parts Unexcelled in Acting and Photography

A. BLINKHORN, PRES.

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

110-112 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

LUBIN

BIG FEATURES EACH WEEK!

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday

A Drama Every Friday

"Above the Law"—Two Reels—Released Wednesday, March 25th.

A Two Reel Feature Every Wednesday and Thursday

DO NOT MISS THESE FEATURES!

(RELEASED THROUGH THE FEATURE DEPARTMENT OF THE GENERAL FILM CO.)

"The Gamblers" FIVE REELS — By Charles Klein

"The Daughters of Men" FIVE REELS — By Charles Klein

"Officer Jim" THREE REELS — By Lawrence S. McCloskey

IN PREPARATION

"The Wolf" FIVE REELS — By Eugene Walter

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK

"A DEAL IN REAL ESTATE"—Comedy	Tuesday, March 24th
"ABOVE THE LAW"—Two Reel Drama	Wednesday, March 25th
"THE GAME OF POLITICS"—Two Reel Drama	Thursday, March 26th
"THE PURITAN"—Drama	Friday, March 27th
"DETECTIVE SHORT"—Comedy "THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA"—Animated Comedy (Split Reel)	Saturday, March 28th

SPECIALLY DESIGNED POSTERS

One and Three Sheets with Single and Split Reels—One, Three and Six Sheets with Multiple features. Order from your Exchange or the A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Lubin Manufacturing Co.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office, 154 West Lake Street

ESTHER

In Three Parts (COPYRIGHTED) Now Ready

Esther Hears the Call of Her People

A SUPERB BIBLICAL PHOTOPLAY
BOOK IT FOR THE LENTEN SEASON

THE RECKONING

Four Parts (COPYRIGHTED) April 1st

A GRIPPING FEATURE — INTENSELY SENSATIONAL

Eclectic Feature Film Exchanges

NEW YORK	CHICAGO	BOSTON	MINNEAPOLIS	ATLANTA	DALLAS
110 W. 40th St.	5 S. Wabash Ave.	3 Tremont Row	4th & Hennepin Sts.	Rhodes Bldg.	Andrews Bldg.

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

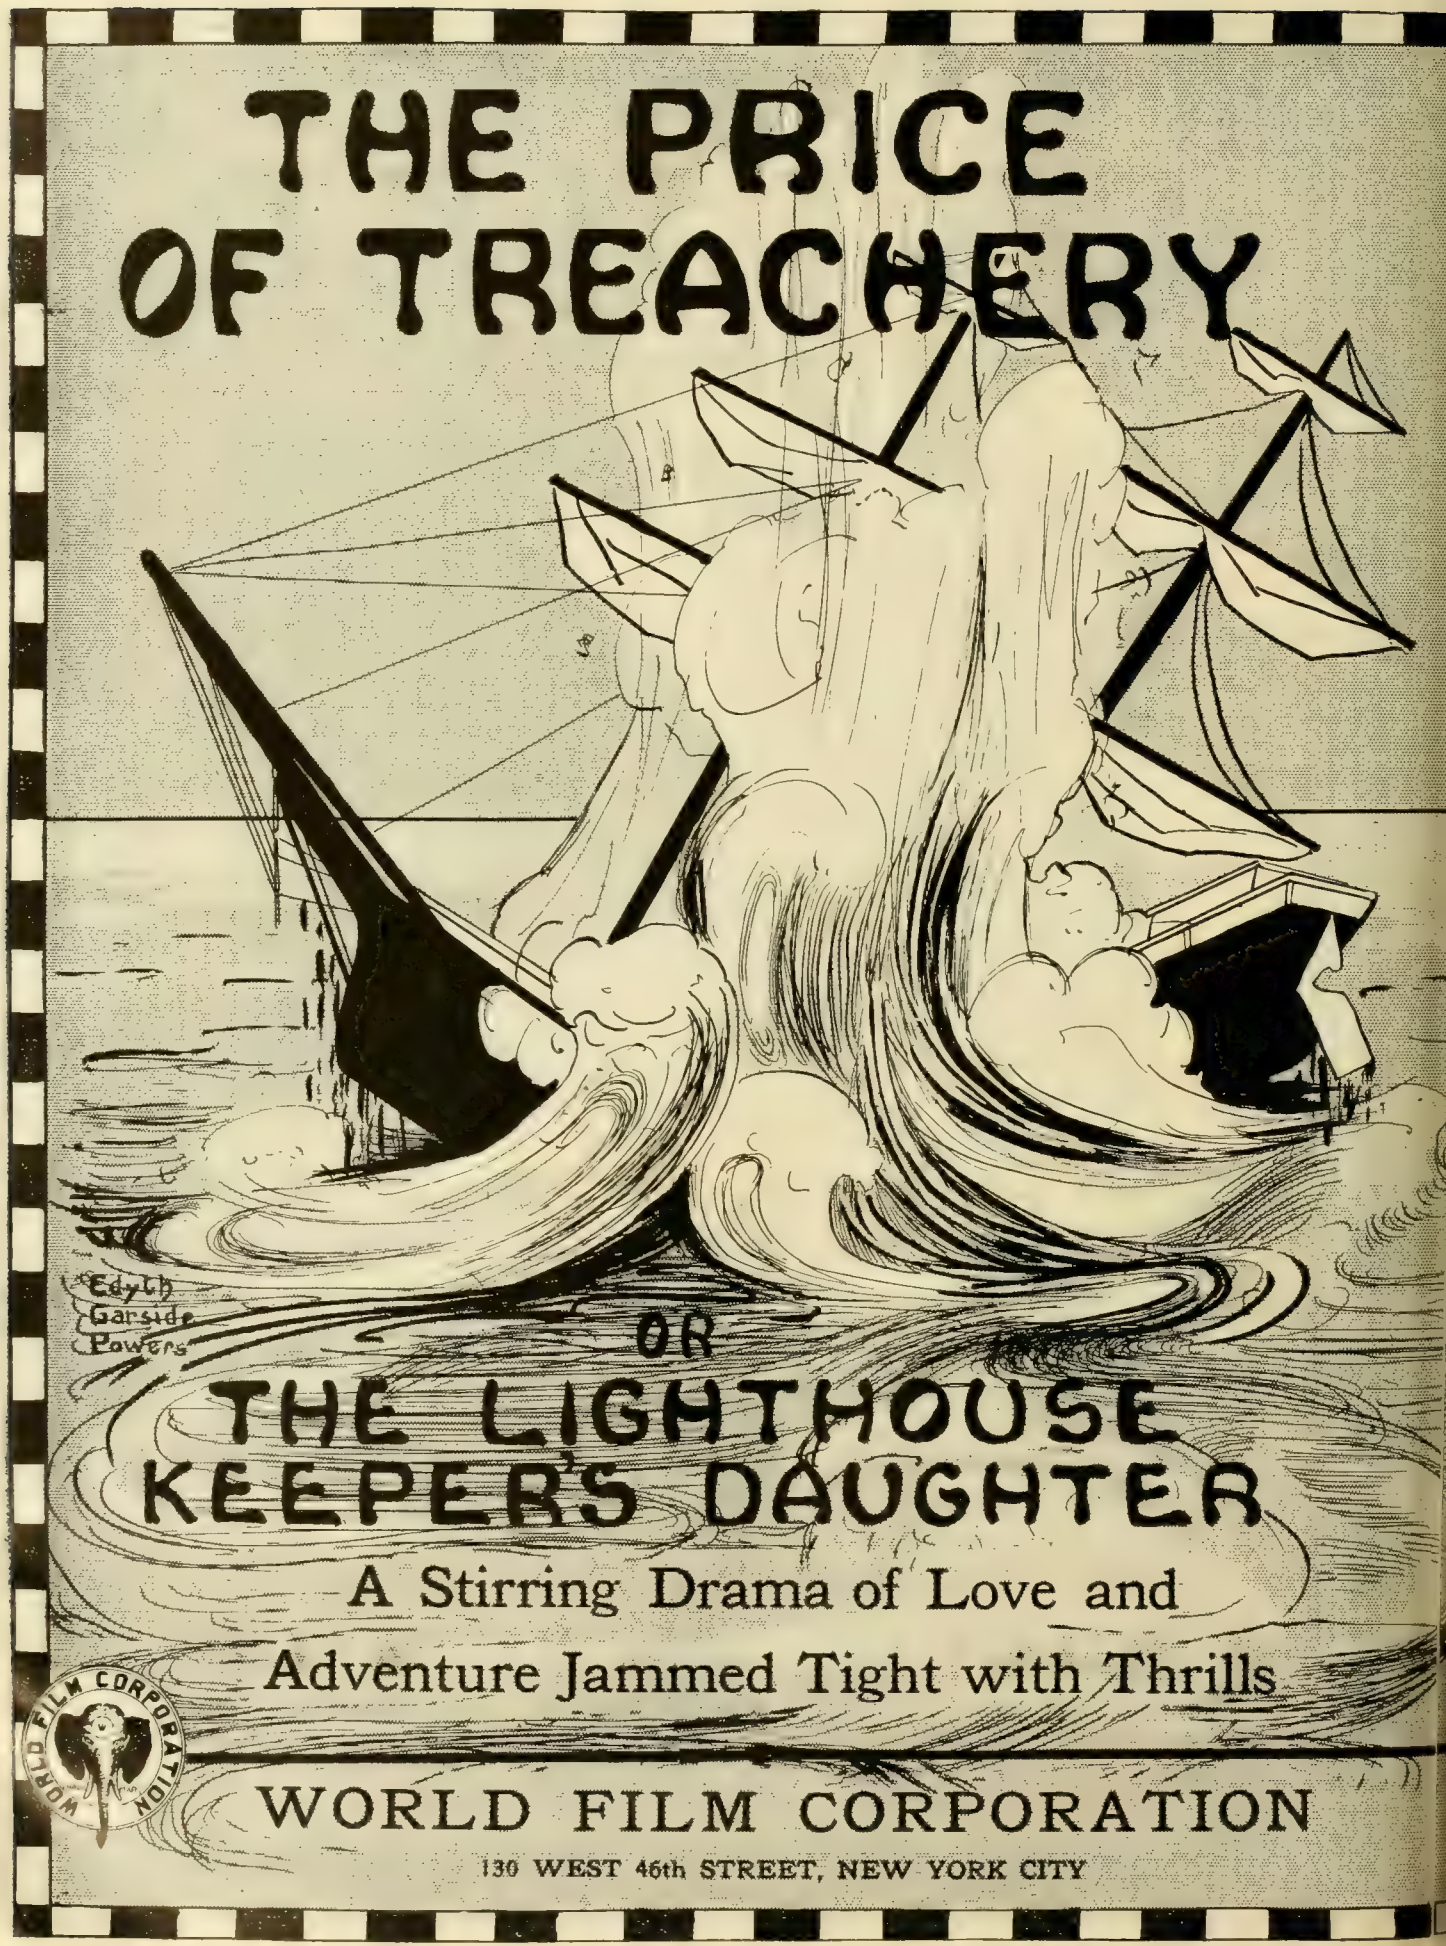
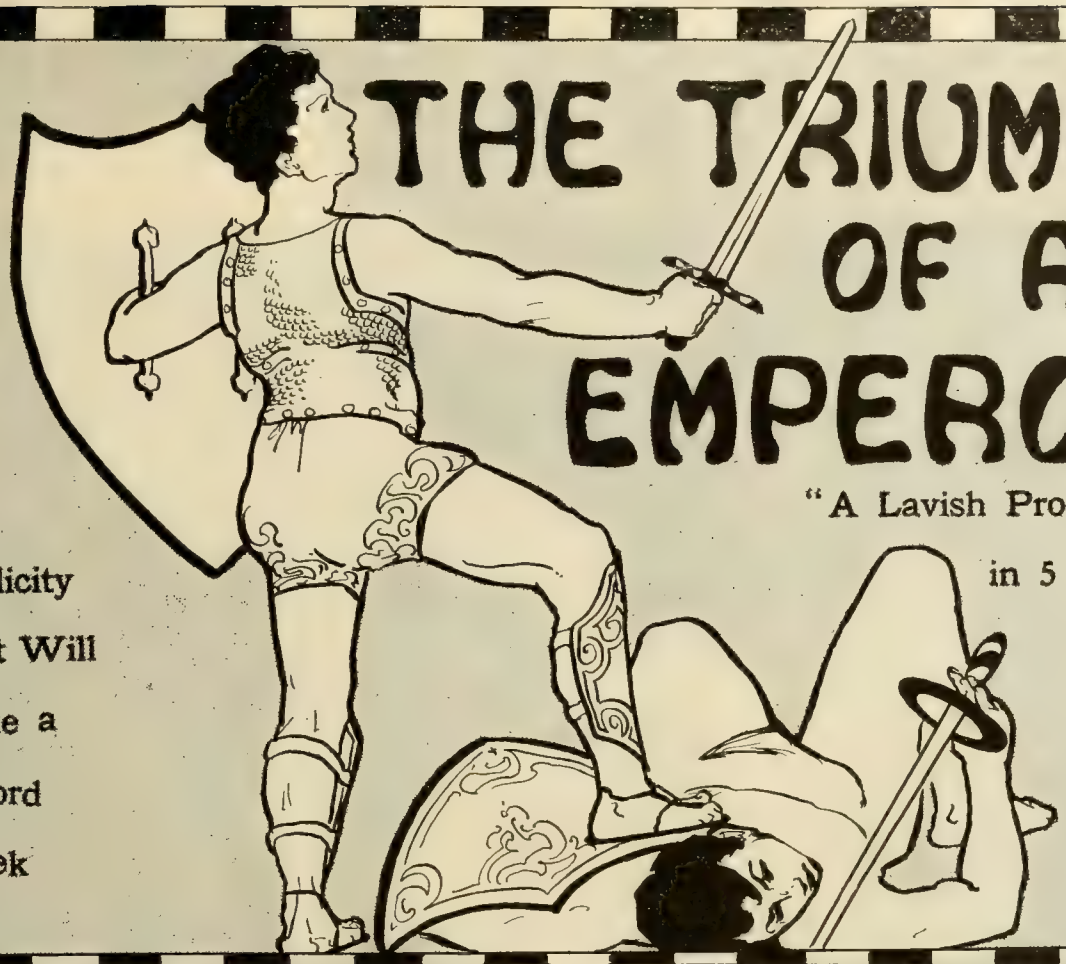
"The Cream of American and European Studios"



THE PRICE OF TREACHERY
Edyth Garside Powers
OR
THE LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER'S DAUGHTER
A Stirring Drama of Love and Adventure Jammed Tight with Thrills
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
130 WEST 46th STREET, NEW YORK CITY



THE TRIUMPH OF AN EMPEROR

"A Lavish Production"

in 5 Parts

Publicity That Will Make a Record Week

JOAN OF ARC

A Brilliant Combination of History and Drama

The Maid of Orleans A Stupendous Spectacle in 5 Parts

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

BRANCH OFFICES

New York Minneapolis Kansas City Buffalo Philadelphia Boston Cincinnati
St. Louis Cleveland Indianapolis Pittsburg Dallas Detroit Chicago
Atlanta New Orleans Washington Denver Seattle San Francisco Los Angeles

EDISON

THE VISION IN THE WINDOW—WOOD B. WEDD

WOOD B—WILLIAM WADSWORTH—is still searching frantically for that wife and getting in deeper every moment. His latest adventure in a department store is a scream from beginning to end. It is a race between Mark Swan, the author, and Wadsworth to see which can be the funnier—and the exhibitor who shows the series is the biggest winner of all.

Wood B. Wedd films already released:—"Her Face Was Her Fortune," "The Lovely Senorita," "The Beautiful Leading Lady."

COMING SINGLE REELS

Dinklespiel's Baby
Comedy. Monday, March 23rd.

The Borrowed Finery
Comedy-Drama. Tuesday, March 24th.

A Night Out
Comedy. Wednesday, March 25th.

*Putting One Over
Fourth "Dolly of the Dailies" story.
Drama. Saturday, March 28th.

TWO REEL FEATURES

The Double Shadow
Drama. Friday, March 20th.

The Brass Bowl
From the novel by Louis Joseph Vance.
Drama. Friday, March 27th.

One sheets. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.*

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope, Type "D."

JESSE L. LASKY

PRESENTS

The Most Powerful Drawing Card in the history of stage plays on the screen

DUSTIN FARNUM

in Edwin Milton Royle's thrilling Western drama

"THE SQUAW MAN"

Picturized by CECIL B. DE MILLE and OSCAR APFEL

OUR NEXT RELEASE

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

with the Original Star

EDWARD ABELES

Original Book (now in its 12th Edition) - - - - By George Barr McCutcheon
Original Play (2 Years on Broadway) - - By Winchell Smith and Melville Stone
Original Star (Played Leading Role 1800 Times) - - - - - - - - Edward Abeles
Produced Under Personal Attention of (America's Most Artistic Producer) - - Jesse L. Lasky
Directed by (Master Playwright, Director and Author of Numerous Dramatic Successes) - - - Cecil B. De Mille
Directed by (Acknowledged Peer of Directors and Genius of Innovators) - Oscar Apfel

Distributed by America's Foremost State Right Buyers

UNSOLD

MISSOURI KANSAS IOWA NEBRASKA

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.

West 48th Street Longacre Theatre New York City

JESSE L. LASKY
President

SAMUEL GOLDFISH
Treas. and Gen. Mgr.

CECIL B. DeMILLE
Director General

HEPWORTH'S, LONDON, PRESENT

CHARLES READE'S FAMOUS NOVEL

THE CLOISTER and THE HEARTH

FIVE PARTS

Special Publicity Matter: 1, 3, 6, 24-Sheet Lithographs, Special Heralds, Photographs, Cuts, Slides, Etc.

THE TURNER FILMS, LTD., PRESENT

MISS

FLORENCE TURNER

IN A TWO-PART SPECIAL RELEASE

ROSE OF SURREY

TWO POPULAR HEPWORTH RELEASES!

BLIND FATE

A TWO-PART DRAMA

Write for Particulars

JUSTICE

A FOUR-PART MELODRAMA

A. BLINKHORN, PRES.

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

110-112 West 40th St. New York City

STATE RIGHTS

For "The Cloister and the Hearth" and "Justice" for New England, New York State, Greater New York and Northern New Jersey sold to

Anima Film Rental Co., 110-112 West 40th St., New York City

"George Kleine Attractions Sweep the Nation"

—remarked a certain well known and extraordinarily successful exhibitor who owns a chain of prosperous houses throughout the East. "I want your next big feature, 'FOR NAPOLEON AND FRANCE' just as quick as I can get it!"

It's the old story—old but ever new and vital to the man who wants to win—QUALITY! You've got to supply it whether you're selling shoes, sandwiches or plain amusement.

The mammoth ensemble scenes in all "George Kleine Attractions," where thousands are employed in a single scene—the magnificent interiors possible only to European manufacturers—the superb exteriors of France and Italy combined with the South of Europe sun and rare technical genius—all combine to produce negatives unsurpassable, to say the least, in America.

"Quo Vadis?"

In 8 Parts

"The Last Days of Pompeii"

In 6 Parts

"Antony and Cleopatra"

In 8 Parts

"Between Savage and Tiger"

In 6 Parts

"For Napoleon and France"

In 6 Parts

They're Winners, Every One! Book Them!

KLEINE-CINES

(In Two Parts)

(Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine)

"A Son of the Sea"

An enchanting story of an abandoned babe, commercial war and a Government test of motor-boats.

Released through General Film Co. 1, 3 and 6 sheets with this subject

George Kleine

166 N. State Street, Chicago 1476 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

VITAGRAPH

NEVER AGAIN
Released Saturday, March 28.

Every Week
Two Vitagraph Special Features
Each in Two Parts
Tuesday and Saturday
Every Week
A Comedy every Wednesday and Friday.

A HELPFUL SISTERHOOD
Released Tuesday, March 31.

"THE WOMAN IN BLACK"

Drama. Monday, March 23rd

Her demure attire is a clever foil to hide her real vocations. With the aid of another crook, she robs a chance acquaintance. They both get caught by their victim. Maurice Costello, Mary Charleson and Gladden James are the principals.

"HER HUSBAND"

Drama. Special Two-Part Feature]
Tuesday, March 24th

She marries the first one in haste and repents at leisure. The second one is a wise choice and as happy as the first venture was miserable. Earle Williams, Clara Kimball Young, Darwin Karr and James Lackeye are the leads.

"THE HALL-ROOM RIVALS"

Comedy. Wednesday, March 25th

They both court the same widow. They are persistent lovers, but they are overanxious. A third party carries off the prize. Josie Sadler, Tefft Johnson, Etienne Girardot and William Shea are the cast.

"CHANLER RAO, Criminal Expert"

Drama. Thursday, March 26th

No mystery is too deep for his occult powers. He recovers a stolen ring and arrests the thief. He succeeds where the police fail. Ned Finley takes the title role.

"MILLIONS FOR DEFENCE"

Comedy. Friday, March 27th

He is willing to spend a fortune to get rid of her, and she would do the same. They turn around and marry each other, and are glad they did. Myrtle Gonzalez and William D. Taylor play the leads.

"NEVER AGAIN"

Comedy. Two-Part Special Feature
Saturday, March 28th

This is what they all say when they go out on a lark and get found out. Sidney Drew has the time of his life at the French Ball. He just escapes being found out by his family, but he has to pay for it.

SIX A WEEK

"THE SILVER SNUFF BOX"
Drama.....MONDAY, MARCH 30th
"A HELPFUL SISTERHOOD"
Drama—Special Two-Part Feature.....TUESDAY, MARCH 31st
"STAGE-STRUCK"
Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st
"TOMMY'S TRAMP"
Comedy-Drama.....THURSDAY, APRIL 2nd
"BUNNY'S SCHEME"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, APRIL 3rd
"THE CRUCIBLE OF FATE"
Drama—Special Two-Part Feature.....SATURDAY, APRIL 4th

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY RELEASES A SPECIAL FEATURE IN TWO PARTS EVERY TUESDAY AND SATURDAY AND A COMEDY EVERY WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS—7 x 9 PHOTOS OF VITAGRAPH PLAYERS.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES. SURPASSING ALL PREVIOUS VITAGRAPH ACHIEVEMENTS.

"LOST IN MID-OCEAN." IN THREE PARTS, SPECIAL FEATURE SERVICE, RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SEE THE SINKING OF THE BIG OCEAN LINER IN

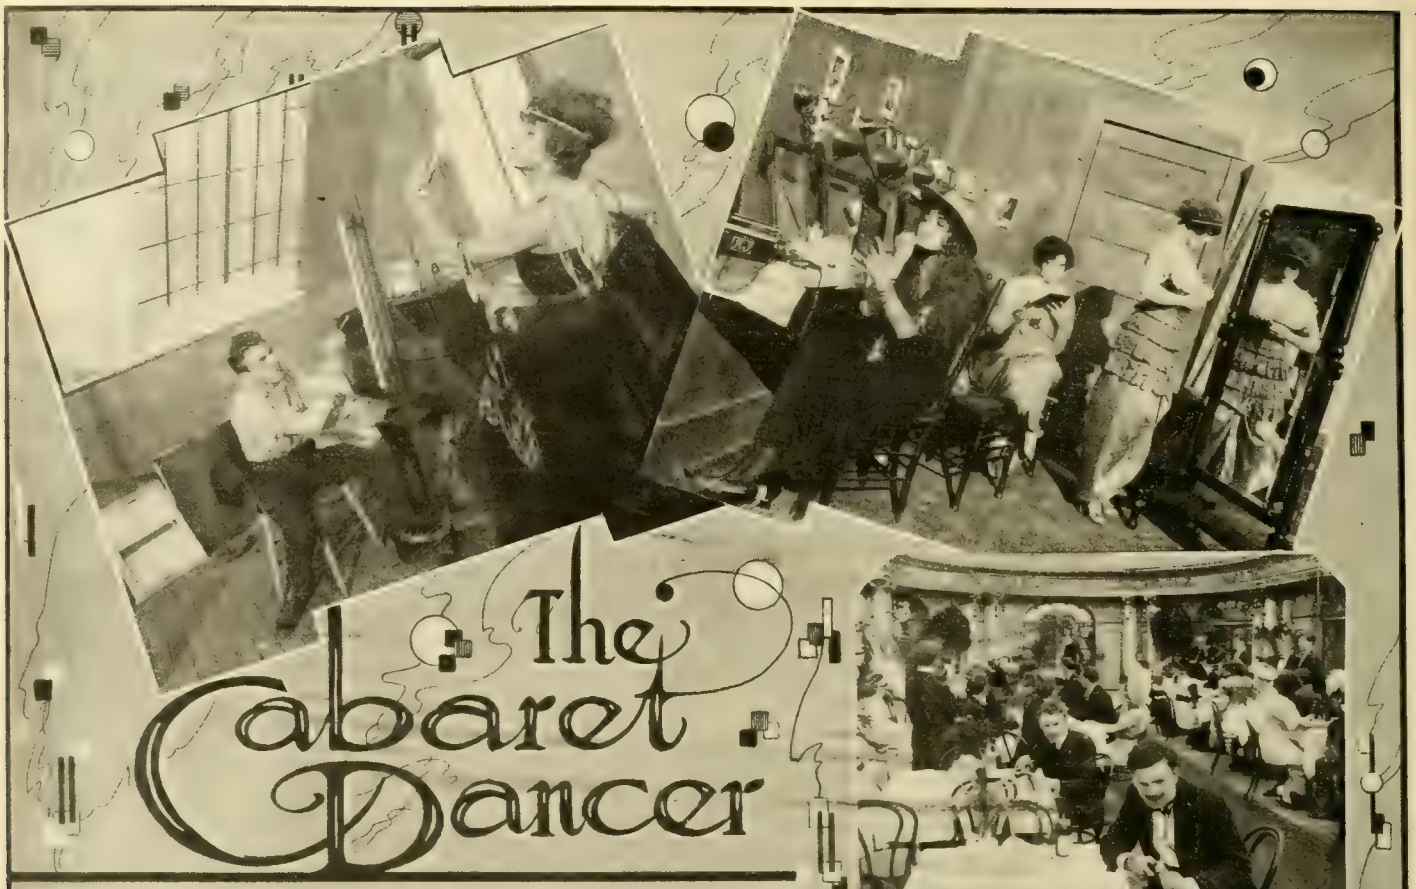
"LOST in MID-OCEAN."

VITAGRAPH SPECIAL, IN THREE PARTS

Released Through General Film Masterpiece Service

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd

AN OVERTOWERING CLIMAX OF ART



The Cabaret Dancer

In Two Parts. Featuring ALICE JOYCE in the Title Role

In this powerful drama, Alice Joyce, for the first time in her career as a photoplay star, shows her amazing skill as a danseuse.

Released Monday, April 6th
Not mere posters, but Business Getters.
Kalem 1, 3 and 6 sheets

CAPTURED BY MEXICANS

Featuring Don and Cleo Ridgeley in a Two-Part Drama of the Southwest

Based upon an incident of the Ridgeleys' horseback trip from New York to San Francisco. Sensational battles between Mexican federals and rebels.

Released Wednesday, April 8th
Kalem 1, 3 and 6 sheets make the crowds head your way

GERTY GETS THE CASH

She has to pose as her own lover to get the money. The result is simply great.

(on the same Reel)

HUBBY'S NIGHT OFF

A wife fond of bridge, a husband fond of poker and a burglar fond of loot create a mighty funny mixup.

Released Friday, April 10th

UNDER DESPERATION'S SPUR

The mountain girl's terrible sacrifice to save her lover from death at the hands of the moonshiners, will bring a tear to every eye.

Released Sat., April 11th
Special 1 and 3 sheet posters

Released through the Special Feature Department of the General Film Company

THE BOER WAR
(In Five Parts)

WOLFE, or THE CONQUEST OF QUEBEC
(In Five Parts)

THE DEATH SIGN AT HIGH NOON
(In Three Parts)

A CELEBRATED CASE
(In Four Parts)

FRANCIS MARION, THE SWAMP FOX
(In Three Parts)

THE OTHER HALF OF THE NOTE
(In Three Parts)

KALEM COMPANY

235-39 W. 23rd St.
NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. Telephone: Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 a year

ADVERTISING RATES.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 1750.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, March 28, 1914.

Facts and Comments

EXAGGERATION is part of the gospel of yellow journalism. Anything whatsoever that will, or remotely may, inflate the circulation is allowable. Hence the artificial building up of popular crazes and fads. About the ethical side of the thing the yellow journal cares no more than a blind man cares about colors. The "white-slave" craze and the "drug-craze" are carefully and villainously fostered and cultivated because they minister to morbid curiosity, and morbid curiosity ministers to some kinds of circulation. In keeping alive the reader's interest in these "crime-waves," etc., etc., excruciating headlines are invented and the best trained liars are thrown into the shade. Thus one paper claimed that a considerable percentage of the population was engaged in the white slave traffic and that this country was the "most drug-ridden land" in the world.

*

Unfortunately there is a type of film producer always in the wake of the "yellows," always appealing to morbid curiosity and sometimes to utter depravity. They wait until they think the particular craze advertised and celebrated in the yellow journals has reached its flood tide, and then they launch their nasty or stupid films upon the public. They rarely make any money, but the temptation to wallow in the dirt is too strong for some persons to resist. The worst of it is that the name of the motion picture suffers and the ambitious producer with clean hands and good ideals is often hurt by the sins of the disreputable enterprises. Whatever shallow hypocrites may prate about, the fact is that the pretense of an "educational uplift" in these so-called "exposures" is offensively thin and transparent. What these men are after is a little easy money, and their pretended interest in the uplift of humanity is enough to make a hungry horse turn aside from his oats and bring on a fit of blind staggers.

*

Is there any sensible person in all this country who will honestly say, after a little reflection, that even one single individual was saved from white slavery or from the drug obsession by means of these pictures? We cannot believe it. We do not believe that the producer of these shockers believes it. Whatever they may say in their advertisements and for publication generally, they laugh at the "educational value" of their pictures in their hearts. That these films put a weapon in the hands of the enemies of the picture they may not know, but whether they know or whether they do not know they certainly do not care.

* * *

WE have always predicted the ultimate superiority of the American multiple reel feature, and the verification of our prophecy has not been long in coming. The foreign motion picture journals teem with a most fervid appreciation of "Judith of Bethulia," made by one of our American producers. We have read enough in the daily journals of France and Germany and England (quoted in the motion picture papers), to convince us of two things: firstly, of the quality of the American product, and, secondly, of the intelligent appreciation of first class productions in the daily press of these countries. This feature, we firmly believe, is but the forerunner of hosts of other splendid American multiple reels.

* * *

IN commenting recently upon the deplorable conditions in Atlantic City as a rare revival of crazy competition, we did, of course, not mean to reflect on the one theater which in spite of this competition is holding up prices and confining itself to a rational program. Our remarks were intended rather for houses with a very large seating capacity which run or at least advertise fourteen reels for five cents, besides adding cakewalks and tango contests. Why cannot this nuisance be taken up either by the organized exhibitors or by the exchanges. Men who run houses of this kind are enemies of the industry and ought to be dealt with as such.

* * *

ONE of the judges of General Sessions in this county has had himself interviewed in regard to the "menace of the motion pictures," a stock phrase which is dying slowly. There is much that is true in the Judge's criticism of the management of some of the motion picture theaters, especially in certain sections of the city. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has but recently examined the allegations made by the S. P. C. C. against picture theaters in certain sections of the city and has found them correct. While the judge's opinion that the motion picture has succeeded the poolroom as the favorite gathering place of the young lawless element is an obvious exaggeration, facts and figures show that many of the crimes against children had their origin in the undesirable kind of motion picture theaters. We have always advocated the severest enforcement of the law against such places, and we believe that they are constantly decreasing. We heartily agree with the judge in his suggestion that more care should be taken in inquiring into the character and the antecedents of the applicants for a license. We have long ago recommended a prompt revocation of licenses as the best means to abate the evil.

Theories vs. Facts

By W. Stephen Bush.

WHILE the educational branch of the motion picture art is still in a purely experimental stage we realize from day to day what potent influence kinematography is bound to exert in the education of generations yet unborn. Whoever has had any practical experience with educational kinematography understands far better than any mere theorist what tremendous forces are stored away in the educational film. All the objections to the employment of kinematography in education of all grades come from men who admittedly have had no experience in the practical handling of the subject. Theorizing is all very well in its way, but one hour of practical experience is worth tons of theory and speculation.

The writers in two publications, one issued in New England, the other in Colorado, have recently taken up the subject of educational kinematography. They both arrive at the conclusion that motion pictures are but poorly adapted to educational purposes. They base their conclusions upon observations made at ordinary motion picture entertainments which they have witnessed and upon their general theoretic deductions.

One of the writers, a schoolmaster, writes in the characteristically dogmatic way of his kind as follows:

> "The moving picture is not and cannot be truly educative; it is in fact destructive of education."

If such a sweeping pronunciamento came from an expert or from a man who knows something at least about educational pictures it might be entitled to serious consideration. The writer freely confesses, however, that his whole experience is based upon his visit to "a picture show." He "remained at the show for an hour." Our friend also has made the remarkable discovery that "the literary supply" (he probably means the scenarios) is manufactured out of pretty crude materials, in immature minds even by high school boys and girls, whose sole aim is to make a flashy play which will sell for a few dollars."

From this damning statement the schoolmaster proceeds to the delivery of this rare and radiant gem:

> "The supply being far inferior to the demand the exhibitors (sic) accept anything which will create some stir and is not positively immoral."

While some of the enemies of the picture vehemently declare that the film inflames the imagination our schoolmaster says quite complacently: "There is no prompting of the imagination in the presence of the motion picture."

He winds up his fearful homily by this yellow-livered prediction:

> "It is my earnest belief that the moving pictures are actually producing a race of human jellyfish—myopic and purblind jellyfish at that."

Let us first of all suggest to our friend that in spite of all his theories the motion pictures are to-day used in many schools and educational institutions and used with good effect. The trouble with this objector is that he has built or attempted to build a mountainous conclusion upon premises of sand. He evidently does not know that there are thousands of pictures to-day whose value is chiefly educational. He may not realize that at least one of the organized groups of manufacturers maintains an educational bureau, which has grown from small beginnings to a great and useful enterprise. He may likewise be ignorant of the fact that firms like Pathe, Gaumont and Eclair maintain at great expense special educational departments, conducted on scientific principles and managed by noted educators who stand high in the pedagogic world of France. Perhaps he does not know that the greatest masterpieces in the world's literature have been filmed by men intellectually at least his equals and that noted pedagogues in all countries have warmly applauded these filmed versions of "Quo Vadis?" Dante's "Inferno," "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Les Miserables" and scores upon scores of others?

We like to submit for his consideration and the consideration of all teachers interested in education the following ideas:

If the motion picture of an educational character serves a useful purpose to-day when it is utterly without direction and without system what will it do when it is in the hands of competent educators? Of course, we do not expect to abolish the text-book, but we do expect to supplement it with pictures. Surely, even our kinematophobic friend will admit that still pictures are not only useful but have from time immemorial been considered essential in any scheme of education. If the still picture, whether as slide or illustration in the text-book, is thus both useful and necessary why not, a fortiori, the picture in motion? Every argument that may be used in favor of the still picture applies with much greater force to the picture in motion. The combination of text and motion picture is the most effective method of reaching the human mind whether of the child or of the adult, whether of the learned man like our schoolmaster or just an ordinary mortal.

Let me try to explain. Take this example. Here is, let us say, the Lateran Palace in Rome. It may be filmed in less than two hundred feet and supplied with proper titles or oral explanations we can make the structure live again in history. The pictures alone mean little, the words alone convey but imperfectly. Combine the words and the pictures and the ancient structure rises up before our eyes and every impression we absorb is made firm and lasting by the explanatory words. The same applies exactly to any other subject. Of course, no one expects that these pictures will be exhibited anywhere but in the schools and for educational purposes. You cannot possibly form a just estimate of the true educational value of the picture by passing into a motion picture entertainment and staying for an hour. To understand the situation you must give it some thought and then make some sort of a practical test. I now invite the schoolmaster to make this experiment:

Let him take two classes of the same grade, the pupils being about even in mental endowments. Let both classes be instructed, say, in the history of Rome. Let the one class adhere strictly to the text-books with no other aid whatever except such as in the ordinary course is given by the teacher. Let the other class go over precisely the same course, but let the text-book be supplemented by a systematic course of motion pictures touching on the subject and let these latter pictures be either properly titled or explained in the same manner as one comments upon the text-book. Let the course occupy the same time in each case and then let us have an examination of these two different classes. If the pupils who had the assistance of the motion pictures do not show a clearer understanding of the subject and a far more complete knowledge, then it will be time to question the educational value of the kinematograph; but not until then.

Alas, Poor Yorick!

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

YOU know him well, a fellow of infinite jest and most excellent fancy. He can be found in almost any moving picture studio. He has usually had about twenty-five years of successful production on Broadway, if you leave it to him. He will tell you how Lester Wallack and Augustin Daly kept up the finer traditions of the profession, how Dion Boucicault illuminated the human mind, how Joe Jefferson reached the hearts of all by saying "If Schneider was here, he would know me," how Hearne ministered to our sense of the eternal fitness of things with his eternal lighthouse, how Clara Morris "tore passion to tatters," and you may take it for granted that Belasco and Frohman were mere incidents in his varied career.

Yorick, knows that there are only six plots, though Gozzi and Schiller, who claim to have investigated all possible combinations of human affairs, conclude that there are thirty-six fundamental dramatic situations. Yorick may even concede the thirty-six barriers to further exertion and aspiring originality, but he entertains a settled conviction that it is useless for us to pursue the truth beyond those arbitrary limitations. Even, if by any possible chance, a new phase of human life should be depicted, what assurance have we of its truth? How can any situation be accepted as truthful that has not been tried and proven by theatrical convention?

Do not try to confound Yorick. He will fall back, like Brander Mathews, on dear old Aristotle and Sophocles. He will point "Oedipus" as evidence of how little we have progressed since the Greeks enjoyed hearing two characters harangue each other for an hour or two, our only sense of relief arising from the fact that Yorick rarely claims "Oedipus" as one of his Broadway hits. It is a sad tale, mates, that of Yorick and his Six Plots and his Thirty-Six Dramatic Situations.

Granting that Aristotle and Sophocles should be accorded the reverence due the two most accomplished liars of their time—the stories they told the ancient Greeks would not be swallowed by an American boy of seven—and granting that a really good liar is one of the most entertaining of men, we must manfully face a modern change of sentiment, a cold-blooded and unsympathetic tendency to get at the facts. With some of that regret one always feels on disillusination about Santa Claus, we are compelled to part with the hero of stage tradition, the noble gentleman of the limelight, who has long been painted in high lights, for the disenchanted audience of to-day cannot be aroused to a frenzy of hero-worship as in the good old days gone by. In the light of modern investigation, it begins very much to look as though heroes were myths, or, at least had a human and shady side to their characters.

It looks very much as though the stage hero would have to go to the ash can, along with Yorick's Six Plots and Thirty-Six Dramatic Situations. The eyes of Yorick and his kind are blurred by that malicious persistence of old errors to which I have recently referred, old views formulated by limited intelligence on false impressions. A wrong view of human events and human character may easily have been founded on a confusion of symmetry with uniformity in nature. There is a certain amount of symmetry observable in plant life, yet consider the wide variety found there and those irregularities, those anamolies, which attract the study of scientists. There is also a symmetry in human configuration, both of body and mind, yet consider the infinite variety of human beings and their complex manifestations of character.

The modern audience, especially that of the picture show, is inclined to relegate demigods somewhat contemptuously, if good-naturedly, to the ages they suited, to leave them there, along with a lot of other rubbish. We have become students of human nature and take a pleasure in watching its intricate and varied manifestations, no longer content with the outward presentment of man, preferring to know more about him than the average stage dramatist seems able to tell us. Moving pictures have almost taken him to pieces and recreated him, the best of them allowing us to know him, to see him, as he is, no meaner and no better than he should be, a soul portraiture of critical analysis.

To rave over past performance is often only a passing consolation for the incapable and envious. It is far more virile and manly to appreciate and encourage the good that now is being done. We have an entirely new structure to build in this marvelous new art of visualization, one which will require the work of vigorous thinkers, and this structure must not be trammelled by the stale traditions of an older art sadly in need of revitalization. We must use modern systems to suit the progressive age in which we live, respond to the highest ideals of our people, depict the forces which are now making history, dispel the superstitions that fretted the childhood of our race, prevent the spread of vicious tendencies, and open a broad highway to interest in better methods of living.

What a lot of misery is caused by the fact that we are so ignorant of one another that we ascribe wrong motives, that we almost invariably suspect the worst of our friends, that we live in a world of mutual distrust, when we might as well be bound together in full knowledge of human weakness and its causes by a common bond of sympathy! That nearly all of us are irritated by friction of surroundings uncongenial or inharmonious, that our finest aspirations are being distorted by hard necessity, that our best efforts bring small reward and no gratitude, all these may easily be made to furnish material, both comic and tragic, for a thousand screen dramas out and beyond Yorick's Six Plots, stories calculated to amuse or hearten through their vital truth of representation.

It is from Yorick and his ilk that we are handed conventional presentations of humanity and those distorted "character" parts which get an occasional guffaw from the unthinking and make all the rest of us unutterably weary. It is Yorick who asks us to suspend common sense and hypnotize ourselves into a state of innocuous idiocy while people in the play discuss affairs of the highest importance where they can be easily overheard, if, indeed, the villain is not looking over their shoulders. It is Yorick who measures the growth of a nation's intelligence by his own peanut-stand mentality. Yorick's effect on moving pictures has been to make them ridiculous.

Old traditions hang on tenaciously, and men who write about the drama would have us accept conventions we have long known to be false and hollow. Disgust for stage artificiality drove millions to the picture shows, but the Yoricks came swarming after with their Six Plots and Thirty-Six Situations, with their inherited stock of views and ideas, with the stage hero, the stage villain, the stage servant, the stage methods and a general inability to venture from the beaten paths. For Yorick there are no new vistas, and, on that account, he is as dangerous as he is tiresome. He will have to go—he is already ticketed for elimination—and with him will probably depart the less harmful gentleman who moons over "Oedipus" whose final word may be a plaint over "the imperfect differentiation and polychromatic dramaturgy of the dithyramb to Dionysus."

"Sealed Orders."

Three Parts in Six Reels. De Luxe Attractions Film Co.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS feature is nothing less than a revelation in dramatic motion pictures. It sets a new and hitherto but hoped for standard of quality. It emphasizes as no other film production the absolute superiority of the screen over the stage and opens up a vista of coming triumphs for the motion picture. Later, when we have seen more of this quality, we may find new shafts of criticism, but for the present "Sealed Orders" has disarmed and silenced the fault-finders.

An extraordinary boldness of invention joined to a mastery of detail that approaches genius help to make this feature rise above all which has been filmed before. The mastery of detail includes some light and camera effects which are startling in their beauty and originality. It is much easier to enjoy than to describe them and I want to leave something to the imagination of the exhibitors.

Scene from "Sealed Orders." (De Luxe).

The feature from the first second of its life on the screen throws us into the midst of things. Mystery and action, two powerful creators of interest, alternate in rapid changes. The settings are mostly in a class by themselves, the acting is irreproachable, the photography stereoscopically clear and sharp.

Fine as these points are, and earnestly desired by exhibitors and the public, they are but the minor points of merit when compared to the main point of merit: the director. He is a man of inspirations, a masterhead at playing upon the emotional chords, an artist who can do things with and on the screen the like of which has heretofore been almost unknown. We have had glimpses of them from one of our famous directors, but here we have the full blaze instead of the passing glimpse. The director's name is Christensen, and depend upon it, you and I and all of us will hear from him as time goes on.

The plot seemed to me like a magic fan of the Orient—apparently simple and all in one fold, but capable of expanding into a hundred pretty convolutions whenever the right hand touched it. The touch of this director is light but elemental. The story abounding in pathos, in climaxes, in sensations, in new departures centers round the childish play of a little boy. To me one of the great charms in this picture is the naturalness of it all. Grant that the things happening are extraordinary to the fullest extent of the word, that some of them are unheard of and others overwhelming in their originality, you feel at the same time that they are entirely possible and might have happened. The director knows what will bear emphasizing and what must be touched but lightly. He has the gift of explaining things to the heart. Hence the wonderful and sustained interest which these films arouse. The six reels come and go and the story has absorbed you to such an extent that you forget all else—you do not care to speculate on the how and the wherefore, you are simply and delightfully conscious of a desire to see more of the same kind.

Briefly told this is the story: Two nations are on the verge of war. A foreign spy is watching the movements of the home government and sending reports to his masters by carrier pigeons. These messages bear the mysterious signature of "X." At the head of the home navy is Admiral Van Houven, whose son is in the same service. The wife of young Van Houven has had a perfectly harmless flirtation with the foreign spy, Count Spinelli. She has promised him her photograph and sends the picture to him writing on its back her emphatic refusal to see the spy again "as she is happy in the love and confidence of her husband and her children." The spy, however, is persistent. He renews his attentions to the young woman and she again repels them. In the meantime war has actually broken out and we see much realistic war on water and on land. The honor of the first attack has been given to young Van Houven whom his father, the commander of the fleet, has entrusted with sealed orders.

Young Van Houven before joining his ship pays a last visit to his family. He has known nothing whatever of the annoying attentions of the spy to his wife. Just before the arrival of her husband the young wife has received a letter from the spy. The letter, most cunningly and insinuatingly worded, is written on one side of the paper. It contains nothing really compromising, on the contrary, read as a whole, it would tend to vindicate rather than accuse the young wife. She leaves the letter on her dressing table.

Her little boy, a fine-looking child five or six years old, gets the letter and takes it up to the nursery. He begs the nurse to "cut the paper up and make an elephant out of it." The nurse humors the little boy and the letter is cut into the shape of an elephant.

Scene from "Sealed Orders." (De Luxe).

In the cutting process the hand of fate plays strange and fantastic tricks. The words which would have shown the wife's innocence are cut away and what remains of the letter on the body and the legs of the paper elephant might easily be spelled into the guilt of the wife. A moment or two after the sending of the letter the sender comes himself and thinking the husband had gone to the front forces his company on the young wife. A second later the husband himself enters. The wife dares not tell him of the spy's presence in the room, where she receives him, she goes with the husband to the nursery, the father kisses the children, one of whom smiles in unconscious sweetness just as the father kisses it; all seems happiness and love, when the father picks the paper elephant from the floor, smiling at first good-humoredly, but presently transfixed in horror and anger as he reads the mutilated letter, which seems to damn the young wife.

A scene of fearful intensity ensues; the husband accuses the wife, while in the reception room the spy has seized the bag with the sealed orders, has opened the orders, copied them and restored them, with the seals broken, into the bag. In returning to the reception room the young officer looks for his bag and sees the spy hiding beside the mantel-piece. He is about to wreck summary vengeance when an officer of his ship enters urging him to come away. He suppresses his fury and, true even in this agony to the honor of his house and his children, he turns away from the scene of his destroyed happiness and follows his brother officers to the ship. The sealed orders advise the young officer "to attack at sunrise."

The spy having copied the order now sets about to transmit it to his employers in the hostile army and for this purpose he repairs to an old windmill on a hill, where his pigeons are concealed. And now follows one of the prettiest scenes in the play, the riding of the spy's helpers to the windmill, the meeting between the spy and his confederates and the preparations for the release of the carrier pigeons.

All this is done with the most minute and interesting detail from the hiding of the message under the bird's wing to its release in the air. The pigeon intrusted with the message, "Second Division will attack at sunrise," is shot by a man in Van Houver's division before it reaches the lines of the enemy. Admiral Van Houven is greatly disturbed to find that the contents of the sealed orders have become known and begins an immediate investigation which results in the discovery that the orders have actually been opened. Young Van Houven is arrested, tried and condemned to death. There is a tense and terrible moment at his trial. The wife seeking vainly to convince her husband of her innocence brings to court the coat which the spy upon his visit to her had left behind him. The president of the tribunal orders the coat searched and a copy of the sealed order is found in one of the pockets. The wife declares that the copy was made by the spy and that the coat belongs to the spy. The husband declines to accept this defence and claims the coat is his, still further reverting the guilt of treason upon his head.

Nothing seems to stand between the young officer and a traitor's death but a few brief hours. Nemesis, however, the inexorable avenger on the trail of the wicked, has not been idle. The spy in the windmill has stepped down into a secret opening. A burst of wind shuts the outer door and the resultant shock brings the heavy lid down upon the secret basement making the spy a prisoner. We are not unprepared for this, for with a display of rarest skill the director has shown a few strong gusts of wind before the climax and we see it all in a second. The director evidently knows that the man who goes to the theater, whether the silent or the speaking stage, likes to be convinced. He convinces us of the hopelessness of the spy's position by showing in marvelous detail how every avenue of escape is quite shut off. The spy to ease his conscience signs a confession ex-onerating the admiral's son, the heroic wife dashes through the thickest of the fight and secures at last the order for her husband's release. The end seems to the audience like sunshine after a storm, a mere accident vindicates her wifely honor as a mere accident had thrown suspicion upon it. In the drama and in life these are the accidents which make up Providence.

Scene from "Sealed Orders." (De Luxe).

"Sealed Orders" is the greatest blow struck in the battle for quality, the strongest battering ram that has appeared before the walls of the old castles of "Mediocrity" and "Monotony" and "Cheapness." The demand for quality will receive a new impetus from coast to coast.

FROM A LADY BUG.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Enclosed find post office money order for $1.50, for which please extend my subscription for six months. Can't do without the World. It is, in my opinion, improving with each issue, and is 'way ahead of any other publication devoted to the moving picture industry.

Wishing you continued success, I am, respectfully,

(MISS) MARY C. LEEDS.

Grafton, W. Va.,
358 West Main Street.
(Pianist, Brinkman Opera House.)

The Relationship of Characters

By R. C. McElravy.

ONE of the most important features in the development of a photoplay is the relationship of characters.

What relationship does this young woman bear to the hero? Is she his wife or his sweetheart?

Who is this elderly gentleman coming into the picture? Is he the hero's rich uncle or the girl's irate father?

Who is this little boy? Or this little girl? Or this maiden lady?

These are almost the first questions asked at the commencement of a film. It is important that the observer should be speedily shown just who each character is, and what connection he or she bears to the others. In fact, the story cannot get a foothold in the mind of the observer unless these things are made clear. Until he knows definitely who the characters are, the film is apt to present itself to him as a Chinese puzzle. He may have one or two of the characters placed, but the others are doubtful and there is of course confusion.

Not infrequently a half reel will be shown before the characters have become properly identified. The fault is by no means uncommon, particularly where the theme is a familiar one.

In Western stories of ordinary setting the scenario writer or director desiring to make a short cut to the main incidents of the production, sometimes introduces the characters hurriedly.

A film opens, for instance, with Mary and Jim in a room together quarreling. The subtitle neglects to say whether they are married or engaged or merely intimate friends. Jim goes away in a temper and begins paying attention to another woman. Now the relationship of Jim to the first girl is a matter of prime importance. The observer wants to know whether he has merely quarreled with his sweetheart or whether he is abandoning his wife. This knowledges makes a big difference in the ultimate impression Jim makes upon the observer.

Not long a go a film was shown in which a woman and a young man were crossing the plains together in a covered wagon. Six people watching the film together drew the conclusion that they were a married couple. Toward the last of the picture the point was suddenly brought out that the woman was the young man's mother! This, of course, affected the success of the film very much.

This question of the relationship of characters is a difficult one to handle. The scenario writer and director, knowing the exact situation as they do, sometimes fail to show upon the screen the necessary incidents to get it clearly before the observer. Even where the entire cast is shown before the film starts, there may still be some confusion in the characters. In this case either subtitles should be employed or something of a revealing nature should take place in the action of the piece to clear up all possible doubts. This accomplished; the story becomes clear-cut and straightforward in its future development.

When Every One Knows They'll Start to the Movies as Soon as the Dishes Are Washed

From the New York Evening Sun.

"The Christian"

Hall Caine's Novel Produced in an Eight-Reel Vitagraph Feature and Presented at the Manhattan Opera House.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

John Storm	Earle Williams
Lord Storm	Edward Kimball
Father Lamplugh	Charles Kent
Horatio Drake	Donald Hall
Lord Robert Ure	Harry Northrup
Glory Quayle	Edith Storey
Parson Quayle	J. J. Sanbrook
Polly Love	Carlotta De Felice
Paul	James Morrison
Mrs. Maccrae	Alberta Gallatin
Vera	Jane Fearnley
Archdeacon Wealthy	James Lackaye

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE, home of "Salome" and Mary Garden, was well filled by a fashionable audience at the first presentation of an eight-reel Vitagraph release adapted from "The Christian," by Hall Caine. This daring invasion is probably made in the nature of an experiment, and it has its own revelations, among them the fact that intermissions, such as occur between the acts of a stage play, operate as a source of relief without breaking continuity of interest. It is also indicated that an instrument of varied musical effects, such as that in use at the Vitagraph Theater, is better suited than a church organ to accompanying screen presentations. There was variety of selection, from Chaminade's "Autumn" to the pizzicati and valse lente of Delibe's "Sylvie Ballet," at the showing of "The Christian," but it could be felt that the charm of contrast was absent.

The eight-reel feature was chiefly remarkable for beauty and accuracy of treatment, for discriminating judgment and fine selective taste in all that pertains to the visualization of a story. The cast, with one exception, was nicely balanced and the acting of a superior character, rising to moments of intensity in the concluding scenes between Earle Williams and Edith Storey. At the end came one of Mr. Blackton's poetic touches, one of those spiritual appeals to the imagination which he developed as belonging to the art of picture production and no other medium of expression.

There is some spirited action here and there in the story, but the general atmosphere is one of gloom, the characters are shaped by that all-of-a-sudden process which entails constant readjustment, and the novel is so obviously a makeshift of construction on a subject of no particular concern to Americans that it met with complete failure in this country in spite of a lot of blatant publicity. What is the meaning of "The Christian?" Is there soundness of purpose or stability of character in the book?

John Storm is the son of a man of position and wealth. The father plans a very natural career for his son and lays bare his plans in manly fashion. John fluctuates. He has a natural inclination to marry the girl of his choice, but it alternates for no visible reason with an inclination to become a monastic recluse. A normal man in love with a girl and not refused by her—would he give a moment's thought to turning monk? John is really distracted from his natural purpose by Father Lamplugh. Then he recants and revokes, an apostate in sentiment throughout the story.

Gloria Quayle is the girl, and she is in revolt against her narrow environment. She falls into perilous company, Lord Robert, Polly Love, a hospital nurse, and Horatio Drake, music hall manager, out in the country on an excursion. Gloria leaves home with this bunch, goes to London and becomes in succession a hospital nurse and concert-hall singer. Lord Robert wobbles between Polly Love, to whom a baby is later born, and an heiress, Vera MacCrae, and attains temporary equilibrium by marrying the heiress. She finds out all about him through the instrumentality of John Storm, who has now quit the brotherhood and returned to the outer world, when Polly dies. Vera takes the baby and dismisses Lord Robert. Through all this vacillation and backsliding we reach an arbitrary situation. Glory Quayle is singing at a concert-hall managed by Lord Robert's friend Drake. Next door, placed there by the author rather than by any good reason, is a large hall which erratic John Storm has converted into a sort of club house for working people.

"I have come to kill your body to save your soul." Scene from "The Christian" (Vitagraph).

John Storm has inherited money through the death of his father and is devoting it to good works, becoming the supposed idol of the people. He is an unstable idol. Lord Robert, of vagrant fortunes, easily upsets all the good John has done, acquiring by no perceptible means such an influence over "the people" that they turn against their friend and benefactor. Like the rest of the characters, they seem to suffer from an utter lack of stability. Lord Robert is nowhere pictured as a man of enough ability to fool London newspapers or to powerfully influence "the people," but, presto! he causes them to skip from one side to the other, because he says that John Storm has predicted the destruction of London on Derby Day. How easy! People who have been through a bitter experience and have found some relief from it in what Storm has to offer relinquish that good and their common sense at the same time because of a rumor circulated by Lord Robert and denied by John Storm.

Scene from "The Christian." (Vitagraph).

Now that the mob has turned a pirouette and landed on the side of Lord Robert, and now that John Storm's club house for the people is located next to the concert-hall in which his former sweetheart, Glory Quayle, is singing, over which Lord Robert's dastardly influence is made to extend, we reach "the dramatic situation." Glory participates in the general inconstancy of purpose—she tires of her brilliant success in the concert-hall—and goes over to the side of John Storm. Drake learns of this and gets possession of John's lease. Drake wants to marry Glory Quayle. She goes to John and tells him that she is about to forsake her career for his sake. John wakes up and takes her into his arms. At this opportune moment, the people mob their own club house and hoot their benefactor. Drake asks Glory to become his wife, showing that he has a deed of possession to John's club house. Glory refuses him because she loves John. Drake immediately changes about and gives the deed to John as a gift from him to Glory. As John now has both the deed and the girl, the story ends.

If any such method of construction will serve in a play, what does it serve? Is there a single and supreme thought in all this shifting about of motives and characteristics? Is there anything in Caine's story that compels the spectator to imagine and to realize some truth of life? Is there anything in the story to broaden our potential range of sympathy? Has the author tried to tell us something new? Is he in deep earnest, or has he simply combined a lot of old materials for the sake of a transitory thrill? The author's technical dexterity might be assumed, but it seems to me that there is a continual surrender of the plausible and the convincing in this story's methods because there is no great big sincerity of purpose behind it all.

If "The Christian" as produced in photodrama meets with popular success, it will not only be a triumph for the Vitagraph Company, but for the whole art of visualization over that of literature.

Vitagraph Plans for the Manhattan.

It is the purpose of the Vitagraph Company to present "The Christian," as mentioned before, at the Manhattan Opera House continuously during the week for an indefinite period. Seats are reserved for all performances. Matinee prices are twenty-five cents and fifty cents; evening prices twenty-five cents to one dollar. As the Manhattan is under a previous lease for Sundays the Vitagraph show will occupy the Casino Theater, Broadway and 39th Street, each Sunday.

One of the interesting features of the presentation at the Scene from "The Christian." (Vitagraph).

Manhattan is a beautiful stage setting, representing an ornate cathedral window set back on the stage and draped on the sides with rich velour of deep red. Plans were laid to give the picture an imposing introduction on the first night. A surpliced choir of thirty-four boys had been engaged and carefully rehearsed for a processional hymn just preceding the picture, but a sudden and unexplained opposition to the appearance of the boys in the theater by the pastor of the church where they officiated on Sunday, prevented their appearance. It is understood other arrangements will be made to carry out this plan.

MARCUSSON GETS SIX MONTHS.

Samuel Marcusson, proprietor of the Improved Feature Film Company which did business at 42 East 14th Street, New York, pleaded guilty to the charge of receiving stolen goods before Judge Swann in General Sessions, on March 16, and was sentenced to spend six months in the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island. It was alleged that Marcusson was at the head of a gang of thieves who systematically robbed the Fourth Avenue branch of the General Film Company and that films to the value of $50,000 were thus obtained by Marcusson's exchange. Marcusson plead not guilty to the charge when first arranged and was indicted by the Grand Jury. As the case was about to go to trial, Marcusson learned that his accomplices had made a full confession, so changed his plea to one of guilty and was sentenced accordingly.

PATENTS COMPANY vs. LAEMMLE ARGUED.

On Thursday, March 12, the action of the Motion Picture Patents Company against Carl Laemmle and others was up for a hearing before Judge Mayer in the United States District Court. This action was brought some time ago by the Patents Company on the ground that the defendants were infringing the camera patents issued to Thomas A. Edison and owned by the Patents Company. The questions raised at previous hearings of this and similar cases were rehearsed by the plaintiff's attorneys and an injunction and an accounting asked for. It was argued by the attorneys for the defense that the courts had repeatedly held the Edison patents to be invalid. Judge Mayer took the papers in the case.

TRAVEL PICTURES STOLEN.

Franklin B. Coates, motion picture director of the Besley Expedition to Peru, reports that 9,000 feet of film shipped from Callao on the S.S. Aroyo had been taken from the case en route. Mr. Coates has five thousand feet of pictures which he brought with him.

"Napoleon."

An Entertaining Production in Five Parts by the Eclectic Film Company.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

ALL Napoleon films are good, some are better than others and this is one of the best. Napoleon is just the man to assuage the craving of the exhibitor for action, he was his own scenario writer and his own director and fighting battles was as needful to him as his daily bread.

In this feature we are informed by the author of the "herald" that Napoleon's military star first shone at the siege of Toulon in 1793, where he commanded the artillery, a post which he filled with the greatest energy. For his valiant action at Toulon, he was rewarded with the rank of brigadier-general. In 1796 the campaign was vigorously pursued in Italy, until in November, the French were hotly contending against the Austrians at Arcola, where the latter succeeded in retaining possession of the bridge over the Alpone River. However, the French desperately attacked them on the 17th and successfully carried the position.

Scene from "Napoleon" (Eclectic).

On July 1, 1798, Napoleon arrived before Alexandria. The campaign in Egypt was a desperate one and much hardship and suffering was endured by the French army. Napoleon's enterprise, however, was again met by success and on the 18th of August, 1799, he set sail for the continent after the conquest of Egypt. In the beginning of 1800 Napoleon again pursued operations in Italy, which extended to June, when after successfully crossing the Alps by the St. Bernard Pass, the second Italian campaign was brought to an end.

Scene from "Napoleon" (Eclectic).

On November 2, 1804, Napoleon Boneparte was crowned Emperor of the French at the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris. One year later he was desperately engaged in the famous battle of Austerlitz against the allied forces of Russia and Austria. Here was fought the most glorious of all the many battles of the meteoric Corsican. After Austerlitz the star of the conqueror began to decline and the pictures faithfully shows his tragic mistake in carrying the war into the eternal snows of Russia. After Russia came Elba, then The Hundred Days and at last Waterloo and inglorious St. Helena. It is all graphically visualized in these pictures. There was just one thing that puzzled me. Shortly before Napoleon's death a boy is seen whom he clasped in his arms most affectionately, pointing in mute gesture to what appears to be a bust of his faithless spouse, the Austrian Louise. What does it mean? It cannot be intended as a reference to the young son of the conqueror because that unfortunate child was many thousands of miles away from his father at the latter's death. We must not sacrifice history to the Moloch of Melodrama.

"A Leech of Industry."

Three-Reel Pathe Feature.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THE wicked brother-in-law is the theme of this story which abounds in stupendous and costly accidents. With melodramatic cunning we are led into this baffling situation: Virtue is apparently triumphing seated in a comfortable Pullman on its way to Washington to gather in some profitable government contracts. Dear Old Virtue is entitled to the contracts, but Hateful Vice is hot on the trail of the same contracts. At the start Virtue is ahead because it is on an express while Vice is merely gnashing its teeth. Presently, however, Vice hires an automobile with 60 horsepower and races with the express. At the half way point the automobile with the villains is slightly ahead of the train, but now the road makes a turn while the train rushes ahead on its straight track. In a desperate attempt to cut down the lead of the train and an utter disregard of all speed laws the auto dashes on and tries to shoot across the track in advance of the train. It fails, the engine smashes into the auto, which is literally scattered into a hundred fragments amid which the dead villains are waiting for the coroner. Sensationalism could not possibly go further.

Scene from "A Leech of Industry" (Pathe).

Nor is the race and the tragedy disconnected or ill connected with the story; on the contrary, the accident grows logically out of the plot, which is a good one. I liked the Russian part of the story, it was convincing and it had the atmosphere. Not enough praise can be given to the photography, while the acting indicated a good average. There are tense moments in the action.

FRANK COYGNE STILL WITH RUBY COMPANY.

In our report of the Emby Company's prospects in our issue of March 14th, "Manufacturers' Notes," we stated that Frank Coygne, producer of Ruby Features, had left that company to direct features for the Primagraf Company and that several of the Ruby Company stars had gone over with him. This was not wholly accurate. Mr. Coygne is or was producing the Primagraf feature, "The Black Cross," but has not permanently severed his connection with The Ruby Feature Company. "The Black Cross" was merely a special undertaking of his with the permission of the Ruby Company, and he is still on its pay-roll as producer of feature offerings.

"The Fulfillment" Essanay

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

ESSANAY'S first three-reel subject will be released April 2nd, under the title, "The Fulfillment." Harry McRae Webster has directed the production with artistic skill, and he has assigned the characters very happily.

Richard C. Travers and Bryant Washburn have done particularly effective acting in several recent productions—especially in "The Chains of Bondage" and in the films now under review. They make excellent opposites, Mr. Travers as leading man and Mr. Washburn as the villain. In "The Fulfillment" Mr. Travers takes the part of Lieut. Frank Mitchell, and Mr. Washburn that of his rival, Richard Dixon. The character of Mitchell suffers somewhat from the inconsistency of the story, which is quite impossible at certain points. These incongruities, however, will be overlooked by many because of the powerful appeal made by the story, in its main current. I am of the opinion that the story could have been more convincingly told in two reels.

Scene from "The Fulfillment." (Essanay).

Miss Irene Warfield in the leading woman's part of Ruth Mason has invested that character with charm, pathos and great interest. Her simulation of the temporarily demented bride is forceful and delicate. Thomas Commerford, as the father of Scene from "The Fulfillment." (Essanay).

Ruth, and Miss Clara Smith, as the mother, give praiseworthy characterizations.

The photography of these films is of a high standard. Double exposure is cleverly used to carry the story of the reminiscences of the lovers, Ruth and Frank, when as boy and girl they shared their joys and griefs together. It reminded me of "Sunshine," an Essanay production of several years ago.

Ruth Mason has two ardent admirers—Lieut. Frank Mitchell, U. S. N., and Richard Dixon, a wealthy, young lumber merchant. She favors Frank and accepts him, much to the mortification and jealousy of Richard Dixon. The marriage day is set, and both Frank and Ruth request Richard to act as best man. With ill-concealed displeasure Richard consents.

On the morning of the wedding day, a fire breaks out in Richard's lumber yards. Frank chances to be nearby at the time, and rushes to the scene. There he learns that Richard is in his office, which is burning and surrounded by flames. Frank breaks into the building to rescue him. Richard, in the meantime, rushes from the building unhurt; and, later, Frank is rescued badly burned on the face and eyes. Richard has him conveyed to the hospital, where he represents that the name of the injured man is Wilson, an employee at the yards. Then he enjoins silence on the part of his employees as to the real identity of the man, and has them circulate the news that Frank has died in the fire.

The wedding party vainly awaits the coming of the bridegroom, and Ruth is overcome by the humiliation. Then Richard arrives with the news that Frank has perished in the flames, and the bride-to-be becomes mentally deranged by the shock. Richard, appalled and conscience-stricken at the result of his diabolical plot, flees the house.

Several days later he calls on Frank, who is perfectly sound in mind, though suffering from burns and nervous shock, and confesses his crime. Days had elapsed since the accident, yet the same bridegroom had omitted to acquaint his bride or parents of his accident or his whereabouts. When he calls on Ruth, soon after Richard's confession, she fails to recognize him; and he and her parents are seized by despair.

The thoroughly penitent Richard then suggests that Frank shall make a call on Ruth, dressed in his uniform, just as if he were coming to the wedding which had been fixed to take place several days before. The plan was followed and turned out joyfully, for Ruth recovered her sanity and the happy bridegroom took her to his heart.

Charles Frohman, Film Man

Distinguished Theatrical Producer Enters Into Alliance With the Famous Players' Film Company.

CHARLES FROHMAN, the foremost American theatrical producer, has entered into an alliance with the Famous Players for the production on the screen of all the plays under his control. The importance of this news to the film world can hardly be exaggerated. Its importance is more real than is at first apparent. It is not alone the fact that the screen secures all these plays. It is also the fact that there has been removed the last great bar between the affiliation of the stage and the screen—the recognition by this distinguished producer that the motion picture is not only a legitimate form of amusement, but that it is worthy of his time and attention and careful consideration. As is well known, Charles Frohman is the brother of Daniel Frohman, managing director of the Famous Players, the first of the prominent theatrical men to become actively interested in the production of motion pictures. The announcement of this alliance, which closely follows that of the Famous Players and Henry W. Savage, Inc., was made on Monday by President Zukor and his associates, Daniel Frohman and Edwin S. Porter, the latter the technical director of the company. The value of the affiliation to the Famous Players and the bearing it has on the future of the company needs no comment.

A special studio is to be built immediately in Long Island City at the corner of Borden Avenue and Van Dam Street, which is to be used exclusively for the Famous Players-Charles Frohman plays. The Famous Players' Film Company will organize a special subsidiary company, to be devoted to the Charles Frohman productions, which will be governed, directed and exploited by the parent company, continuing its present methods in the distribution of these films.

Through this alliance the Famous Players' Film Company acquires for film purposes all the famous Charles Frohman successes, several hundred in number. In addition to the studio in Long Island City and the studios in New York City and Los Angeles, the Famous Players' Film Company will send Hugh Ford, the prominent theatrical director recently engaged by them, and a corps of assistants to Europe, where they will be identified with the Famous Players' London studio, and where they will produce the special subjects which are to be made in England and on the continent of Mr. Frohman's various English, French and German successes.

It is a matter of general knowledge that for some time past several of the leading film producing companies of the world have made decided efforts to interest Charles Frohman in a film affiliation, but without results. Universally famed as one of the most enterprising and aggressive theatrical managers, with extensive international operations, Charles Frohman has for many years advocated and practiced the selection of the timely drama with a contemporary appeal. Hence the value of his long list of successful plays is tremendously enhanced for motion pictures.

"The Three Shadows."

A Three-Part Gaumont Subject Containing a Fine Story and Many Situations of Unusual Strength.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Gaumont Company released on March 21st a three-part subject replete with strong situations and splendidly acted. "The Three Shadows" is in the strict sense a crook play, but it is a new crook play. It has a story that holds tight all the way. The players are Gaumont's best. The interiors are elaborate. Of outdoor views there are only a few, but they are full of charm. In the first scene, as the venerable Mr. Wilson throws open the window, we look with him and his adopted daughter out upon the side of a great mountain. It is an auspicious beginning.

Scene from "The Three Shadows" (Gaumont).

Mr. Wilson, visiting an art gallery, answers the question of a most fascinating woman. The two meet every morning for a week, and the old gentleman brings his new acquaintance to his home to meet Miss Wilson, who is found playing a violin. Mme. Ravelli, after the friendship is established, suggests to Miss Wilson that she come to Paris, where she is sure she may obtain a position as secretary to the Countess D'Erriga. The plan goes through. Mme. Ravelli accepts an invitation to a musicale at the home of the countess; all the servants are away. The countess is burning a perfume. Into the brazier Mme. Ravelli puts a substance the smoke of which stupifies and puts to sleep. When the countess and her secretary are under the influence of the drug, Ravelli admits two confederates. The three rob the house. The countess awakes and sees Ravelli and her companions at her work. The shock kills her. Helene, recovering consciousness, hurries to the home of Ravelli. She surprises the thieves; they frighten her into silence and bundle her off to Amsterdam.

Scene from "The Three Shadows" (Gaumont).

The doctors agree that the countess died from shock, but are unable to discover evidences of foul play or of robbery—there was so much in the house. In Amsterdam Helene obtains a place in a restaurant orchestra. There she meets the brother of the late countess, M. del Rizzo, who is infatuated with her and her playing. The two become firm friends—lovers. A letter from the Paris police informs the brother they are looking for the companion of his sister, who has not been examined. Helene sees the letter and breaks down. To the police she tells all. Back in Paris a sham party is arranged and Mme. Ravelli is invited. She is caught stealing; also she is confronted by Helene. Ravelli and her accomplices are held by the court.

For sustained dramatic action the scene where Helene finds that her lover is the brother of the late countess is remarkable. Helene unconcernedly takes up the letter. Del Rizzo notes her agitation as she reads. The police official entering at that moment also discovers it, and plies her with questions. The crafty thieves had stowed some of the loot into the false cover of the trunk they had forced upon her, and the trinkets are found by the searching officials. When Helene breaks down and is about to be taken away the venerable foster-father, come to Amsterdam through fear that all is not well, walks into the room. This precipitates another situation, ending only when the girl tells to the police the truth. It is a climax of great power, and is the culmination of a series of cleverly and naturally developed situations of rising intensity.

The scene in the restaurant, as Del Rizzo is fascinated by the violin playing of Helene, as all the diners stop their chatter and with bowed heads sit silently under the spell of the instrument, is dramatic and moving; the scene in the home of the countess when Ravelli puts the sleep-compelling drug into the brazier is thrilling; the views of the two lovers at the piano form pictures that well might inspire a painter. In fact, the musical atmosphere throughout the production is notable, and houses employing a violinist may add materially to the charm of the subject.

The party arranged for the purpose of trapping Ravelli will interest. The entertainment is novel. The views of the graceful bare-legged dancers are skillfully alternated with the scenes in the next room where the ungentle hand of the law is slowly but surely descending on Mme. Ravelli. "The Three Shadows" is a fine story and it is splendidly told.

ANNA LUTHER.

ANNA LUTHER is a woman of striking contrasts and an individuality sharp and distinct. Mr. Lubin was conscious of this when he assigned her to the company under George W. Terwilliger at the St. Augustine Studio. Previous to this Miss Luther's work with other moving picture companies dated from her appearance in a picture in a spirit of fun. So completely did the camera do justice to the young lady's vivid personality that, despite strong parental objection, she cast her lot with the silent players. Later, when she was resting in Aiken, S. C., a photograph so impressed a noted director that he ordered Miss Luther immediately telegraphed for to play under his direction. Miss Luther has been aptly named "The Fifth Avenue Girl," for she is peculiarly of the type seen nowhere else—tall, lissom, with hair of golden red and a complexion of startling fairness—she personified the spirit of New York in a certain exotic originality of costume, manner and speech. Anna Luther has no fads unless it be the pursuit of that elusive something that the ordinary woman never attains. She never merely follows fashions, or the dicta of any one, or leadership in any form, but finds satisfaction only in anticipating everything and every form. Of all the gifts a photoplayer should have, to be successful, Miss Luther has that one, priceless beyond others—unforgettable personality.

Anna Luther.

World's Baseball Tour.

A Few Interesting Incidents of the Trip as Told by Pathe's Cameraman, Who Made the Trip.

VICTOR MILLER, the Pathe cameraman who has just returned from a tour of the world with the New York National League and Chicago American League baseball teams, is full of interesting anecdotes of the trip.

He joined the party at Seattle on telegraphic notice on November 12 and made the entire journey. While the tour was a leisurely one for most of those who made it, it was a busy one for Mr. Miller. His main business was to record the doings of the ball players in foreign lands, but he was expected to put in any leisure time in taking scenic and travel pictures. He secured many thousand feet of such subjects besides a very interesting set of baseball pictures. Speaking briefly of the trip, he calls to mind several amusing incidents:

Victor Miller Before the Great Mosque, Cairo, Egypt.

"Exhibitors in the United States could learn something from their Japanese fellows. In Kobe, Japan, I was taking a picture of the ball players shopping in the Motomachi, which is the principal street. The approach of a band of musicians heading a parade of Japanese with signs, banners, streamers and flying flags attracted my attention. I instantly forgot the ball players and filmed the procession of Japs. I felt sure I had the Mikado and his advisors for Pathe's Weekly. To be certain, however, I asked a bystander. He told me promptly that the parade was advertising a movie show.

"At Hong Kong, China, I tried to take the husky ball players being carried through the streets in palanquins (a chair carried on the shoulders of natives). The coolies balked, each and every one of them, for there is a deep-rooted superstition in China that the movie camera houses an evil spirit. I could not convince the coolies that the camera was harmless. While I was arguing with them I saw a funeral coming through a cross street. I advanced on the procession with my camera. To my surprise the pallbearers and the mourners broke and ran. I chased them for three blocks to get a picture, but failed. However, the editorial staff of Pathe's Weekly objects strongly to funeral scenes, but it is the first time I have been beaten by a dead man.

"While Americans were freezing I was journeying under balmy skies to the island of Ceylon. We stayed one day in Colombo. The natives of this island are the most curious fiends that ever I have met. I tried to get pictures of the principle points of interest in the city, but could not keep the Cingalese from running up and peering into the lens and I finally gave up in disgust.

"In Egypt we nearly started a revolution by playing the national game at the foot of the Sphinx. I photographed Ivy Wingo, catcher of St. Louis, while he threw a ball over 'The Silent Man of the Desert,' despite the protests of a native policeman who tore his hair at the sacrilege. Ivy told the cop he was going to hit the Sphinx in the eye.

"Via Naples we journeyed to Rome where the ball players were to be granted an audience by the Pope. They donned evening clothes for the event. I guess no one will dispute my right to the title, 'Classiest Cameraman in the Business,' for I stood before St. Peter's in Rome in full dress taking a movie.

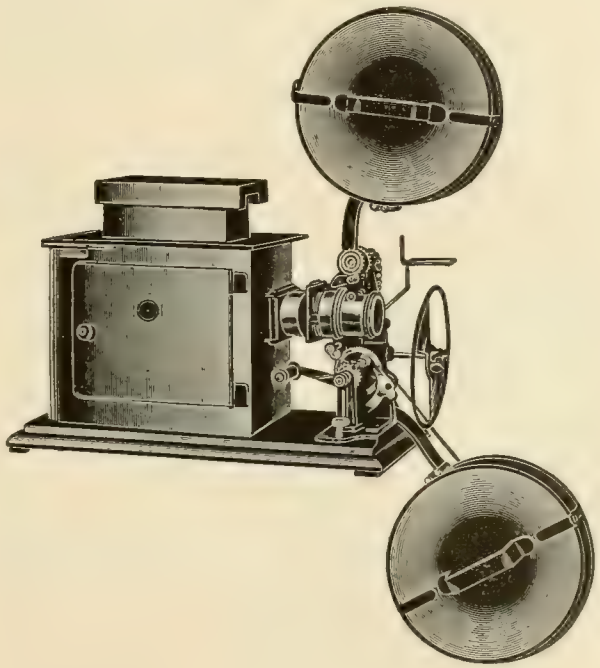
"We visited the Coliseum in Rome. There is a rule against photographing the famous old ruin, but with the aid of Mike Donlin, Merkle, Schaefer and a few others I was able to get a good picture of the American gladiators entering the Roman arena. If Mike Donlin decides to quit baseball, Pathe Freres ought to appoint him sporting editor of the Weekly for the valuable assistance his quick wit was to me on many occasions.

"We were cordially received in London. It was, of course, the first time a picture was taken of King George watching America's national game. His Majesty seemed delighted with it all, but I think the incident that tickled him most was the way a London Bobby broke into the game by fielding a foul ball."

A PRACTICAL LOW-PRICED HOME PROJECTOR.

By F. H. Richardson.

THE Bing Motion Picture Projection Machine, a German machine, of which Mr. John Bing is the New York representative, has been inspected by the writer and found to be remarkably complete, when the price is taken into consideration. The Bing Projectoscope is not designed for theatrical work, but for home projection and for use by traveling salesmen, manufacturing concerns, etc.



The machine, as will be seen by the illustration, is compact. It is equipped with a carrying case, so that in traveling it would be equivalent to a suitcase. The projector is made in three different sizes, the larger being quite complete and equipped with a stereopticon attachment. The movement is of the "beater" type. The lamp house is very substantial and the lamp is of the scissors type, in common use in foreign countries. Any amperage up to 15 or 20 may be used, but the smaller machines are designed to take current through an ordinary incandescent lamp socket and to use not in excess of 5 amperes. This projector has a three-wing shutter, and the optical result on the screen is good.

The only objection to this projector is the fact that it only passes about 5 pictures to each turn of the crank, which necessitates considerable crank speed in order to bring the film action up to normal. However, this is no serious matter since the machine is only designed for the uses before named, and, therefore, will seldom be continuously operated for more than a few minutes at a time. The largest type has an attachment for motor drive.

CORRECTION ON LAST WEEK'S PAPER.

In the advertisement of the Orpheum Feature Film Company on page 1582 of last week's issue, the telephone number should have been 1715 Bryant. It was incorrectly given as 715. If any of our readers failed to connect with them on this account, kindly note the correction. They are booking "Evangeline" in five reels and "Magda" in four reels throughout Greater New York and New York State.

Dramatic License vs. Plausibility.

By G. D. Crain, Jr.

THE drama, either spoken or shown in pictures, should hold the mirror up to nature; and realism, of a fundamental, substantial sort, must be evident in any production which claims the title. Truth, and truth of a convincing kind, is necessary in order to impress the audience, especially the critical, observant audience which watches the players on the screen. Indeed, one might almost say that if a choice were to be made between truth, crudely presented, and plausibility, the latter should be the quality selected.

People who go to see a moving picture show are there to be "sold" on the dramas which are presented. If the house succeeds in "selling" them, they are made regular patrons. Consequently it is a matter of vital necessity for the exhibitor as well as the producer to offer to the public plays which are essentially true to nature, and which above all offer a plausible solution of the dramatic problems which have been presented. "A slice of life," in fact, is what the photoplay must be in order to leave the audience in the proper frame of mind.

"The Third Degree," a five-reel production which has been shown recently under rather pretentious circumstances, is a fine example of realism of the right kind. The writer has seen audiences witnessing this play applaud and almost cheer at the psychological moments; not only because the play was wonderfully well acted, with every part properly taken care of, but because the transfer of the drama from the boards to the screen has been made with no loss of the truthfulness and plausibility which is needed to give it strength.

Not long ago a drama was put out in which several of the most popular moving picture stars appeared. The scene was laid in and about a lighthouse on a rocky coast. The crux of the plot was that the son of the lighthouse keeper was bitten by a dog and was infected with hydrophobia, to which he succumbed later on.

The lack of probability stood out over the story almost from the first. The lighthouse keeper suspected that his son had been poisoned by the dog. Violating the first instincts of human nature, he made no attempt to anticipate hydrophobia by cauterizing or using any other crude method that would have suggested itself, but contented himself with having the dog sent away for examination. Upon learning that the dog was really infected, the lighthouse keeper, at that time on the mainland, did not promptly secure medical services for his son, but merely returned to the lighthouse to prepare his lamps for the night.

Here again was an improbable situation. The adopted daughter of the lighthouse keeper, who had lived there from infancy, was unable to open the lamps! The spectators were thus asked to believe that a task which she has surely assisted in performing hundreds of times had proved too much for her, the girl showing absolute ignorance of the proper method of opening the lamps.

The play was well acted, and had not the burden on the credulity of the audiences been too great it would have made a deep and favorable impression.

Seafaring dramas apparently furnish plenty of opportunities for errors to creep into the construction of the photoplays. Another recently shown dealt with the efforts of a gang on the sea-coast to wreck a vessel for the salvage. Their plan was to put up a light on a part of the coast where the most dangerous reefs were, thus, according to the announcement on the screen, "luring" the ship to its doom. As a matter of fact, such a light, if it served any purpose whatever, would have warned the ship away from the reef, as the purpose of a lighthouse is to point the dangerous sections of the coast, and not to guide the ships into harbor. The idea of the light acting as a kind of impersonal Lorelei was altogether out of line with the facts, and those who stopped to think even a moment saw the absurdity of the plot.

Dramatic license is an excuse which is used in a good many legitimate productions to explain coincidences and happenings which would be regarded as impossible in real life. Apparently it is relied upon also to lend an effective climax to a photoplay, even though the action portrayed is obviously improper and would not happen under any circumstances.

An illustration of this, which occurs over and over again, is involved in plays dealing with prison escapes, where the innocent man comes face to face with the villain who has been prospering during the years of his victim's incarceration. The scene between these two is followed by the entrance of the wardens of the penitentiary from which the hero escaped. Here is where the author "lets go all holts" and casts realism to the winds.

These officers are not policemen, mind; and their pardoning powers have never been discernible to the average citizen. Yet, almost invariably, when the denunciation of the hero leaves his enemy in a state of collapse, indicating a tacit admission of the crime, the penitentiary officials release their prisoner, who is a convicted malefactor, as far as they are concerned, and seize hold of the other. For what purpose? Apparently to take him to the cell in the penal institution from which the hero has made his escape. The latter, of course, stays to embrace his lost love and to dandle upon his knee the babe whom he had never seen.

This makes an excellent climax, of course, and is a pretty finish for the play: the only trouble is, things don't happen that way. The escaped convict would have had to be arrested, no matter how thoroughly convinced officials of the penitentiary might have been regarding his innocence; and the monster who had committed the crime would have had to be arrested, indicted and convicted before he could be compelled to don the stripes of a felon. The audience knows this, and the playwright undoubtedly knows it; yet for the sake of an effective "curtain," the facts are sacrificed.

As good an ending could be secured without resorting to this artificial arrangement. The collapse of the real criminal and the vindication of the hero could be indicated, and the prison officials could retire to the background—not for the purpose of releasing their man completely, but in recognition of the fact that his further imprisonment would be brief; and the reunion of husband and wife, or lover and sweetheart, could be effected without doing violence to the truth.

In this connection it may be worth while to remind photoplay builders of the remark of the great sculptor concerning attention to the little things of his art.

"These are but trifles," he conceded, "but trifles make perfection."

The perfect moving picture drama gives proper attention to the little things, and dovetails probability and plausibility with interest and action so closely that the juncture is not visible.

BLACHÉ EXCHANGE IN INDIANAPOLIS.

Burton Garrett, traveling representative for Blaché and Solax features, who left New York on December 1st to start the Blaché Feature Service Exchange in Indianapolis, has returned to New York with glowing accounts of the growth of the popularity of features in the Middle West.

Starting in a small office in the Saks Building, the new exchange soon felt the development of the feature business to such an extent that it is already established in a new suite of offices at 119 North Illinois Street and has increased its program from two new features a month to one a week, with every indication pointing to the offering of two features a week at an early date.

O. W. Moore, of Indianapolis, is the manager of the exchange, with E. H. Brient as his assistant—Mr. Brient is a brother of E. H. Brient of the Eclectic Film Company, frequently being mistaken for him because both have the same initials. Mr. Moore was formerly manager of the Special Feature Film Service of Indianapolis.

Burton Garrett was associated with the Sales Company during the early struggles of the so-called "Independents," later acting as assistant secretary-treasurer of the Universal Company.

The Blaché Feature Service of Indianapolis is the distributing agency for Blaché, Solax, Apex, Cosmos, Great Northern and Itala films for Indiana and Kentucky.

GENE GAUNTIER ENTERTAINS BROOKLYN FANS.

Miss Gene Gauntier, whose Irish dramas released through Warner's Features, Inc., have created such a furore throughout the country, broke one of her cherished resolutions on St. Patrick's Eve., when she appeared in person at Gerhauser's Eden Theater, 409 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn. She was accompanied by Jack J. Clark, hero of the first foreign trip of picture players, and the occasion responsible for the broken resolution was a charity benefit performance given by the Eden Theater for a destitute Brooklyn family.

Miss Gauntier and Mr. Clark were escorted by H. M. Warner, sales manager, and Jacques Spiegel, of Warner's New York rental department. Immediately after their introduction to the Eden's patrons, the party proceeded to the entertainment and ball given by the Brooklyn Local, M. P. E. A., where they were again applauded as they appeared on the stage of Prospect Hall. "Come Back to Erin," a Gauntier Warner's Feature, was shown as a part of the entertainment and was accorded a deserved ovation.

"The Cabaret Dancer."

The Kalem Company Shows a Two-Part Dramatic Subject With Many Good Situations Splendidly Handled.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "The Cabaret Dancer" the Kalem Company has given us or will give us on Monday, April 6, a good straight dramatic story of every-day life. It is in two reels. The author is Louis B. Gardner. The producer is Robert Vignola. The one has builded on the foundation of the other and he has builded well. The story is of the country and of the city. Such of it as is of the country centers about a parsonage presided over by a gentle old clergyman—a fine type, and one those of us who know our rural community will recognize. The parsonage itself is plainly furnished—the pictures and the quaint style of wallpaper are important factors in creating the rural atmosphere. The example of primitive ecclesiastical architecture that stands a couple of hundred feet from the home of the minister adds a clerical touch. Some of the story that has to do with the city is of a restaurant, where of course the dancer figures. This part of the picture also is well and convincingly staged.

Scene from "The Cabaret Dancer" (Kalem).

In "The Cabaret Dancer" there is but one action. There are no episodes more or less related—or unrelated—there is no flying off at a footage-mounting tangent. The movement is swift, consecutive, compelling. The acting is of the sort or degree or quality, if you will; of which we are unconscious—and surely if this be not real art, what is?

Scene from "The Cabaret Dancer" (Kalem).

Alice Joyce in the role of Linee, an artist's model and dancer, gives us what one of her admirers unhesitatingly denominated her best work on the screen—and the man who made the statement has seen all of it. He may well be right. She displays a sincerity and feeling that materially contribute to the illusive, the dramatic, quality of the subject. There is the abandon of the model making love to the artist; there is the mischievous recklessness of the bride just come to her ministerial father-in-law's home as she sits on the old-fashioned marble-topped table and in an effort to shock the naturally peevish old-time sweetheart of her husband playfully pretends to join him in a cigarette; there is the pathos of the unannounced departure from the parsonage when she feels she is standing in her husband's way; there are the delicate touches in her treatment of the many dramatic situations following the injury to her husband, incurred when he interfered with a man about to use a revolver, not knowing it was to be aimed at her by a disappointed suitor.

Tom Moore has the role of the artist husband who searches for two years for his wife. His best work is done when, his eyes bandaged, he suspects that the woman nursing him is his wife. There may be some who will feel that a man in his situation should have recognized her sooner; offsetting this is the fact he had not seen her in two years and had no means of knowing she was the object of the murderous attentions of his assailant.

James B. Ross is the clergyman. Alice Hollister is the old-time sweetheart, the implacable pursuer of the woman who displaced her. Harry Millarde is the impetuous Frenchman who took so seriously the repulse of the dancer, and Helen Lindroth is the landlady.

The picture will please all, and it will do so without the "adventitious aid" of spectacular incidents, if we except the nearly tragic struggle in the restaurant. It will delight the more particular clientele. There is a happy ending—the clergyman, satisfied that his daughter-in-law has earned and deserves his affection, extending his blessing to the reunited husband and wife.

H. B. COLES.

IT IS now more than a year since H. B. Coles, whose portrait adorns this sketch, took up his duties as general manager of the Precision Machine Company, manufacturers of the Simplex motion picture projecting machine.

The past fifteen months have been busy ones for Mr. Coles, but the results of his activity are surprising. When he took the business under his control on December 1, 1912, the Simplex factory and offices occupied a floor space of about 6,000 square feet. To-day the Simplex factory is occupying four floors in the same building at 317 East 34th Street, New York, with a floor area of approximately 25,500 square feet, and is running on a day and night schedule.

H. B. Coles.

Considering the brief period, this growth is remarkable and speaks volumes for the Simplex machine or Mr. Coles' work, or both, probably both. And it appears that the end is not yet. With Simplex orders coming in faster than they can be filled it looks as though a fifth floor will soon have to be taken and equipped. In view of these facts, most anyone will concede that Mr. Coles has been kept fairly busy this last year in seeing to the output of the growing business and in selecting new machinery and overseeing its installation.

Mr. Coles is eminently fitted for the position he holds, being a college graduate in electricity and mechanics. He has a most charming personality and is a gentleman by birth and breeding. Associated with him in this enterprise is Mr. Frank B. Cannock, the designer of the Simplex projector and other motion picture mechanisms bearing that brand.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

The American Kineto Corporation desires to announce the removal of its offices from the Longacre Building to the World's Tower Building, 110 West Fortieth Street, New York City. The new telephone number is 7750 Bryant.

Foreign Trade Notes

LONDON LETTER.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

THE sub-committee in charge of the photographic and moving-picture section of the forthcoming Anglo-American Exposition, to be held in London, has been appointed and consists of E. S. Shepherd, chairman; Chapman Jones, Sir W. Abney, Sir H. T. Wood, Sir J. B. Stone, Sir P. Walts, Charles Urban, F. Renwick, Prof. Melbola, C. F. Butler, F. M. Duncan and S. R. Jupp.

* * *

Two new British film manufacturing companies announce their existence this week. The first is the firm of David, Hunter & Co., who have equipped modern studios on the banks of the Thames for the production of dramatic features. The company has not yet started working, but has had offices for some time in Norfolk street, London. Their products will be known as "White Star" films. The other enterprise is the Neptune Film Co., which is erecting studios at Elstall, also in close proximity to the metropolis. Mr. Percy Nash, formerly with the London Film Co., has been appointed as general manager and it is understood that this concern have already on hand one or two ambitious spectacular projects.

* * *

The Famous Players Company have disposed of the territorial rights for Great Britain of their feature, "A Daughter of the Hills" and "A Lady of Quality," to J. D. Walker, of the World's Exclusive Film Company. The Kalem Company's "Wolfe," has not yet arrived here, but judging from the "boosting" it is receiving, the Moving Picture Sales Agency anticipate heavy bookings with it.

* * *

"The Kinematograph is spreading the gospel of laughter through the picture palaces and is doing as good a work as the parsons," said the Rev. J. A. Waldron, a London vicar, at the annual dinner of the Kinematograph Exhibitors' Association. Other supporters included Mr. W. W. Jacobs, the novelist; Mr. Greenwood, of the Theaters Committee of the London County Council, and Mr. J. F. Brockliss (Lubin Company). General Sir Robt. Baden-Powell, the hero of Mafeking and the head of the Boy Scout movement, was an admirer of the Kinematograph. "It is a great power for good or evil," he said, "but its responsibility is immense."

* * *

The first report of the British Board of Film Censors provides interesting reading. Practically every British firm submits specimen films for approval before proceeding to issue their releases to the renters, and also prominent upon the list are the following American agents: American Company, American Films, J. F. Brockliss, Flying "A" Features, Edison, Essanay, Famous Players Company, Imperial Film Company, Moving Picture Sales Agency, Prieur & Company, Selig, Thanhouser, Universal, Western Import and Vitagraph. Since March 1, 1912, about 7,628,931 feet of film have been examined in 7,488 different subjects. Of these, 6,861 received the first class "universal" certificate and 627 received the "public exhibition" certificate. The films to which exception has been taken number 144, and those rejected entirely, 22. The reasons given by Mr. G. A. Redford, the president, for the prohibition of the last named are: Indelicate and suggestive sexual situations, indecent dancing, holding up a minister to ridicule, cruelty to animals, indelicate staging, executions, excessive drunkenness, procuration, abduction and seduction, impropitious native customs and materialization of Christ or the Almighty. In these cases, where a film has been censored, it is the custom to return the positive with a rejection certificate to the makers or their agents, and so far there has been no attempt to exhibit films so treated.

* * *

Extraordinary claims have been sent out for a revolving moving picture screen which a Russian inventor is attempting to establish in this country. The screen resembles a huge disc, so fixed as to revolve at any speed. The center of the disc is so arranged as to be out of the picture; that is, the projected image will only occupy a portion of the entire screen. During an exhibition, the screen is revolved at such a speed as to give the effect that the picture is being projected upon the atmosphere, while the transparent nature of the screen further permits of several novel and striking illusions being worked from behind.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

PARIS LETTER.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

GEORGE MARCK'S sensational moving picture lion act is now featured at the Alhambra Music Hall, and will eventually go on the Variety Theaters Controlling Syndicate's circuit in Great Britain.

* * *

Astruc, who built the Champs Elysees Opera House, has invented and patented a new fauteuil for amusement halls.

* * *

Your baseball players while touring Europe were duly cinematographed when they were the guests of the American millionaire, George A. Kessler. Mr. Kessler had moving pictures of the men taken by Pathe Freres in the garden of his beautiful house at Passy, Paris.

* * *

Friday, February 28th, the Society of Engineers watched with keen enjoyment Charles Urban's natural color pictures of the Panama Canal. The evening at the Kinemacolor, Edward VII, was expressly set aside for the society, and was the occasion for the first exhibition in Paris of the canal views.

* * *

The Cines Company announces that from April 3rd onwards, "Quo Vadis?" may be rented direct from the firm. Until that date Aubert has the rights of the film. The company has just appointed G. Reynaud, of Marseilles, as its agent for the Midi of France.

* * *

The second series of Suzanne Grandais pictures are likely to be of high quality. There will be eighteen subjects in all, nine short and nine long, comprising dramas and comedies. The pictures will be taken in Paris. Suzanne Grandais, it will be remembered, was once Gaumont's star actress.

* * *

Everywhere I move in trade circles I am told that the time has come when the name's the thing. The public has tired of seeing just photoplays made by such and such a company and resents being kept in ignorance of the nomenclature of the many excellent screen artists. Hence the growing popularity of Max Linder, Prince, John Bunny, Costello, Henny Porten and Suzanne Grandais, to mention only a few of the artists already known to Parisian picture playgoers.

* * *

An American exhibitor is relating to his friends how he obtained an advertisement through writing to the King of England. The proprietor wrote, offering to place twelve boxes at his Montmartre Theater at the disposal of King George on the occasion of his coming visit to the French capital. His majesty replied formally through his secretary and a copy of this letter, dated from Buckingham Palace, is to be seen, printed in large type, outside the picture theater.

* * *

E. H. Montagu, of the Selig Polyscope Company, London, came here the other day and superintended the destruction by fire of a number of old Selig negatives. The conflagration was at the works of the Eclipse Company.

* * *

William Decroix, of Berlin, has concluded arrangements whereby Mlle. Renée Dauge who, some years ago, was one of Pathe Freres' child artists, will join the Decroix Company of photoplayers. She will appear in a special series of comedy pictures and will be featured as "Odette."

* * *

In recognition of the bestowal of the Legion of Honor on Charles Pathe, a number of his friends are presenting the president of Pathe Freres with a handsome work of art.

* * *

Excelsior, the daily illustrated, is the latest Paris paper to devote a weekly column to the interests of the moving picture shows.

Regarding the Hearst-Selig motion picture news enterprise, I am informed that a representative of the Hearst publications was in this city last December and completed arrangements for the Paris service of film news. This work will not be dealt with in any way by the Hearst newspaper correspondents.

* * *

Frederick Burlingham's film, "Down the Crater of Vesuvius," has been purchased for Paris by the Cinema Exploitation Company, a subsidiary Pathe company. The picture is now being screened with great success at the Pathe Palace.

* * *

Selig's "Tom Mix" pictures are vastly to the liking of thousands of Parisians who have packed the many picture theaters featuring his films.

* * *

Despite the prejudice against Teutonic productions, Henny Porten has completely conquered Paris. The great Messter production, called here, "The Heroism of a Frenchwoman," now ranks as one of the big successes of the present season. Thereby hangs a very romantic tale. Paul Ladewig markets the Messter films in France. A year ago he offered to the trade the aforementioned Henny Porten feature. Not one buyer came forward, and the reel was relegated to Mr. Ladewig's safe. A few months ago Charles Mary, a newcomer in the business, saw the picture exhibited publicly in Berlin. Immediately he purchased the French rights, returned to Paris and made a name and fortune with the despised film. That is the story of Henny Porten's triumph in the French capital.

* * *

An important private exhibition of "Excelsior," a cinematographic ballet, was given at the Cinema Lutetia Wagram by Charles Mary. The production depicts a ballet which created a furore in Paris some twenty-five years ago when it was presented in the Eden Theater, constructed for the spectacle. In addition to the multifold ballet scenes, there are some fine, natural, scenic views. The film tells the story of the progress of the world and the results which have accrued from achievements of Papin, Volta and de Lesseps. The artists include the principal stars of the Scala Theater of Milan and the entire ballet corp of that theater. Several of the pictures were taken in Egypt. The film lasts about two hours and is accompanied by the music of the original "Excelsior." It was very favorably received at the Lutetia Wagram. Messrs. C. De Daue and Paul Ladewig, owners of the French, English, Russian and German rights, inform me that a syndicate has purchased the film for the United States for a large sum.

* * *

The Cine Journal publishes the news that a company with a capital of $84,000 has been formed in Vienna with the object of exploiting the Edison Kinetophone. Max Paschka and Richard Schwarz, of Vienna, are named as directors.

* * *

While on his visit here Felix Isman gained the reputation of smoking the largest cigars in the world. A number of these magnificent and titanic weeds still remain in Paris as souvenirs of Mr. Isman's brief stay.

* * *

My Vienna correspondent writes that the famous American actress, Madge Lessing, has played in an amusing photoplay for a Vienna firm. The picture is called "Where's Colleti?" It had a great success in the Austrian capital where the pretty actress is a great favorite. The film was published immediately after the run of her telephone sketch at the Apollo vaudeville theater.

* * *

It is rumored that the big building in the rue la Boetie, once a skating rink, is to be converted into a picture theater. At one time the American manager, C. B. Brockway, contemplated this proposition, but nothing materialized.

* * *

Andre Deed's tour, about which I have already written, came to an unhappy end at Geneva and a sequel to the tragedy was heard last week in a court of law. Deed contracted with a Mr. Figueroa, said to be an American, to tour a cinematograph sketch. At Lausanne everything went well, and the hall was packed to capacity every night. Subsequently, the impresario was too avaricious and announced prices which effectively kept the people away. At Geneva, Figueroa told Deed that his supply of cash had run out and suggested that the moving picture artist had better continue the tour on his own account. Deed, however, preferred to return to the gay city. At Paris four stage hands who were employed in the show sued Deed for salaries. In spite of the cleverness of counsel for the defense, Deed was ordered by the court to pay the money owing, although it had been proved that defendant had brought the troupe back to Paris at his own expense. Deed now says, "Give me a studio and I quit cinema sketching for all time."

JOHN CHER.

New Edison Series.

Will Be Sensationally Dramatic With Marc MacDermott in the Leading Role.

ON APRIL 7TH Edison launches a new series in which Marc MacDermott will assume the leading role. "The Man Who Disappeared" is the title of the series, which is being written by Richard Washburn Child, the well-known magazine writer. This series will be released on the first and third Tuesday of the month.

Popular Magazine will feature the stories at the same time that the films appear on the screen. This is part of the Edison policy of allying itself with the big periodicals in the exploitation of its serial films. Similar arrangements with The Ladies' World, Pictorial Review and Short Stories have proven highly successful, and there is no doubt that the tremendous circulation of Popular Magazine will prove a big asset in the boosting of this new series.

Marc MacDermott.

"The Man Who Disappeared" is to be the most sensationally dramatic of all the serial releases. The first film, "The Black Mask," tells the story of John Perriton (Marc MacDermott), who is in love with Mary Wales. Her brother Nelson has forged her name to a check, has been caught by his brokers, and will be arrested if the check is not made good at once. Nelson pleads with John for help, but is refused until the entrance of Mary recalls to John the pain that such a disclosure would cause her.

He then agrees to loan Nelson the money, but the boy, thoroughly bad at heart, attempts to steal his sister's valuable necklace. Being interrupted in his work by the butler, he kills him, and is about to escape with the necklace when John overpowers him and tears his black mask off.

Mary, awakened by the noise of the struggle, comes down stairs, and Nelson, in the panic, begs John to put on the mask and pretend to escape. John does so, to save the boy, but Mary, seizing him, removes the mask and John stands before her apparently a thief and a murderer. Having rashly begun the deception, he refuses to expose Nelson, and leaves the house branded as a criminal.

The remaining nine films trace the career of John Perriton as a fugitive from the law. He sinks out of sight of the world he knew and has many thrilling adventures in the new strata of life into which fate has driven him.

Marc MacDermott, with his unlimited powers of dramatic expression, his mastery of technique and strong personality, is ideally suited to portray such a character as John Perriton, the gentleman of high ideals who, through his love for Mary Wales, becomes a creature of another world. His experience with such stage celebrities as Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Marie Dainton, George Rignold, Richard Mansfield and others enabled Mr. MacDermott to become one of the leading figures of filmdom immediately upon his joining the Edison Company several years ago. He has steadily built up his reputation until he stands to-day without a peer among photoplayers. As the leading man of the Edison European players for the last two summers, he has had great opportunity to display his genius and versatility, and he has further added to his laurels by his masterly portrayal of the stellar roles in the big Edison multiples.

With so gifted an actor portraying this unusually interesting and thrilling role of John Perriton, "The Man Who Disappeared" ought to be one of the biggest serial successes of the year.

"All's Right With the World."

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—It's great and getting better all the time. I refer to the Moving Picture World, and it is foolish for any live exhibitor to try to do business intelligently without it. Check for one year to March 31, 1915, enclosed.

Yours truly, PRINCESS THEATER.

Hartford, Conn.

A Cameraman's Experiences

A Glimpse of Moving Picture Conditions in Central America and Peru, Described in a Letter to Jas. S. McQuade.

I HAVE just received a letter from Baron F. von Teuber, who left this city about eight months ago as special camera man and representative for the Selig Polyscope Company. The territory which he was instructed to cover included the West Indies, Central America and South America.

Since his departure the Baron's life has been one of adventure. He has brushed up against the Federals in the south of Mexico, near the border line, and he arrived in Peru just in time to be an eye witness of the coup d'etat that led to the deposition and imprisonment of President Billinghurst, of Peru, in Lima. The letter to me was written in that city, and it contains some interesting and surprising information concerning the condition of the moving picture trade in the countries through which he has traveled.

"Up to the present time I have not been through the interesting parts of South America," writes the Baron. "I have just begun with Peru. All through the West Indies and Central America, I have noticed an increase of nearly 50 per cent. in moving picture shows, within the last six months.

"In the West Indies, American pictures predominate. In some of the Central American republics the trade is equally divided between the European and the American market. In South America nothing but European pictures are being shown. Here the exhibitors depend entirely upon the local exchanges and take whatever they get; and not having any resort to Spanish-American trade journals, which would familiarize them with American moving picture productions, they are devoid of any knowledge of the American film market.

"Wherever I have shown Selig pictures they have been received with great enthusiasm, especially the 'Cowboy Millionaire' and 'The Outlaw.' The public here is becoming tired of French drama, and our western pictures are not unlike their own outdoor life.

"While crossing the border of Guatemala into Mexico, with the intention of taking a few feet of film of the revolutionary movement, I unexpectedly fell in with the Federal army. They did not appreciate my presence, or perhaps did not like my suspicious-looking outfit on pack mules. Some of the Selig trunks were large enough to contain machine guns, and my own paraphernalia for self-protection, consisting of a Mauser, etc., sealed my fate; or, at least, I thought it had. I was kindly requested to keep clear of the camp and to retreat to where I came from—Chicago. Although I was only forty-eight hours on the Mexican frontier I saw enough of the fighting to convince me that it was not lack of courage to beat a hasty retreat, as it would have been foolhardy, after the Red Cross had been fired upon, to remain there any longer. I made my retreat among a number of refugees, and had to cross a big stream. With pack mules this was no easy job. When I reached the other shore I got more courageous and helped to return the rifle fire, with the refugees, which was kept up from the other side.

"Upon my arrival in Peru, I ran into revolution number two. I put up at the Maury Hotel, Lima. About 3 o'clock in the morning cavalry patrols were heard passing through the streets, near the hotel, and soon after volleys of carbine fire broke out. As soon as it became light enough I mounted a moving picture machine, with telescopic lens, on the balcony of the hotel, and secured about 150 feet of film of the action going on below. I then sighted on the soldiers firing from the Cathedral tower; but one of them spotted me, and, evidently, believing that I was rigging up a rapid fire gun, he took a pot shot at the machine. His aim was too low, intentionally or otherwise, and the bullet glanced down to the street, killing a small boy standing on the pavement beneath.

"The attendants of the hotel at this juncture begged me to withdraw the machine, as I was making the building a target for the fire of the troops.

"During the engagement I saw four soldiers carried out dead and placed in front of the Cathedral of the Red Cross. Later, two were brought from the Palace, and a man killed on the Calle Judios added to the score. Many others fell—wounded or dead, it was impossible to say. About 5 o'clock the general engagement ceased and we could see a detachment of soldiers swarm into the Palace, through a window at the end of the Plaza. For an hour more, however, there was desultory firing on all sides of the Plaza. The streets were crowded and a number of abortive counter-demonstrations were attempted. The troops cleared the square and fired volleys over the heads of the crowds to keep them back in the side streets. By 6 o'clock everything was quiet."

Here Baron von Teuber states that he had enough of revolutions and that he will leave Peru for Chili about the end of March. Another part of his letter refers to the manner of exhibiting films in Peru, which he describes as "very singular and obnoxious."

"Every reel, as is customary here, is cut into several parts. Last night I saw 'Tom Mix' in the Teatro Cinema, cut up into ten parts, with Spanish titles. This enables the exhibitors to get along with less reels, as it takes more time to show the picture in ten parts, and it makes the public believe that they get more for their money. It is nothing but a foolish scheme and does the picture no good. I am sure the public does not enjoy such an agonizing exhibition. Every few minutes the lights are turned on, until the next part has been put into the machine, and since no film, European or American, has been produced for such treatment, it makes the picture appear foolish and disconnected.

"The art of motion picture exhibition is not known in Peru. 'Quo Vadis' while being shown here was cut into forty parts, and it took four days to show the picture! Some people, of course, could not go every day, and I doubt if anyone saw the beginning and the end. Just picture 'The Adventures of Kathlyn' cut in 100 parts! Why, they would have to hire the Municipal Theater here, for a period of one year; and some people, I presume, would go insane in the effort to see the last part.

"In regard to the film trade in Peru, I notice that the exchanges are buying very cheap, and are satisfied with inferior material. Once in a while an exchange will offer a good reel. They pay less than two cents per foot for the films. They also handle a good many new reels and buy them from abroad, at 22 cents per metre.

"The film business in Peru and part of Bolivia is being handled from Lima by two exchanges—the Compania Internacional Cinematografica and the Empress Del Cinema-Teatro, Limitada. These agencies have a monopoly on the moving picture trade, and are doing pretty nearly as they like. The picture theaters in Lima show, on an average, four thousand feet of film a night, and pay for the service from $150 to $250 per month. The owner of a fashionable confectionery store is giving a free show. He receives about 170,000 feet of film, per month, for $125!

"There are twenty motion picture shows in Lima, with a seating capacity of 18,000. In the suburbs and in the interior of Peru, and in the section of Bolivia covered by the two exchanges mentioned, there are forty more shows, giving the two agencies sixty shows to work with.

"I have learned from a reliable source that these two exchanges have cleared £60,000 ($300,000) within the last three years. They are constantly on the warpath, and they are not driving the business to the limit by any means. They don't know how."

Baron von Teuber states that the Compania Internacional Cinematografica has an inexplicable prejudice against American-made films, and that this adverse feeling has nothing whatever to do with existing conditions there. The Compania Impersa Del Cinema, however, has no such feeling and is favorably disposed.

"The French and Italian pictures shown here are more or less obscene, and are, therefore, more in demand by the theaters," the letter continues. "I cannot see why American pictures would not find enthusiastic audiences. The public, I think, have never been offered anything but loose stories. I have just been told that 'Tom Mix' was shown again last Sunday, and that the audience applauded, a very unusual thing here.

"I understand that the Universal Film Company, of New York, had an agency established in Lima only a short time ago; and that it failed. I do not know the reason why they could not carry on the business. It is doubtful if this agency was directly connected with the above-named company. I presume some individual started the office single-handed, and merely assumed the name of the Universal Film Company to further his ends."

Baron von Teuber closes his letter with the following optimistic belief in THE WORLD:

"I sincerely believe that a Spanish copy of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD would not only do wonders down here, but that it would be also a paying proposition."

Well! Well! Well! Baron! There are no philanthropists just now around New York to foot the bills.

JAS. S. McQUADE.

LOOK OUT FOR HIM.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—E. A. Boehm claims he represents the Royal China Company of Sebring, Ohio. Has sample outfit of dinner sets. Will take your order for forty-two piece set and you generally order from 50 to 250 sets at $3, selling them to your patrons at $2.98 per set. He collects 20 per cent of the amount of your order, and is gone. The proposition is so very good and he is such a smooth talker you are sure to bite.

The Royal China Company of Sebring, Ohio, has wired me he was dischared by their firm last October and is obtaining money under false pretences. Look out for him and have him arrested. There is a warrant for his arrest in Los Angeles.

ONE OF HIS DUPES FOR $30.

The Screen Children's Gallery

By W. Stephen Bush

"Andy" Clark.

"ANDY," who made the "Andy" series famous, was called to his first interview straight from the camera and in full costume, the latter consisting of a grandfather's high hat, a pair of long pants and a black mustache.

"Andy," known in the Bureau of Vital Statistics as Andrew Clark, is about eleven years old. His entrance into the silent drama was as abrupt as it was sensational. Encouraged by Frank Bannon, who acted as the Mentor of the interviewed artists, he freely recited the story of his debut in screen life.

"Andy" Clarke

"I was playing ball," he began ingenuously, "in the lot right next to this place when a fellow comes out and says to me: 'Say, do you want to play in the Edison pictures?' I said: 'Sure thing,' and went right in. The name of the play was: 'How the Boys Fought the Indians,' and I tell you it was a corker. I guess I didn't do so badly because they sent for me again, and now I am here for good."

"Andy" is a baseball fanatic, and while the season is on all other topics of conversation seem stale and unprofitable. Nothing could have called an American youth from a hotly contested baseball game but the summons of the motion picture. The beckoning hand of fate took a big chance when it seized upon the rumpled locks of "Andy" just as he was in the supremest joy of pitching for the home team. Needless to say, "Andy" is the beau ideal of all the verdant youth in the regions of the Bronx. He could mobilize a volunteer army of many thousands and lead them anywhere. For this hero-worship "Andy" has no use whatever.

"You ought to hear the fool questions the fellows ask me at the school," he said, his winning, freckled face lit up by the humor of the situation. "They all want me to get them jobs here and I just tell them it's all right and then let it go at that." Asked what he would rather do, attend a lecture on chemistry or go to the circus, "Andy" viewed his questioner with undisguised suspicion. After a visible effort to suppress unparliamentary language, he voiced his preference for the circus.

When "Andy" grows up to be a man he will be either a baseball player or a doctor or both. He thinks there ought to be more kind doctors in the world. He was sick himself recently, he said, and, therefore, in a position to know the necessity of having kind doctors about.

I asked "Andy" whether his doctor had been lacking in kindness. For a moment "Andy" knitted his brow, and there was a slight tightening of the jaw. Then he said, with a most pugnacious emphasis:

"He had to be nice, that's all."

He took a convulsive hold of his ancient hat, as he uttered the words, and I was just diplomat enough to pursue the subject no further. He, however, without any urging, added these cryptic remarks:

"I will take a chance at anything once, and if it don't work, why it is 'Never Again.'"

"Andy" scouted the idea that he was in the pictures merely for the money there was in it. He said he liked the fun. When Mentor Banon sniffed audibly at this statement, "Andy" instinctively assumed a fighting pose and I thought it wise, and in the interest of peace, to step between them and change the subject. There is just enough of the ancient Milesian blood in "Andy's" veins to precipitate a physical combat with a giant if he thinks he is being wronged.

Everybody in the Edison studio loves "Andy" and the vast army of fans loves him no less. The fairies having blessed him with the power of making others laugh, mortals can do no more than congratulate.

Edna Hamel.

EDNA, who still has two years to travel before entering her 'teens, is, in spite of her tender youth, a theatrical veteran, having begun her artistic career as the "Baby" in Francis Wilson's popular success, "The Bachelor's Baby." Four times she has been to the Coast and very many more times she has tasted the adventures of the road. She played with Thomas Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle." For the last five years or so the Edison studio has been her headquarters. Asked for the reason of her pronounced loyalty to the Edison studio the young lady replied that "she liked the way Mr. Plimpton spoke to her when she made her debut in the silent drama." She and "Andy" go to the same school and are inseparable, "Andy" seeming satisfied at all times to defer to her. Like "Andy," she is ambitious in her studies in school, and only recently received a prayer book from one of the sisters as a reward for her perfect lessons. She, too, is tormented by the admiration and the "silly questions" of her schoolmates.

Edna Hamel

"Recently I played a part where I had to fall into the water," confided Edna to the interviewer, "and they asked me whether I got wet."

At the suggestion of Mentor Bannon, the little miss danced a highland fling on the spot, the mentor furnishing the music.

Some of the Edison pictures in which Edna has been seen to advantage are "Sophia's Imaginary Visitors," " The Little Bride of Heaven," "Mr. Sniffikin's Widow." The pictures accompanying these lines show "Andy" and Edna in a new picture called "Quarantine." It promises to be very funny.

When it became known in the studio that the interviwer of screen children was around a charming group of all the rising artists gathered like bees around a hive and Mr. Seay, the children's idol, snapshotted them in a jiffy.

Group of juvenile actors at the Edison Studio.

Moving Picture Educator

Easter Exhibitions.

THE Easter season is the one in which more pictures are used than at any other time. At no other time has the exhibitor such an opportunity to combine with the best forces around him to serve them with just that which they most require. Because of the progress which has marked the growth of educational pictures, the number of suitable subjects is now not only large, but exceedingly so; let it not be supposed that the biblical and religious lists alone—large as they are—are the only ones upon which to draw for suitable Easter holiday programs.

For the immediate association with Eastertide, the large list of suitable biblical and religious pictures offers every inducement for the exhibitor to show to what a large extent the moving pictures have entered into the true spirit of this holy season; no part of the "Holy Land" has been neglected in the search for suitable scenes and associations with which to clothe subjects of a semi-religious character; these, with other more secular educational subjects, together with many of the high-class "feature films," make it that in all the more than twenty leading picture houses throughout the country have no excuse for not giving their patrons not only an unusually good program, but an especially seasonable one, besides taking the opportunity to prove to all classes of people what is the true strength, character and value of the moving picture.

The Value of Moving Picture World Reviews.

The recent verdict of a jury upon the question of the moral value of certain pictures, after a thorough and exhaustive trial in New York City, is of great importance to readers of The Moving Picture World. Every one conversant with the facts knows now that the verdict of the jury and the comments of the judge are exactly in line with the reviews and comments of The Moving Picture World. The large number of The World readers, however, may not be so equally aware of the nature and value of this verdict to them. The trial of the producers of these pictures was also the trial of the attitude and opinions of The Moving Picture World; had the pictures been upheld, the value of The World's reviews and comments must necessarily have considerably depreciated, and any who resented the opinions expressed in those reviews could have gloried in such a rebuke.

As it now stands, there is a noticeable similarity in the attitude of the court and The Moving Picture World in the judgments passed upon this particular kind of picture. It may not be presumed that the learned judge who presided at the trial is a reader of "The World." Even if he were, he, of course, would not use the language of this paper for a judicial utterance; nevertheless, it is strangely significant that in approving the verdict of the jury, the judge used the same words in describing the pictures in question, as were used in the comments of "The World," which were: "They reek of the sewer." While on other pages of this paper, proper notice of the various results of this trial and verdict will be taken, the writer of this page believes it an educational duty to refer to this one fact that the attitude and opinions of The Moving Picture World, a jury of intelligent citizens, and a learned court are identical; this fact must be very encouraging to the readers of "The World," and will strengthen their faith in the reviews of their favorite paper. It is interesting to note that no punishment beyond a "suspended sentence" was meted out to the offenders; punishment was not sought, a verdict was all that was desired.

An Opinion Worth Recording.

We are indebted to Mr. Daniel Kilham Dodge, of the University of Illinois, for the following extract from a news letter in the Springfield Churchman by the Right Rev. E. W. Osborne, Bishop of Springfield:

> One more pleasure I may note; a really good moving picture, an especially good one; Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," beautifully designed, wonderfully acted and on films of great excellence.
>
> I have seen none so perfect before. When pictures reach this standard they are educational indeed, and may be a great power for good. With such stories there ought, I think, be a lecturer, a sort of chorus, to give the thread of the story to all who might not be familiar with it. I hope we may come to that yet.

The Bishop of Springfield evidently takes a warm interest in educational kinematography; the practical question he raises at the close of his remarks is one in constant consideration. Comments of this character are encouraging alike to producer and exhibitor, and tend to fix the attention on the class of pictures which demand approval in high places.

How Moving Pictures Can Be Made More Valuable to the Community.

The above is the title of an address delivered by Mr. Orin G. Cocks, Chairman of the Board of Motion Picture Censors, recently at an exhibitors' dinner. A spirit of civic pride would justify every community if it followed this commendable example. Divided opinions and factional contests are unworthy any body of citizens when such an important subject as the best uses of kinematography is the issue. Newspaper reports from all parts of the country show a spirit of unrest on the many-sided questions of the moral and educational value of the pictures; many of these show how, in many places, they are still contentious over many matters which have long ago been settled in most of the larger centers. Editorials in many provincial papers show that in these places the wider knowledge of the greater uses of the moving picture is still lacking. It would be a great help to the moving picture fraternity generally, and to the public at large, if the oft-repeated advice to loan a copy of their trade paper to the local authorities and public scribes were followed up by the exhibitors and other subscribers. Wherever this has been done there has been an advance in the knowledge and purposes of practical kinematography.

In the address above referred to, Mr. Cocks repeated suggestions often given here, and which, as they are now given by another authority, may be worth repeating in the hope that they may be more extensively acted upon. They are as follows: "Co-operation between all local social organizations, all civic agencies, public schools and churches." That the pictures are an abiding factor, or in the more common vernacular, that they "have come to stay," must be the accepted basis of every discussion; it is not a question of pictures or no pictures, but what kind of pictures, and what adaptation of the pictures will serve the interests of each community. A noticeable change in public sentiment now shows that the nature of all criticisms is changed from being directed against the pictures themselves, to the manner in which they are displayed; in other words, those who formerly sought to kill them are now debating how best to give them more life, and better life; fulfilling the old truth that a convert often becomes the strongest advocate.

Brief, Yet Vigorous.

A brief, quick glance over the country shows that everywhere the moving picture is engaged in every possible educational and industrial work.

* * *

From Birmingham, Ala.: The Southern Shoe Retailers' Convention were enlightened by a series of films on all classes of shoe making, together with the intricacies of a modern factory. In addition, the history of shoes was shown in a very interesting manner, from the shoe of the ancient caveman, through the period of sandals of the East, the Indian moccasin and the wooden "sabot" of the French and Belgian peasants. The beauties of the later French period, noted for slippers of extremely dainty appearance.

* * *

The University of Wisconsin, which was perhaps about the first to give kinematography its proper place in educational work, is about to establish "an extension division for the promotion of visual instruction." Mr. W. H. Dudley, head of this special bureau, declares that immediate steps will be taken to provide a library of educational films to send to schools and social centers throughout the State of Wisconsin.

* * *

In the State Reformatory for Women in Bedford, N. Y., the moving picture has been introduced for the double purpose of giving pleasure to the inmates as also to teach strong moral lessons, which it is believed will have a good effect. "Les Miserables" was the first picture shown and this will be followed by a series so selected that the distinct object for which they are shown may be attained.

Mr. Vernon Goes Abroad.

The New President of the World Film Corporation Seeking Big Subjects for the American Market.

By George Blaisdell.

THE new president of the World Film Corporation, G. L. P. Vernon, sailed on Wednesday for England. The present company, as is well known in the trade, is the successor of the World Special Films Corporation, having taken over that organization as well as the Pompeii Company, Inc. Mr. Vernon's first objective point will be his lifelong home, London. Although this is the first alliance of the new president with a motion picture company, that fact is not to be construed as indicating that his interest in kinematography is of recent birth. Mr Vernon has been connected with the stage all his adult life. As Lee Vernon he was for fifteen years the leading English tenor. He has sung in all the capitals of Europe, and been honored by the patronage of monarchs, including among others the Emperor of Germany, the King of Italy, the Czar of Russia and the Sultan of Turkey. In 1903 he was selected by the German tenors to sing at the fiftieth anniversary of Frankfort-on-the-Main. His family is prominent in Old England.

These facts are cited the better to identify this newcomer in the film industry, not because the subject of this article himself lays any stress on them. As a matter of fact, when the writer was talking with him on the Saturday prior to his sailing for home he refused to talk about himself. He said he only desired to lay before the men of the film industry the aims of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Vernon admitted that he was at the age when singers are at the height of their powers and added that his voice was never better, but he was so impressed by the business possibilities of the motion picture industry that he had decided to renounce the operatic stage and confine his whole attention to the securing and marketing of the best obtainable subjects. He said that for many years he had been a follower of motion pictures —that he had followed them because they appealed to him —and that he had given much thought and study to them.

"It is my intention to have the World Film Corporation market only the finest features we can possibly procure," said Mr. Vernon. "We want to send out only those subjects that will justify the exhibitor in charging at least 25 cents admission — productions that will increase receipts, that will hold securely the great public now going to the picture theaters, and create a new clientele. Why, in England there are many houses that charge all the way from 37 cents to $1.25, and at these figures not only fill but crowd their theaters. The same is true of France, where as in England it is nothing unusual to see many attending the performances in evening dress. I intend to visit all the foreign studios, to study the market on the other side, to meet the manufacturers and the prominent exhibitors. My idea is to secure features of quality, and in so doing not to let the matter of money stand in the way. By buying the very best that can be produced, I believe we will materially help the producer. We want him to understand that we are going to do our best to create for him a market for his most artistic productions, features to the making of which sufficient time is given, as opposed to the plan of turning out pictures against time. In this connection I may say right here that it is our intention to release one big feature every week. While this is not to be construed as arbitrary, I believe that our alliances will be such that we can easily do this and without in any measure sacrificing quality to haste.

"I don't mind saying that my idea of a feature is such a picture as our 'In Hoc Signo Vinces,' or, if you will, 'The Triumph of an Emperor,' as it will be known in this country. It has been heartily approved among others by the Pope. It appealed to him as a fine picture, with pronounced educational and moral qualities. We want subjects that can be viewed by children not only with safety but also with profit; in other words, to get away from the blood and thunder. Personally, I also like such pictures as 'Joan of Arc' and 'The Last Days of Pompeii,' those of historical value, and those are of the style I am going after. If necessary I am prepared to pay money in advance for the production of the pictures we want; we propose always to be in a position to purchase the negative outright and take the entire rights for the United States and Canada, not buying less than twenty-one prints of each subject.

"We intend to handle these productions as theatrical propositions—in regard to advertising, for instance—everything on a big scale. In my travels over Europe for fifteen years I have made a study of popular taste, as to what appeals to people over the footlights, that is, from the artistic viewpoint. So while I am away—and I may be away months—I am going to encourage manufacturers to do their best and give them to understand that money will not stand in the way of our getting what we want. This may be a good time to say that the capitalization of this company has been increased. Prominent Wall Street men have come in with the object of making it big from a commercial point of view; they have done this for investment and not speculative purposes. I intend also to interest London bankers. Since coming into this company I have been approached by some of the largest theatrical people who have expressed a desire to book our productions.

"We are sending out two road shows next week—'Joan of Arc' and 'The Triumph of an Emperor.' These will be sent with all the accessories of a theatrical proposition, advance men, etc., and we are spending a great deal of money in newspaper advertising.

"It is my intention to establish branch offices, as our business develops, in London and Paris and probably in Rome. We have a good organization here. I believe in Mr. Selznik we have a general manager second to none in the trade.

"Are we to confine our attention to the longer multiple reel stuff? By no means. We are after good pictures, be they as short as two reels, or even one. Yes, I believe people in this country as well as abroad will pay 25 cents to see good single reels. And scenarios? No, we are not going to ignore that side. If we get hold of a big subject we will have it produced by one of the big manufacturers. So in my travels about the Continent I shall be on the lookout for a fine scenario. And in regard to the scrutiny that will be bestowed on the pictures in this office. No subject will be released until it has been passed by the Board of Directors."

Mr. Vernon is no stranger to the ocean-crossing trip, as he has made it twoscore times. It will be seen from this statement that he is well acquainted in the United States. As a matter of fact, he has made a special study of conditions in this country and Canada in the past two years, having visited every city of importance and looked into the situation as affecting the theaters and pictures, the latter from both exchange and exhibiting angles.

G. L. P. VERNON,
President of the World Film Corporation.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

THE censorship microbe has come to life again in New York. This time it has bobbed up in the outskirts of the greater city—Queens County, by gum! An assemblyman from that domain last week introduced at Albany a resolution to create a State commission to supervise the licensing and regulation of moving pictures; and the intention is that all films must be submitted to the commission and licensed by it before exhibition. The commission is to consist of three members to be appointed for a term of six years each, the chairman to receive $3,500 and each of the other commissioners $3,000 per year. Soft, eh? Particularly so when we take into consideration the card the commission will carry up its sleeve—authority to appoint not exceeding sixty advisory commissioners to assist it in the examination and licensing of films. The resolution did not mention any remuneration for the advisory members. Perhaps the assemblyman thought it would look too raw. It may have been an intentional oversight as a bait for support from the up-State assemblymen. The vote on the resolution will be watched with interest not only by the people directly interested in the motion picture business, but also by the thousands of others who feel that they are already overburdened by unnecessary taxation.

* * *

One can readily see, whatever real motive may hover behind the resolution, that the measure should be scrutinized to the last degree, as it comes from a county with a recent reputation that savors of anything but reform. It is but recently that three of the foremost men of that county (former Congressman William Willett, Jr., Joseph Cassidy and Louis Wolter) were convicted and are now under sentence for bartering a supreme court nomination, Willett being the man who was to be placed upon the bench. So that any legislative suggestions coming from that part of the State, for a while at least, will be received with a spirit bordering closely upon suspicion, no matter how sincere and honorable its sponsors may be.

* * *

The resolution should be decisively beaten for many reasons. In the first place, there is no clamor for a different censorship than is now in operation. Had the measure been introduced a year or more ago it would have been in accordance with a demand of the time. In the second place, the result of a recent trial in Judge Swann's court in this city clearly demonstrated that a remedy is at hand for any of the reformers who may be dissatisfied with the rulings of the existing Board of Censorship. In the third place, the present system of censorship does not cost the people of the State, or any part of it, a cent; and no reason can be shown for a displacement of that system by another that will cost the taxpayers thousands of dollars annually. In the fourth place, there are now pending in three States—Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania—contests on a constitutional question which is identical with one which will be brought up in this State should the resolution presented by the assemblyman from Queens County be adopted and a law framed upon it. No matter which way the question now pending in the three States named may be decided, it is a certainty that the contests will not end until the Supreme Court of the United States has passed upon them, and whatever ruling is then made will be binding upon every State in the Union. Therefore it is a waste of time of legislative bodies that can be more affectively applied in other directions and a waste of the taxpayers' money to press such a measure as that which now comes from Queens County.

* * *

No sponsor of that measure can reasonably contend that the fundamental principle involved in it justifies its enforcement pending the final decision of the United States Supreme Court because, as already stated, that principle is now sufficiently upheld and protected by the existing Board of Censorship and rulings of the courts. There is absolutely nothing to justify haste in the matter. The assemblyman who introduced the resolution did not arouse himself in time and the people can in no way be injured by a brief delay.

* * *

To press the resolution in question will be a practical confession that there is a hidden motive behind it. Let us see what that motive may possibly be. Suppose the resolution be adopted and the law framed. The next step will be injunction proceedings by the motion picture interests to restrain enforcement of the law pending final determination of the constitutional questions, thus putting great unnecessary expense on all sides. Meanwhile the commission will get ready to earn its salary and begin the laying out of districts, opening offices, preparing printed matter and books of rules, etc., so as to be ready to enforce the law should the courts determine it may be done. The commissioners will not care how long the litigation may last. They will draw their salaries and expenses for the six year term under tenure of office, or until the courts shall decide that they have nothing to do.

* * *

Some may say that this is an exaggerated supposition; that the appointment of the commission could be so regulated that its members could not become a charge upon the State until the constitutionality of the law creating it would be settled. Very good. Then the exaggerated supposition will have served a purpose in conveying a hint to the legislators to see that such a provision is made should the resolution prevail.

* * *

But let us see how far the supposition is exaggerated. Take the State of Pennsylvania. It has appointed three censors and the motion picture exhibitors have taken steps to test the matter in the courts. Meanwhile the censors go merrily on their way. Read the following message from Harrisburg:

> "The chief censor of moving pictures to-day appointed Joseph Barrier chief clerk at $1,000 a year and Mrs. Lantz as stenographer at $720. The board will open offices within a few days. It is planned to make the law effective May 1st. A pamphlet of rules will soon be issued."

Is the elucidation clear?

* * *

Here is a State Censor Board that will have nothing to do until May 1st, yet by that time it will have salaries and expenses for two months due, if not collected, regardless of the constitution. These political susidies are the same wherever created and their history is what has made the motion picture people opposed to them; not a desire to escape censorship, but to avoid possible ignorant, oppressive and unjust dealings which so often mark bodies of political creation.

* * *

The motion picture business has grown to such stupendous proportions through this State and the entire country, and the people engaged in it directly and indirectly are so great in numbers that their appeals for conservative action cannot be disregarded with impunity. They have millions upon millions of dollars invested in the business; they endorse every reasonable legal measure bearing upon it and, with rare exception, have abided by the laws enacted; they have been annoyed and perplexed almost to a point of desperation by inconsiderate agitators and overzealous, as well as designing, officials; and despite the defamations cast against it have succeeded in convincing the masses and the classes that their business stands unparalleled in the history of legitimate amusements. This, alone, justifies the demand that the motion picture people of this State be not further hampered by legislation which cannot become operative under existing circumstances except to promote unnecessary litigation and expense. The motion picture people claim official censorship is unconstitutional and are pressing the question with all due diligence before the United States Courts, which are as a bridle upon legislators when constitutional questions are involved. There is but one intelligent and fair course for the law makers at Albany to pursue at the present time, and that is to kill the Queens County measure, or table it until such time as the now pending questions the resolution involves is finally decided by the superior authority.

UNAUTHORIZED AGENT BORROWING MONEY.

The Newman Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, makers of brass goods for theaters, write under date of March 14 as follows:

Editor Moving Picture World,

Dear Sir: Up until about four weeks ago we had a representative handling our frames on a commission basis, as a side line. His name is Edward H. Beziat. We found out that he was borrowing money from various customers of ours, claiming that he would make good any money that he would borrow. We have since found out that he has borrowed from several exhibitors in various parts of the country, and in justice to them, we would appreciate your publishing a reading notice, so as to prevent any repetitions. We of course are not responsible for this party, and loathe very much the airing of it, but are anxious to do so to protect exhibitors. Yours truly, Newman Bros.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

Playing to the Leading Motive.

This from C. J. Selby, Lyric Theater, Raton, Nnew Mexico:

> The manner in which my orchestra played to a certain picture has caused some criticism. The picture was a Victor drama—"The Dread Inheritance," with Warren Kerrigan in the title role. In the second reel there are numerous changes from one scene to another—one scene showing Kerrigan outside a dance hall (a dramatic scene) and the other showing the inside with the dancers in the height of gaiety; these scenes interchange several times.
>
> At the matinee the dance scene caused bursts of laughter—the scene was really comedy—but the matinee was without music of any kind. At the night performance I hesitated whether to play to the dramatic action of Kerrigan or to the dance. I considered the dramatic work to be the foremost theme of the picture and played "Apple Blossoms" right through the interchanging scenes. I expected the audience to interrupt with laughter when the dance was on, but instead there was profound silence. The audience seemed to be heart and soul with the lead role. Had I played something lively for the dance perhaps the laughter would have been forthcoming. I was criticised for not playing to the dance and changing music to suit the action with each change of scene.
>
> Now the question is, did I add to the interest of the story, or should I have played to the action on the screen regardless of the intended purpose of the story? Would like to lead discussions on such subjects as I always learn something new. The music department has always been a vast aid to me and I hope my ideas will be of some use to others if they get into print. Wishing you all the success in the world. (World.)

This department always welcomes the exchange of ideas and discussions upon the same from and by its readers. The question put by Mr. Selby has been discussed at length several times upon this page, though I believe not recently. My own position has always been that these rapidly alternating scenes preclude the constant change of music to fit each scene, especially when given by an orchestra. It can often be done effectively with a piano or organ, though as a general rule, I believe it is proper to play to the principal theme or motive of the story as Mr. Selby has done in the case cited. Trying to fit short and rapidly alternating scenes with contrasting music is bound to have a "patchy" effect as some one said.

These alternating scenes (or "cut-backs") are always co-related and both are carrying forward the action of the story. In a drama it always carries forward the dramatic portion which is the chief motive.

This in itself is sufficient indication it seems to me, that the proper musical accompaniment shall also help to carry forward the same development. Of course when a scene occurs which is long enough to develop a different idea, the music should assist by following the new action; but in the short scenes where there is little or no chance to introduce more than a few bars of music, stick to the main theme.

Special Music.

E. F. B. writes: "Can you give me any information as to music issued for pictures by Vitagraph and Kalem Companies? Are they still issuing this music?"

Te following letters have been received from the companies named regarding this matter. The first is from the Vitagraph Company:

> Replying to yours, we are publishing music suggestions for our releases, both special and regular, in our monthly bulletin, the subscription price of which is $1.00 per year to all but exhibitors. The heralds and music cues have been discontinued until further notice.

The Kalem Company responds as follows:

> Replying to yours, we have abandoned the issue of special music for our photoplays. We find that the average exhibitor is not sufficiently interested to return us the first cost of the music, and from experience you know it is rather an expensive luxury to get out a special arrangement, and sell only a limited quantity.

And there you have it. Every so often somebody wants to know why the producers don't have special music arranged for all their pictures, thereby insuring correct musical accompaniment and a proportionate betterment of the show. Now you know why they don't. It costs considerable to publish music. It costs something for the services of a musician to adapt or compose and arrange this music, and the advertising and postage are items to be reckoned with. A number of producers have at different times given their attention to special music with no thought of making a profit thereby—any of them would have been satisfied to break even—but when the exhibitors do not take enough interest to pay the initial cost it becomes "an expensive luxury." It's too bad. Their efforts were deserving of more encouragement.

Likes The "Hope-Jones."

Jack Welch, Fitzhugh Hall, Rochester, New York, is in again as follows:

> Again I am tardy in thanking you for sending the cues for "Quo Vadis?", but I wish to thank you very much. I am pleased to see the department—"our department"—appearing more regularly. I perhaps may have mentioned we have a "Hope-Jones Unit-Orchestra" and believe me when I say it's the greatest thing for picture playing there is. As you undoubtedly know, it is really a pipe organ (don't let the manufacturers hear you say that.—Ed.), but there is as much difference between that and a church organ as there is between my pocket book and John D's, and that's some contrast. Instead of the diapason and other church stops we have cornets, violins, cellos, flutes, harps, xylophone, saxaphone, orchestra bells, etc., representing as nearly as possible a fifty-piece orchestra. Of course it is impossible to do it perfectly, but it is more effective than an orchestra. As an example, we had Kleine's "Last Days of Pompeii"—you remember the last reel was mostly eruption—and by using the soft 16-foot tuba we produced an absolutely perfect storm. Had the people on the edge of their seats listening to the shrieks of the fleeing populace, the crash of the falling pillars, etc. If you saw the Bison release "Shaun the Piper," you can appreciate the bag-pipe effects, and vox and harp effects at the end. It was the talk of the town at the time. In closing, may I echo "C. P.'s" statement regarding the book on the art of playing the pictures? I do not know the conditions of the Chicago stores, but in this town the music stores are the limit. Although I am new in the game, I can analyze the pictures fairly well, but when it comes to purchasing new music I am lost. I know when I want broad marches, but do not know the names of many. I know when I want gavottes, marches, etc., but fail when it comes to specific titles, and that's where the stores here are weak. Now if you can give a first class list of titles and publishers in your book it will certainly help some poor struggling artists (?) and the cause.

The "cues" for "Quo Vadis?" referred to was merely a typewritten synopsis with suggestions for music thereto. (Kleine's eight-reel production.) As to the "Hope-Jones" instrument, I have had several opportunities of hearing one of them accompany pictures, and under the hands of a skillful manipulator it is all Mr. Welch claims. As to publishing titles of suitable musical numbers, that is such a large contract by reason of its being practically inexhaustible, that I shall have to consider it a while. In the past a few numbers were mentioned here occasionally, but it was thought expedient to discontinue the practice. However, we'll see.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Another Bill.

WHEN we started the "Bill" letters, we offered to let anyone be "Bill" that had an interesting proposition to advance, and an eastern exhibitor comes forward with a Bill proposition that seems to promise well. He writes:

> For some time my partner and myself have been running a house in a live city, showing six reels and a song for ten cents. Now we are offered a house in another town. This is a place of 12,000 population, 25 miles from a larger place. No trolleys to this more important center but some tapping the surrounding country and centering here. There are three theaters here, two of which seat more than a thousand. The other is a five cent house. We are offered one of the larger houses, which has failed on a rather uncertain policy of pictures with vaudeville, stock (Query—Repertoire?) occasionally, some good road shows, at a varying schedule. To get the lease we must pay a half year rental in advance and guarantee to use vaudeville and occasionally stock. I am opposed to vaudeville as I do not believe that we can get two good singles and two good doubles for $150 for the whole. The house has been running with three changes of pictures a week and vaudeville two days. I thought we might put in a good singer, a daily change and do without vaudeville. But what puzzles us is the admission price. We should run many features and I thought we should get five and ten cents at the matinees and ten and fifteen cents in the evening, but my partner says we can get them at ten cents and then put the price up if we think best. The other big house charges ten cents.

And this is what we wrote:

Getting At It.

Dear Bill—

Since you ask it, we think that a man who wants to rent his house has a gigantic nerve to tell you that if you rent you must follow the same policy that put him on the rocks. Misery likes company, but refuse to be company with misery if you can help it. Of course the man has a right to protect his property and get out a lease that will prevent you from wrecking his house through cheap and nasty stuff, but that is one thing and to seek to commit you to his own mistakes is foolish. If he can get the six months' rent in advance, he should be contented to take a back seat and sit and look on. He has failed. He should give you a chance.

Lots of houses do well by playing the pictures when there is no big road show, but a straight picture policy is better, as a rule, for then your patrons always know what they are going to get. Fancy a man starting a church that is Catholic one week, Baptist next and Methodist the third and you can never tell when the bell rings what it is going to be. If you are a Catholic you go to a Catholic church and it is the same way with a theater. You can't match pennies with yourself to see what the next show will be and expect to pull in a picture audience when people cannot tell whether it will be pictures or some cheap "rep" show. "I'll try anything once," may be good slang, but it is a durned poor business policy. If you can get the house without any strings, take it, but don't try to do that "multum in parvo" thing and make money. Be a picture theater or be a dramatic house, but not both at once and the same time. Point out to your ivory cupola landlord that since you pay the rent you might be permitted to run the theater your own way.

No Vaudeville.

As you say you can't get good vaudeville people for the price you offer. This, on a two-change-a-week show works out at $12.50 per actor for three days. Now when you figure out that it costs at least 25 cents to get the trunk from the station to the theater and another quarter to get it back, you have the act working for four dollars a day out of which railroad tickets must be bought. A man who can't earn more than four dollars a day is most assuredly not a good actor. Let the other fellow have vaudeville—all he wants of it—of that sort. Put a hundred into your show and fifty into the orchestra and you will have a vastly better offering. Vaudeville will last for a time, but not where there is a really good picture show. The skids for that, and while you have the skids greased slip the singer along with it. Singers are a relic of other days. If you can get a good strong local favorite, the personality of the man or woman may draw business, but you won't make it from the idea. Put that salary into the band, too, and, then, if you have to, run an orchestral selection though what you want with more show than six reels is something you must explain.

Two Days or One.

And don't make a daily change. You keep count and you'll find that if you get good shows the business will be better the second night than the first. Every man, woman and child who saw the show Monday will spread the news Tuesday and come back Wednesday to do some more advance work for you. Get good stuff and you will not have to change. Tell why you do it, tell that your shows are so good that your pleased patrons will advertise you. It will be a fact and people will note that the show is commended. That is a better advertisement that "four dollars per" vaudeville. Lots of people are losing regular money by flashing the reels back to the exchange about the time a lot of people want to see them. In a small town the news can get all over the place in a forenoon. Bill Smith, who works in the shirt factory and who poses as a picture expert, will tell all in the factory and they will go home and spread the news. Jim Jones, who works in the sash and blind shop, will tell all his people, and so will Bill Brown, who is in the grocery store and who knows all of the people on his route well enough to tell them there in a Broncho Billy or a Universal Ike at the theater. If he tells it about the time the baggage master is putting the films into the express car, it would do you a lot of good perhaps, but we have our doubts.

And Prices.

And last of all, give a fifteen-cent show and charge fifteen cents. If it is a mistake you can put the price down to ten cents a lot easier than you can boost it that other nickel, but right from the start the fact that you charge fifteen cents against the other fellow's ten argues that your show must be half as good again. The people will not be inclined to believe you, but they will come to see if you are a liar, and if the show makes good they will think it is better than it really is. We know a man who had a book that he charged a dollar and a half for. He got out the same thing for a dollar, saving about six cents on the difference in the quality of the paper, and he sold seven of the higher prices books to one of the other because every purchaser argued that the higher priced book must be the better. You can do it with your show. Make them believe that it is a better show and the best way to give them this belief is to give them a better show than the other man offers. The small admission price may have made the pictures, but we remember when you could get a dozen eggs for a quarter and better eggs than you pay forty cents for now. Make the fifteen cents the stepping stone to the quarter. You can do it, especially with features. That is what features are for. But be careful of your features. We know some five-part stories that are ten times as bad as some one-reel subjects. It is not the length of the film but the quality of the goods that counts, but a producer can afford to put more money into a multiple and be reasonably certain of getting it back. If you can see the features before you book them, and book only the good ones. There are lots of good ones, and not so many bad ones, but one bad egg in a custard utterly ruins the efforts of five fresh and well meaning eggs. Be a manager, not a janitor and you'll not have to worry about the fifteen cent admission with ten cents in the afternoon. If the matinee business is bad at first give out rebate tickets rather than cut price. It is the same thing in the long run, but the moral effect is better. At any rate start in at fifteen and drop gracefully if you have to.

Welcome Home.

We are glad to note that the Academian, the organ of the Academy of Music, Selma, Alabama, is back on the map. Lately it was taken over to a Sunday paper, but the experiment was not a success and so it is back as an independent issue. The reason for the switchback is good. Here it is:

> Howdy!
>
> The whys and wherefores of the Academian's reissuance may not be of particular interest to you, but in view of the blatant announcement of the change from the booklet to a local newspaper, and the accompanying threat to return to the original form should the other prove unsatisfactory leaves it somewhat up to us to explain that the return is caused solely because the value to us of this method of advertising is dependent upon the reader's retaining the paper in which it is published. Quite evidently the form of a newspaper does not tend to cause this, so here we are.
>
> And even again, in a newspaper we must compete with live news items for the reader's attention, while here we have you at our mercy; if you read anything at all, you read about pictures or the Academy of Music. And, too—whisper it—our own style is not shown up by direct contrast to the stories of real writers.
>
> And so here we are.

We were sorry to lose the Academian. We are glad to see it back. It is a model for others.

Getting the Kiddies Out.

A correspondent who writes that he is new at the game wants to know how he can get the children out of his house after they have seen the complete performance.

We take it that he runs a ferformance continuously instead of emptying the house after each complete show. The only way seems to be to give out checks as the patrons enter and after each reel or each second reel have the house emptied of those who have seen the entire bill.

The way it works is this: We will suppose that the show runs four reels and repeats. When the house opens, each patron entering is given a check numbered one. When the first reel stops new arrivals are given check two, and a third and fourth number is given out as the reels change. Now the run starts again and once more checks bearing the same numbers, but of different colors, are given out. At the end of the first reel the announcement is made that all having seen the show will retire. If red checks were given out first and blues next, all who cannot show a red two, three or four or a blue one must leave. At the end of the next reel those having red twos are escorted out and so until there are all blue checks and perhaps a few new red ones. By this means no patron is able to stay through more than the four full reels and part of another.

This is a clumsy method. It takes time and delays the performance, but it is the only way that clears the house without the possibility of an argument. Because of the delay it is better to clear the house only after every second reel.

Does anyone know of a better plan?

The correspondent also wants a business builder for bad nights, adding that he does not like the idea of an amateur night. The best thing we know is a special subject on the bad night and a little extra advertising. The back files will show any number of business getting schemes, but the best scheme of all is a bigger subject, but not a greater number of reels.

Chiming In.

Morris S. Suckno, of the Whiteway and Parkway theaters, Albany, N. Y., writes that the automobile clubs and the traction company have been co-operating in a safety first campaign and that he got into the campaign with some slides of his own, running each three days. As the Safety First crusade is sweeping the country, there is a chance for other exhibitors to profit by Mr. Suckno's suggestions. Here is the reading of the set of five:

SAFETY FIRST
This is the Safest Theater in Albany
THINK

SAFETY FIRST
Who can name 3 reasons why this is the safest theater in Albany?
Parkway Theater

SAFETY FIRST
Reason No. 1. This theater has more ground floor exit space, proportionately, than any other theater in Albany
Therefore safer

SAFETY FIRST
Isolated operating room, modern mechanism, absolutely fire, fool and scare proof

SAFETY FIRST
Efficient ventilating and disinfectant system, capacity, complete change of air in 2½ minutes

And In Return.

In return Mr. Suckno wants to be advised by brother exhibitors of some scheme to mark his coming anniversary week. He adds that he does not want any prize scheme, but something by which his patrons will remember the theater.

That's the right idea. Prize schemes, even when they are legal, can only satisfy a few and disappoint many. Treat all alike and send them all home satisfied. This is particularly important in the case of an anniversary which is something that should be marked in the minds of all, preferably by some souvenir of value and of greater seeming value than the actual cost. Will some of those who have such souvenirs kindly write Mr. Suckno at 158 South Pearl Street? We'll be glad to see one of the souvenirs when they are completed.

Mr. Suckno seems to be strong on making his slides help business, and following the last of our continuous performance blizzards he ran two slides telling that those who came out saw a particularly good show. We wonder if any managers who suffered from the storm took especial measures to insure a crowd.

And how many of you keep a man in the lobby with a whiskbroom to remove the snow from coats and wraps on stormy days? It is a little attention that will please the patron who does not like to sit through the performance in a wet garment, and at the same time it keeps the snow—or most of it—in the lobby instead of letting it be shaken off just inside the door to melt and make the house cold and damp. These little attentions always please.

Small But Readable.

D. Filizola, of the Theaterette, Fort Scott, Kan., sends a four-pager that he says he will make better as time goes on. He has the right idea of giving plenty of reading matter and on the program page; the fourth, he uses a day and date scheme that leaves no room for error. The column is four and a half inches wide and at the left there is the abbreviation of the day and below this the day of the month in twenty-four point type. The eye takes it in at once. The program announcement is simple but full, simply displayed, but without a jumble of type. It is a good starter and the dating should commend itself to others. You cannot too clearly state the date if you want to make business—and that is what a program is for.

Rustling in Tientsin.

Evidently they have not lost their hustle in China. The Arcade Theater, Tientsin, sends in eleven different pieces of advertising matter for "Quo Vadis?" which they ran for five nights. This does not include the Chinese advertising matter. This runs all the way from the single sheet on the thin native paper to eight and twelve-page illustrated folders. The prices were $1.50 and $2.00 with a special price of $1.00 to soldiers in uniform, and it paid to put on some extra hustle, but it is going strong even at that. And practically none of the matter is duplicated; all new matter being prepared for each piece, and the press comments cover the leading American and European cities, including James McQuade's article in this paper.

The Arcade seems to have taken over the Pekin Pavilion, Pekin, running paper for the two houses from the same form with minor changes. They will be covering all of North China presently.

A hint of a recent reproduction here is found in this paragraph:

> In this small town there are not less than three thousand persons who patronize this theater. Out of this 3,000 so far only a thousand have been to the Arcade to see the unique film, "Quo Vadis?" The remaining two thousand have not yet turned up to explain their absence. What is the reason?
>
> That sounds very much like a free adaptation of a recent census here.

Poor Conditions.

Here is a letter that reveals an unusual condition of affairs. At the request of the writer his name and town are withheld. He says:

> I have been running a picture show in this town of 2,000 for the past five years and until recently business has been fine. A man in the general merchandise business bought the opera house and put in pictures. He has a seating capacity of 500 against my 220, and his expenses are low, as the clerks from his store run the theatre. His operator is the delivery boy.
>
> I had the best of it as long as he ran pictures only, but now he shows four reels of pictures and two or three acts of vaudeville for ten cents. I show only three reels. He also gives a free ticket with each purchase of one dollar made at his store. I know he is not making any money from the show, but he is worth $100,000 and can afford to lose money in order to put me out of his business. The only advantage I have is location.
>
> I have always contended that picture show vaudeville means vulgarity, and I don't like to run that kind of show; however, he is doing the big end of the business and I must do something. What would you do if you were in my place? Run Vaudeville?

Not a bit of vaudeville would we run. We take it that this opera house man is trying to run our correspondent out of business that he may have a monopoly of the town. If that is the case we would make one big kick and keep on kicking. Get out newspaper advertising if possible, if that is not possible get out dodgers; if you can't afford dodgers get your screen to work for you and point out that you've given a good show for five years and ask what they think they will get after you've been put out of business. That seems to be the strongest talking point. The public does not care for the moral aspects of the case. They will go where they can get the most for their money and an appeal to friendship will not do very much, but make them realize that only one house in town and that run as an adjunct to a grocery story means whatever the man who has cornered the market is disposed to give.

Talk Right Out.

Don't be afraid to talk because the other man has more money. That does not always make for popularity, and sometimes it makes for quite the reverse. Build up sentiment. Get out some anti-trust talk, show that if they let you go down they will be at the mercy of a monopolist. Point out that you pay your people to run a picture show and do not require them to clerk in a store in the daytime. Jump on the projection. The chances are that there will be plenty of points to raise if the other operator is a delivery clerk. Point out that it is projection as much as the picture that makes for effect. Conduct a campaign of education.

And hand a few wallops to that vaudeville. Have someone in the other house every time there are new acts. Let him make note of all the objectionable remarks and business. Allude to them in your advertising. Ask the women if that is what they like. Ask the men if that is what they like their wives and mothers and kiddies to see and hear. Do not be too specific. Hint at what has been done rather than tell plainly, or you will spoil your effect. Persuade them that what they want is a clean program of pictures without objectionable vulgarity and with good projection and surroundings.

Then brace up the show a bit even if a little money is lost. Get a feature for one night a week. Charge a little more if you have to and tell just why you have to charge more. Quote facts to show that the pictures are no longer a ten-cent proposition entirely, but that they are driving vaudeville from the theaters because they offer more entertainment. Don't seek public sympathy, but create a public sentiment in your favor, which is a very different thing. Between argument and ridicule the trick can be turned and the sentiment turned your way.

Don't fight vaudeville with vaudeville. Fight it with public sentiment and the chances of winning are much better. We shall be glad if our correspondent will keep us posted on the fight and supply us with his advertising matter.

And remember that the slide, used in moderation, is the best form of advertising. Keep your arguments terse and put them where they will be read.

Good Idea.

The Jefferson Theater Bulletin, Fort Wayne, Ind., has a good idea in an underline that reads "performances begin on the even hour." You know from that you can go there at two, four, six, eight or ten and catch the performance about to start. As they use many multiples, this is all the more important, but it is always well to give the hours when the performance starts and there is no danger of entering in on the last half of a second or third reel of a subject.

The Jefferson uses a railroad folder style of sheet which gives a page a day. Some subjects are held two days and given a two-page display. The allotment of space is nicely done and the display artistic, but a little more house talk would not come amiss.

Here's Mr. De Subers.

After all these weeks of silence comes Harry De Subers to send in some more of his catch lines and remind us that he is still cutting stencils. He seems to have cut sets of stencils for about half of the business. Some of the other half may need them.

> You want good pictures! So do we. We show the kind that please you and your friends.
>
> Auld acquaintance should not be forgotten—when you go to the ————. Take them with you.
>
> If you want to know just "what's what" in new pictures—take a peep at our screen.
>
> Worth seeing. Good pictures of all sorts.
>
> Come to the ———— when you want "reel" quality.
>
> When you have the "blues" come to the ———— , we will "put you in a good humor with yourself."
>
> You can't make a mistake by going to the ———— if you want to see the best pictures.
>
> Every courtesy and convenience that will add to your pleasure and comfort is found at the ————.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A Photoplay League.

FROM Los Angeles comes a letter announcing the formation of The Photoplay Authors' League with the typewritten signatures of those mentioned as the incorporators. To these are added "per E. P." and the stenographer's mark gives "EL P." though there is no E. P. in the list of incorporators, however, we shall take it for granted that the signatures are used with authority. The letter follows:

> On Friday evening, February 27th, 1914, there was formed an organization known as the Photoplay Authors' League, with Hettie Gray Baker, Wallace C. Clifton, James Dayton, Marc Edmund Jones, W. M. Ritchey, Russell E. Smith, Lois Weber, Richard Willis, W. E. Wing, and Frank E. Woods as charter members.
>
> It is the purpose of this organization of photoplaywrights to affiliate for the purpose of mutual protection and for the general uplift and advancement of the heretofore only partially recognized art of motion picture play construction, and
>
> To bring together, in an effective and powerful organization of national and international scope, recognized photoplay writers for their mutual benefit and exchange of ideas and experiences, and
>
> To incorporate under the state laws of California, and
>
> To publish as often as possible a bulletin announcing new members, reporting new laws that may be enacted for the benefit of its members, and all photoplay authors, and containing a complete forum for the exchange and dissemination of the experiences and ideas of its members, and
>
> To undertake matters of legal procedure, or any other matters that may arise, for the benefit of its members or as a majority of its members may desire, and to assist in securing whatever legislation may be needed at any time to help photoplay authors secure such rights and privileges as may be denied them.
>
> It is not intended that this organization may be of any service whatever in a social way, or to regulate prices, or to influence the sale of scripts, or to take in any way any arbitrary or aggressive stand with manufacturers.
>
> The membership is not a resident one. Non-residents may become members by applying to the secretary, enclosing the dues, and thus signifying their intention. This is a national organization, and is for all recognized photoplay authors wherever their place of residence.
>
> The membership will be strictly limited to those photoplay authors having a proven list of ten produced scripts to their credit as author.
>
> The membership requirements other than the above are to be minimum dues of $10.00 per year, payable in advance, to the Treasurer, Photoplay Authors' League, at the temporary headquarters of the League, 604 San Fernando Building, Los Angeles.

Frankly, we do not altogether like the scheme. We are ready to welcome any organizaton that will work for the betterment of the photoplay business and that will make for a more prosperous condition of affairs, but we are afraid of these league ideas. The names of the incorporators are guarantee of the honesty of their purpose. They are the names of men and women who have already done much for the advancement of the business, but intention is one thing and fulfilment another. Here are ten persons who have the best interests of the business at heart, but where will these ten be when the membership builds up to a hundred or more? The majority will rule and in spite of the paragraph that disclaims any intention of trying to coerce the manufacturer, we believe that a majority of the writers who will join will seek to effect such coercion. We fail, moreover, to see what the writer needs legislation for. True it has been decided that it is not a crime to steal a manuscript, yet for this the judge and not the law seems to be to blame. Copyright is not possible for unpublished material of any sort and so an amendment to the copyright law cannot be secured no matter what pressure may be brought to bear upon individual congressmen. The moral effect of a large membership would be all very well were that membership loyal to the body, but in other lines we have seen too many instances of disloyalty and even betrayal to believe that here great good can accrue.

At the Ed-Au club the other evening we were attacked because we advanced the belief that a seal of the club on a scrip would not gain for it special attention, but twenty years at the game has shown us the futility of asking the other fellow to fight our battles for us. The man who writes good scripts can sell them. If he is badly treated by a company he drops it from his list. If he writes good stuff and acts like a business man, he can get ahead without assistance. If he cannot, it is not possible to drag him to success.

As to Copyright it might be well to note that there is none more willing to see the privilege of entry granted than Thorvald Solberg, the Register of Copyrights. His is one of the very few self-supporting departments of the government and he would welcome these additional fees as much, perhaps, as the opportunity to further extend the usefulness of his department, but in spite of repeated consultation with the Congressional committee he has not been able to gain entry for the photoplay writer, and if he cannot, we do not believe that anyone else can.

Inquest Club.

There was a full attendance at the Inquest Club Monday, March 9th. Carl Gregory told interestingly of his projected trip to the Bahamas to make submarine pictures, and explained the submersible tube which makes underwater photography even at night not only possible but practicable. It was not in line with the usual affairs of the Inquesters, but it was too good a chance to let pass and Mr. Gregory spoke most understandably of the technical side of the work. Pop Hoadley refused to contribute to the discussion as did Monte Katterohn, but Benjamin Barondess led a discussion on some of the plays and there was a general talk. One point brought out was that legal papers should be carefully prepared, a will figuring in one of the plays just witnessed being of the true "lawyer's delight" brand. The importance of careful leader writing was emphasized by a picture wherein a husky six footer goes to bed and the leader explains that the hero has worried himself sick over a mortgage; which is no way for a hero to behave. There will be no month end meeting in March on account of the dinner, but the members will meet at the Savoy, as usual, on April 13th.

At the Ed-Au.

There was a brisk meeting of the Ed-Au club March 7th., and the interest felt in the organization was shown by the vote to have a meeting April 4th. instead of calling off on account of the dinner March 21st.

C. B. Hoadley read an interesting paper on the visualization of the copyright plays and books. This will be printed later when Pop gets time to prepare copy. In the discussion that ensued it was the sense of the meeting that presently the supply of copyrighted material would be exhausted and the original writers would again get their innings, but those who have given the matter the most careful thought seemed to believe that there will always be a chance for good copyright material as well as original matter, though the present craze for filming anything that ever used to be popular must soon abate. Captain Leslie T. Peacocke spoke for credit on the film and Mrs. Brandon went him one better by declaring that the Ed-Au club should issue a seal which, when affixed to a script would give it preference over the inferior writers. It was clear that she did not represent the opinion of a majority of the members. This writer pointed out that while he was given credit on the film for having written "The Sultan and the Roller Skates," an Edison comedy, the story as filmed was really written by C. J. Williams, the director, who built a sketchy farce into a comedy drama with a marked farcical trend, and expressed his belief that the credit more properly should have gone to Mr. Williams who had taken advantage of opportunity to make a much better story. The majority were strongly in favor of screen credit, arguing that the players were wholly dependent on their popularity, and overlooking the fact that the player presents his personality, while the writer does not.

At the business session Capt. Peacocke was elected to membership, as were John William Kellette, a writer, Carl Gregory, of Princess, Lu Senarens, of Motion Picture Stories and Richard Carroll, who won first prize in the old Universal-Powers contest and who writes scripts when he is not editing the Sewing Machine Times.

For a time it looked as though there would be thirteen members present for the third consecutive time, but the alleged hoodoo was avoided. Those present were President Phil Lang, Treasurer Pop Hoadley, Vice President Mrs. Brandon, Van Buren Powell, Dr. Stockton, Henry Albert Phillips, Edwin M. LaRoche, Monte Katterjohn, Mark Reardon, III., E. M. Wickes, of the Writers' Magazine, Arthur Leeds, of The Photoplay Author, James Cogan, B. P. Schulberg, and E. W. Sargent.

Can You Beat It?

Not long ago we printed a letter from Mrs. Louella O. Parsons, in which she announced that Essanay was not at present in the market for much material other than comedy. We took the liberty of adding the sort of letter we thought Mrs. Parsons might have written were she less diplomatic. We pointed out that she had done a lot to help the struggling beginner and that probably the struggling beginner had wearied her of well doing by importunate demands for all sorts of favors. We think we hit the matter pretty fairly in explaining she was through with all novices because so many had repaid her courtesy with rank discourtesy and yet she now writes that the item seems to have doubled her mail and adds:

> Scarcely a day passes that I do not get a letter running something like this: "I have heard of your kindness to beginners and so I am sending you my script and asking you to personally criticise it."
>
> I really would like to keep up my reputation as the kind-hearted lady, but in order to personally criticise all the scripts that find their way into the Essanay Scenario Department, I would have to work both day and night and Sundays. But your letter did bring me several good comedies for which I thank you. I didn't realize what a law unto scenario writer your word is until this mass of mail, quoting you as authority came to us. I have returned the compliment and advised all these poor lost souls who really wish to be enlightened to get in touch with the "Moving Picture World."
>
> If there were only some way we could separate the wheat from the chaff, for I am confident there are many people who are worthy of help. Many of them who could really do something if they only had a word of encouragement but the trouble is hundreds and hundreds of the people who ask for help are wasting their own time as well as the valuable minutes of the people to whom they appeal. It is a problem to know who to help and who to pass by. I suppose after all, the amateur who has something in him will learn to properly develop his ideas and write scenarios that are technically correct, without driving the editor to the insane asylum or an early grave.
>
> I read your column each week and I do wish we could impress upon the scenario writer, especially the beginner how much real help he could derive from keeping in touch with the "Moving Picture World". When I say "Moving Picture World" I mean the "photoplaywrights' column."

Mrs. Parsons still has a kind heart, but it has callouses on certain spots that used to respond to the wail of the unwise. She has gone out of the kind hearted business and she will brutally say "No" to any and all requests for personal criticism. Don't bother her with your troubles. She has done her full share of work in the past. She hits the nail on the head when she says that hundreds are wasting their own time and hers, and it is not possible to separate the sheep from the goats. It's a fine thing to feel that you have helped a brother to success, but sometimes we wonder if it is worth all the kicks and cuffs that come in lieu of thanks from those who simply cannot profit by help and who have not the sense to see that it is their fault and not ours. In the early days it was necessary to help the beginner to understand a new business, but that time is passed and the gates are going up.

A Campaign.

We know of one man who landed with both feet into the studio markets by a very simple plan. He had shopped his stuff indiscriminately. Now and then he could not help getting a good script, but his average was poor and his sales few. This was something more than a year ago.

He kept right on working, but he did not send out a thing. When he had an extra good idea he got it into the best shape he could and put it to one side. When he had thirty scripts of the sort that count he started in. Every Monday he mailed a script to a certain studio. If it came back he sent it to the second on his list, and then the third and the fourth. In three months editors came to look on him as a man who could turn out a script a week—and by that time he could. Before he was an "in and outer" and known to be such, and the editor doesn't cultivate the in and out writer. He wants the steadily good man.

Tap! Tap! Tap!

(Concluded from last week.)

Scene 68.—Bow of boat—showing searchlight machine, men in attendance. Forbes pacing back and forth—searchlight turned on suddenly—a stream of light across scene illuminating Forbes, he is startled, listens again, evincing actual terror and puts his hands to ears. Cut to:

Scene 70.—Same as 68. Forward deck.
Forbes listening shows momentary relief and staggers toward railing, leans upon it, gazing down into the water. Cut to:

Scene 71.—(Close range.) Flash of rushing water in circular space of searchlight. (Suggestion) Can't this be done by a vignette cap on camera, showing a circle of sharp light blending into darkness. Cut back to:

Scene 72.—Deck as before.
Forbes staring at water clutches the rail as a look of increased horror comes into his face. Cut back to:

Scene 73.—(Close range.) Water rushing by in the circular light—head and floating hair of a dead Hilda, face up, is almost in—in double exposure—(transparent vision)—and then fades out to rushing water which flashlight leaves in darkness of night. Cut back to:

Scene 74.—Deck as before.
Forbes staggers from rail, hands over eyes—Cut to:

Scene 75.—Flash of deck as in scene 69.
Daddy turns to resume walk forward.

Scene 76.—Deck as before as in scene 74.
Forbes with hands as before facing bow—shows he hears Daddy's cane and slowly takes hands a little away from his eyes, fingers curled in terror—Daddy stumps into scene behind him. Forbes cringes as he listens and slowly turns—as flashlight turning to show something else in the river, illuminates both in its shaft. Forbes registers madness of terror and staggers backward away from Daddy and in his panic jumps overboard (for European trade). (For American trade, he can strike the rail in such a manner before jumping, of accidental going overboard—if deemed necessary.)

Scene 77.—Close range water (not rushing)—as when with momentum of steamer. Forbes struggling in water is striking out to swim—Searchlight on suddenly.

Scene 78.—Deck.
Daddy registering "Man overboard" deck hands start to lower boat—Searchlight played frantically in direction of Forbes.

Scene 79.—RIVER GRASS. Full time in feet to this leader.
River (Night).
Searchlight shows Forbes is nearing a lot of river grass—frantically swimming. (Note: River grass could be any long fine thin grass or hay blackened and being water soaked and floating in masses on the water. Presumably river grass which has been cut.)

Scene 80.—Interior Adam's cottage. (Night.)
Hilda slips past Adam's mother who has fallen asleep on watch and exits.

Scene 81.—"I'M CAUGHT IN THE MESH OF HER LONG BLACK HAIR!"
River (Night).
Close range Forbes struggling in river grass—terror grows in his face as if quite mad—says leader, looks at searchlight on him. Scene dissolves quickly out into:

Scene 82.—River (Night).
Forbes entangled in the hair of a dead floating Hilda, struggling to free himself. First his legs are caught in it—as he tries to free them with his hands, his hands are entangled. Dissolve out top.

Scene 83.—GOING BACK TO DADDY.
Hilda rowing in small boat—the one she used before—looks strained, weary, yet determined, the searchlight falls on her.

Scene 84.—River (Night). Searchlight playing.
Forbes as before—swimming frantically—he begins to sink.
Dissolve out quickly to:

Scene 85.—River (Night). Searchlight.
Forbes all entangled in the hair of the dead Hilda is slowly being strangled by it and pulled under—as her body sinks—and he tries to free his throat from the long black strands. Dissolve quickly to:

Scene 86.—River (Night). River grass.
Hilda rows into scene—and searchlight reaches Forbes, who has come up after sinking once, horror stricken—spellbound then to the rescue—she pulls toward him and catches hold. Cut to:

Scene 87.—Deck of steamer (Night).
All looking down at water watching something. Daddy in foreground most intent of all. Cut to what they see:

Scene 88.—Water (Night)—Searchlight. (Camera on deck).
Hilda holding on to the unconscious Forbes as men from steamer row into the rescue.

Scene 89.—Flash of deck as before (Night).
Daddy too happy to speak—burries his face in his hands.

Scene 90.—"WILL YOU FORGIVE?"
Interior hulk kitchen.
Daddy and Hilda discovered with Forbes—he says leader—both show forgiveness—Daddy beams paternally—Adam's face is seen looking in at the window at all this—he sigh ssadly and walks away—Daddy turns and goes out—Forbes kisses Hilda's hair reverently and asks her to marry him—looks into her eyes and scene dissolves out into:

Scene 91.—Water in sunshine (Close range).
Hilda's head as she smiled at Forbes—a white tulle veil and wedding wreath on her head all spread out over her floating hair on the water.

THE END.

Inquiries

NOTE—No inquiries can be replied to by mail. Look for your answer here. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of the manuscript. Always give your name and address. It will not be published. A list of addresses, to which photoplays should be sent, will be supplied on receipt of a STAMPED AND SELF ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. The request should be made to the paper direct and not to this department, nor to the Answers Man.

G. R.—The company does not seem to be releasing at present.

E. D. M.—The best way to get started as a photoplay writer is to purchase a copy of Technique of the Photoplay and study it hard. Then practise and work still harder. Until you stop asking if film companies steal plays it will not do you much good to try to begin. The incident you refer to was the theft of a script by an employee of a company and the company paid all of the expenses of the prosecution on behalf of the author. The only "protection" you have lies in dealing only with reputable companies instead of shooting scripts to every name that has "film" connected with it in some way.

R. McM.—Your second question nullifies your first. There is no use knowing how to market your stuff until you learn that there are no printed forms on which scripts must be written. See reply to E. D. M. above.

W. M. M.—It is a bad plan to use dissolves or other tricks in pictures, but when you insist, simply write "dissolve in Alice standing by Jim's chair," or whatever it may be, or "dissolve in and out." Any use of dissolves or visions will reduce your chances of a sale.

F. G. S.—Your title is not so unique that it is not apt to be thought of by anyone else. We know one writer who lost three titles in one week. For that matter five stories all bearing the title, "The Greater Love," have been released within the past twenty months, to say nothing of those gone before. Try Kalem with that script. It is about your only chance.

C. L. C.—If the script comes back try Selig and Western Universal, then retire it. It seems to be almost too fanciful in its requirements. Write easy stuff and leave the special locations to the studio writers.

K. L. B.—Richard Willis writes that Miss Mona Darkfeather is of Spanish descent. She made a study of Indians and turned this to such good account in photoplays that she is generally regarded as an Indian.

A. H.—There are several "Adventures of Kathleen" stories. Which one do you mean?

J. T. G.—They change players so frequently at the Biograph that the Biograph Identifier has given up the job. In "Sealed Orders," L. C. Shumway was the Lt. Spier, Paul Parr Smith the spy, and Geo. Routh the girl's brother.

S. B.—We have no objection to your looking in the "next issue" for your replies, but it is apt to be a waste of time. The Keystone Identifier says the only "crook" in making a living was the crook in the handle of the cane Charles Chapman carried. The girl is said to be a Miss Barrett, but she is generally called "The Beautiful One." The Keystone Police are still in the Keystone station house. They did not follow their Chief it would seem.

R. W. S.—The Answers Man aims to be a compendium of useful information, but has no aspirations to be a Sherlock Holmes. Your question so clearly indicates a desire to do a little detective work that we must refer you to the company. A courteous request to them will bring an equally courteous reply.

E. L. B. W.—Naturally the clean and fresh looking script commands more respect than one which very clearly shows a long course of rejections. A suggestion to the Mutual Company that it make a film showing how pictures are produced would not entitle you to recompense for the Keystone, even if several hundred others had not made the same suggestion before you. See the Vitagraph and Edison subjects along the same lines. If you do not read this paper you are not entitled to ask questions.

RUBEENA—It's a real sacrifice to give up seeing pictures during lent, but Easter will soon be here. Forget that manuscript and write another. The first one seldom sells. Mr. Walthall is with Reliance.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Company Rule.

IT IS an established rule of the Moving Picture World and of this department that no appartus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to a member of the staff.

Important Notice.

It is impossible to reply to letters through the department in less than two weeks, and sometimes three. In order to give prompt service those sending 4 cents in stamps to cover cost will receive a carbon copy of the department reply by mail.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready, and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps to the editor.

Question No. 25.

Best answers will be published and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Explicit permission to use the name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used.

Suppose your entire theater consumed a total of 5,000 watts, and that the owner came into possession of a 70 volt, 200 ampere dynamo and an 8 h.p. kerosene or gasoline engine which he believes might be utilized to supply current for the theater. He asks your opinion and advice. You have already asked for a raise in salary, basing the increase on your ability. What would your answer be? Generator is in excellent condition, as is the engine, and former is compound-wound.

Note—Now, don't swell up and say: "This is not the operator's business," for you will be wrong. Chief operators in cities, and many operators in smaller towns will have to handle these plants in the future, and many of them are doing it right now. Chief operators in cities have men to run the projectors, as a rule, they only working relief and overseeing things. They get more salary than ordinary shift operators, too. And, anyhow, whether the operator actually handles the plant or not, he ought, by all means, to know these things.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 19.

Question No. 19 seems to have been something of a poser. L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York, sent in an excellent answer, and Harry Dobson, Toronto, Canada, replied correctly, as did also Jos. H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas. W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey, contributed the best answer.

Reply To Question No. 19.

By W. S. James, Camden, N. J.

The question:

Suppose your motor-generator ran fine for a time after installation, but presently the brushes began to spark, and a black mark appeared on either side of the commutator, directly opposite to each other. The trouble spreads quickly to include about one-quarter of the commutator, and the generator will not pick up its load, or, if it does, the brushes flame badly. We will assume that brush shifting has been tried and the armature tests out clear, so far as shorts and grounds be concerned. What is the trouble and its remedy? How does a shorted shunt field coil on a compound-wound generator affect the other field coils? What general effect does it have on the generator?

The answer:

As to the first part of Question 19, I think the trouble would probably be due to what is known as the idle coil in the commutator which will cause initial sparking. If this is not the case then most likely it is due to operating the generator below its normal voltage. This does not allow sufficient fringing of the magnetic field of the main poles to allow of the proper commutation of the current, if the machine be of the non-commutating pole type. The remedy is, in the first case, to locate the coil and connect it so to make it do its share of the work; in the second instance the initial sparking may be stopped by slight under-cutting of the mica in the commutator, say about 1/32 of an inch. When the initial sparking occurs it causes the copper of the commutator to be eaten away, which leaves the mica insulation projecting above its surface. This is known as high mica and causes the brushes to flame badly, due to the mica holding the brushes away from the surface of the commutator. If the mica be so high that the e. m. f. generated is not strong enough to drive the current across the air gap the generator will fail to pick up its load. A short circuit in the shunt windings would, if they were in series with each other, cause the short circuited coil to run very cool, while the remaining coils would get hot. If one coil of a four-pole machine were short-circuited it would reduce the shunt field resistance so that more current would flow in the remaining coils, and this is what causes the remaining coils to get hot. If the shunt coils were in shunt with each other, connected in multiple with themselves, and then connected in short shunt with the series coils, the short on one of the coils would cause the generator to lose its field. The connections for a short shunt connection are: From the line to the series coils and from the series coils to the brushes, with one side of the shunt coils to the same brush, and the other side of the shunt coils to the other brush, and from this brush to the line. By sketching this on paper you will see that a short on any of the coils would cut out the entire field. Again, if the short shunt coils were in shunt with each other, but connected "long short," i. e., line to one end of series coils and to one side of shunt coils; other end of series coils to brush, and other end of shunt coils to the other brush and from this brush to the line. A short on the shunt field would cause the generator to throw its belt, if belt driven, or stop if motor driven, by reason of the generator working so hard under control of the series coils only. The general effect is to cause heating and loss of efficiency. I neglected to say that if a coil were short circuited within itself the part that was not shorted would remain cool, while the remainder of the windings would get hot.

I think friend James should have stated that under-cutting of the mica is not a thing the average operator should undertake to do, as it is a very delicate operation. As to the coil end of the answer I will let our electrician correspondents check that up.

Films Buckling.

Cyrus H. Flandreaux, Peekskill, New York, has trouble as follows:

Here is a question with relation to Power's Five machine. Though we have had film buckling trouble before, I could always remedy the difficulty, but it has got my goat this time. We have put in new aperture plate, put beeswax on tension springs, and new guide rollers on the gate; in fact I have tried everything I can think of to stop the buckling. One can only detect the in and out of focus effect when he is about 25 feet from the screen. It shows most at the middle top of the picture. I hope you will answer my question in your next issue.

If the brother will read the notice at the head of the department he would see that it takes from two to three weeks to reply to questions through the department. There are usually about one hundred articles awaiting publication. It is quite difficult to say just what this trouble is due to. I should say probably, however, your tension springs either don't set exactly even on the tracks, or else one or both of them are not exactly straight up and down. Sometimes if the springs, either one or both of them, incline slightly—that is to say are farther apart at the top than at the bottom, it will cause buckling, and—sometimes it won't. Sometimes if the springs set just a little to one side of the center of the track it will cause buckling and—sometimes it won't. It is possible, though not at all probable, that there is something under your aperture plate, so that when you draw the screws down it springs the plate slightly. Take it off and be sure that nothing of this kind exists.

A Live Bunch.

J. B. Day, operator Gem Theater, Sherman, Texas, who has just finished the first real holiday he has had in several years, writes:

Just received the question booklets (the order was for four different Sherman operators.—Ed.) and the boys are more than pleased with them. They ask me to say to you, "Let the good work go on." By the way, you had better get four of those "Lessons in Practical Electricity," which you recommend, for there will be an order on the way shortly.

All of which indicates that the Sherman boys are a live bunch who are bent on improving themselves. They are willing to spend a portion of their earnings to improve their knowledge of their profession. I know quite a number who are willing to spend a very considerable portion of their earnings for liquid refreshments which do neither themselves nor anyone else except the man behind the bar any good, but who would consider it a frightful waste of money to pay an equal sum for the Handbook, or any other work calculated to improve their knowledge of their business. My compliments to the Sherman men. They are the right sort. Sherman managers are to be congratulated on having that type of men in their operating rooms.

Film Cement.

The Edison Company, Orange, New Jersey, informs the department that it is now prepared to fill orders for the Edison film cement in gallon crocks, one pound and one ounce bottles, at $9.00, $1.00 and 25 cents respectively. There is, of course, a suitable discount to the trade. The Edison cement is known as an excellent article. That company also furnishes a film mender at $4.00, though the editor of the department has not yet seen this device and, therefore, cannot say just how desirable it may be from the operator's point of view.

From a Cameraman.

George K. Hollister, a Kalem camera operator, who is a member of the New York Cinema Camera Club, writes from Jacksonville, Florida.

> This letter is in reference to "Out of Focus Effect," page 805, February 14th issue. As you have asked a reply to Out of Focus I wish to state that Mr. Loeb is correct, as the scenes stated are really out of focus, and I am sorry to say that in some cases so much so that same should never be used. Still, for all that, I will try to explain why a scene slightly out of focus is allowed to pass, and if Mr. Exhibitor, as well as the public, really knew the circumstances pertaining to those scenes which seem out from time to time, they would have no hard feelings for the cameraman responsible for the work. When the scene out of focus shows that it was taken in sunlight, then, of course, it may be considered bad photography, and, therefore, the fault of the cameraman. To cite a case illustrative: We had traveled to the Sea of Galilee, a two days' wagon journey from Jerusalem, to play three scenes in "From the Manger to the Cross." It was late in the afternoon when our director had things ready, the delay being due to scouring the vicinity for proper types of natives, etc. Our guide, before leaving Jerusalem, had arranged for 150 natives and many camels for a certain afternoon, so it was now up to me to get those three scenes, or make that trip all over again. Well, the country was infested with robbers, and the road so bad that the men walked many miles up and down hills in preference to keeping their seats, so what would not the cameraman do in a case like this? I took those scenes in weak light, sacrificing sharpness to some extent. They were not really bad, and it saved not only a return trip, but $190 for the company as well. There is hardly a week goes by but what some cameraman does not find himself cornered in similar fashion. So I am going to ask you, Mr. Exhibitor, to be a little patient at times. The path of the cameraman is not always strewn with roses, and when you see a scene slightly out of focus, think of those scenes he secured from an aeroplane or from a balloon, or from the pilot of an engine, tied fast with his camera, or climbing the Alps, or many other places where he risks his life to entertain the public. These may make up for the few bad ones. We are the ones who suffer the biffs and bangs when even a little scene is not just up to the standard, and when you take into consideration the hundreds of scenes we make during the year under condition that space would not permit of explaining, I sometimes wonder how we get through as well as we do. No one knows who we are. Our names never go with our work. Still we are just as important as the leading man or woman who reap all the glory, with good photography to help raise their salary, and, at the finish, it may be to notice in the advance criticisms of that particular picture where we expected much, to find what interests us most, "Photography, Fair."

I am glad to give space to brother Hollister's letter, very glad indeed. There is a great deal of truth in what he says. I am not a cameraman, but I know those boys have troubles of their own, and plenty of 'em too. I know also that we get the habit (a mighty good habit too, by the way) of demanding perfection in every thing. If we were at all lenient with faults you may take it from me, those faults would quickly multiply. Perhaps one reason for quick criticism of faults with cameramen's work lies in the fact that very few of us know anything about the cameraman and his work. I, myself, have only recently become interested in the man behind the camera, but I am discovering that he is a pretty good sort of scout at that, and from time to time he will receive such attention as we are able to give him in this department.

Illuminating.

The editor has often been asked the question: "How can film producers afford to spend thousands of dollars in the production of a single-reel subject?" It is puzzling to the uninitiated, but I ran across something to-day which is interesting and throws considerable light on the sales end of the film producing business.

The New York Journal has entered upon the scheme of publishing a daily short novel, based on one of the Pathe reels. The scheme is: Read the story (novelette) during the day and then see the thing enacted on the screen at night. In furtherance of that plan the Journal publishes a list of the various theatres where the subject for the day can be viewed in the evening. I counted the list of theatres showing one of the subjects and there were approximately 160 theaters showing that picture that day, in Greater New York City alone, which means that Pathe sold that many reels to New York City exchanges alone. In fact the producer sold New York exchanges many more copies than that for those exchanges serve a large territory outside the city. Now if this subject contained 1,000 feet of film and the producer got ten cents per foot (the established price I believe) it brought in $100.00 per reel, and, for New York City alone, 100 times 160 ($16,000) dollars, plus probably as much again for reels used in outside territory. It is perfectly safe to estimate the income to the producer from that one reel at $40,000 for New York State alone.

From this it will be seen that producers can well afford to expend considerable sums on even a single-reel production. However it must not be imagined that the product of all producing companies has any such sale as this. Far from it. Only the old, established firms can show such sales, or anything like such sales.

It is interesting to speculate on the probable total of a single subject, if New York City alone consumes 160 reels, remembering that the films of this producer, at least, have sale all over the civilized world. Certainly it must run far up into the thousands. I think, however, that the selling price in foreign countries is very much lower than here in the good old U. S. A., where we are shining examples of the tribe called Easy Marks.

An Error.

On page 945, January 24th issue, under the heading "Rectifier Connections," I instructed Texas to try connecting lead 36 of his rheostat to stud 16, and lead 34 to stud 29. The first is an error; it should have read lead 32 to stud 14, "36" being a stud.

Broke a Record.

M. Swaringen, Rock Hill, South Carolina, writes:

> Enclosed is a clipping from one of our daily newspapers, with reference to an operator in this little village who broke the world's record in changing films on a moving picture machine. He claims, with proof, that he made the change in 14 seconds, and that this is the world's record. He also claims that the previous record was 16 seconds. The writer is an operator in one of the opposition houses to that in which the supposed world's record was made. He has been keeping in close touch with the Projection Department, and, knowing this is not the world's record, asks of you to publish this, also in connection therewith the real world's record in changing film. There are three shows in this town, and projection is very good.

Well, brother Swaringen, the gentleman has not broken any world's record, because, so far as I know, there has not been any world's record made. In order to make a "world's record" it would be necessary to hold a film changing tournament, with all contestants using either the same machine, or duplicate machines located in exactly the same position. That is to say, the same height from the floor, same kind of magazine, reels, etc. But, after all, I am not interested in that kind of stunt to any large extent. What good does it do, or what does it prove, assuming that the man did change reels in 14 seconds? Does that prove that he is a good operator? By no manner of means. It simply proves that he is very nimble and quick, and, presumably, that he had practiced quick film changing. But you take him off the particular machine he made that change on, and put him on another one of different make and differently located, and there might be a very vast difference. No, there is no world's record and there won't be any until a film changing tournament is held, and I guess that will never be.

The Trouble Fixer.

E. F. McAtee, Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania, writes:

> We are in trouble, and when this is the case there is only one right place to go and that is to the "Trouble Fixer." For the projection arc and fans we have for years been getting d. c. from our electric light company, which, in order to give us d. c. had to run a special machine, which they claimed they did at a loss. On February 15, they informed us they would stop supplying d. c., and that we would be compelled to use 110 volt a. c. We must have d. c. and want you to tell us what is the best device to get. Every one we talk to advises something different, but we figure that with your wide experience you would know what is best for us to do. We want something we can place in the operating room, and which won't take up too much room, but we desire the best apparatus we can buy which will change a. c. to d. c.

Now suppose I answered this question in the department and told brother McAtee what I considered the best device for the changing of a. c. to d. c., what would happen? Why the manufacturer of the device I named would send me a letter which I could use to sweeten my coffee, and the manufacturers of other devices would send a bunch of bricks via the air route. It can't be did without a make-up, and the make-up in this case would have to be of boiler plate.

There are a number of good devices, viz: the G. E. mercury arc rectifier, motor generator sets made by friend Hallberg, the Fort Wayne Electric Company, and the General Electric Company; also the Wagner rotary converter. I would suggest that in purchasing a motor generator set that you inquire closely as to its efficiency, and inform the manufacturer that you will insist upon an iron-clad guarantee in this respect. The mercury arc rectifier has a high efficiency, but, of course, the life of the tubes is limited, and they cost a little more than $25.00 each. However, they are supposed to give five hundred hours' service. Some of them give much less than this, and some give several times that number of hours. To date not one of the makers of motor generator sets has demonstrated the efficiency of their machines to this department and until they do so I place it roughly at 66⅔%.

From Ontario.

J. A. Morrison, Meaford, Ontario, Canada, sends $3.50 for subscription to the World, and writes thusly:

> I consider this money as the best expenditure I make. I would rather pay $5.00 than be without the World. I have changed my screen from the front of the stage to the back, and painted the sides and ceiling black, also a black border around the curtain up to the edge of the picture, and have set my machine so that the pictures come even with the stage floor. This, I think, gives more of a stage appearance. You would think at times that the performers in the pictures were really walking on the stage. I can recommend the plan to others. I only run two nights a week, use nothing but features and charge 15 and 25 cents. I believe it is what the people want, and they consider it good value for the money.

The plan of brother Morrison's is to be commended. I would, however, prefer to drape the sides and ceiling with black cloth, rather than to blacken it with paint; the effect is, on the whole, considerably better. The plan brother Morrison followed will be found set forth on page 340 of the Handbook. It is effective, and the locating of the picture at the floor level is a good idea, but if the picture be at the rear of the stage this latter is only practical where the auditorium floor is high enough (or the stage low enough) so that the eyes of the people will not be below the level of the stage floor.

Blow Torches.

Harold Salters, Richmond, Ind., orders a Handbook and wants to know if it is still possible to get one of the little blow torches.

I have not time to bother with any more of those torches, but if the brother will remit $1.00 to the Solderall Company, 143 Liberty Street, New York City, he will be accommodated. Just ask for the nickel plated blow torch which goes with their Solderall outfit.

Condensers.

W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey, writes:

> I take issue with you in not giving Professor Wall sufficient credit for his article, page 170, January 10th issue, relating to the e. f. of the condenser combination. In my estimation this is of the utmost importance. Take the example used: Consider the e. f. of the combination as 3½ inches, then measure 3½ inches from the center of the combination to the arc, and when the arc is so located it matches the combination, according to my way of figuring, and there would be no cause whatever for racking the lamp back and forth in the lamp house. When all this is placed correctly, it only becomes necessary to move the lamp house to a position where the spot will be the correct size at the machine aperture. And now let us revert to the scheme, "Very Important," page 1540, December 27th issue. If this condenser light ray matches the objective light ray, then things are O. K. If not, it is necessary to figure on another combination. Again consider the example in Professor Wall's article. If the e. f. of the combination be 3½ inches, the back condenser being 6 inches focal length, with ½ inch light gap between the condensers, then one-half of the light gap is one-fourth of an inch. One-half the thickness of the lens is approximately ¼ inch, so that we have ½ plus ¼ equals ¾, which we deduct from the 3½ e. f. of the combination, leaving a remainder of 2¾ inches, which would be the distance of the arc from the condenser. I have tried this out three different times and find it works O. K.

I cannot see the importance of this matter, Brother James. In the first place, taking your own figures, if you set the arc 2¾ inches from the surface of the back condenser your light would emerge from the front of the condenser in parallel rays, so you would have to pull your lamp back enough to converge your light at the spot. Moreover, I see no necessity for setting the arc by measurement, and if you do so it is highly improbable that your measurement would not vary, since the crater itself will vary. I don't agree with you this time. I cannot see where the e. f. of the combination is of importance. Possibly I am wrong, but you have not proven that fact to me yet. If you do I will apologize like a puffec' gen'leman. Brother James also sends in another letter on copper fuses, as follows:

> Just a few lines to let the boys know Camden is still on the map. (Huh! Ed.). On page 43 of the Handbook you say, "The mono-cycle system can only be used on induction motors. Only three-phase motors can be used on three-phase current." I wish to correct this statement, since a three-phase motor can be used on single-phase current by splitting the phase; also a single-phase motor or mercury arc (which is only made single-phase) may be used on any one of the poly-phase circuits. The following may be useful to your readers under certain conditions. It shows the fusing capacity of smaller sizes of copper wire. It should always be remembered that copper reaches a very high temperature before it melts. Consequently it is necessary that a copper fuse be covered with fireproofing of some sort.

Size Wire B. & S. Gauge.	Fusing Current in Amperes.
30	10
28	15
26	20
25	25
24	30
22	40
21	50
20	60
19	70
18	80
17	100
16	120
15	140
14	160
13	200

> Almost any strength fuse can be made by adding one or more together. Glad to see one of the many who wrote for the slide writer was able to make it work. I notice that friend Johnston springs one of his usual stunts, page 675, February 7th issue. No, I have not tried it, but he can gamble I will. Won't be able to get the 300 amperes, but can get 200 with ease here, as it is flat rate. Has anyone tried bleaching a positive and then redeveloping, using colored shutters?

The copper fusing information is very good, but that kind of fusing should only be used in an emergency, and should be used with great care. It won't do to guess at the size of the wire, it must be measured accurately since a very slight difference in size makes a considerable difference in carrying capacity.

Light Trouble.

Toronto, Canada, says:

> Just got one of your Handbooks, which I expect to spend many nights and mornings studying. A short time since, you said an ordinary battery bell could not be used on 110 volt circuit. You are in error there. I have three of them working on that voltage now. I do this by connecting a 110 volt lamp in series with the bell on d. c. On a. c. you have to take the wire off the contact breaker and connect the magnets with the lamp. It works very well. Tried Brother Johnston's experiment with the telephone receiver on my generator, but could hear nothing but the singing of the machine. Am having a little trouble with the generator. Perhaps you can help me. It is a 50 ampere, 60 volt compound wound, and the trouble is very much like that mentioned by Calgary, page 171, January 10th issue. The arc will burn all right for a time, and then it will start to wander, climbing up one side of the upper carbon (have used Bio, Electro, Plania, and Areo), then it will hiss, flickering badly about every two seconds, and I can do nothing with it. If the carbons are brought too close together the arc goes dead for a few seconds. My lower carbons burn rather flat at the end, more like an a. c. point. I cannot use half inch carbons, for by the time they get burning right it is time to trim again. Now don't tell me I am connected upside-down. Others I know seem to have the same trouble, though their generators are not the same. I use a little resistance in my circuit since the arc flames badly without.

That flat point really looks like "upside-down," but you say it isn't, and certainly you ought to know. The arc going dead when your carbons are brought too close, sounds like a shunt wound generator working up to and above its capacity, and yet you say it is compound wound. Good evening, Mrs. Murphy. Where is my hat? I am going! I will just pass this puzzle up to the department fans, and see what they can make out of it.

Later: Try a ¾ carbon cored above and a ⅝ below and see what happens.

Information Wanted.

William L. Perman, Junction City, Oregon, who styles himself "manager, owner, operator, and janitor" of a little theater in a town of less than 1000, but who is about to move into a new concrete theater building, writes:

> What size picture would you recommend for a 62 foot throw, and what size for a 74 foot throw? Is No. 6 wire the best size for a projection circuit 110 feet in length, using about 40 amperes through a Fort Wayne compensarc; current 110 volt 60 cycle a. c.?

As to the throw; if you mean what difference would there be as between a house, the seating space of which is 62 feet long and one in which the seating space is 74 feet long, the difference would not be sufficient to require any consideration at all. I think in a small town like that I would rather project a brightly illuminated 10, 11 or 12 foot picture than a larger one. The general results under the conditions, I think, would be best met by a 10 foot picture, unless you can use more than 40 amperes a. c. As to the circuit, your 40 amperes on the secondary of a compensarc would be only about 13 amperes on the primary side, so that between the supply and the compensarc a No. 8 wire would be ample in size. However, the cost is not very much more, and I think, if I were you, I would use the No. 6. You might in the future want to install something else in your operating room, and I am a great believer in putting in wires of more than ample size.

Instruction Books.

Robert D. Robinson, Standish, New York, orders the Handbook and asks:

> I have not been satisfied with the results I get on the screen. I like the series of questions you are running very much. Do you know whether any of the machine manufacturers have instruction books on their new machines?

You will find the instructions you seek in the Handbook. The Nicholas Power Company puts out an instruction book on its No. Six, but the machine instruction matter contained is the same as that in the Handbook. I believe the Simplex Company also uses the Handbook instructions for the Simplex machine; at least they secured the right to do so.

Camera Work.

C. Mack Day, Ravenna, Ohio, hands Mr. Camera-man a bunch as follows:

> Mr. Loeb, page 805, February 14th issue, is right about the different camera propositions. As to the out-of-focus effect due to wrong focusing of the camera, it cannot be sharpened on the screen. But the fault might be caused by several different things; for instance, we frequently find in close view scenes that the background is sharp, while the object itself is out of focus, whereas it should be just the reverse. This is the fault of the camera man, and is due to either carelessness or ignorance, usually the former. Where the entire picture is out of focus it might be due to the buckling of the film in the camera, or to not having the lens properly focused. Many camera men have their lenses marked for different distances, and depend entirely upon this marking. This is wrong, since the marking method is not reliable. The effect might also be caused in the printing, due to the negative and positive films not being in perfect contact. There are also other possible reasons for the out-of-focus effect, but I think I will run the Good Night slide before you run it for me.

For all of which we thank brother Day. I do not claim to be an authority in matters pertaining to the camera, but what he says sounds reasonable, and is, I presume, correct.

Side Ink.

A. R. Lyon, Transcocona, Manitoba, Canada, writes recommending Devoe & Company's Sho-Card Ink for writing on slides. Very likely this ink is good, but I have just discovered an ink made by the Thaddeus Davids Company which gives perfect results, so why seek further?

A Change.

Mr. F. M. McClintic, who has for a long time been manager of the Park Row Theater, across the street from the General Post Office, New York City, has assumed management of the Regent Theater, 116th Street and 7th Avenue, the house made noteworthy by Mr. Rothapfel. Brother McClintic is a real manager. His theater was one of the very few places in New York where I could take a visitor and show him what I considered to be high class projection. The editor of this department wishes friend McClintic every possible success in his new field. The new Regent management has inaugurated the publication of a four-page paper, "The Regent Weekly." This little sheet is well gotten up, sets forth the attractions of and at the Regent, and is mailed to patrons every week.

Dangerous.

Saluda, South Carolina, writes, saying that he had a fuse trouble similar to that of Brother Allen, except that instead of having both wires fused he had only one. Says he remedied the trouble by tapping around the fuse block with a heavy piece of fuse wire. Saluda is operating a little theater in a town of 1200, giving three shows a week, but is trying to sell enough commutation tickets, at 50 cents for six shows, to enable him to give a show every night. He is operating a McVicker gasoline engine and a 110 volt generator with transformer. Also has a storage battery for lighting the building and for emergencies. He gives the cost of operating as $1.60 per show, itemized as follows: two gallons of gasoline 40 cents, oil about 20 cents, wages of a man to run the engine 50 cents, but he does not state how many hours of operation that covers. Nor do I understand why he uses a transformer—presumably an economizer. He should have a 60 or 70 volt d. c. generator, though of course that would not allow him to charge a storage battery. Having only one wire fused is contrary to the Underwriters' rules and is not a safe way to operate. I would recommend that Saluda send $2.50 to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for a copy of the Handbook, if he has not one, and that he study fuses, pages 56 to 64, carefully. This is evidently another case of a man trying to do the best he can without adequate knowledge. Nor would it be at all possible for him to employ a competent operator. He is doing a good work in supplying a little community with an acceptable form of amusement—probably the only form they have, and he is entitled to, and ought to have, all the help that can possibly be given. Anything that increases his knowledge of projection operates to provide that little community with a better show, and what is true in his case is true in hundreds of similar small towns where the revenue is not sufficient to allow of the employment of competent help.

Can't Be Beat.

Dundas, Ontario, Canada, sends 25 cents for the questions and writes:

> I have your Handbook and in my opinion it can't be beat. Have adopted your suggestion of getting electrical books from the library. Have two Power's Six A machines, and one of them has a grind in the toggle gear. Tried the advice given to Woodstock and it helped, but there is still some grind. We have the latest equipment money can buy, and about third run films; yet the people stay away. The picture is brilliant, the current being taken through a motor generator. Our operating room is hard to beat. The switches are encased in steel boxes and wire all in conduit, and, but for the slight grind are O. K. Seat between 700 and 800. The president of our union gave me a shutter which comes as near eliminating flicker as anything I have ever seen, but it is his device, therefore I cannot give it out.

As to the grind, it is possible that the machine you have is equipped with one of the fibre or rawhide toggle gears which were used by N. Power Company at one time. These gears were good in some ways, but developed a fault, viz: they would absorb moisture and swell slightly. I cannot give you any further advice than that contained in instructions No. 23 and 24, pages 273 and 275, of the Handbook. Glad to know you have such an excellent outfit, and trust you will use it to the best possible advantage in delivering the goods on the screen. Possibly your manager has not yet struck just the right scheme for inducing patronage. Would suggest that he study back numbers of our "Advertising for Exhibitors" carefully. He might find just the right idea.

Carbon Trouble.

W. C. Evans, Cushing, Oklahoma, writes:

> Am having considerable trouble with my carbons, a piece of which is enclosed to show you how they are burning. (The letter was open and the carbon missing when I got it.—Ed.). They burn down as far as three inches, and then break off. Am using 5/8 by 12 inch carbons and keep them good and tight in the lamp. Current 110 volts a. c. Could this trouble be caused by the carbons being stored in a damp room, or what would cause it? In January 24th issue, you publish my kick concerning some operator in this vicinity who is damaging practically new film. Either you or myself made an error. We only get our films from Cleveland on Mondays when they are in bad condition, and they come from Bartlesville O K during the week. Please correct.

Frankly, Brother Evans, I don't know. Never had any carbons act that way. It is barely possible you have gotten hold of a defective lot. No, I do not think moisture would make them break, and if that was the cause of the trouble, all you would have to do to stop it would be to dry them out thoroughly by lying on top of the lamp house or in an oven. Keeping your carbon lamps tight is all right, but in addition to that they must be kept perfectly clean inside. See Handbook, page 198 to 201 inclusive. I am referring your letter to the carbon manufacturer, with request that he communicate with you. This mistake is on you, neighbor Evans. Your former letter distinctly said "Our reels are shipped from Bartlesville only on Mondays, and they come from Cleveland O K, etc." And—there you are.

From St. Johns, N. B.

St. Johns, N. B. Canada, now has a moving picture theater de luxe; it is the Imperial; seats 1,800, has a seven-piece orchestra and is in general a thoroughly up-to-date house. It is lighted inside and outside by 1,800 incandescents, the same being controlled from the operating room. The projection equipment consists of two Simplex machines, current for which is supplied by Westinghouse motor generator set, the motor being a 50 h.p. induction, taking 2,200 volt supply. The generator is a 35 k.w. 3 wire, the neutral being connected to two equalizing coils which are connected to four collector rings on the shaft of the generator. The operating room is 15 feet long, 8 feet deep and 7 feet high. It is in charge of Brother A. I. Mason, who is mighty proud of his new plant. I would like to have full explanation of that generator connection, illustrated by sketch, if the operator will be so kind.

Light Dimmer.

Kansas sends for the list of questions and writes:

> As a rule when I get into a difficulty I dig out the answer for myself; if I fail I then resort to asking questions. I failed this time. I wish to make a dimmer for the house lights, believing that I can get a nice effect that way. There are twenty-four 40 watt lamps. What kind and how much wire shall I use, voltage 110? Why are most dimmer contacts made in two sections with a contact on each end of the lever? Why do most all sub-titles on Edison films set crooked on the screen, and on some letters and some titles where the lettering is black with light backing, the same reading will appear in white, and seem to be going down the screen?

I am not very well posted on dimmers. I could figure out the size and amount of wire, but if you will write the Driver-Harris Company, Harrison, New Jersey, manufacturers of Climax resistance wire, they can supply you with the data offhand, and their resistance wire is excellent for such purposes. You can also use soft iron wire, which can be purchased from any hardware store. I think the size equal to No. 10 B. & S. would be about right. Put up a lot of insulating knobs on a wall temporarily, located as far apart as is convenient, say not less than five or six feet, and stretch the wire on them. Put the insulators in two rows, each one about 3 or 4 inches higher than the other, and then zig-zag from one to the other. Now cut one wire of your lamp circuit and connect one end to one end of the wire, and then touch the other end to the other end of the iron wire and keep moving it back, cutting out resistance, until the lamp filaments show dull red; this will be the proper amount of resistance, and you can then cut off the surplus, take the wire down and wind it up into coils, mount them on a suitable frame, exactly the same as you would mount rheostat coils, making contact buttons and an adjusting lever. Attach one end of the cut circuit wire to one end of the first coil, and the other end to the contact lever, and you have your dimmer. It is arranged exactly the same as Figure 48 in the Handbook, except that when the lever is over to contact 4, all the resistance would be cut out. I do not remember what the purpose of the two double contacts you speak of is. I would suggest, however, that a 12 inch C. & H. field regulator made by the Cutler-Hammer Mfg. Company, Chicago, equipped with a lever such as is used on their single-plate dimmer, types 3 and 4, would meet your requirements, and be better than a home-made affair. They cost, I think, about $9.00. As to the Edison matter, I have had no other complaints of this kind, but will refer the matter to the Edison Company.

Making Splices.

Joseph L. Liss, Chicago, Ill., writes to the Inquiry Department, asking:

> Could you tell me the correct method of using acetone for splicing films so that the splice does not show? Have tried different methods without results. Must you use other chemicals? If so, what?

Inquiries relative to matters of this kind belong to the Projection Department and should be addressed thereto in order to save delay. I do not remember about acetone, though the matter was published in the department quite a while ago. My impression and memory of the matter is that acetone can be used alone, and that it makes an excellent splice. Those having had experience with acetone will kindly give us the right dope on this again. Also send the same to friend Liss, at 1730 West 18th Street, Chicago, Illinois.

American Moving Picture Machine Company to Resume.

New York writes:

> Enclosed find a thin strip of film which I found inside my Standard Four machine. What is it that cuts the film thus? Now that the American Moving Picture Machine Company have stopped manufacturing machines and parts, where can operators purchase parts to replace those which are worn out? I am in need of a chain take-up for my machine. What shall I do? What is the cause of my picture beginning to jump up and down when the speed of my Standard Four is raised to 80 per minute? Intermittent new and set up snugly; tension springs not loose.

In the first place it is hard to say what shaved off that little thin strip of film; it is not over 1/16 of an inch wide. Never saw anything just like it before. Examine your gate and film tracks carefully; in fact look carefully all along the tracks the film follows throughout the machine. I am informed that the American Moving Picture Machine Company will probably resume business, with a new factory and increased capital. You secure parts by sending down to the old factory any day about 11 o'clock, provided, of course, they have the parts you want in stock. The reason for the jump, in all probability, is that, while your tension springs might not be loose, still they are not sufficiently tight to do the work at that speed.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

"SUPPRESSED NEWS" (Selig), March 10.—A newspaper story which is interesting, with a plot that contains a preponderance of excitement. Robt. Hagan is author and Oscar Eagle, director. A young reporter gathers a scoop and then deliberately "cans" it for love's sake; but unconsciously does the right thing and counteracts a large amount of trouble from a man who later becomes his father-in-law. His sweetheart, the banker's daughter, assists him into trouble then yanks him out again at the psycological moment. It is well produced and the acting is finely done. Good offering. Harold Vosburgh and Adrienna Kroell distinguish themselves in the leads. Their support is adequate.

"THE HUNTING SPIDERS" (Pathe), March 10.—Prepared by Raymond L. Ditmars, Curator of Reptiles, New York Zoological Society. This is an educational picture demonstrating the habits of spiders. Very interesting for those who care for them.

"THE MEXICAN'S GRATITUDE" (Edison), March 10.—Directed by R. R. Ridgely, one of the O. Henry stories is offered. It borders on the "wild and wooly western" series. Frio Kid is an awful villain, who has embarked on a fervid career. He makes it interesting for his successful rival and bride on their wedding day by shooting three guests and promising to return in three years to shoot the husband. Through the gratitude of a Mexican whom the bride has befriended this catastrophe is averted. Bigelow Cooper, Mabel Trunnelle, Richard Tucker and Herbert Prior did excellent work.

"SLUMBERVILLE'S SCARE" (Lubin), March 10.—This is a very funny offering and its theme is original. It is also plausible, although it is long drawn out in several instances in the chase scenes. It caused almost continuous laughter and was applauded at the end. The photography is excellent and the rural backgrounds are well selected.

"A DANGEROUS CASE" (Lubin), March 10.—This comedy is on the same reel with "Slumberville's Scare," and very amusing; hinging on the "dance craze." A husband attempts to deceive his wife, assisted by a couple of friends. The termination is very funny and about as successful on their part as such attempts to deceive a woman are usually. Continual laughter was the accompaniment.

"THE COUNTER-MELODY" (Essanay), March 10.—A rather peculiar plot this, which carries the spectator from Holland to America and concerns the welfare of Franz, a musician of promise and Hilda ,his sweetheart. The story is pretty but is vamped around inconsistently for the purpose of finally accomplishing a pleasing finale that is impossible, unless effected by a miracle. E. H. Calvert is Franz, and Ruth Stonehouse portrays Hilda; both are excellent.

"AN AFFAIR OF DRESS" (Edison), March 10.—The third of "Dolly of the Dailies" series. It continues on from the second release published in the issue of March 14, 1914. (See page 1284.) It is very interesting, and shows some well done scenes throughout. Dolly gets a real job of reporting. It will last until the next offering, at least, and will please.

"ART FOR A HEART" (Vitagraph), March 11.—Wallie Van and Lillian Walker make fun in this comedy. They are artists, in the same building. When Lillian follows the ordinary rules of painting she fails. Wallie, who has attended an exhibition where cubist stuff hangs, gets a "big idea." What he does in the way of "daring execution" is enough. Before he gets through with the contents of his ice-box, which he slams and splotches all over the canvas, he has a "work" which takes the thousand-dollar prize. True, the moon may hang in the middle of a hillside; celery may take the place of trees, smeared on with jam, but the result could hardly fail to take a prize in a cubist outfit. The picture pleased a big audience.

"ANDY, THE ACTOR" (Edison), March 11.—Shows the troupe Andy is traveling with, the play that the troupe is pulling off, the audience that sees the play and some of the things that are thrown at the players. It made the audience laugh, and that is all it wanted. Mark Swan is the author and it was produced by Charles France. The photography is clear.

"ABIDE WITH ME" (Pathe), March 11.—A picture of sentiment that attempts to draw realistic scenes and at the same time to let the light from the Beyond shine through them. To say that it is wholly successful would hardly be true; yet with solemn music it is fairly impressive. Such offerings need strong acting and these players, though very fair, were not human enough at the critical moments to make us forget that they were only players. The photography of this print is not clear enough; but some of the scenes have lovely lighting and there are some effective double exposure scenes.

"THE GIRL, THE COP AND THE BURGLAR" (Essanay), March 11.—An amusing and brightly acted farcical love story with the hero a society blade ready for any escapade, who bets that he can steal something worth while and becomes an awkward burglar. A very laughable cop helps him. It made good laughter.

"THE SPEEDWAY OF DESPAIR" (Selig), March 11.—There is little that is new in this conventional picture of the innocent prisoner who after his release is rescued from despair by the faithful sweetheart of his younger days. It is a commercial offering and will satisfy a good many on account of the special appeal of its best moments. Maibelle Heiks Justice, the author, has done much stronger work. It was produced by Hardee Kirkland. Photography is fair.

"THE CATHEDRAL AND LEANING TOWER OF PISA" (Selig), March 11.—Very short; it is on same reel with the foregoing and is clearly photographed and full of interest.

"THE WAY TO HEAVEN" (Vitagraph), March 12.—The latter part of this film story tells a very beautiful little story of the way in which a child converted a thief. The opening scenes, depicting the stabbing of the wife through the door, seemed unnecessarily depressing. Anne Schaefer, Charles Bennet and Buddy Harris are in the cast. The photography is only fair in places.

"HER HAND" (Biograph), March 12.—This is a well-acted and attractively photographed story of Russian politics. Olga steals the valuable papers after her brother Ivan has been injured by a fall. The exterior snow scenes help out the atmosphere of the piece. Later, in the scene where Olga rushes to the defense of Orlanoff, the suspense is good. Claire McDowell and Joseph McDermott are in the cast.

"LOVE'S OBLIVION" (Melies), March 12.—In this half reel Sam Jones and his bride sit through an amazing series of disasters, oblivious to fire, water and falling timbers. An amusing eccentric offering.

"ONE ON BATTY BILL" (Melies), March 12.—The novel feature of this eccentric comedy is where the husband employs a live lion to guard his wife. This is entertaining. On same reel with above.

"KID PINK AND THE MAHARAJAH" (Selig), March 12.—The title of "Kid" seemed too juvenile for the outlaw appearing in the leading role. The story, however, is quite novel. The sheriff, after reading a book on reincarnation, dreams that he sees the outlaw as a ruler in India. The latter scenes in particular are original and entertaining.

"THE WARNING" (Essanay), March 12.—A Western offering, featuring Emery Johnson and Marguerite Clayton. Her signal, made of a broom and table cloth, proved the villain's undoing. The plot development seemed a little uncertain in the beginning, but the scenes in the house were exciting and entertaining.

"A FALLEN HERO" (Kalem), March 13.—This photoplay is one of those that is inflicted on the public, containing neither rhyme or reason. Two characters, exploited as "busted" actors are made to do absurd and impossible stunts supposed to be "comical." Far from Kalem's usual comedies.

"ELIZABETH'S PRAYER" (Selig), March 13.—Bertha E. DeLecuona is the author and Fred W. Huntly, the director. Elizabeth is a long name for a sweet, and beautiful little blond girlie (Baby Lillian Wade), who is as clever as she is pretty. With her simple and touching little prayer she reunites her papa and mamma. It is conventional but touching. The father is taught a lasting lesson and a wife is conciliated. It is an interesting picture. The acting and photography are first class. Harold Lockwood, the husband, and Mabel Van Buren, the wife, were eminently satisfactory.

"THE TELL-TALE STAR" (Lubin), March 13.—A Western subject that is original in plot and theme. It contains a pretty love story but the offering as a whole is not convincing and embraces several absurd scenes that are apparent to the spectator. The exterior scenes were interesting and finely photographed. It will please a casual observer who only looks, but does not analyze. When the spectator discovers the location of the "Tell-Tale Star" he or she will probably ejaculate "Oh, Gee!"

"MRS. MALONEY'S FORTUNE" (Vitagraph), March 13.—This comedy, written by W. A. Tremayne and directed by Theodore Marston, revolves around a wash-lady on whom fortune is thrust, by mistake, in a peculiar manner, and for the time being robs her of her sweetheart, Michael Finnegan. She takes a "whirl" in society in the city, but tires of it quickly and gose back to Mike and the tubs. While in the city she discovers the real heir, an orphan, and adopts him. It is all rather "foggy," but amusing and interesting. It will please.

"BLAME THE TAILOR" (Biograph), March 14.—An original, plausible and amusing comedy. A fetching tailor-made dress on a pretty girl causes all the trouble. The tailor has made the throat latch too snug and Mabel's attempts at relief are misconstrued by the ever ready "male of the species" as a sign to trail along. She innocently acquires quite a following, including car conductors, policemen, etc. It is a laugh producer.

"SHORTY MAKES A BET" (Biograph), March 14.—This offering is a comedy of considerable merit, particularly owing to the fact that a diminutive cowboy who is derided more or less for his boasting and wagering that he will capture a criminal, for which $500 reward has been offered. Through accident he wins out, receives the money and spends freely. On same reel with "Blame the Tailor." It is well done. Mr. Alexander, the lightweight comedian, did his best work as Shorty.

"THE INTERFERENCE OF BRONCHO BILLY" (Essanay), March 14.—As usual, a Western atmosphere predominates this picture, although it differs somewhat from the other Broncho Billy presentations. It is nothing wonderful in plot or direction. However it is finely photographed and the scenes are well handled. It will hold the attention of the average audience.

"THE RACE FOR A MINE" (Kalem), March 14.—A rather out of the ordinary picture that is exciting and plausible, concerning an option on a Borax mine. There is a race between a train and an automobile that holds the attention of the audience closely to the finish. The scenery and photography are all that can be desired. The acting is snappily done, and altogether is a deserving picture in all respects.

"JUST A NOTE" (Lubin), March 14.—This note causes a lot of trouble for several individuals, both white and colored, also several funny and complicated situations, the working out of which is very interesting. E. W. Sargent is the author and Arthur D. Hotaling directed it. The acting, in the main, is well done.

"SHE WANTED A COUNT" (Lubin), March 14.—This comedy is on the same reel with "Just a Note." It is quite amusing and interesting, although it contains impossibilities and inconsistencies galore. It goes with a snap and gets over for hearty laughs.

"GENTLEMAN OR THIEF" (Biograph), March 16.—Just a tale about a thief whom the contempt of an honest newsboy shames into making a man of himself. It lacks any real liveliness or the flavor of things as they are; but the plot is well made and works smoothly. The drift of it is along conventionally acceptable lines and it interests. A fair offering.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 22," March 16.—One or two fine items and the rest of it is fair.

"AUNTIE" (Vitagraph), March 16.—A pleasantly entertaining, but unpretentious picture. Temple Bailey, its writer, and Burton KiKng, its producer, have made a commercial offering for the market; but have been wise enough to make it likable. The photography, staging, acting and all are good, solid, commercial stuff.

"THE ADVENTURE OF THE ALARM CLOCK" (Edison), March 16.—Another of Frederic A. Kummer's "Octavius" pictures, produced by Charles M. Seay. There is some new and clever stuff in it and some trite stuff. But it made a reasonable amount of laughter and can be safely counted an acceptable, entertaining offering.

"THE PRICE" (Lubin), March 20.—This is a photoplay that does not appeal to the better element of spectators, as the plot and theme are far from wholesome; dealing with robbery, salfishness, crime, and other elements that are bad. No moral lesson is taught and it has a morbid ending. Its leading characters obtain no sympathy, although finely portrayed. The redeeming features are superior photography and acting. It is strongly melodramatic.

Licensed Special

"THE PORTRAIT" (Vitagraph), March 10.—A two-reel drama, written by Catherine Carr, and directed by James Young. Occasionally a superior photoplay suddenly creeps up amongst the suff-stuff, that stands out like an old exquisitely cut cameo that grandma used to wear in her lace collar. Such is "The Portrait." The spectator that can keep the tears from welling down hardened cheeks, viewing this picture, has forgotten childhood days. It is a gem. Mrs. Mary Maurice is ideal in appearance and interpretation as the mother, and James Morrison, as her son was admirable, as was James Young as Ralph Dryden. All in the cast are adequate and perfect types of the characters portrayed. All honor to the producer and author. Exhibitors will make no mistake in booking this picture. (Reviewed at length in issue March 7th, 1914, page 1246.)

"THE GREATEST GIFT" (Cines), March 10.—This drama is in two parts and incongruous in plot. An oculist, with a loving, devoted wife, selfishly indulges in gambling and becoming involved in debt forges her father's name. To escape the consequences he leaves for America. The inconsistency mentioned above is the fact that he is welcomed back years later by the wife and daughters, with whom he has never communicated in the interim. The fact that he restores the sight of his wife, who has been stricken blind by sorrow and wrong, perhaps redeems him. It is all interesting and well done in every way.

"A CRUEL REVENGE" (Lubin—2 reels), March 11.—A picture of distinguished scenes; it makes a good offering. The story is romantic and fresh; it is not believable but makes an interesting tale. The staging and acting have enough quality to deserve earnest criticism; yet because they are so much better than usual they also deserve being merely commended. The characters stand out and one feels that they are real in spite of the machine-like motions of all at certain times. The stage director was following convention when he made the Mephistopholes-like old lover eavesdrop behind the pillar. The story is artificial. All this is true but the offering remains a dandy. The script is by Daniel Ellis and was produced by John Ince. Rosetta Brisco plays the heroine with grace and a good deal of human truth; Percy Winters is all that was desired as the old lover. John Ince makes an excellent hero. The photographer deserves much praise.

"THE MEDICINE MAN'S VÆNGEANCE" (Kalem), March 11.—A two-reel Western with new and novel incidents; it tells a rather queer story of Indians and white people which though entertaining, is hardly believable and, at times, because pretty arbitrary. The atmosphere is good; the backgrounds are attractive and the acting is human. But the photography is not, as regards clearness, up to the Kalem standard, although the story doesn't suffer from this defect.

"THE STRANGE MELODY" (Lubin), March 12.—A two-reel number, with Carol Halloway and Joseph Smiley in the leading roles, the scenario being written by Clay M. Green. The gambler's love for the church organist is made convincing, but many of the incidents seemed merely strung together to make a picture and were of an obvious nature. After her brother has shot the gambler the girl goes to him and declares her love. The photography is rather dark in places.

"A SPOILED LIFE" (Pathe), March 12.—This story runs for about a reel and a half. It is of foreign make and pictures the pitiful love of a hunchback playwright for a beautiful actress. After their marriage her love cools and he commits suicide. This is beautifully pictured and strongly presented. Its worst fault is that it deals with a physical deformity and has a depressing close. Hella Hagen appears as the actress.

"MAKING LACE FANS" (Pathe), March 12.—This, on same reel with above, gives some very attractive views of the manufacture of lace fans. The painting, pleating and mounting are all demonstrated fully.

"GRASS COUNTY GOES DRY" (Essanay), March 13.—A really and truly laugh producing two-reel picture, "by heck." It involves several interesting characters, the principals being a deacon, a druggist, a parson, a widow and the entire population of a rube town (also a couple of indigent tourists with a thirst). Hollow Center is the suggestive caption of the minute city and it has been voted "dry." A bald headed deacon who is using a "beauty column" recipe for growing hair on a billiard ball head, the main ingredient of which is whiskey, gets into hot water (no sugar or lemon), trying to win the widow from the druggist. How he finally succeeds is good to see. Well acted and won laughter.

"THE PRICE OF THE NECKLACE" (Edison), March 13.—This is an interesting two-reel offering, illustrating the thoughtless selfishness of a banker's wife, who forgets others, to gratify her own whims. Her husband, anxious to please her, forces up the stock of an enterprise in which thousands of dollars of the savings of others—who through confidence in his integrity have invested their savings, suffer loss. She is brought to her senses in a rational way and makes amends. It is a picture that is well done and will interest. Charles Ogle and Mariam Nesbitt ably supported make this a splendid offering.

"AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN" (Vitagraph), March 14.—This is a pretentious two-part photoplay that has been beautifully mounted, directed and photographed—in these qualifications it is to be commended. As to the plot and theme, it deals with the social life of a military barrack; supposedly in England. Morality amongst the participants characterized is certainly not one of the attributes portrayed, especially on the part of the wives of petty officer to commander. The plot carries along the development of a mess of intrigue to exploit the fact that a young lieutenant is an officer and a gentleman. The finale of the court scene fails to convince. Cleaner construction would have made a grand offering.

"THE COLLEEN BAWN" (Kalem), March 16.—This delightful and worthily famous Kalem masterpiece needs no introduction. It is a reissue and has lost none of its charm or popularity. It is three reels long.

"THE BETTER WAY" (Selig), March 16.—This story has no cutting edge; for one is not compelled to believe in its situation nor development. It is not a pleasant tale; there is no true reformation in it and, out of all the two reels, there is only one short incident—the predicament of the old doctor—that justifies any film at all. We dare not commend it as a strong offering.

Independent

BILLY'S RUSE (Princess), March 13.—An ice pond farce with some novices on skates furnishing fun. It is very laughable; for the author has kept his situation cleverly developing into freshly astonishing forms and it is brightly acted. A good number for fun.

HIS LITTLE PAL (Majestic), March 15.—It aims successfully at sentiment and will probably please. A cute little player takes the part of the daughter of a miner who is doing well with pan and shovel. A convict escapes and the child brings food to him on the quiet. The sheriff is hunting for the convict and three thugs are planning to rob the miner of his gold. The miner joins the posse and the outlaws come to the cabin. It is going hard with the miner's wife and daughter when the convict comes to the rescue. The incident is convincingly pictured and interests strongly even in its happy ending. The photography is acceptable.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Reliance—No. 9), March 16.—This picture depicts the Mutual Girl distributing the dolls she has dressed to the little crippled children in a hospital. From there she goes to the East Side, making more little children happy with gifts of dolls and money. She visits several places of interest, and in the evening attends a theater. later she falls asleep and dreams of some of the things that have happened during the day. A good picture.

HE WHO LAUGHS LAST (Komic), March 18.—A somewhat broad comedy with a superfluity of rapid action which causes hearty laughter. The acting is well done and the direction and photography up to the standard.

SNOWBALL PETE (Komic), March 18.—This comedy is on the same reel with "He Who Laughs Last." While ridiculous in many ways it is a laugh producer, and will hold its own with the other comedy. Well done in every respect.

THE COUSIN FROM ENGLAND (Thanhouser), March 22.—New fun has been found to furnish laughs in this farce, although the type of Britisher burlesqued has done service in any number of films. He comes to Lakewood, N. J., to "bag a buffalo" and see something of the "wild spots" on the world and his two girl cousins dress up in wild-west skirts to receive him with revolvers and '49 (sasaparilla) red-eye. It is well handled and makes a very fair offering.

THE FAT AND THIN OF IT (Crystal), March 22.—This reel has a gymnasium for its setting. There is good contrast in the two women characters, one exceedingly rotund and one of lathelike thinness. The plot should have been stronger with so much comedy material to go on, but even as it stands there is considerable humor in this.

SCOOPED BY CUPID (Victor), March 23.—J. Warren Kerrigan and Cleo Madison appear in this newspaper yarn, being reporters on rival papers. The plot is not to be taken seriously and serves only to make an appealing little love story. Quite a pleasing comedy number.

SNOOKEM'S LAST RACKET (Crystal), March 24.—Rough comedy, in which the subtitles are slangy and the humor is off the key. It will perhaps please certain observers in audiences that are not inclined to be critical, but its appeal will not be general.

THE BATTLE OF LITTLE TIN HORN (Universal Ike), March 24.—Augustus Carney and Louise Glaum in a love affair at Coyote City. Ike's yarns, as pictured, were very amusing and the first half of the reel makes good. The latter half is frequently in bad taste and contains too much coarse humor.

A DECREE OF JUSTICE (American), March 25.—This is a drama of fraternal life and concerns two brothers; one good and the other bad. It is an interesting little story and well done. Ed Coxen is the lead and does good work, and is well supported. A good offering.

HOW GREEN PAID THE RENT (Joker), March 25.—This comedy number, written by Grace Cunard, has a very fine bit of humor at the close. The development of the story is unfortunate, however, as it overdoes the matter of intoxication. It would have made a very good half reel, with the scenes of drunkenness minimized and the action brought up more closely.

FOR LIFE AND LIBERTY (Imp), March 26.—A story enacted by children. One is an actress over whom the count and the hero clash. The children are clever and the story quite interesting, though it follows in the line of former offerings of the same type. The photography is good.

BLACK HANDS AND DIRTY MONEY (Frontier), March 26.—An eccentric comedy number, in which the humor does not work up very strongly. The plot is of a burlesque sort and is too disjointed to get up much interest, though some of the scenes are fairly funny.

THE WRONG MRS. WRIGHT (Nestor), March 27.—A newspaper story in which there is a confusion of identity. The reporter is made to do some things which all newspaper men will repudiate—a man out on an assignment who by reason of a chance for a flirtation loses sight of his errand and creates a burlesque. The picture will mildly amuse.

THE GIRL BANDIT (Frontier), March 28.—This offering is one in which a stage hold-up figures principally. It is much better done than usual and Jessie Burbridge is very pleasing as the girl desperado. The photography is good, the action well timed and as a whole the little comedy is much better than the average Westrn story.

IN THE DAYS OF HIS YOUTH (Rex), March 29.—This film story, written by Lois Weber, strikes a human note that will give it wide appeal, particularly with boys and fathers. The stern male parent, who is given to whipping his sons, remembers his own youth and has a change of heart. Phillips Smalley plays the father and there are two very natural boys. A good offering.

AUNTIE'S ROMANTIC ADVENTURE (Crystal), March 29.—The kidnappers, two Italians named Spaghetti and Macaroni, get hold of the wrong girl and thus lose the ransom. The production is of the slap stick order and the humor is not of the best type.

TOO MUCH MARRIED (Powers), March 30.—A comedy number, written by Bert Howard, with Vera Sisson and Donald McDonald in the cast. The fast young bridegroom sleeps late and arrives at the wedding in a dressing gown after numerous adventures. The idea in this is rather old and it proves only fairly amusing.

Independent Specials

THE CAT'S PAW (Thanhouser), March 17.—Another of Clarence Hubert New's stories dealing with a free-lance diplomatist. It makes a very acceptable two-part offering. One finds it dramatically written, smoothly directed and intelligently acted—it shows competence all around. The staging and photography (leaving out one or two snow scenes) are as usual in this make of picture—that is, fine. It will interest and be a popular offering.

THE POWER OF PRAYER (Victory), March 20.—A two-reel number, with Irene Wallace in the leading part. She appears as a Salvation Army girl, who marries a fast young man. The "sporting" life scenes lacked conviction and were almost laughable in a number of places. Toward the close there are some melodramatic situations which are not very well handled. As a whole the offering cannot be called successful, though it has some points of merit. The photography is fair.

THE TRAP (Kay-Bee), March 20.—A stirring picture of two reels illustrating military life on the frontier, supposedly in the year 1875. The plot embraces a love affair concerning two soldiers, one a corporal and the other a sergeant who are in love with another sergeant's daughter. A very realistic explosion scene is well accomplished. It is exciting and holds the interest in most of the scenes, and is well acted.

IN THE WOLVES' FANGS (Bison), March 21.—A two-reel number, with William Clifford and Marie Wolcamp in the leading roles. The Canadian setting is not very well suggested and the characterizations are none too strong. A tribe of Indians goes on the warpath, sets fire to a cabin and commits other outrages. Most of the incidents are of a somewhat conventional sort, and as a whole the offering is one of about average merit.

THE TURNING POINT (American), March 23.—A two-reel special giving a beautifully pictured story which has been handled in a rather "easy" and not strongly convincing way—i.e., things happen "off the bat" that would have been more reasonable after a lapse of time. The theme is commercial and a bit trite—too many pretty girls have accompanied burglars just to furnish a love story with the wealthy owner of the house. The photography, scenes and backgrounds are fine.

KING, THE DETECTIVE IN THE MARINE MYSTERY (Imp), March 23.—Two-part drama. The police pick up a sailor, who has been drugged and tanned with some sort of coloring matter. King Baggot, in his familiar role of detective, unravels the mystery before the observer in an entertaining manner. The scenes are laid in New York office buildings and there is a love element in the plot. The observer is kept guessing through most of the two reels, and while this is not as strong as some in the series, it makes an interesting yarn.

THE MYSTERIOUS LEOPARD LADY (Gold Seal), March 24.—This is a two-reel offering, written by Grace Cunard. The author and Francis Ford play the principal parts. The plot is of the thrilling, melodramatic sort. It is full of mystery and action, but the story is not very clear in parts. The yarn is so ridiculous in places that it almost becomes burlesque. There is a Lady Raffles, a deep-dyed villain, a fearless hero and plenty of wild animals. The conglomeration is not to be taken seriously and is by no means without interest.

ADRIFT (Eclair), March 25.—Another of those rough two-part Northwestern offerings for which this company is famous. The plot is simple in its elements and most of the scenes are taken in a snowy, wooded country. The two men engage in hand to hand conflict on an icy embankment and roll into the stream, a feat which sends shivers up the backs of observers. Barbara Tennant, O. A. C. Lund and Julia Stuart are in the cast. This is a good offering of the rugged, out-door type.

THE SILENT MESSENGER (Domino), March 25.—This two-reel subject is worthy of the name "Tragedy" rather than a drama. It has sensational scenes all through it, in fact the author and director must have combined to see how many so called "punches" they could introduce without wrecking the camera. The disposal of the villain in the finale was certainly original, but the method was not only absurd but absolutely disgusting. The cast was large and capable and the backgrounds elegant, as was the lighting and photography. Morbid spectators will enjoy it, no doubt.

THE SPIDER AND HER WEB (Rex), March 26.—A two-reel offering, with Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley, Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport in the cast. The story concerns the reformation of a fast woman who runs a gambling establishment. Her one fear is of death and her regeneration is brought about because she is made to think she is dying. The opening scenes are not of a pleasant nature, but the production is carefully handled and the latter scenes are brighter and altogether appealing.

DIPLOMATIC FLO (Victor), March 27.—A three-reel story concerning an attempted shipment of arms and ammunition to a city in Central America where there is a revolution on foot. The story was written by Don Buchanan, and Florence Lawrence and Matt Moore appear. This is well-pictured and full of exciting incidents, intermingled with comedy of the best sort. Flo learns the secret of the arms and ammunition, which are to be shipped as shoes and baked beans. After a series of adventures she succeeds in turning the shipment over to her lover, who is in the secret service. This makes a very entertaining offering.

SEALED ORDERS (Victor), March 30.—This two-reel number, with Warren Kerrigan in the lead, is taken from a well-known short story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Like the story, it opens in a desultory way, and works up into a fierce gun-fighting episode in a fast house where a young girl has been lured. Cleo Madison appears as the girl. Kerrigan plays the part of Crooknose Evans. The story has a rough, Western setting and is a good one of its particular type. Numerous scenes are shown in a gambling house and there is a chase across the roof tops to the house where the shooting occurs. A dramatic story of crook life.

WOLVES OF THE UNDERWORLD (Broncho), April 1.—This is a well written story of the gangsters of the East Side and depicts the methods employed by them in their infamous work. This is the work of Thomas Ince, director, and William Clifford, author. The plot contains a pretty little story of gratitude on the part of an East Side Jew, who in the first part is a street peddler but in the passing of time had become a wealthy merchant; able to assist the man who had befriended him in the day of adversity. It is a clean, worthy and meritorious picture, with humanity written all over it.

THE CABALLERO'S WAY (Eclair), April 1.—This three-reel production renders up a very strong presentation of O. Henry's well-known short story. J. W. Johnston, Arthur Dunn and Edna Bayne are members of the competent cast. The pictures are clear and attractive and the settings laid in an appropriate Mexican locality. The plot demonstrates how the treacherous Cisco Kid tricks the sheriff into shooting the girl who has played fast and loose with the outlaw's affections. In point of atmosphere, action and general fidelity to the traditions of the Great Southwest this is a release that ranks high among offerings of its kind. The action is unflagging from the first and holds the attention until the tragic close.

ON COLLECTING REWARDS.

The following letter has been directed to and received at this office. Just why the management of the Savoy Theater, New York, suggested sending it to the World is difficult to understand, but we are doing the only thing with it that our line of business would suggest, which is publication thereof:

New York, March 13, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World,

Dear Sir.—On Friday evening about 8:30 on the 6th inst., I went to view your moving pictures at the Savoy Theater on 34th Street. There appeared on the screen, that $500 would be paid to any one who could say that they had seen any of those pictures before. Before leaving the theater I drew the manager's attention to the fact that I saw the picture, "Comedy and Tragedy," shown in Philadelphia early that same afternoon in a theater in Market Street, right opposite Wanamaker's store.

If you require any proof of my presence in Philadelphia that day, I am quite willing to send you the addresses and particulars of people who saw me and were with me there on that day.

I travel much all around the world and the movies is about the only entertainment I go to. I had to call the manager of the Savoy's attention once before about a film I saw in Liverpool, when the reward was $1,000.

He knows me well enough as a regular visitor and he gave me your address to write you.

Yours faithfully,

Park Avenue Hotel. W. M. MACKINTOSH.

ED. SEDGWICK JOINS THE LUBIN CO.

Ed. Sedgwick, a very well-known actor, both in vaudeville and musical comedy, has deserted the stage, and is at the present time with the Lubin Company under Romaine Fielding, whose company is in winter studios at Galveston, Texas. Mr. Sedgwick's family is also with him, including his two sisters, Eileen and Josie.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE.

Universal Purchases Big Ranch Near Los Angeles.

IN my Chicago Letter of last week it was stated, under Denver news, that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company had about decided to select a site for their new studio in Colorado. That probability, however, has now been eliminated, for the company has purchased a ranch in California. David Horsley was seen in Chicago Friday, March 13th, on his way to New York, and furnished me with particulars.

He stated that on Saturday, March 7th, terms were finally reached by which the Universal purchased a ranch of about 250 acres, located in the San Fernando Valley, about 10 miles from the center of Los Angeles. The ranch lies on the El Camino Real (The King's Highway), this highway being the original road that connected the various missions from San Diego to San Francisco. It is located half way between the missions of San Gabriel and San Fernando, on the electric line that runs from Los Angeles to Van Nuys.

The ranch has a one-mile frontage on the Los Angeles River. This river front is finely fringed with trees and shrubbery, which afford fine backgrounds for pictures. It also embraces part of the Cahuenga range of the Sierra Madres. A most interesting historical land mark is located near the center of the ranch. Here General Fremont, in his campaign against the Mexicans in 1846, made a strong entrenchment to protect his command from a flank attack by the Mexicans in the San Fernando Valley, while at the same time he was keeping his eye open on Cahuenga pass, from which point he expected an attack from another detachment of the enemy.

Fremont had suffered severe losses, only 40 men being left, with no chance of reinforcements. He took these men up to the top of a cone-topped hill, and marched them from daylight to dark, around it in full view of the enemy in the San Fernando Valley, who believed that Fremont had been reinforced by a large body of men. This created such consternation in their ranks that they broke and fled precipitately. A treaty of peace between Mexico and the United States was afterward signed at Hollywood, a hamlet in Cahuenga pass. General Otis, owner of the Los Angeles Times, now owns the ground on which the house in which the treaty was signed between Mexico and the United States stands.

Mr. Horsley stated that it is the purpose of the Universal Company to make a feature subject showing Fremont's campaign and last stand, the evolutions to be made on the identical grounds on which the original engagements took place.

He also stated that up until Saturday, March 7th, when title to the ranch was acquired, the Universal officials had in mind a possible location in Denver. While they appreciated highly the courtesies and consideration shown them by the Denver Chamber of Commerce, the inducements to stay in California were too strong.

The location of the new Universal studio is only 3½ miles from the site of the old studio in Hollywood. The boundary line of the new ranch runs down the center of the Los Angeles River, and this will give all the building material needed for the new plant ready at hand, as the river bottom is filled with stone, gravel and sand. All buildings erected will be of fireproof construction, of reinforced concrete.

The building will contain a laboratory for the developing of negatives and the making of sample prints. The negatives and sample prints will be sent to Bayonne, N. J., for development and printing. The Bayonne plant will be enlarged considerably to take care of the pictures in the West as well as in the East, and about $50,000 will be expended for that purpose.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and H. Z. Levine returned with Mr. Horsley to Chicago. Wm. H. Swanson, who remained in California until arrangements for the purchase of the ranch had been completed, returned to New York several days before. Mr. Levine, formerly publicity and sales manager of the Solax Company, has been appointed publicity agent of the Universal in Europe, with headquarters in London. He returned to New York Saturday, March 14th, and sailed Tuesday, March 17th, for his new quarters.

Mr. Horsley stated that Mr. Laemmle is highly pleased with the success he had in acquiring the new ranch in California, as its possession will give all the facilities required for the production of film subjects of any scope. The picturesque surroundings of mountains, rolling uplands, and winding river scenery are finely adapted for moving picture productions.

Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Horsley left Chicago for New York on the 20th Century, Sunday, March 15th. Mrs. Laemmle and the children have fallen in love with California, and will remain there for some time. Mrs. Horsley and her son, Stanley Nestor Horsley, will also prolong their stay on the Coast. They have grown to like the climate of Southern California so well that, henceforth, they will spend much of their time there. Mr. Horsley told me that he intends making his home in Los Angeles, and that he has already purchased the property for a home site.

Mr. Horsley stated that he is doing well with the Lumiere raw product at his office in the Hagen Building, Los Angeles. This gives him three offices—one in New York, one in Chicago, and one in the West. He will return to the Coast in about five weeks to supervise the building operations of the new plant.

Viewing Moving Pictures a Tonic for Children's Eyes.

Only a few months ago, Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Superintendent of schools in Chicago, strongly advocated the passage of an ordinance requiring a five-minute intermission between the running of films in picture theaters. She held that watching moving pictures on a screen strained the eyes of children, if continued throughout the program without such intermissions. Mrs. Young's hypothesis has now been thoroughly refuted by eminent medical authorities in an article written by Leonard Keene Hirschberg, M. A., M. D., of Johns Hopkins University, and published in the Chicago Sunday Examiner, March 15th. Extracts from the lengthy article are given herewith:

"Everybody goes to moving pictures nowadays. Not only are moving picture theaters cheap, but the performances are as good, if not better, than you see in the two-dollar houses. You have the pleasure, the music, the comfort, the entertainment and the instruction in a moving picture theater to a greater certainty than in many so-called 'legitimate houses,' and at far less expense.

"What harm is there, then, in visiting moving picture theaters? Are the eyes injured? Is the health of the patrons destroyed? Are the morals of the young corrupted by them?

"The answer to all these queries is an emphatic No! Just as the old age playhouse gradually eliminated all tint of vice from its performance; just as the editors of magazines have come to understand that the reading public does not relish even a small dose of the wicked, so the photo-play producers have learned that their public will have none of the suggestive, the vicious, or the unpleasant.

"Militant prudes and belligerent moralists who read vice into tea-drinking, and whose voices are for war against any pleasures whatsoever; who spit forth their crusading indignation against moderate tobacco smoking, Sunday walks, the stately minuet and the graceful Boston waltz, have already recognized the trend to censor or censure it.

"But certain amateur physiologists and opticians continue to attack this form of entertainment and instruction. In their ignorance they declare that defective vision, styes, granulated eyelids, eyestrain, pinkeye, inflamed lids, cross eyes and other troubles may each and all develop from attendance at the moving pictures.

"Dr. Herbert Harlan, Surgeon-General of Maryland, perhaps the best ophthalmologist in the South, and the envoy sent by the Government to study the dreadful eye malady tracoma in the wilds of West Virginia, says these charges are all nonsense. Dr. Harlan, with whom I feel upon this matter in hearty concord, asserts that the hour or so spent each day in watching the moving picture show can result in no harm to the eyes.

"In fact, I go even farther and assert that two hours a day in the dark auditorium of a picture playhouse, watching the moving films, is actually a valuable tonic to tired eyes.

"Experiments by Professor Knight Dunlap in the psychological laboratories of Johns Hopkins University have shown that even the slight flicker which occasionally appears on motion pictures tones up the eyesight and makes it more acute.

"It is unwise, perhaps, for some persons to sew, read or attempt to use their eyes at close range on a moving train, motor car, fast boat, or aeroplane. The flickering lights and shadows from this vibration are liable to do harm to your retina. Why? Because the peephole, muscles and lens of your eyes must be constantly changing focus.

"This is not the case with moving pictures. At the picture theater the spectator sits from twelve to several hundred feet away from the screen upon which the motion photographs are thrown.

"At that distance the focus of the eye changes but little, no matter how much flicker there may be. In fact, a little flicker is beneficial, because it keeps the eye muscles from becoming sluggish, worn out and unadaptable to change.

"Undoubtedly children, and adults as well, have become more observant and better educated in many respects since moving pictures have acquired such a vogue. Recent psychological tests made upon children immediately after leaving a moving picture exhibition prove that they distinguish colors more acutely, recognize form and shape more sharply, and remember figures, sizes and other visual differences better than they did before they went to see the pictures. They surpassed in all the tests children who had not visited picture shows, but who were, nevertheless, subjected to the same kind of excitement by witnessing a melodrama performed by actual flesh-and-blood actors.

"Instances of weak eyes, astigmatism, near-sightedness, granulated eyelids and other troubles of the optical apparatus, commonly attributed by careless observers to motion photographs, are found upon fair and thorough investigation to be due to entirely different causes.

"Twitching of the eyelids is erroneously blamed upon visits to picture theaters. I was recently required, as the chairman of the scientific research committee of a national organization, to investigate and run down the cause of this trouble. In a large American city, where there are several hundred moving picture theaters and half as many eye specialists, it was soon made clear that not one true example of eye-twitching could be blamed upon moving pictures.

"Many of these cases were due only to the need of eye-glasses. Others were a result of nervous defects with which the twitching was associated.

"Painful eyes, swollen eyes, reddened eyeballs, watery eyes and styles are often nature's roadside signposts which indicate that the eye specialist should be called in to make visual tests. Specialists and eye-glasses will frequently be found to correct the irritations.

"One man, who prefers moving pictures to grand opera, came to me and asked if 'dark spots, which are always dancing before the eyes,' were not due to his fondness for the photo-plays. He was given to understand that such spots are a sign of many different internal disorders—blood deficiencies, excessive pumping by the heart, disturbances of the brain and spinal marrow, and the accumulation of microbic poisons in the lymph stream.

"There is, then, no danger to the eyes from frequenting moving picture theaters other than is liable to be encountered in any theater, railroad train, church, park or other public gathering-place. Contagions are, of course, picked up by the eyes at moving picture performances, as well as in school or church. But these are by no means common and, with the protective regulations now enforced by the building inspectors in most cities, the ventilation arrangements and hygiene of the picture playhouses are becoming superior to those of schools, churches and other public gathering places.

"Finally, it may be said that if the motion picture habit has done nothing else than remind people of their eye troubles and send them post-haste to an oculist, it has accomplished an incalculable amount of good for the human eye."

More About Chicago Censorship.

Alderman John Coughlin's proposed ordinance to substitute a committee of three, to be appointed by the mayor, as a substitute for the present moving picture censorship board, was defeated Friday, March 13th. The committee of aldermen appointed by the mayor to consider the proposition, defeated the movement by three to one.

Mayor Harrison added three new members to the censor board of ten, already appointed, on the same day. These are: The Rev. A. J. Carey, a colored man; Wallace Rice, author, newspaper man and a member of the Press Club of Chicago, and John S. Dankowski, the latter being recommended by German and Polish organizations. Mr. Rice has since resigned owing to defective sight.

Major Funkhouser made charges before the aldermanic committee to the effect that Chicago moving picture theaters and firms had collected a fund to be used for political purposes, and that moving picture interests had little regard for the morals of Chicago, as their interests were only financial.

I know from personal knowledge that no arrangements have been made to collect such a fund. The major probably referred to the recent efforts made by members of the Amusement Protective League to collect funds to meet running expenses. No other film interests in the city, to my knowledge, have been collecting funds for any such purpose as Major Funkhouser refers to.

Attorneys representing the Mutual Film Corporation, the H. & H. Film Service and the World's Special Feature Film Co., appeared before Federal Judge Carpenter on Friday, March 13th, in a suit to restrain the city from censoring films. They were directed by the court to file briefs of their arguments so as to shorten the hearing.

Motions to dismiss these suits seeking the abolition of municipal censorship of moving pictures were begun before Judge Carpenter in the Federal court Thursday afternoon, March 12th. The corporation counsel of the city filed motions to quash the proceedings.

On Thursday, March 12th, a demand was made by Mrs. Delony Martin, of the Woodlawn Woman's Club, that there be a court of appeals to review the findings of Major Funkhouser.

"No set of pictures should be rejected because of minor faults," said Mrs. Martin. "Condemnation is not reform. The picture shows in Chicago are not bad."

Chicago Film Brevities.

In my article on Rex E. Beach, in the last issue, by a slip of the pen I credited Producer Grandon with being director of Selig's photoplay, "The Spoilers." This was incorrect, as Colin Campbell directed the filming of the story throughout.

* * *

Our old friend, John A. Verhoeven, was among the many who called to compliment us on the appearance of our new offices last week.

* * *

Francis X. Bushman, Essanay's popular leading man, is out with will, determination and cogent reasons to gain the votes of Ladies' World readers as the typical American hero in photoplays. With three hundred years of Americanism behind him in old Virginia, and possessed of attractive physical and mental qualities he will make an appeal for votes that will make the running well contested and interesting.

* * *

L. Zahler, proprietor of the Marquette Theater, Milwaukee Avenue and Wolfram Street, this city, paid us a visit last week. The Marquette seats 750 people, and uses Licensed programs at 10 cents admission. One of the features of the Marquette is a new pipe organ. Mr. Zahler reported satisfactory business.

* * *

R. J. Lorentz is again acting as manager of the Chicago Moving Picture Supply Company, at 37 S. Wabash Avenue, this city, having returned from a year's travel throughout the country in his own interests. This company buys, sells and repairs moving picture machine parts.

* * *

R. D. Hanish, representative of the Rex Film Renovator Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio, made a pleasant call at our office Wednesday, March 11th. Mr. Hanish stated that "Rex Renovators" have been leased to a number of exchanges throughout the country. One of these renovators was leased recently to the Illinois Film Service Company, 537 S. Dearborn Street, this city, and is giving very satisfactory results. Mr. Hanish renewed his subscription for THE WORLD while in the office.

* * *

Mrs. Etta Allbaugh, owner of the Star Theater, Kokomo, Ind., called at the World office recently. She renewed her subscription and reported good business at the Star with Universal programs. Mrs. Allbaugh visited, during her stay, H. G. Immenhausen, owner of the New Standard Theater, 750 N. Clark Street. The Standard seats 450 and uses Licensed service.

* * *

R. C. Schroeder, manager of the Colonial Theater, Galesburg, Ill., has written as follows to this office: "Last Friday I had 'Waterloo.' Early in the morning a sleet-snow storm began. It lasted all day. But did it injure business? No! I had a fife and drum corps composed of old Civil War soldiers, and those men literally blew the house full from noon until late at night. Everyone within hearing, seven blocks, came to see what was the matter. My advice to exhibitors on bad days is to give old soldiers an opportunity of drawing a crowd for war pictures."

* * *

S. G. Honeck, formerly partner in the Chicago Song Slide Exchange and who has also had considerable experience in the film renting business, has been appointed assistant to E. H. Brient, manager of the Eclectic Feature Film Exchange. Mr. Honeck has a large following among exhibitors. He reports excellent business.

* * *

N. G. Zurawski, owner of the Lux Theater, 35th and Michigan Avenue, called at our office Thursday, March 12th, to renew his subscription. The Lux seats 800 people, and admission is 10 cents for Universal and feature programs. The Lux was built a little over a year ago, and shows pictures exclusively. Mr. Zurawski reports fine business. He intends to visit California for a prolonged stay, in July or August.

* * *

John Pelzer, sales manager for Pathe Freres, has been as busy as a nailer since his arrival in this city. He has established himself in spacious offices in the New Mallers Building, and the various departments are already in good working order. Mr. Pelzer assured me that he was doing a rushing business, and the reception room gave confirmatory evidence of the fact, on the day I called.

* * *

The Celebrated Players Film Company has arranged for a publicity campaign in the Chicago News, for "The Three Musketeers." The first installment of the story appeared Monday, March 16th. "The Scarlet Letter," handled by this company, is showing to well filled houses at the Ziegfeld. H. L. Wallick, special representative of the company, has just returned from a flying trip through the state of Indiana, where he has been leasing the first Jesse Lasky production, "The Squaw Man." He reports exceptional business.

* * *

The Essanay News was enlarged to four pages for the issue of March 11th, the current news being supplemented by three pages devoted to advance synopses of coming releases, handsomely illustrated. Among the important news items is the announcement that G. M. Anderson has produced a four-reel subject, "The Good for Nothing," in which he exchanges the Broncho Billy costume for the smart dress of a city man. This is the first of a series of photoplays in which the members of the Western company will appear in modern photodramas.

* * *

J. C. Pearson, of New Orleans, was in the city Friday and Saturday during the week of March 9. Mr. Pearson and his associates have eleven picture theaters, six of the number being in New Orleans and the remainder in outside towns. Licensed programs are used exclusively. An admission of 10 cents is charged regularly in the larger houses and 25 cents is charged in these houses for feature programs. He reported good business in all his theaters. The "Kathlyn" pictures are drawing fine business, the publicity campaign in the New Orleans Item contributing largely to their success. Exhibitors are advertising liberally in the columns of the Item.

* * *

H. F. Fowser, of Lansing, Mich., treasurer of the state branch of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League, was in the city March 11. He called at our offices; but, unfortunately, I did not see him.

Doings at Los Angeles.

THE Majestic studio, for so long a time located at 651 Fairview Avenue, on the east side of the city, is moving over to the west side on Sunset Boulevard. The new location is the Reliance studio, which is being fitted up and made larger for the additional forces. John Adolfi and Fred Vroom are directing.

* * *

Recently William Garwood, the well known and popular leading man with the Majestic, closed a deal with the American and will leave here on March 21 for the American studios at Santa Barbara, where he will start work on the following Monday. He has been seen in Majestic releases for so long a time that it will be strange to see him now in the American films.

* * *

All the studios have been working full capacity ever since the twenty-second of last month, when the week of rain stopped all operations. The present indications are for fair weather. The companies in the valley country are busy repairing the roads that were washed out by the record rains.

* * *

Earl C. Anthony, a prominent Los Angeles man, is taking pictures for his own pleasure. He is an amateur, and some of his work is said to be very good. He took pictures at the Vanderbilt races in Santa Monica.

* * *

Two hundred and fifty acres is the area of the new Universal ranch in the beautiful San Fernando Valley. The company will soon move to the new location, which is the largest on the coast at present. All the laboratories and manufacturing departments will be moved to the spacious grounds. New and adequate buildings are in the course of construction. The ranch is reached by trolley car. There is also an automobile road.

* * *

George Cooper, for so long associated with the Vitagraph, and for nearly a year has been working at the Western branch, has left that company. He is living at Santa Monica, where he is enjoying a short vacation before accepting another position.

* * *

Richard Stanton, who has played leads with the Broncho for some time, has won his directorship. He is starting out this week to produce, and is working on a two-reeler.

* * *

Cleo Madison, now heading her own company at the Universal Hollywood studio, is under the direction of Wilfred Lucas. Ray Gallagher is playing opposite her.

* * *

Marc Edmund Jones, the youthful photoplaywright, has established himself in one of the big office buildings of the city and is dictating his scripts to a stenographer. He has many callers in the new office.

* * *

Edwin August, directed by Robert T. Thornby, played the lead in "Days of Old California," a two-reel story of this State when it was young. They are working in the picture this week. Helen Case is also in the cast. Edna Maison will shortly play opposite Edwin August at the Universal.

* * *

Another company will be put on by the Famous Players on the first of April. The members have not all been selected as yet. Harold Lockwood, who was with Selig, is now playing opposite Mary Pickford, with E. S. Porter directing.

* * *

Robert T. Thornby will start directing another series of the famous children plays. He did all the clever work with Keystone, having done "Little Billy's Triumph," one of the hardest pictures ever made. He will have little Billy Jacobs with him, and will release under the Universal, but making the films for the Fred Balshofer Company.

* * *

Frank Montgomery, the Kalem director who specializes in Indian photoplays, has picked up the stock of two firms that went out of business here. He secured a full equipment of costumes, war paraphernalia, head dress, and a number of other articles. He has a wonderful private collection of Indian relics. Mona Darkfeather received her share of the purchase, getting several new Indian dresses for her large wardrobe.

* * *

C. O. Baumann, of the New York Motion Picture Company, was the honored guest at the Wednesday night fellowship dinner to the Photoplayers. He was toastmaster and the reception he received was something great. He said that next year—he was sorry to have missed this year's ball—he would be there, and that the first bid for the album would be $1,000.

* * *

"Lucile Love, the Mystery Woman," is the title of the two-reel Western that Francis Ford has started upon with Grace Cunard in the title role. Some of the scenes are supposed to be laid in Manila, P. I. The company is now at San Diego making some airship scenes.

* * *

Roscoe Arbuckle, the fat man with Keystone, has purchased a shining new automobile which he and Mrs. Arbuckle use while going to and from the Edendale studio. Tom Fortune is also another buyer. He has traded his small machine for a large one that he uses while working with Lasky.

* * *

R. L. Dell, working in the pictures at Broncho Camp, while riding a spirited horse which tried to run away was seriously injured. He suffered a broken arm, split knee cap, and a number of bad bruises.

* * *

The general offices of the Balboa Company have been moved to the studio at Long Beach. It was found that too much travel was necessary between the plant and office. The new laboratories and film works are nearing completion and all film will be finished at the beach plant hereafter.

* * *

W. H. Clune, the pioneer exhibitor of this city, who leased the Auditorium for ten years, announces that he will open on May first with one of the biggest feature film bills ever offered the public. This is the largest theater to be used for motion pictures on the coast.

* * *

Edith Storey says she wrote home saying that it had rained here. Some paper stated that she had said it rained "all the time since she had arrived," which is not true. Last week she was the honored guest of the members of the Vitagraph at a moonlight hay party on the beach. No overcoats were worn, and the party enjoyed a good time. Another party in her honor was given on the beach when everyone went bathing in the surf. She says she is in love with California's climate, but that the East has a permanent lease on her heart.

* * *

H. Pathe Lehrman has just finished a two-reel race comedy that is a sure enough fun film. It was started during practice for the recent Vanderbilt race at Santa Monica, and the last scenes were made this week. The great crowds in the grand stands were amused by the acting of Ford Sterling, who played the lead for the Balshofer film which will release through the Universal.

"Mephistophelia."

A Savoia-Inglese Three-Part Photoplay Featuring Mlle. Adriana Costamagna—Released by Features Ideal.

Reviewed by Harry W. DeLong.

THAT Mlle. Costamagna is a talented actress in every sense of the word cannot be denied. Her versatility is wonderful. She is a beautiful woman, with mobile features and has the God-given power of transforming them at will. She assumes several characters gracefully. Her magnetism is enticing and causes thrills to stir the blood of the virile spectator. The lighting of the numerous scenes is beautifully done and perfect in photography. Few faults can be found in any way with plot and production. The acting is superb on the part of the whole cast. The actor who portrayed the role of the money shark deserves special mention for his great, artistic work in impressing without undue effort.

Scene from "Mephistophelia." (Savoia-Inglese).

A crime of extraordinary daring set the police on the track of the notorious Martin Fierro. At bay, the bandits make a brave resistance, but are overcome and Fierro is struck down, not, however, before consigning his little daughter to safety by means of a secret passage. Orphaned and unprotected, the little child is accidently found and adopted by Lord Felton, justly known as the "Father of the London Poor." Discovering his protegee's parentage, the good man confirms how change of circumstances and environment may overcome heredity.

Many years pass. The adopted girl, now Lady Felton, has inherited her self-appointed guardian's fortune on his death. She lives a life of luxury, and spends large sums for the benefit of the poor, though it is not known how she affords the expenses with her comparatively modest inheritance. Meanwhile a series of amazing robberies have aroused the curiosity of London. At the scene of each crime is found a visiting card bearing the name of "Satanella," and a coronet and the motto—"To rob the unjust rich. . . . To give to the poor." Satanella, none other than Lady Felton, resolves to give up her unusual form of charity, finding discovery imminent, is persuaded to run the risk of detection once more by the sad story of a woman who has fallen into the usurious clutches of a banker named Jacob.

A masked ball is held at Lady Felton's mansion, and Jacob is among the guests. During the festivities Satanella enters the banker's study, and though the money she requires is missing, seizes a document severely compromising Jacob in his relations with the nation. The banker returns from the ball, and finds the usual card in the place of the stolen document, bearing the message that she will come back at midnight for the money she requires, or will betray him to the police. Jacob forms a plot to assassinate her, and forces her lover—Lord Humphrey—whom he had once helped in a time of ill luck, and had since retained in his debt and power, to assist him. Satanella, in hiding, overhears their plans and is ready when they arrive. She cleverly seizes the money, and hides her escape in the smoke of a small bomb. Determined to save Humphrey, Satanella forces Jacob to relinquish her lover's I. O. U. in exchange for his own incriminating document, but the banker is able to identify her with Lady Felton. The police arrive to arrest her, but the philanthropic criminal boldly accuses Jacob of treachery to his country, and during the confusion caused by his attempt to escape, disappears by a secret door in a picture frame. Hopeless attempts are made to follow her, but the impenetrable veil of mystery has closed upon Satanella. The costuming and character makeup of the entire cast in this picture can easily be held up as a criterion to many other producing companies.

EDUCATION AND MOTION PICTURES.

Interesting Demonstration and Discussion at Columbia University by the Round Table.

THE subject of "The Use of Motion Pictures in Education" was the theme of consideration and discussion at the fifth meeting of The Round Table, an organization consisting of men and women interested in educational problems. There was a practical demonstration of an educational motion picture program previous to the discussion. The exhibition took place in the Columbia University in the lecture hall of the School of Journalism. The machine was in charge of Professor Lomer, a member of the faculty of the School of Journalism. The program had been specially selected with a view of showing the possibilities of the motion picture in various branches of knowledge. The first numbers consisted of views of plant and insect life made by Pathe Freres and loaned by the General Film Company; this was followed by some of Professor Ditmars wonderful films of reptile and insect life. The concluding number on the program was "The Colosseum in Films," made by W. Stephen Bush. The pictures were followed with the keenest interest by one of the most distinguished gatherings of educators ever assembled in this country.

In the ensuing discussion the most telling and interesting speech was made by Miss Mason, of Mason's School of Yonkers. Miss Mason said she was one of the first who installed a motion picture machine in her school.

"There is," Miss Mason continued, "no better way of transmitting the inheritance of the past to the present generation than the motion picture. The motion picture supplies that vital human interest and sympathy which is often missing when a college course has been completed. Motion pictures now only cover a very small field of education and suffer from many defects in the eyes of the educator; the historic films are often more sentimental than historic and the scientific films are not always correct, but even what we have can be fitted into the curriculum with due regard for the psychology of the child. The picture may be used to stir the civic instincts of the child. I hope to see the day when such a course, for instance, as Roman History will largely be taught by the motion picture. I see a great assemblage of pupils in a big hall learning from the screen and from the words of some magnificent orator who stands beside the screen to explain. Such a method of teaching would be a source of gratification both to the learners and to the teacher."

The remarks of Miss Mason were applauded to the echo. She was followed by Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, "the man who had Greater New York for his school," as Dr. Slosson said in introducing the noted veteran educator. Dr. Leipziger said that many motion picture machines had lately been installed in lecture halls and that motion pictures would hereafter form an important part on the programs of the public lectures. Wisely directed, Dr. Leipziger said the motion picture will be a most efficient aid to teacher and lecturer. What the educational picture and its use needed was wise and competent direction. An indiscriminate or ill-advised use would hurt rather than help.

W. Stephen Bush followed Dr. Leipziger and spoke largely of the important aid which the motion picture furnishes both to the teacher and the student of history. Commenting upon the alleged dearth of suitable motion pictures to be used in the schools, Mr. Bush said that the law of supply and demand would regulate this problem very shortly, men were needed who were close to education and close to the motion picture at the same time to bring about the proper use of the kinematograph in the schools. System was needed, too, and the co-operation of trained teachers of experience. He spoke of his visits to the educational studios in the plants of Pathe, Gaumont and Eclair, giving a brief description of each.

Among those present were: Talcott Williams, president of the School of Journalism: Andrew W. Edson, Harvey H. Pike, Forrest S. Lunt, Maud V. Keys, Kenneth Allen and Dr. Walter Mendelson.

HARRISBURG OPERATORS ORGANIZE.

Motion picture theater operators of Harrisburg, Pa., have organized local union No. 318, of the I. A. T. S. E., and have a membership of twenty-five. Maxwell H. Hite is president; L. N. Bitterman vice-president; Leo Acri secretary; Harry W. Smith, treasurer; and W. A. Davis, business agent. Meetings are held in the I. A. T. S. E. rooms every third Sunday of the month at 2 o'clock p. m.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

NEW YORK LEAGUE EXECUTIVE MEETING.

Held at Rochester and Elects F. C. Pierce, of Geneva, National Vice-President to Succeed Sidney Ascher.

A MEETING of the executive committee of the New York State branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was held at Rochester, N. Y., on Saturday, March 14. The meeting was at the Hotel Rochester and President A. N. Wolff presided. Those present of the committee were: F. C. Pierce and W. C. Hubbard. President Neff of the National Association was also in attendance.

The resignation of Sidney Ascher as national vice-president for New York State was tendered and accepted, the reasons given for the withdrawal being Mr. Ascher's engagement in the feature film business, which made it impossible for him to continue to hold office in the league. He will continue to be a member of the league.

Upon the acceptance of Mr. Ascher's resignation, Mr. F. C. Pierce resigned his position as vice-president of the State organization and was immediately elected to the office of national vice-president. I. F. Davis, of Binghamton, was elected to the office of State vice-president.

Resolutions were adopted urging all exhibitors to lend their support to the National Convention at Dayton, Ohio, and President Wolff, W. C. Hubbard, T. A. Keppler, M. L. Fleischman and F. W. Esterheld were appointed a committee to arrange for transportation for that occasion.

Application for a charter for the reorganized New York City Local No. 1 was made and the charter granted.

It was decided to hold the next State Convention at Rochester on Tuesday, May 5, for the purpose of electing delegates to the National Convention.

KANSAS LEAGUE CONVENTION.

The official call for the fifth state convention of the Kansas branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League announces that the meeting will be held at Salina, Kan., March 24 and 25. Particulars may be had by addressing Secretary George McCrum, 957 Park Avenue, Kansas City, Kan.

PHILADELPHIA MAKES MOVE TO COMBAT CENSORSHIP.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Philadelphia local, M. P. E. L., on Friday, March 13, a committee was authorized to interview John G. Johnson, a prominent local attorney and to get his opinion as to the advisability of starting a suit. The committee will report back at the next meeting and funds will be raised in whatever amount is necessary.

The matter of the proposed local ordinance to provide separate sections in film theaters for unescorted men and women was discussed and information was furnished by an attorney that same would be unconstitutional.

An auditing committee as follows was appointed to examine the treasurer's books and report at the next meeting: Julian M. Solomon, Jr., chairman; D. R. Sablosky, and Geo. H. Roth.

Several schemes were proposed to limit the mushroom growth of new houses, but all were rejected, it being decided that there was already too much adverse legislation against motion picture places.

STUDIO AT NEW YORK EXPOSITION.

Among the many novelties to be presented at the coming Exposition of the Motion Picture Art, held at the Grand Central Palace, June 8th to 13th, next, will be the practical working studio showing the making of a moving picture from start to finish. The big producing companies will have the privilege of using the studio at different times, the dates of which will be announced later. The producing directors of the different companies will have charge of the studio on the days set apart for the producing on the stage short story subjects confined to one reel. This will be most interesting to the general public and no doubt will be much appreciated. The leading photoplay actors and actresses from the producing companies will take part in these sketches from time to time, and the general public will be able to see their favorites in action.

Illinois State League Convention Committee—(Left to Right) Top row: H. Thornton, B. Shepherd, I. Burnstine, G. M. Westley, L. Kerasotes, A. C. King. Lower row: E. R. Kunz, H. Loper, W. W. Watts, J. Kunz, G. Kerasotes. Convention to be held at Springfield, Ill., April 28.

"In Mizzoura"

Five Parts. All-Star Feature Corporation.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

WITH a full appreciation of the splendid work heretofore done by the All Star Corporation it must be stated that their latest production is their best and most indubitable credential for admission into the top-class of quality. The small but select audience which witnessed the private exhibition in the Bryant Theater gave it the significant approval of prolonged applause, not the perfunctory and hired kind, but the real thing, spontaneous and electric. Never was applause better deserved.

The very life of the art is dependent on production of superior quality to offset the ravages of the time-table releases.

Scene from "In Mizzoura." (All-Star).

"In Mizzoura" is a classic of American dramatic literature. As this filmed version once more proves how much the screen improves on the stage, I predict a long and successful revival of this justly popular play.

Even the most captious of critics must give unreserved praise to the screen direction and adaptation of "In Mizzoura." It is masterly and masterful and extends to the big things and to the seemingly little things in the same thorough and flawless manner. It is no small tribute to the director to say that the play runs along at times for five hundred feet without a title, because the action is so swift and so logical as to make titles worse than superfluous. One of the great points of merit is the atmosphere of the play. We are indeed "In Mizzoura." This strange but most appealing mixture of the rugged, the simple, the heroic, the homely and the humorous needed the right atmosphere to give it its full charm and power. Here we have the local color in satisfying profusion. There is no doubt about this blacksmith shop, where the giant of the simple heart plied his skill, no doubt about the rickety stage which we naturally expected to get stuck in the mud, no doubt about the old darky enjoying the strains of his harmonica in front of the court house, no doubt about those quiet, broad village roads where fond couples love to walk after twilight, no doubt about the lovable high-bred pup to whom the rash titler refers as a "stray pup." These fine touches of apparently unsought and unprepared realism endear this play to us and make each character seem true to life, even to the slightest detail.

Scene from "In Mizzoura." (All-Star).

With but two minor exceptions the acting in this play is unsurpassed in any production which I have ever seen. Burr McIntosh is a host in himself. He would have delighted the eye of a painter in his characteristic poses, while his poise and reserve in the great emotional scenes stamp his work as a triumph of histrionic skill. He was racy of the soil on which he lived and in every move and turn of face or body he was the rugged, simple, warmheated Jo Vernon, a glorious embodiment of manhood among the plain people. As he stood there beside the forge hammering the red-hot iron, examining the horse ready to be shod, fitting the wheel to the wagon he was indeed a master of his craft and most inviting to look upon. The picture of him in his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes on the morning of the convention was a rare touch of refined comedy and not without pathos. This Jo Vernon of McIntosh is a distinct creation of his own, and I do not believe there is anything quite as lovable in the whole range of dramatic motion pictures. Next to McIntosh, and just as true a representation of character, is the part of Jim Radburn played by Mr. Raymond Bond. This artist, too, rather lived than acted the part. He was a true knight of the backwoods full of genuine chivalry and manly modesty of bearing. He excelled in portraying the lighter touches of his part, though he was by no means deficient in ability to master the tenser and more tragic situations. His facing of the mob led by the inimitable Colonel Bollinger (H. D. Blakemore), was an achievement in itself. His throwing away the stiff, starched collar he had worn in deference to the dignity of his shrieval office was charmingly natural. He simply felt that in braving the mob he had to clear for action, and a stiff collar would have smacked too much of parade and "dudishness." In showing the woman he loved how much braver he really was than the man she admired he rose to unusual heights of histrionic art. Another highly meritorious performance was that of Mr. William Conlon as Travers. Charlotte Lambert was a most convincing "Ma" Vernon; Gideon Burton acquitted himself well in the somewhat thankless part of Sam Fowler, while Francesco Rotoli gave a well-considered portrayal of the willful girl, good at heart, but romantically silly in her ambitions. The parts taken by Dave and Lisbeth, difficult parts in a screen production, were not quite up to the standard. I find no fault with the acting, but every audience will say that Dave was too young and thin, and Lisbeth too old and stout. Perhaps it was all done with the idea of emphasizing the humor of the thing, but it does not seem to accord with the flawless quality of the rest. The photography was superb and many new wrinkles in camera work are introduced.

DEATH OF FRED RUHLMAN'S MOTHER.

Mrs. Isabella Ruhlman, mother of C. Fred Ruhlman, one of the leading motion picture exhibitors of Trenton, N. J., died on Tuesday, March 10, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Nelson Craft, Trenton. Mrs. Ruhlman was 79 years of age.

"THE CABALLERO'S WAY" (Eclair).

"The greatest Western ever made" is what the critics said about "The Caballero's Way" when this Eclair Western production was shown them last week. From the story by O. Henry, and it contains the most magnificent scenery, spectacular and hair-raising riding. The story is the strongest dramatic Western ever filmed. This picture will be released by the Eclair Film Company on the Universal program, Wednesday, April 1st.

Among the Picture Theaters.

News and Views of Houses Here and There.

Quinn's Picture Theaters

METAPHORICALLY speaking, the rise of J. A. Quinn, of Los Angeles, Cal., in the exhibition end of the moving picture industry may be compared with the speed of a meteor. Three years ago he came into the moving picture business in Los Angeles by purchasing the Bijou Theater which was a small moving picture theater with a seating capacity of one hundred and twenty-eight. Now he owns four picture houses with seating capacities running from 900 to 1,500. This has only been made possible by Mr. Quinn's metaphysical intuition and sound reasoning on what the public wants in the line of picture entertainment. Actuated by this instinct, Mr. Quinn next purchased a big house on Broadway, near Eighth Street. This was his first big picture house, and with the aid of care for details he soon ingratiated himself with the public. The house was named Quinn's Garrick. Although at the time Mr. Quinn purchased this house it was out of the theater zone, he created a fine patronage by putting on a good entertainment of pictures from 10 A. M. until 6:30 P. M., for five cents. The large amount of newspaper mention and other kinds of advertising that was bestowed upon the Garrick due to the immense crowds that that house was continually playing to, worked as an incentive for evening trade which soon became equally as voluminous. The same number of reels that were given during the morning and afternoon shows constituted the evening entertainment, but the prices were increased. Instead of five cents for the entire house, the admission charges were ten cents for the orchestra and balcony and fifteen cents for the loges. It is a well-conducted theater with nine hundred upholstered leather chairs. The floor is covered with Wilton velvet carpet, and the drapes of silk velour enclosing the loges are harmonious in color. An excellent orchestra gives suitable selections to a program of first run General Film Company service.

Quinn's Garrick, Los Angeles, California.

Quinn's Lyceum, Los Angeles, California.

The next step in Mr. Quinn's ascension to the limelight of picture theater proprietors was the leasing of the old Orpheum, on Spring Street, from Ollie Morosco. He had the entire house redecorated and had the seating capacity increased to two thousand. Three thousand additional incandescent lights were added to the front illumination, and the name was changed to Quinn's Lyceum. The admission price to this house is five cents, and we learn from the Quinn Company that it is the biggest and best five-cent picture theater in the world. Heavy newspaper and billboard advertising brought to the eyes of the public that Quinn is doing things on a phenomenal scale. Business is exceedingly good at this house. Big feature reels are constantly introduced as additional attractions, and according to a representative of the Quinn Company, concerns with meritorious special features go to Quinn first as he spares no money to gives his patrons the best. It is said that prior to the leasing of the old Orpheum Theater, the house had had a career of almost incessant failures. It was known as a theatrical graveyard, but in spite of all this Mr. Quinn leased the house, converted it into a big picture theater, and has been reaping a harvest of greenbacks ever since.

Quinn's Century, Los Angeles, California.

Flushed by the success of his preceding ventures, Mr. Quinn later on added a third moving picture theater to his list. This house is located on Main Street, and as soon as he had closed a seven year lease on the property with Loewen Brothers the painters and decorators were working "like mad," in order to get the house ready on time. To the facade of this house, 2,500 additional electric lights were added. This house was opened under the name of the Century. Mr. Quinn soon made this theater one of the dominant attractions on Main Street. Feature pictures form the entertainments.

He is now building a moving picture theater at 518 to 524 South Broadway. This structure will be three stories in height and will have a frontage of eighty feet. The name of it will be the Superba, and it is expected to be opened in a couple of months. The appointments and management of this new house will be in keeping with the other Quinn theaters. The front of the theater will follow closely the architecture of the Colonial period. The interior of the lobby will be of the best selected onyx. The auditorium, which will have a seating capacity of nine hundred, will be illuminated by the indirect lighting system. The interior, as well as the front, will be elaborately decorated, and the stage equipment will consist of three complete sets of scenery and a large nitro-silver screen. A program of first run General Film Company's service will form the entertainments, and the pictures will be played to by one of the largest photoplay orchestras on the Pacific Coast. The prices will be ten and fifteen cents, and twenty cents for the loges. The Superba is situated right in the heart of the City of Los Angeles.

Quinn's Superba, Los Angeles, California.

PLANS NEW THEATER FOR MENOMINEE, WIS.

A moving picture theater will be built in Main Street, Menominee, Wis., by August Schoenoff. Plans and specifications are now being prepared. It is scheduled to be a one-story structure with dimensions of 34 by 100 feet. It will have 500 seating capacity, and the admission prices will be 5 and 10 cents.

$22,000 PICTURE HOUSE FOR MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

A fireproof moving picture theater, with a seating capacity of 600, is being built at 2541 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. The house is expected to be ready about May 15. John C. Karlsen is the proprietor of the new photoplay theater, and the management will be under his direction.

MAJESTIC THEATER, COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The newest and one of the best motion picture houses to be opened in the City of Columbus, Ohio, is the Majestic, in Capitol Square. In every way it complies with the State building code, and is said to be the very last word in motion picture theaters. This new house is sponsored by men who are prominently identified with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. In the general manager and proprietor we find Max Stearn, who has shown his perspicacity by selecting J. A. Maddox as manager.

As may be seen from the accompanying illustration of the lobby, incoming patrons are kept separate from those coming out by a brass rail. This arrangement should prove of material benefit in dispersing large crowds. The decoration in the lobby is of Rookwood tiling of silver green, outlined with a darker color, and picked out with bits of gold, pink and cream. Two beautiful frescoes, one representing the chateau of Compiegne "Napoleon," and the other "The Departure," a Venetian scene, also add to the beauty of the lobby.

Lobby of the Majestic Theater, Columbus, Ohio.

To the left of the auditorium proper is a woman's retiring room, handsomely furnished and presided over by a maid while to the right is a cozy room for the male contingent. The foyer is about ten feet in depth. The chairs are of dark green leather in dark green metal frames. In the foyer there are several pendant receptacles, each containing a number of electric lights whose ray is diffused, thereby permitting the auditorium to be always well lighted, even though the picture is being projected. The seating capacity is 1,200, and it is divided between the parquette floor, balcony and four boxes. The proscenium arch is 37 x 28 feet.

Interior View of the Majestic Theater, Columbus, Ohio.

A $10,000 pipe organ has been installed, which is presided over by Thomas Callis. This organ will be played only when the presentation of pictures which is best accompanied by organ music is projected. Otherwise the pictures are played to by an orchestra.

The picture booth is located above the balcony. All the latest devices for the attainment of perfect projection may be found in the operating room of the Majestic Theater. Frank Farrington supervised the construction of the theater. He has four other houses under way.

GRAND THEATER, BESSEMER, ALA.

A good example of unpretentious architecture is the accompanying illustration taken at night of the lobby of the Grand Theater, Bessemer, Ala. Unassuming as its appearance is, there is that something about it that draws one to the place. The lighting effect is tastefully arranged, and the posters as may be seen from the photo are not obtrusive, but neatly displayed in glass frames on the outside walls at each side of the lobby. This is a much better way of handling posters than the careless and undignified way of hanging them up in conspicuous places in the lobby, sidewalk, or over the entrance, in fact, wherever there is a vacant spot. Hand-colored photographs of a number of prominent photoplay actors and actresses are prettily arranged in glass frames on the inside walls of the lobby. The name of the theater has been nicely worked into the tile of the lobby floor.

Grand Theater, Bessemer, Ala.

The house is owned and operated by Messrs. Sniders & McConnell, but receives the personal attention at all times of Mr. Sniders, who acts as manager. It was opened on January 22, 1914, and is exclusively a motion picture theater with a seating capacity of 400. The color scheme of white, green and gold is predominant throughout the entire structure.

There are six private boxes of eight seats each, and these are enclosed in curtains and brass rails. The air in the auditorium is always kept purified by two exhaust fans which have a capacity of 10,000 cubic feet per minute. There are also two wall fans.

In the operating room there are two Model B Edison machines. An eight-piece orchestra renders suitable accompaniment to the pictures. An entertainment usually consists of four reels of General Film Company's service. The admission prices are five cents for children and ten cents for adults.

OAKLAND PHOTO THEATER, OAKLAND, CAL.

The Oakland Photo Theater, at Oakland, Cal., is one of the leading houses in the Turner & Dahnken circuit, and has been a success since the opening day, about four years ago. It was erected at a time when five cent shows predominated, but demonstrated to its owners that the public was willing to pay for something better than was being shown. Every detail of the theater is high grade, the furnishings and decorations having been designed by artists, as may be judged from the illustrations.

Oakland Theater, Oakland, California.

The seating capacity is 1,400, and the prices are ten cents for the balcony and twenty cents for the main floor. It is one of the few photoplay houses on the East side of the Bay where an orchestra is engaged.

Herbert Brenon Home.

Well-Known Imp-Universal Director, Recently So Badly Injured in Bermuda, Mending Rapidly.

By George Blaisdell.

BRINGING back with him thirty thousand feet of perfectly good negative, all of which was taken on the Island of Bermuda, Herbert Brenon set foot in New York town on Monday. One foot rested on the soil a little heavier than the other—which means that he is using for the present a crutch in order to lighten the strain on the side that was so badly cut up when the glass front of a great tank broke under the strain of 18,000 gallons of water. THE WORLD has already told how Mr. Brenon was injured and how he had to wait an hour for medical attention—how, when he did get it, it was to the extent of two and a half hours' work and the number of sixty-three stitches. The irony of it all was that the taking of the scene in which the accident happened was due to a desire on the part of Mr. Brenon to make assurance doubly sure. He already had photographed the incidents called for by the scenario. He was not quite satisfied, however, that it was just the best that could be got out of the situation, and furthermore he wanted to have one more bit of negative from which to make a selection when it came time to assemble the picture. This, it may be well to state, is an aquatic fantasy in which Miss Annette Kellermann, the famous Australian swimmer, will be the star, and which will be marketed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

It is a custom of Mr. Brenon when it is necessary for a certain bit of hazardous work to be done to do it himself if possible. It was in conformity with this practice that he made himself up to simulate the man who was playing the heavy in "The Long Strike" and in his stead took the jump of forty feet or so from the deck of an ocean liner into the waters of New York Bay at a time of year when bathing was unpopular. When Mr. Brenon announced to Miss Kellermann that he thought it best for them once more to enact the tank scene, one of the members of the company protested that already they had flirted a sufficient length of time with the undertaker. Mr. Brenon and Miss Kellermann entered the water, nevertheless, and the struggle between the two had hardly started when the eight-by-eight-foot glass broke. Mr. Brenon was close to the side at the time, as the film plainly shows. The cameraman evidently jumped as he saw the glass bulging and before it broke. The force of the water carried the director far from the tank. Miss Kellermann, who was not so near the edge, was lifted over the jagged edges and dropped on the ground, as the force of the water was spent. Mr. Brenon's first inquiry as he recovered consciousness, which he had momentarily lost, was as to the condition of Miss Kellermann. She immediately stood on her feet, saying she was all right. It was then that she discovered her co-worker was badly injured. She was put into a boat and taken to Hamilton.

Mr. Brenon preserves a grim reminder of the smash which he promised to show us some day when we were feeling strong. The director believed he would bleed to death before medical help could arrive. He asked the cameraman to make a few pictures of things in general as they stood just at the time, and after dictating a few personal messages to those nearest to him had himself included in the field of the camera. He says his object was partly to occupy the attention of all concerned, as every one was laboring under great distress over his condition. We often see on the screen the representation of men facing death. There should be in this strip of film a bit of stern reality in which Art is forgotten and Life predominates, with Death in the near background. When a physician finally did arrive it was found there was no boat and it was necessary to hail a passing yacht. Mr. Brenon says his bitter experience has taught him at least one lesson, and that is if in the future any member of his company is to undertake anything hazardous there will be a doctor in the party.

It was on December 13th that Mr. Brenon and Miss Kellermann with a party of twenty-seven sailed for Bermuda. In the company were William E. Shay, Miss Leah Baird and William Welch. The subject was so nearly completed at the time of the accident to the director that all of the other members of the company with the exception of Miss Kellermann were able to return to New York. In spite of the heavy rains which shattered the popular belief in "sunny and balmy Bermuda" the story would have been completed in five weeks. Mr. Brenon was four weeks in the hospital. As there were one or two Bermudan scenes in which it was necessary for him to enter the water, in order that he should be "pictorially killed" to satisfy the requirements of the scenario, his departure was delayed until he could accumulate sufficient strength and vitality to stand the strain.

There are but a half dozen interiors to be photographed to make the subject complete, and these will be finished this week at the Eleventh Avenue studio. Then Mr. Brenon will take a short rest and further his recuperation.

The writer on Wednesday was privileged to see two thousand feet of the picture made in Bermuda. While the amount shown represents but a fifteenth of the material available for the production, it is enough clearly to indicate that the Universal will give to the lovers of motion pictures a real novelty—something rare and something beautiful. When Mr. Brenon went to Bermuda he did not know that there existed on the island such a place as Crystal Cave. When he got a peek at the great stalactites in this wonderful palace a hundred feet under ground he cabled to New York for his electrician. On his arrival a wire was extended four miles out to the cave and lights were installed. The cave is about 140 feet at its widest point and 200 feet long. The water which covers the floor of the cave is thirty feet in depth.

The scenes in which Miss Kellermann is shown as a mermaid are marvels of beauty—weird and full of charm. In one instance she is shown swimming in the dark waters, the great white stalactites mirrored in the surface, with the arms of a child tightly clasped about her neck. The little one is smiling. Miss Kellermann is not—she is earnestly engaged in fulfilling her part as a mermaid—the fishtail appendage requiring her to keep afloat only through the use of her arms. It is an accomplishment in swimming. There were a number of other incidents also shown. One of these was of troops of mermaids, or should we say schools, disporting in the black waters.

Such scenes as were shown of the surface were of a woodland, the bright sun striking through the trees from the side. One is of Miss Kellermann in the morning glory dance, a host of little girls breaking through the entrance to the glade and surrounding her. These pictures all hold by the charm of their pictorial beauty, entirely apart from the distinct dramatic quality which the subject is said to possess, and of which they form but a very small part as it will appear on the screen—which the writer for one will await with lively interest. Mr. Brenon says he thinks he has got something that may be worth while. We are sure of it.

PUBLICITY EXPERT.

STILL young in years and looking even much younger than the years to which he confesses, very few of the publicity men in the moving picture industry have had as large and varied an experience as the subject of this sketch. In a recent issue we noted the fact that he severed his connection as manager of publicity with the General Film Company to take up other interests. He gained his first experience as reporter on a New York daily, and then as dramatic editor. Manager and press representative of White City, the summer resort of Syracuse, New York, was his next experience for a time, and this led to the position of press representative for Knapp's Millionaire Band, and later for the Hotel Astor. His next connection with the Motion Picture Patents Company as advertising manager and press representative brought him in close connection with conditions in the moving picture field.

Chester Beecroft.

It was at this period that the Patents Company endorsed the newly formed National Board of Censorship by submitting all their films for inspection, and their press department secured the publication in papers and magazines throughout the country of a large amount of matter that did much to show that moving pictures were deserving of confidenc

Legislative matters at Albany received a considerable portion of his attention while with the Patents Company, and he aided in defeating the passage of many pernicious measures.

We understand that his next field of endeavor will result in still closer connection with the "canned drama" or, more correctly, perhaps, with the "condensed comedy" end of the picture program. While a hard and conscientious worker, and a keen student of present and future conditions, his success has also been largely due to his straightforward and unobtrusive manner and his evident sincerity of purpose.

Two More Stars for Famous Players

AS announced in the Moving Picture World last week, William Farnum will shortly be seen in a Famous Players release—on April 10, to be exact. It is not Mr. Farnum's first appearance before the camera, as he most successfully played the part of Glennister, the leading character in Selig's eight-reel interpretation of Rex Beach's "The Spoilers."

The medium selected by the Famous Players for the introduction of Mr. Farnum to its clientele is "The Redemption of David Corson," by Charles Frederic Goss. It was Mr. Farnum's sympathy for and interest in his role that induced him last week to address at the Bowery Mission three hundred derelicts, taking for his text the story of the man whose career he portrays in the picture.

William Farnum.

Another stage star who will take up temporary quarters at the studio of the Famous Players next Monday will be H. B. Warner, who will then enter upon the portrayal of the leading character in "The Lost Paradise." The play is one of Charles Frohman's former dramatic successes, and was adapted from the German original by the late Henry C. De Mille, collaborator in the famous Belasco-DeMille plays. Mr. Warner has attained recent triumphs in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," among other plays.

"The Lost Paradise" is world-famed as a great capital and labor play. It portrays with vivid realism the gigantic struggle between the two master forces of modern industry. The situations are tensely dramatic, and the heart interest has a universal appeal. The superintendent of the Knowlton Iron Works is in love with his employer's daughter, who has been reared in luxury, and is the idol of her father. To save this woman from the knowledge that her father is a thief, the superintendent takes upon his own shoulders the crime which has been committed by the father, but his sacrifice is finally rewarded by the woman he loves, who gives him her heart, and decides to stand with him, on the side of the oppressed workingmen, to whose cause her lover has devoted his life's labor. Mr. Warner will play the part of the man who strives to reconcile the contending elements, and who is willing to sacrifice name and fame for the woman he loves. By an odd coincidence, the leading character of the play is also named Warner.

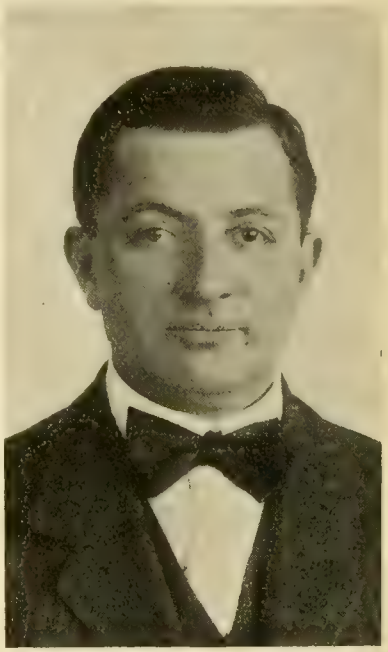
INTERESTING SCENIC PICTURES.

A rather out-of-the-ordinary motion picture offering was given at the Berkeley Theater, New York City, March 18th, by Emery C. Kolb and his brother, Ellsworth Kolb, of Grand Canyon, Ariz. The films contain interesting views of the brothers negotiating the Colorado River Canyons, including the Grand Canyon. It is a thrilling story of adventure, passing over 300 rapids in 14,000 miles, through six States, and descending over 6,000 feet in open boats. Additional features were shown of Col. Roosevelt and Gov. Hunt at the snake dance, Navajo life, work, sports, etc. A view of the largest natural bridge in the world is also shown.

H. Winik

WHEN an American goes to London to engage in business he either makes a big success of it or he falls flatter than a custard pie dropped from the top of the Woolworth Tower. There seems to be no middle ground; it is either one thing or the other, for reasons not necessary to set forth here.

Winik is in London to stay. Within three years he has worked himself into a dominating position in the European feature film market. He is one of the most extensive buyers of negatives in the world's market and his territorial purchases know no bounds. He buys big features on a world rights basis and sells the rights by continents.



H. Winik.

As customary with successful Americans, Winik began small. He is a native Californian and soon after the San Francisco earthquake made his debut as a moving picture man by starting a store show in the Coast Metropolis. He made money from the start and soon opened more theaters in other cities on the Pacific Slope, some of which houses he still owns. He was the first man to buy an exclusive feature for the far west.

In 1911 Mr. Winik came to New York with the idea of establishing an eastern theater circuit. During a lull in the proceedings he took his family on a pleasure trip to Europe. On this journey he studied conditions abroad in all the important centers. To him it seemed that the motion picture business in London was in a state of lethargy and needed someone just like himself to wake it up. Since that time Winik has been a Londoner and the business there is no longer in a dormant state.

He began by securing the European rights to Dante's "Inferno." He leased a theater on the Strand, called it the "De Luxe," and ran the picture for forty weeks. With the "Inferno" he established the territorial rights idea in England and has been at it ever since. This branch of his business occupies a four story building. He is the heaviest advertiser in his line and uses space extravagantly in every trade paper in Europe, under the plain business name of H. Winik.

At this writing he is in America attending to the establishing of The De Luxe Attractions Film Co., which will handle the big features he brought with him, "Sealed Orders" and "The Blue Mouse" and other big five and six reel features that will be coming over from time to time. The regular Winik output is contracted for in America by the Apex Film Co., of New York.

CORRECTION OF AMBROSIO TITLE.

Through some peculiar kink in the eye of the printer and something similar the matter with the proof reader, the Moving Picture World permitted an Ambrosio picture to be announced as "The Mystery of the Glass Coffin" when, as a matter of fact, it should have read "The Mystery of the Glass Cage." Readers of the World are requested to make note of this. The advertisement appears on page 1492 of the issue of March 21.

OPENS DETROIT OFFICE.

The Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company, of New York, have opened an office at 815 Dime Bank Building, Detroit, Mich., to handle the business the company is receiving from that part of the country. The office will be in charge of D. H. Fink, who has been associated with the company for some time.

EDWARD ABELES IN "BREWSTER'S MILLIONS."

THE accompanying likenesses are faithful reproductions of the appearance in the film version of "Brewster's Millions" of Edward Abeles, who, for five years, played the leading role of Monty Brewster, in the stage version, and who is now appearing before the camera in the Jesse L. Lasky production of the famous play.

Edward Abeles,
as Monty's Father.

In the prologue, Mr. Abeles plays the part of Robert Brewster, father of "Monty." Mr. Abeles plays the role of father for two parts, then becomes the son, "Monty." A small boy plays the role of "Monty" while Mr. Abeles is characterizing the elder Brewster. A boy was located who bore a strong resemblance to Mr. Abeles, and as Abeles plays the father with but the addition of a mustache, the likeness and family resemblance throughout the entire five parts is bound to add to the interest of the picture.

"Brewster's Millions," in stage form, began with "Monty" a full-grown man. The dialogue of the play conveyed the earlier life of the Brewsters, but no action of the piece conveyed any inkling of "Monty's" past. In Lasky's film version of the famous Winchell Smith-George Barr McCutcheon comedy drama, the prologue in two parts, shows an interesting career leading right on up to the time "Monty" inherits the tainted million which he is compelled to spend in a year.

Edward Abeles,
as Monty Brewster

Monty Brewster, during the years that "Brewster's Millions" was one of the most popular plays of the stage, made hundreds of thousands of friends throughout the country, so his reappearance on the screen will be welcomed by his delighted admirers. Undoubtedly the realism of the play will be greatly enhanced by the possibilities of the motion picture, so there should be much in the film that is different from the dramatic production. What Lasky and his able assistants did for "The Squaw Man" would indicate that as much or more will be done to make "Brewster's Millions a big drawing card. It is understood that the picture is about finished and that it will soon be ready for release.

EDUARDS TO REMAIN AT THE REGENT.

The announcement that Carl Eduards, musical director of the Regent Theater, New York, was to accept a similar position at the new Strand Theater, on Broadway, is denied by Manager McClintic of the Regent and by General Manager Balsdon of the Photoplay Theaters Company, owners of the Regent. Upon inquiry, addressed to Mr. Eduards, that gentleman explained that when he was engaged in the first instance by Mr. Rothapfel it was with the understanding that he was to have the direction of the music for both Regent and Strand, as Mr. Rothapfel expected to become manager of both houses. Since that time Mr. Rothapfel has severed his connection with the interests controlling the Regent and Mr. Eduards has elected to remain with that theater in preference to going with Mr. Rothapfel to the Strand.

ECLAIR HAS DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

On Tuesday of last week the Eclair Film Company had the honor of entertaining at the Fort Lee studios, former Mayor Fitzgerald, of Boston, accompanied by Augustus T. Donovan, Edward G. Fitzgerald, John A. Keane, all from the Hub.

Mr. Fitzgerald was an interested observer of the studio life at Fort Lee and before leaving posed before one of the cameras of the company with Miss Tennant, the leading woman. Mr. Fitzgerald is one of Boston's staunchest baseball fans and from the interest he has displayed in motion pictures, he bids fair to add the "movies" as one of his hobbies.

MADAME MARIA CARMI.

Mme. Maria Carmi, who plays the lead in the forthcoming film production of "A Venetian Night," is the leading woman of the Deutsches Theater, Berlin. The picture is a reproduction of the pantomime which had such a run at the Palace Theater, London, and as in the case of the English presentation was produced under the supervision of Professor Max Reinhardt. The pantomime was described as "a spectacular play." The picture was made in Venice by the original London cast. The story was written by Carl Vollmoeller, the author of "The Miracle." "A Venetian Night" will be booked in this country by the Masko Film Company. Herman Mason, of the Masko Company, brought the subject to this country from Europe on his recent return from a three months' trip on the continent.

Madame Maria Carmi.

POLI'S CIRCUITS WILL BOOK FEATURES.

A mild sensation was caused among feature men by the announcement that S. Z. Poli, the owner of many theaters in New England and other parts of the East, has decided to incorporate a regular feature service into his programs. He has just appointed the former manager of the Bijou in New Haven, Mr. Richard C. Miller, as his head booking agent. Mr. Miller has taken hold of his new duties and has for the present established offices with the James Clancy Booking Agency at 1505 Broadway, New York. Mr. Wilson, of the Poli house in Waterbury, has taken Miller's position as manager of the Bijou in New Haven.

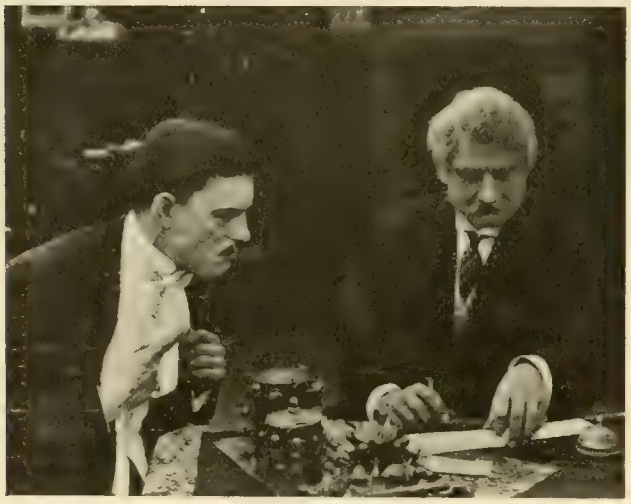
ALICE JOYCE RUNNING.

No, it's not what you thought first, for thought Alice Joyce is setting quite a pace for her sisters of the photoplay, the title Alice Joyce Running, is the name of a nine-pound young lady recently born to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Running, of Fairbanks, Alaska, her father being connected with the Tanana Theater, of that city. Mr. Running is a regular reader of the Moving Picture World; he says that the picture business is a bit quiet there this winter, but that he is quite well satisfied under the circumstances.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE EMBEZZLER" (Gold Seal).

Can a man, through long years of honest living, doing his duty to society and his family, redeem himself in the eyes of the law and society from a crime committed in his youth. Say that one near to you had been an embezzler—he had repented and turned to straight living and, while never having answered to the law of the land, had labored to wipe out his guilt through right living. Would it be right—if this crime was discovered in after years—to put that person behind bars? However, no matter which way you think on this question, this play will prove exceptionally engrossing to you, for, while it tells a gripping story full of heart interest, it handles a question that is big and vital.



Scene from "The Embezzler." (Gold Seal).

According to the play, a sinister family skeleton overshadows and threatens to wreck the lives of two innocent persons—until the forces of evil defeat themselves by the same methods with which they at first gained ascendency over others. John Spencer had been a criminal at one time in his life—he feared the iron hand of the law. But as much as he feared the law falling upon his shoulder and forcing him to answer for his misdeeds of long ago, he loved his daughter. For her he thought to do right. Pauline was ignorant of her father's past and she idolized him as a good father and a man of principles. Was it a tragedy that she learned her mistake? Could she continue to love her father after knowing the truth about him? These are all questions that make "The Embezzler" a play with depth to it—yet one which has a broad appeal for everyone who knows the deepest emotion of the human heart-love.

GRIFFITH TO PICTURE "HOME, SWEET HOME."

Preparations are being made by D. W. Griffith, Mutual director, to produce with an all-star cast a five-part picture based upon John Howard Paine's immortal poem, "Home, Sweet Home." Harry E. Aitken, president of the Mutual, is credited with the idea and Mr. Griffith is to have carte blanche in bringing it to a successful realization.

Eighteen of the most capable and best known players will take part in the production. They are Henry Walthall, Owen Moore, Courtenay Foote, Donald Crisp, Robert Harron, Ralph Lewis, Edward and John Dillon, James Kirkwood, now a director, but formerly a celebrated film actor; Earle Foxe, Blanche Sweet, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Mae Marsh, Irene Hunt, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden and Fay Tincher.

If a more distinguished cast has been assembled for a motion picture we have yet to hear of it. The coming of this picture will be awaited with great interest.

"THE MONSTER AND THE GIRL" (Solax).

Staged with that artistic touch characteristic of Madame Alice Blaché's productions. It is doubtful whether a four-reel picture has ever been presented containing the amount of action seen in the coming Solax drama entitled "The Monster and the Girl."

The very nature of the story which is laid both in New York City and in a little fishing village on the New England coast makes the exceptional number of intensely dramatic scenes not only consistent, but absolutely necessary to the development of the interesting plot, and the result is a photo-drama which commands one's whole attention early in the first reel and holds it until the very end of the last exciting scene.

A spectacular fire at sea leads to the adopting of a baby boy saved by a humble fisherman, who has a daughter the boy's age. The boy inherits a fortune which is held in trust by a New York banker, who becoming financially involved, seeks the boy's consent to invest his fortune in a manner that will cover his own misuse of part of the funds. The boy's refusal leads to the banker making love to the fisherman's daughter who elopes with him, after the banker has been cared for by her father during his recovery from the results of a fight with the boy and a fall from a high cliff.

Scene from "The Monster and the Girl." (Solax).

As the story advances, the banker becomes more heavily involved financially, forming an alliance with crooks to rob his own bank, and finally changes his identity to escape from his confederates and the police.

A desperate fight on a swinging cable in mid-air marks the end of the banker's miserable career, and the drama reaches a unique and beautiful climax in the fisherman's humble hut down by the sea. Released March 25th.

HAL REID AT RUBY STUDIO.

The current week marked the completion of Hal Reid's crowning work, a multiple-reel feature entitled, "The Last Man on Earth." The picture was made at the Ruby Twinplex Studio, and that establishment achieved another success in accomplishing the unusual. Mr. Reid's story is a romance written around a scientific theme, and the smashing of a grand piano by the axe of a mad man was only one of the stunts. A part of the story calls for the filming of an earthquake and the destruction of the world. For this purpose, a gigantic reproduction of the universe was constructed, and a mechanical arrangement was built inside of it. This allowed the turn of a lever which opened a great, rough crevice which split the globe asunder while it rocked to and fro and lightning flashed. The clouds about it were given a fierce light, and the entire effect was as if the end of the world had come.

"ROME OR DEATH" (Inter-Continent).

The Inter-Continent Film Company will release in this country this week the five-part spectacular production, "Rome or Death," the work of Chev. Aldo Molinari, the well-known Italian director who already has many superb film productions to his credit. In this effort he is assisted by G. Gattaneo, who accomplished so much with the character of Nero in "Quo Vadis?" and lately as Napoleon in the Cines-Kleine production, "For France and Napoleon." Signora de Leonardis, the successful Italian emotional actress, also appears in this production. Molinari depends entirely upon Scene from "Rome or Death." (Inter Continent).

history for his drama and the Italian struggle for independence of 1867-1870 has been selected. This event is regarded by many historical experts as one of the most remarkable in all history. Anyhow it gives ample opportunity for big settings, including several thrilling battle scenes and those in which the great patriot-general, Garibaldi, appears are marked by some of the most pretentious staging Molinari has ever assayed. Above all he has utilized the impressive old gates of the Eternal City and the background of the Vatican to secure some mighty picturesque effects.

"A DEAL IN REAL ESTATE" (Lubin).

This picture might be called melodrama, but 'tis best to list it as comedy. Real estate deals are very much like house trades, each party is looking for the best of the bargain, old Deacon Ezra Gregston is not satisfied with the deal that he knows to be much in his favor, but because it is accepted quick, tries a bad trick to shave the price of an estate that he is crazy to possess. His scheme is idiotic and naturally falls through and holds him up to ridicule. There is a charming love romance in the story and cupid gets the best of the situation, despite the opposition of the tricky old deacon. Ghost stories nowadays are not taken seriously and the job that the old trickster puts up is a huge joke. The cast is one of the best of the Lubin studio, giving Edgar Jones and Louise Huff excellent roles. The picture will doubtless be received with favor.

Scene from "A Deal in Real Estate." (Lubin).

"THE GREAT GOLD ROBBERY" (Greene's).

"The Great Gold Robbery" is a three-reel feature being offered on the State right basis by W. E. Greene, long known as an exchange man in New England, and who has recently opened a feature sales office.

The story concerns itself with the robbery of a huge consignment of raw gold. One interesting incident in the production is the big fight on the river, in which revolvers in the hands of the crooks and the Thames police spit and bark liberally, and heads crack under the impact of blackjacks in the general rough house.

A champion high diver is a star performer, and his head foremost dive from the Westminster bridge into the Thames to rescue one of the police, who has been thrown off the boat in the fight, is thrilling. There is an exciting climb up the framework of the gigantic crane, in whose basket high aloft lies the bound hero. His sweetheart does the climbing, and it was a job for one of considerable nerve. The action in the film moves along briskly, and there are no stretches of dullness.

"TRACKED IN THE DESERT" (Itala).

Daring villainy of an uncompromising kind should keep the spectators of this four-part drama on the qui vive all through the film. A girl stands between a man and a great deal of money. On shipboard he drugs her and boxes her up in an improvised coffin, which he commits to the waves. But he throws the wrong box overboard and the girl escapes from her wooden prison. Then he suspends a heavy weight in the rigging of the ship calculating that in due time it will fall on her and kill her. It falls and misses her. Arrived in Algeria he arranges for a party of Bedouin horsemen to kidnap her. She is flung over a cliff and left to die; but is rescued by a kind-hearted member of the tribe, who goes to his death for his act of humaneness. Meanwhile the girl's death has been reported to her parents and the villain, who is the next heir, lays claim to her money. But as a sequel to her escape she arrives home in the nick of time to prevent the spoilations and the villain is handed over to the police.

Scene from "Tracked in the Desert." (Itala).

The impersonator of the villain made himself famous as the master cracksman of "Tigris." "Tracked in the Desert" is an exciting Itala feature and the ship and desert scenes are thrilling to a degree.

"THE PRICE OF SILENCE."

This story is told in the most dramatic manner, the leading roles being carried by those prime Kleine-Celio favorites, Francesca Bertini and Albert Collins. Both players are at their best in this remarkable photoplay, and the strongly human quality of their work has much to do with its success.

Photographically, this is one of the best Kleine-Celio releases of the season. The technical skill of the camera man is patent in every scene. Splendid settings, capable direction, and adequate portrayal combine to make this one of the most faultless photoplays yet presented.

How a gentleman burglar marries an heiress and then fights a losing battle with the blackmailing associates of his unregenerate days; how the young wife learns the truth, and how she meets the situation, makes a human interest story that will leave a lasting impression. It is scheduled for release March 31st.

"THE CONVENT GATE."

The Marchioness Townshend, the author of "The Convent Gate," is already well known for writing interesting and somewhat out of the ordinary film plays and has in this, her third effort, far exceeded any of her previous works. We have in "The Convent Gate" a beautiful succession of pictures set in the most delightful surroundings, and a story which not only makes a direct appeal, but in places tugs at the heart strings in a manner beloved of picture theater patrons.

The story has been most sympathetically handled, and will appeal to most people with irresistible force. These pictures of life behind convent walls are something so entirely new on the screen, and provide such an absolute and dramatic contrast to the scenes which precede and follow them, that they serve all the more effectively to rivet the attention.

"The Convent Gate" deals, as we have said, in an altogether unusual way with the life-story of a girl who, in the saddest circumstances, is rescued by sympathetic nuns and becomes a novice. Prior to this, however, we have some most sensational fire scenes, a daring fight taking place while the combatants are actually surrounded by flames. From the very outset the sympathy of the audience is assured by the poignancy of the scene in which a charming and beautiful girl is driven raving mad on receipt of the news that her bridegroom-to-be has eloped with her younger sister.

Scene from "The Convent Gate." (Masko).

We see the bride putting the final touches to her wedding attire when the news reaches her, and gradually we notice the effect it has upon her mind, till at last reason gives way beneath the strain. The acting of Miss Dorothy Bellew in these scenes is wonderfully impressive, and at no time overdone. They will long be remembered as a most remarkable study in psychology.

The exclusive rights for the United States and Canada are held by the Masko Film Company, 145 West Forty-fifth Street, New York.

"UMBRELLA PARTIES" AND "CAMERAMEN'S TEAS."

The recent rain which delayed work at all the Los Angeles studios was felt by the Majestic Company, but the ingenious cameramen utilized a device which enabled them to take pictures when the light was good, even if the rain was falling at the time. Umbrellas were tied over the cameras, and although a slight drizzle was falling a number of scenes were taken which otherwise would have had to be delayed indefinitely.

"Tango teas" are quite the thing, but "Cameramen's teas" are at present held at the Majestic studio. The crank turners have tea in the morning, and in the afternoon about five. William Crolly, George Peters and Frank Urson are known to like the beverage, but when Arthur Cadwell was seen drinking the Oolong, gasps of astonishment escaped from the onlookers. Whether they take tea because they believe it is a charm against static, the cameramen refuse to say.

"ANNE BOLEYN" (Kleine Eclipse).

One of the best and most beautiful studies of the courtship and death of Anne Boleyn by Henry VIII is a three-reel subject to be released through the General Film Company, made by the Eclipse Company, of Paris. The scenario was especially prepared by the famous French novelist, Max Pemberton. The actors and actresses were collected among the London and Paris theaters with an eye to their adaptability for the respective parts. Miss Laura Cowie, of His Majesty's Theater, London, plays Anne Boleyn; Mr. Decoeur, of Sarah Bernhardt Theater, Paris, plays Henry VIII; Mr. Deneubourg, of Sarah Bernhardt Theater, Paris, plays Lord Suffolk; Mr. Raulin, of the Varieties Theater, Paris, plays Thomas Wyatt; Mille. Methivier, of the Odeon, Paris, plays Jane Seymour, and Duc, of the Sarah Bernhardt Theater, Paris, plays Margaret. Costumes by William Clarkson, London.

"THE DREAM WOMAN" (Blaché Feature).

Adapted from the famous work of Wilkie Collins by Mme. Alice Blaché and produced by her in a manner so original and so charming that it is a real classic of the silent drama, "The Dream Woman" is one of the most noteworthy feature productions of the year.

The peculiar atmosphere formed by the clever intermingling of the people of the spirit world with real flesh and blood characters gives to the drama a fascination which holds the spectator spellbound and makes the offering unique in its originality of story and of treatment.

An interesting study in psychology "The Dream Woman" shows how the normal mind may be influenced by autosuggestion and coincidence. First visited by a beautiful woman who seeks his life only in his dreams, the hero of the drama is haunted by a constant fear which controls him even in his waking hours. The recurrence of the same dream on his birthday from year to year adds to his unhappy state of mind, but he finally marries a beautiful girl who is recognized by his mother as "The Dream Woman" and who finally forces him to leave her because of her dissolute habits.

Scene from "The Dream Woman." (Blache).

After years of unhappiness caused by the subconscious presence of the woman, coincidence places him upon his birthday bound and helpless at her feet and he meets death at her hand in the very manner of his dreams.

The wonderfully artistic treatment of this extraordinary subject by the master hand of Alice Blaché makes it not only intensely interesting but invests it with thrills that are as frequent and effective as they are natural and legitimate.

MIDGAR LONDON OFFICE SELLING AMERICAN FILMS.

The foreign exhibition rights on the Sterling Camera & Film Company's four-reel production, "Over Niagara Falls," have been disposed of through the London office of Midgar Features. Sample prints of the following features have been sent to the London office of the Midgar Company for the disposal of foreign rights: "The Stampede of Fate" (Gorman Film Mfg. Co., Inc.)); "Evangeline" (Canadian Bioscope Co., Ltd.); "One Hundred Years of Mormonism" and "From Dusk to Dawn" (Pan-American Film Mfg. Co., Inc.).

General Manager Graham would be glad to hear from American feature manufacturers desirous of selling the foreign rights on any of their productions.

ACCIDENT SHOWN IN PATHE WEEKLY.

A remarkable motion picture of the accident which put Marquis and his Sunbeam car out of the running in the Grand Prize race at Santa Monica, Cal., is shown in Pathe's Weekly No. 22. A still photograph, equally unusual, was taken at the moment of the crash by an enterprising newspaper photographer, representing the Los Angeles Tribune, and is shown herewith.

Marquis in his Sunbeam car at the moment of its overturning in the Grand Prize Race at Santa Monica.

Pathe's motion picture camera man had his instrument trained on Death Curve at the moment when Marquis, leader of the field, swung round the curve, trailed by a blinding blanket of dust and smoke. More eloquently and accurately than human eye-witness could describe, the motion picture film tells the story of the crash.

"A SON OF THE SEA" (Kleine-Cines).

"A Son of the Sea," a two-reel feature of more than ordinary merit, will be released through the General Film Company, Tuesday, April 7. It tells a romantic story of hidden identity, commercial warfare and thrilling adventure. One of the scenes shows an exciting race between two powerful motor boats, plowing their way through the water at a terrific rate of speed.

Ross Burnett, a young engineer, learns that he was found as a child, cast up by the tide after a storm at sea and raised as his own by the man he always has believed to be his father. He invents a new motor which he believes will revolutionize modern industry, and persuades the president of the Bright Motor Works to manufacture it. How a rival in love plots his downfall and becomes the unwitting instrument of a reunion between Ross' real father and his long lost son, and how his marriage to the girl of his heart ends a long commercial feud between his father and hers, makes a story replete with excitement and strong human interest from start to finish.

Scene from "A Son of the Sea." (Kleine-Cines).

"TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY" IN FIVE REELS.

Edwin S. Porter, technical director of the Famous Players, now personally directing the work of Miss Mary Pickford on the Pacific Coast, has been so impressed with the attractiveness and importance of "Tess of the Storm Country," in which Miss Pickford plays the lead, and which was originally announced as of four reels and to be released on March 20, that he has increased the length of the subject to five reels and postponed the date of release to March 30.

"THE TURNING POINT" (American).

This very pleasing two-part production by the American Film Manufacturing Company is excellently produced under the direction of Lorimer Johnston. Sociological theorists are universally agreed as to the effect of environment on the development of mind and body, and this subject will furnish ample food for thought.

Nan Clark (Vivian Rich) has been reared in an atmosphere that was conducive to anything but good character and she is following the leads that are held out to her. Yet when opportunity presents itself she evinces the strength of mind that is requisite to change her destiny.

Scene from "The Turning Point." (American).

Dayton Reeves (Sydney Ayres), brought up in a home of wealth and comfort, is following the natural bent of his heart and devotes himself to his club with a spirit of recklessness. The meeting of Nan and Dayton brings about a change in the life of both. The plot is well executed and holds the interest throughout. The leads are ably supported by a cast of popular "Flying A" stars.

MUTUAL TO EXHIBIT IN LONDON.

Roy Aitken, vice-president of the Western Import Company, which handles the foreign business of the Mutual Film Corporation, of which his brother, Harry E. Aitken is president, sailed last week on the Lusitania for London, where he will endeavor to book as many as possible of the leading "legitimate" theaters of the English metropolis for the presentation of the Mutual's big feature films just as the Continental Feature Film Company is now doing in New York. Already the Continental has "The Gangsters of New York," a Keystone comedy, and "With Col. Roosevelt in South America," three Mutual features at Weber's Theater and the West End in Harlem and "The Great Leap" at the New York.

NEWMAN'S NEW CATALOG.

The Newman Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, 101 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y., and 108 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill., have just published a new and complete catalog, showing all their very latest brass poster frames, easels, railings, etc., for theaters. S. J. Newman, secretary of the firm, advises that any interested party can obtain a copy of this catalog free of charge for the asking. The outlook with them is very encouraging, and their salesmen on the road report that theaters are looking forward to a good season.

"THE CONVICT'S SON" (Great Northern Special).

There is a strong element of dramatic interest pervading this current offering of the Great Northern Special Feature Film Company, the plot from the beginning possessing the quality of unfolding situations unlooked for and compelling. Many of the incidents may be placed under the general classification of sensational, but there is nothing illogical or impossible in the general scheme of construction. The convict in this instance is an aged widow who is made to pay the penalty for a crime she had not committed. During her term of imprisonment she occupies a cell in company with a young adventuress, and to the latter she confides the hiding place of money she had won as a lottery prize. The widow has withheld from her only son the fact of her good luck, and feeling the approach of death she requests her cell-mate to give the money to him.

Scene from "The Convict's Son." (Gt. Northern Special).

From this point till the close, the plot reveals the evil resulting from the lottery prize, the adventuress having appropriated the money to her own use. The son falls in love with the betrayer of his mother's confidence and is made to face ordeals calculated to shatter all confidence in the sincerity of human nature. The climax is exceptionally gripping and out of the ordinary. The leading roles in the photodrama are played by Miss Elsie Frolich and Mr. V. Psilander, artists well known for their excellent work in earlier Great Northern productions. From the standpoint of staging and photography, the feature is up to the high standard set by the producing company.

"THE BOND OF LOVE" (Selig).

It is an ancient aphorism that "A child is the light of the household." The Trasks, a childless couple, grow petulant. The husband expresses himself that his evenings bore him, and his wife agrees with him. He takes up a residence at his club; so she devotes herself entirely to bridge whist and social frivolities—and they drift apart. Eventually, the husband visits his lawyer, with a view to securing a divorce. He has hardly left the lawyer's office before the wife appears for the same purpose. The lawyer finds they have absolutely no grounds. As his own life is happy in his little family, he suggests that the lonely woman adopt a baby. She does so. It eventually brings her husband back to her. He gives up his club; she gives up bridge, and they are happy and content in the new life that has come to them.

Maxwell Sargent appears as the club man. Adrienne Kroell, as his wife; and Grant Foreman, as the clear-visioned lawyer. This subject will be released April 3rd.

A CONVENTION OF THE WARNER HEADS.

On March 10th, nine of the branch managers of Warner's Features, Inc., representing the Eastern division of the country, met in convention at Pittsburgh, to discuss business conditions with P. A. Powers, president; H. M. Warner, sales manager, and H. M. Goetz, assistant sales manager of the home office. Those present were: Max Herring, Pittsburgh; D. J. Chatkin, Buffalo; S. C. Kingsbury, Toronto; G. D. Briggs, Philadelphia; A. M. Muller, Cincinnati; H. Charnas, Cleveland; Phil Solomon, Chicago; S. B. Kramer, Indianapolis; J. P. Anderson, Washington, D. C.

Enthusiastic reports were submitted by all and the success of the Warner proposition—that of releasing three three-part features weekly—was established beyond any doubt. Mr. Powers outlined a number of new selling points and the entire meeting was given up to "Gingery" talks and the discussion of new ideas.

"THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH."

"The Cloister and the Hearth," the only historical novel written by Charles Reade, and considered by most critics to be his best work, has been produced in five parts by Hepworth, London. One need only recall the fact that Hepworth produced the seven-part feature, Charles Dickens, "David Copperfield," and the four-part version of Oliver Goldsmith's, "The Vicar of Wakefield," to appreciate the merit of this latest effort in translating the best works of famed authors to the screen.

The film version adheres unusually close to the story, and students of literature will be surprised at the freedom from anachronisms for a subject of so ambitious a character. It place and period—Holland and Italy in the fifteenth century—required careful consideration and closest attention to detail.

Gerard holds our interest from the time of his secret marriage to Margaret, and his subsequent journey to Rome, on which he makes a lasting friendship with the Burgundian soldier of fortune, Denys, until his return, several years later, as a priest, to his wife and little son, from whom his duty to his Master forces him to say farewell. "The Cloister and the Hearth" will be released shortly by the Hepworth American Film Corporation, of which Albert Blinkhorn is president.

"KING CHARLES II" (I. S. P.).

This elaborate four-part dramatic subject was originally suggested by the book, "Ovingdean Grange," by Harrison Ainsworth, but for the purpose of dramatic production the various situations in which the king figures have been augmented and other famous historical incidents included. The period dealt with is that immediately following the Battle of Worcester.

Scene from "King Charles II." (I. S. P.)

This production claims to be not merely a spectacular picture presenting large numbers of players, nor a picture depending for its success upon well-chosen scenic backgrounds. "King Charles II" contains these desirable qualities and in addition has been produced with a view to presenting many highly dramatic situations of intense power and interest.

A LOW-PRICED POSTER SERVICE ON PACIFIC COAST.

A new departure in the poster advertising line, which reduces the expense of necessary house advertising, has been inaugurated in San Francisco by the Davis Brothers, who have been closely identified with the theatrical and motion picture business for many years in that city. They are successfully conducting a five-cent poster exchange, handling the posters of all film productions, association, independent and feature pictures, and charging a uniform rate of five cents per sheet.

A POPULAR ECLECTIC FEATURE.

Jule Burnstein, manager of the local Eclectic Feature Film Exchange, reports that he has made advance bookings on the "Perils of Pauline" in twenty New York City theaters. Special attention is called to the fact that eleven of Wm. Fox's theaters are among the "first runs."

Judging by the number of telegrams being received at the Eclectic office and reports of bookings from other Eclectic exchanges, every indication points to similar unusual activity in their territories.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE

Pathé Studio and Players
Leased for this production by
The Eclectic Film Company

Made and released by

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY
110 West 40th Street
New York City

Thousands of People Are Asking

What Did the Mummy Say?

Thousands of People are Trying to Win Part of $25,000.00 in Prizes

Offered for the Best Answer

Thousands more who will not make the effort to write their solution of the greatest mystery of the modern moving picture drama are waiting anxiously to see whether the film will give them any clue to the solution. Every one of these people, all their friends and thousands more are ready-made customers for you if you will strike "while the iron is hot." If you want the benefits in your town and want to secure the cream of the results of the most widely advertised film ever put out by any firm —

Wire for First Episode Today

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

An Egyptian Mummy 4000 Years Old "Speaks" in

The Perils of Pauline

What Did the Mummy Say?
To Whom Did She Speak?

Seven of the Largest Sunday Papers

in the United States are running the story in serial form.

Think of it—a story so thrilling, so full of action and interest that the largest single chain of newspapers in the world is featuring it in their Sunday edition.

Every week an installment—every installment a mystery—for every mystery a solution is possible. That means ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS IN PRIZES every week to the readers of the Sunday papers.

More than ten million people read these papers every week. That means more than ten million patrons waiting for a chance to see the film. Are you going to be the one to give them the chance to pay their good money to you?

Wire for First Episode Today

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY
110 West 40th Street New York City

Mr. Paul Panzer as "Raymond Owen," a very remarkable villain.

Miss Pearl White, the Popular Pathé Leading Lady, who plays the part of Pauline. Miss White's Gowns are by Lady Duff-Gordon, the famous "Lucile."

Mr. Crane Wilbur as "Harry Marvin" an extremely attractive lover

The Perils of Pauline

As Played by the Great Pathé Players in the Pathé Studio in Jersey City is a film full of action, intense interest, wonderful situations, daring thrills, wonderful scenic effects — in fact, THE PERILS OF PAULINE would be a wonderful success without the added importance of the publicity and the Twenty-five Thousand Dollars in prizes which are offered.

Pauline has an awful struggle between love and ambition. Owen, a very remarkable villain, invents the most ingenious plans to secure Pauline's fortune. Harry Marvin certainly has his work cut out for him foiling these plans.

The action of the story includes flying machine accidents, thrilling rescues, fires at sea, train wrecks, automobile accidents. In fact, everything that can be introduced as a "thrill."

Wire for First Episode Today

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

"THE SILVER LOVING CUP" (Imp).

Here is another play produced by Frank Crane, the young director who won recognition with such plays as "Jane Eyre" and "The Opal Ring." Stuart Paton, his assistant, is the author of the play, in two reels, whose action swings around a silver loving cup, given to a celebrated young surgeon by his co-workers for discovering a cure for cancer. Alexander Gaden plays the young surgeon, the central figure of the play. He goes through all the suffering and misery that it is possible for a human being to go through and comes out on top. His wife, played by Leah Baird, is one of those foolish women who loves the flighty pleasures of society more than home and children. She too suffers; she goes through a leavening experience, down through the muck and mire of the lowest society, to come out again, thanks to her husband, a wiser and better woman. And through it all looms up the Silver Loving Cup, a beacon to something better and cleaner.

Scene from "The Silver Loving Cup." (Imp.)

ECLAIR'S FORT LEE FACTORY BURNED.

The factory of the Eclair Company in Lynwood Avenue, near Main Street, Fort Lee, N. J., was destroyed by fire on the afternoon of Thursday, March 19. The blaze started in the joining room. While a considerable amount of positive film was lost the employes succeeded in saving practically all of the negatives. The studio, which is in a separate building, was untouched by the flames. No one was injured. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

Notes of the Trade

FRED J. BALSHOFER, manager of the Ford Sterling Comedy Company at the Universal Pacific Coast studios, is literally deluged in letters from those who are competing for the $25 reward offered to the person who suggests the most appropriate name for the new brand of Universal comedies in which Mr. Sterling is featured. Fantastical, biblical, mythological are among the names suggested: "Sterling Silver," "New Era," "Mirth," "Lodestone," "Skylark," "Tip-Top," "Funny Film," "Stetson," "Standard," "Bohemian," "Uni-Ford," "Target," "Star," "Universal Ford," "Crackerjack," "Orpheus" and "Excelsior."

* * *

Phil Gleichman, who has been out West, opening new offices for the World Film Corporation, has made arrangements with George P. Endert to handle the business of the Seattle office located at 1214½ Third Avenue.

* * *

The Mohawk Film Company have arranged for the production of twelve notable plays including the famous drama of James A. Herne, of which "Hearts of Oak" will be the first release. This popular feature film is in five reels, and was staged under the direction of Wray Physioc, who made the scenario from the play.

* * *

For the Universal six-reel feature, "Samson" and all other special features to follow, two million stamps or seals are being printed for distribution to patrons throughout America. This set of stamps, relating to "Samson" only, will bear some special scenes from the play, in five colors. Coupons will be printed in various newspapers throughout the country and motion picture magazines. These coupons are to be cut out and presented by the patron at the box-office window at the time of showing the special feature where the seals can be had, after leaving name and address.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company uses so many different things in their moving pictures which they must borrow or rent, that they have bought their own fire department, because of the great difficulty in hiring a suitable equipment. The Vitagraph Fire Department consists of a hose reel, hose wagon, steamer, ladder truck, chemical and water tower.

* * *

Arrangements have just been completed to book the big feature films of the World Film Corporation over a circuit of theaters for the summer months.

A. D. Flintom, of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, of Kansas City, Mo., has acquired the rights on the following subjects of the Film Releases of America: "The Missing Woman," "The Firefly," "A Life For a Life," "Secret of Adrianople," "Outlawed" and "Gallows of the Gods."

* * *

The first Ford Sterling comedy to be released through the Universal Program is now in course of production at the Hollywood (Cal.), studios of the Universal, and will be a rip-roarer. The story is built around the Vanderbilt Cup and the Grand Prix automobile races, held at Santa Monica, on February 26th and 28th.

* * *

Maurice Costello, the Vitagraph moving picture star, has been absolutely forced to request his legions of admirers to refrain from presenting him with gold watches and chains.

* * *

Nearly two thousand members of the moving picture colony around Los Angeles, California, gathered on the evening of Saturday, February 28, 1914, in the large ball room of the Virginia Hotel, Long Beach, California, as the guests of Messrs. H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer, proprietors of "Balboa Feature Films," the event being an invitation celebration of the opening of the extension of the Balboa studios at Long Beach, California.

* * *

George S. Bothwell, sales representative for the Simplex machine people is back in New York after his maiden trip through the Middle West. For a beginner, George has done mighty well, and he bids fair to be a good Simplex booster.

* * *

Tom Tynan, Warden of the Colorado State Penitentiary, who was featured in "The Hand of the Law," by the Colorado Motion Picture Company, Canyon City, Colo., says that being a star is great, but he feels hurt because he cannot play leads all the time.

* * *

Allan Dwan, director of Gold Seal dramas at the Universal Pacific Coast studios, has just finished the production entitled, "The Great Universal Mystery." In it are seen not only every detail of motion picture production, but such men as Carl Laemmle, Isidore Bernstein, David Horsley, William H. Swanson, Otis Turner, Phillips Smalley, J. Warren Kerrigan and, in fact, all the directors and stars at the Pacific Coast studios, together with a dozen Eastern exchange managers. All the directors and stars are seen at their work on the big stage—the biggest in the world.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company, which has recently taken over the Manhattan Opera House to show motion pictures, has installed two Power's Cameragraph No. 6A projection machines. The Nicholas Power Company reports the installation of two Power's projecting machines in the Casino Theater, at Twenty-ninth Street and Broadway, New York.

* * *

"A Will o' the Wisp," the new four-reel Balboa feature, teems with sensational exploits. Many of the thrilling scenes were made amid the rushing torrents of the winter flood which recently put many Southern California transportation lines out of operation for several days and caused the death of a number of persons and the loss of much property.

* * *

H. J. Streyckmans, sales manager of the Metropolitan Film Company, reports big sales on "The Money God," the five-reel feature which is being sold on a State Right basis.

* * *

Homer Croy, the noted American humorist who has been engaged by the Universal to tour the world and take special humorous stories for the Universal program, has arrived at the Pacific Coast studios of that company and is associating himself with Director Otis Turner, who will initiate him in the ins and outs of motion picture production. Mr. Croy will remain a month at the Hollywood studios when he will sail for the Hawaiian Islands, and from thence to the Orient.

* * *

Theatrical and newspaper circles were highly amused over the announcement that John Bunny, the Vitagraph motion picture star, has had his face insured for $50,000 against beauty. Why not? Caruso has his voice insured, Paderewski has his fingers insured, Genee has her toes insured, and it cannot be denied that each of these three have insured their meal ticket. Why shouldn't Bunny insure his face? It certainly is his fortune.

* * *

Owing to the increase of business, the Balboa Feature Films have decided to move their general offices from Los Angeles, California, to the studios at Long Beach, on April 1, 1914, and the commodious building adjacent to the studios has been fitted up for general offices.

* * *

William J. Robinson, of Vanascope fame, says that "Simplex" is made on "honor." The "honesty" extends even to the employees. J. E. Robin sales manager for the Simplex people, was at the Columbia Theater last week. In addition to what he saw on the stage worth while, Robin found a pocketbook. The man who claimed it was a "husky," so Robin returned it.

* * *

The Stellar Photoplay Company has finished its production "Forgiven," in the Ruby studio, and the next to move in will be the Mundstuk Features, who are staging a Siberian production under the direction of Mr. Sidney Golden.

* * *

Joseph DeGrasse, veteran actor and motion picture director, who for a number of years was featured in his own productions by the Pathe and Lubin Companies, assumed the directorship on March 9th, of the Universal-Victor Company, in which J. Warren Kerrigan is featured. Mr. DeGrasse comes to the Universal with seasoned experience in motion picture production and a long line of successes in the legitimate field to his credit.

* * *

The Vitagraph Theater has become the Mecca for famous dramatic critics. They do not attend to review the pictures, but rather as a welcome change from their regular duties.

* * *

Henry Harvey, formerly producer with the Famous Players and All-Star productions, has joined the Balboa Feature Films, at Long Beach, Cal., and is in charge of the third acting company.

One of the most talked and written about theaters in the country is the Regent Theater, 116th Street and Seventh Avenue, New York. Columns have been given to it by the trade papers ,and its wonderful projection, which is furnished by two Simplex projectors, gives great satisfaction to its patrons.

* * *

Mr. V. R. Ritchey has just secured a Pathe professional camera from Whyte Whitman Company, for his new company.

* * *

On March 15th the army of cowboys in the employ of the Universal at the ranch and animal farm of that company in the San Fernando Valley, Cal., will hold their big annual Rodeo; the by-word for the occasion is "Let'er buck." Every variety of wild-west contest and sport will be held and visitors and contestants from most of the cattle districts of the West will be present.

* * *

"A Million Bid" and "Goodness Gracious," the two exceptional motion pictures which are being presented at the Vitagraph Theater twice daily, have passed the hundredth performance mark, and capacity business still reigns supreme.

* * *

Mr. George W. Kleiser, of Portland, Ore., part owner of the new $100,000 picture house of that city, recently visited the American studios and laboratories at Santa Barbara, Cal. Mr. Kleiser was accompanied by his wife, and both were much interested in the taking of pictures. They use the Mutual program and are especially strong for "Flying A" and "Beauty" subjects.

* * *

A Mutual Weekly camera man was decidedly fortunate in catching one of the big accidents at the Santa Monica automobile race in California, recently. One of the machines in turning a bend met with an accident and turned several complete somersaults directly in front of the Mutual Weekly operator's camera.

* * *

The Whyte-Whitman Company has just shipped to Mr. Bastos Dias, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, two of their Compact Marvel Outfits.

* * *

While making a fifty-foot fall from a cliff, Bud Chase, of the Colorado Motion Picture Company, received some very painful, if not serious, injuries. A circus net was placed at the foot of the cliff, into which Mr. Chase was to drop. The fall was immense, but a guy rope on the net broke when Chase's body landed and Bud tangled up with a great quantity of cactus and granite boulders.

* * *

The newest song in honor of J. Kerrigan, the famous star of Universal-Victor films, entitled, "The Warren Kerrigan Tango," will soon come from the press of the T. B. Harms Company, of New York.

* * *

In the two-part production "The Last Supper," being put on by Lorimer Johnston, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, Sydney Ayres will represent Christ. Numerous scenes are of the modern age. The representation of Christ will be allegorical. The final scene will show Christ walking on the water of the Sea of Galilee.

* * *

One of the Western representatives of the Mutual Weekly was on board the Union Pacific Overland Limited two weeks ago when it was stalled away up in the Rocky Mountains. He was hung up for two days until the arrival of a big rotary snow plow, propelled by six locomotives. The Mutual Weekly camera man secured some excellent views of the plow in operation.

* * *

King Baggot is producing and playing the title role in "Jim Webb, Senator," a play written by himself revolving about the political intrigues of certain lobbyists at Washington, and the reformation of an adventuress through the association of an old mother and a good man. The play is in three reels and will be released as an Imp.

* * *

The World Film Corporation is distributing an unusually elaborate herald on "The Triumph of an Emperor." It is done in two colors and is entirely different from anything attempted in the motion picture business up to this time.

* * *

Mrs. S. S. Hutchinson, wife of the president of the American Manufacturing Company, gave a reception to the ladies of the Arlington Hotel at the "Flying A" studio last Monday. Several companies furnished a most interesting entertainment.

* * *

The Mutual Weekly has lately covered the Mardi Gras at New Orleans, and the Gasperilla Carnival at Tampa, Florida. The Curtiss Over-Seas Aeroplane Boat also recently went through its evolutions in front of a Mutual Weekly camera, and this, too, is to be shown on Mutual Weekly Number. 64.

* * *

Owing to the increased volume of business, the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, has been compelled to double the capacity of its plant and studios at Long Beach, California, and to centralize, is moving its offices from Los Angeles to Long Beach, Cal.

* * *

Lois Weber, co-director with Phillips Smalley, of the Rex Company, at the Universal Coast studios, has left for San Francisco, where she will spend her two weeks' vacation. During her absence Phillips Smalley will take the leading part in, and direct a drama, entitled, "Purity," written especially for Mr. Smalley by Calder Johnstone.

* * *

The offices of the World Film Corporation have been moved from the World Tower Building to the Leavitt Building, 130 West 46th Street, where they occupy the entire third floor.

* * *

Ed Coxen and Al Heimerl, of the "Flying A" forces, were the first to reach the summit of the San Marcos Pass in an automobile since the recent storms and floods.

* * *

Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, the clever little woman who has piloted the foreign feature films of the Eclair Company to an undeniable success, is in receipt of an enthusiastic letter from the Big Four Feature Company, of Dallas, Texas. They say that Eclair's "Divine Appeal" and "The Lion Tamer's Revenge," are cleaning up in Dallas, and order paper in advance for Eclair's release for March 20th, "The House of Correction" and "Mephistophelia."

* * *

"Schultz, the Paperhanger," is the title of Director Allen Curtis' newest Joker comedy. Max Asher plays the role of Schultz, who becomes a "scab" paperhanger. He has never had any experience in this line of work and when he essays to decorate the walls of rich men's houses what follows is a "caution."

* * *

Through the Denver offices of the World Film Corporation, "Joan of Arc," was leased to the Parochial School, at Rifle, Colo., where it was impossible to handle the crowds. A return engagement has been booked.

* * *

"In the Moonlight" is the title of a coming two-part production by the American Film Manufacturing Company, under direction of Thomas Ricketts. This is the second of the series "In the Firelight," which was so well received both here and abroad.

* * *

Thomas Persons, Superintendent of the Selig Zoo, at Eastlake Park, Cal., has been visiting headquarters in this city for a week past, conferring with W. N. Selig concerning big plans in train for other productions on the princely scale in California.

* * *

Edwin August will soon be seen in a picturesque romance of Old Spain, entitled, "In the Blood." The production of this drama has just begun at the Universal ranch and animal farm in the San Fernando Valley, Cal.

* * *

J. G. Conner, Manager of the St. Louis branch of the World Film Corporation, has built up the business of his office to such a great extent that it was necessary for him to move into larger quarters, and he now occupies an entire floor in the Navarre Building, Sixth and Chestnut Streets.

* * *

"Atlantis," the six-part Great Northern Preferred Feature Film, was booked for an eight days' run at His Majesty's Theater (the Klaw-Erlanger theater), in Montreal, by the International Feature Film Corp., Ltd. This production is the adaptation of Gerhart Hauptmann's famous novel of the same name. It is its first presentation in Canada.

* * *

Johnnie Langmack, the peripatetic property man of the Selig Polyscope Company, accompanied by Sport Pusumla, met several cars last week that had been equipped with heating apparatus in view of carrying a choice line of passengers destined to be entertained in Chicago for a few weeks while en route to the Selig Zoo, at Los Angeles, Cal.

* * *

The first Kerrigan production to be done under the direction of Joseph De Grasse, at the Universal Pacific Coast studios, is entitled, "The Lion." J. Warren Kerrigan plays the part of a millionaire sportsman, nicknamed "The Lion."

* * *

Chris. G. Hall, widely known among Montreal exhibitors, has allied himself with the International Feature Film Corp., Ltd., of Montreal. He will make a personal tour of the Dominion cities with the purpose of extending the International's organization.

* * *

The latest Nestor comedy, which is now being produced at the Universal Pacific Coast studios by Director Al. E. Christie, is entitled, "Their Honeymoon."

* * *

Charles Goetz, traveling representative for the World Film Corporation, returned to the home office last week, after a trip through the West where, he reports, business is in a flourishing condition. Exhibitors are leaning more and more towards big feature films.

* * *

O. E. Goebel, President of the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, has returned East after a several months' visit to the Frontier plant, at Santa Paula, Cal.

* * *

The Mohawk Film Company, Inc., will release one feature film a month. Applications for state rights should be made at the general office of the company, in the Times' Building, New York City. The release following "Hearts of Oak," will be James A. Herne's equally famous play, "Sag Harbor."

State Right Purchases

NOTE.—Exhibitors are requested to keep this list on file or copy from it the names of purchasers in their particular territories. These lists will not be republished and we cannot undertake to furnish back information by mail to those who have neglected to keep a record. Contributors to this department are requested to have their copy conform to the style of the column.

ROME OR DEATH (Inter-Continent—Five Reels). For New York City and New York State, by the E. & W., Transfilm Company, 110-112 West 40th Street, New York.

For all New England States, by the same company.

For Pennsylvania, New Jersey, District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, also by the same.

HER LIFE FOR LIBERTY (Inter-Continent Film). For entire Eastern territory, by E. & W., Transfilm Company, 110-112 West 40th Street, New York City.

For California, by Golgate Feature Service, 234 Eddy St., San Francisco.

For Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas, by Texas Film Corporation, 1917 Main Street, Dallas, Texas.

SEALED ORDERS (De Luxe Attractions Film Co.—Six Reels).

For Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia, by Apex Feature Service, 315 Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.

For Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Kentucky, Iowa and Ohio, by Celebrated Players Film Co., Schiller Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

INDIANA.

J. S. HEBREW, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation branch in Indianapolis, is using a letter from Ed. S. Sourbier to help get new business for the Mutual program. Sourbier virtually credits the Mutual for his successful operation of three houses in Indianapolis, every one of which is an unusual money maker. Sourbier is opening a fourth, the Keystone, which he explains in the letter was named out of compliment to the film service company.

Some local interest attaches to the Edison film "Sophia's Imaginary Visitors," because it is from "Beasley's Christmas Party," by Booth Tarkington. The film played to good houses in South Bend, and is being readily booked for other Indiana points because Tarkington is a Hoosier.

The Art Theater, Gary, Ind., is making advertising capital of the fact that it has the exclusive contract for the Mutual pictures in Gary. The house is playing to good crowds.

Manager Thurston is busy making improvements to the Crystal Theater, Union City. Besides repainting and redecorating the front and interior he is installing the best and most modern ventilating system he could find, and is guaranteeing his patrons a change of air every four minutes. The house will be opened in a few days.

The Etropal Amusement Company, Laporte, has been incorporated for $10,000 to operate picture shows, with J. C. Held, P. A. Baker and M. Baker, of Laporte, given as directors. The company's name Etropal is made by spelling the name Laporte backward.

Manager Clyde Willard, of the Wonderland Theater, Greensburg, has adopted the plan of publishing his entire program for the week in advance, having made arrangements with the Warner Company to be supplied with a program that will permit announcements that are far in advance. Willard makes a nightly change of bill.

A deal has been made between the Indianapolis Star and the Universal Film Manufacturing Company whereby the Star will print each day the story of a Universal film. The new stunt in Indianapolis was started with the Star issue of Friday, the 13th.

The Magnet Film Manufacturing Company, Evansville, filmed the Gasparilla, Florida, carnival recently under the direction of W. T. Morris. The film will run about 3,000 feet and will be about as complete a reproduction of the carnival as could be secured. It will be shown first at the Bonita and Alcazar theaters, Tampa, Florida, and then will be used throughout the country. Included in the film is the Cubs-Browns baseball. Mr. Morris was unusually successful in getting a realistic "fire scene" into the production.

The Vaudette Theater, Connersville, continues to use the "country store," though it calls attention to the fact that a ban has been put on the practice in other cities. The management is asking the people of Connersville to say whether it adds any to their entertainment, and if so, whether it should be continued. If an affirmative answer is given, the country store feature at the Vaudette will be continued.

The Indiana Shoe Retailers' convention in Indianapolis was entertained by J. F. O'Connell, of the United Shoe Machine Company, with a moving picture tracing the history of the shoe from the pigskin strip of pre-historic man to the modern type. The lecture and the pictures formed one of the most interesting features of the convention, according to the shoe men.

Ralph Rinear has bought the Star Theater of O. M. Grubb and Mrs. George Minear. The purchaser is to take charge at once. Mr. Grubb and Mrs. Minear will embark in business in California.

Former Senator J. B. Foraker's commendation of the movies as educators as effective as men and women who teach in schools and colleges is being used by boosters of the moving picture all over Indiana. Former Senator Foraker recently spoke before the Ohio Exhibitors' League.

The My Show Theater in Rochester has called attention to a contagious disease "blueatus" and offers a counter irritant "laugheratus" as affording immediate relief. They point out that "laugheratus" is to be induced by seeing the Keystone comedy "In the Clutches of the Gang."

The Indianapolis Star in an editorial is advising readers to go to picture theaters to learn the niceties of etiquette, manners, social customs and what not that fashion or propriety has decreed shall be done in a certain "manner to be correct." They point out that the picture manager insists that every motion of the picture actor shall be just right.

Mayor Fred W. Kelley, South Bend, has appointed a committee of censorship for the moving picture houses, and this committee is to make a careful and painstaking study of the film drama and make recommendations within the next two weeks.

"This committee is by no means a board of censorship," said its chairman, U. G. Manning, after the first meeting. "It is merely a committee to study and investigate the moral effect of certain pictures displayed in South Bend and to determine whether the city needs a board of censorship. We will not in any way interfere with the action of the National Board of Censorship, except in cases where the signature of that body is absent."

Protest against the recent exhibition of "Traffic in Souls," supplemented by considerable difference of opinion as to the value of the show, is said to have precipitated the move. Men who visited the exhibition at the Oliver Theater condemned it, and a body of women who visited it later, reversed the judgment, holding that the educational value of the film overshadowed the suggestive possibilities which shocked the men.

L. H. Kramer, the Cascaret man, who has made millions "working people while they sleep," has added a motion picture show to his hotel at Mudlavia. H. F. Hittle, who formerly managed the Theatorium at Attica, has charge of the new department. Shows will be given Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, two films being shown each night. General Film Company service will be used.

Mayor Joseph A. Bell, of Indianapolis, has taken the Citizens' Charity Association out of the hands of the motion picture exhibitors of the city. At first the exhibitors were inclined to look upon the charity as their own and to demand the right to administer it, but they saw fit to relinquish it when it became clear the houses would be closed on Sundays unless the city administration was given control. The exhibitors are taxed $1 per hundred seats for charity, and one advantage of the new order of things as some of the exhibitors view it, is that it will force every exhibitor to "come across." With the police in charge the situation will be that the exhibitor who does not keep paid up cannot open his house on Sunday.

Jacob C. Heald and Paul Baker of Laporte, will become the new owners of the Laporte Etropal motion picture house. The Etropal was started about three years ago and is now practically the leading house in Laporte. Thomas Mobile who opened the house will, it is understood, manage the place for the new owners until they master the new business. Mobile later may open another motion picture house.

Manager Lawrence of the Worlds Special Film Corporation, Indianapolis, says he expects to supply the new $75,000 picture house which opened at Louisville, Ky., March 15. Mr. Lawrence says this house will take nothing less than five part films and will charge 25 cents admission. He says to his knowledge this is the only 25 cent house in this part of the middle west. The Broadway Amusement Company is booking the new house.

Mayor Secrest, Hartford City, issued an order the first of the month for motion picture houses to close Sundays. The order went into effect March 8, after grand jury indictments heretofore had failed.

Jay Lipsett, manager and part owner of the Isis Theater, Peru, has sold his interests in the house to Fred Steinmetz. Wilber Mitchell is the new manager.

The Pictureland Amusement Company of Kokomo, has incorporated with $5,000 capital stock to operate picture shows. Directors are: S. I. Stern, Kokomo; D. M. Turley, W. A. Hansell.

Terre Haute is to have a new $75,000 motion picture house on the Dowling Hall site, Sixth Street. The deal just closed is between John T. Beasley, owner of the site, Albert Myers, former National league ball player and Charles F. Wood, representative of a Rochester shoe company. The lease is for twenty years. The building will be two stories. It will have two boxes and a concrete floor and balcony. Size 40 by 140 feet. A pipe organ and an orchestra will be installed. The first five years' rental will be $4,000 graduating to $4,750 the fourth year. Dowling Hall which will be torn down to make way for the new picture house was the first important theater in Terre Haute. It is hoped to open the house in August.

The Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of Delaware, has filed notices of withdrawal from this state.

The Orpheum, a motion picture house at Washington and Pennsylvania Streets, Indianapolis, Ind., one of the leading houses here is to be turned into a book store. A book dealer who obtained a ninety-nine year lease on the site will erect a new building on the property at the end of twenty years.

In an effort to check the spread of small pox in Bedford, moving picture houses have been ordered closed for three weeks.

Industrial moving pictures of Auburn were shown at the Auburn Henry Opera House March 6 and 7. Representatives of the Arlington Moving Picture Company are now in Auburn getting pictures of factories, schools and city officials.

Indianapolis packing houses have enlisted the services of the moving picture men in their plan to advertise the sanitary methods adopted in the preparation of meats in the packing industry. A 2,000 foot film shortly will make its appearance in Indianapolis. It will show every stage of the meat packing business from the animal on the hoof to the meat on the private table. The film was prepared by the Department of Agriculture. The film will show the public what the government is doing in the way og protection from impure meat.

Motion picture "fans" at Greensburg, proclaim the base ball films featuring Frank Chance, Manager of the New York Americans and shown at the Palace a few days ago, the best of this kind seen in the Hoosier town.

The Shelbyville council of clubs at its recent meeting launched a movement for the appointment of a board of moving picture censors for Shelbyville. Action probably will be taken on the matter at the April meeting. Council members said some of the motion pictures are too indecent for children to see, and voiced the opinion that the National Board of Censorship is merely a "fake purity bureau."

To show justification of his order closing motion picture houses in Hartford City, Sundays, Mayor Secrest now says such order was the wish of the majority of the people. The mayor says in addition to the very probable increase in weekly attendance at the picture shows the film men will save themselves the expense of facing trial on grand jury indictments. Mayor Secrest says many citizens would not patronize the shows week days because they were open Sundays.

Indianapolis is bragging that for its size it has more moving picture houses than any other city in the union. The film-wise say eight years ago this city had no picture show houses, that two years ago it had twenty-nine picture houses and today has eighty-one. Cincinnati, they say, with 100,000 more inhabitants than Indianapolis, has sixty-nine and Louisville, thirty-nine.

WILLIAM.

KENTUCKY.

MANAGER R. L. Shrader, of the Central Film Service Company's Louisville office, reports a steady improvement in business, as the small country houses, which have been all but out of commission during the winter, open up with the advance of spring. Exhibitors using the Universal service have shown much interest in the forthcoming release of "Samson," a six-reel feature in which Warren Kerrigan takes the leading part. This is practically a home product in this section, as Kerrigan is a New Albany man, and the Hoosier city is immediately across the river from Louisville. There has been keen competition for the first run of this picture in Louisville, but it will probably go to the Novelty, which usually has the first run of the program.

The second engagement of the Imp feature, "Absinthe," did well at the Novelty theater, Louisville, last week, although hampered somewhat by bad weather and the Lenten season. The production was not heavily advertised for the second production, either, and in view of these facts Manager Levinson felt that the attendance was very good.

John B. Hutchings, a Louisville architect, is preparing plans for a handsome building, 60 by 125 feet, for the Cherokee Amusement Company, which will be erected in the eastern part of the city. It will be a one-story brick structure, and will be equipped with a hot-air heating plant. Carl Zang, superintendent of the Mellwood distillery, is head of the company.

The success of the four-reel Gold Seal production of "The Merchant of Venice," which was exhibited last week at the National Theater, Louisville, in connection with the usual vaudeville program, gave additional proof of the popularity of features with Louisville audiences, if any were needed. The National is using a multi-reel feature weekly, and the combination of good pictures and good vaudeville is crowding the house regularly.

Fred Sheldon, traveling out of Louisville for the Kinemacolor Company, returned a few days ago from a trip to Tennessee and the Carolinas, on which he arranged for new installations in the Grubb theater, at Salisbury, N. C., the Lyric, at Greenville, S. C., the Grand, at Johnson City, Tenn., and the Oden, at Savannah, Ga. W. H. Fain, who will put in the machines is out on the work this week.

L. J. Dittmar, of the Majestic theater, Louisville, has been planning a trip to New York on business ever since January 1, but has been prevented from getting away by various reasons, thus escaping the severe winter weather which has prevailed in the metropolis. He expects to get away shortly, however, and will be gone for several weeks.

R. E. Gumm, proprietor of the Grand theater, at Lagrange, who was in Louisville recently, declared that the Grand is the first house of the many he has owned which made money for him the first week it was in operation. He is therefore rather in love with Lagrange, and will probably make it his home, although he is planning a string of theaters for the various small towns in this section.

Simon Switow, of Louisville, has taken charge of the Switow Amusement Company's house at Madisonville, the Garic, in place of H. R. Hunter, who has resigned as manager of the theater.

A. V. Sheckler, of Louisville, has become manager of Switow's Grand theater, in New Albany, Ind., and has found the demands made upon his time by his duties there so heavy that he has given up other connections.

Noland Lindsay, of Bedford, has purchased two complete motion picture outfits, for use in his houses at Bedford and Warsaw. He selected Power's No. 5 machines.

The Majestic theater, of Louisville, last week ran eleven slides a day, one at each performance, free of charge for the benefit of the Babies' Milk Fund, a unique and deserving charity. The slides were specially prepared from photographs to show the practical work done by the fund for the babies in the homes of the needy, and should elicit substantial evidences of sympathy from many who saw them.

James Gurden has installed a motion picture show at Sulphur, a small town on the Louisville & Nashville some miles from Louisville. He will exhibit on Wednesday and Saturday nights only for the present.

Mary Pickford in "Hearts Adrift," one of the latest of the Famous Players releases, was the feature at the Majestic, of Louisville, during the greater part of last week. These releases have become very popular with Majestic audiences, and the announcement of one coming always brings a large attendance when the picture is shown.

A motion picture house which was opened in Russellville, about a month ago for negroes exclusively has closed its doors, as the attendance fell below a profitable level after the novelty of the idea had worn off with the negroes.

Work is being rushed on the new building at Ashland, being erected by Clint Moore. It is to contain two rooms on the ground floor, one of which is to be used as a motion picture show.

Tickets to several motion picture shows, given away with "White Plume Flour," made by Callahan & Sons, Louisville millers, have proved to be a first-rate means of selling flour. The concern advertises its flour, and the offer of tickets good for admission to the photoplay houses, in the street cars and newspapers, and reports a marked increase in the demand since the offer was first made.

R. E. Gunn, of Chicago, has purchased the New Grand Theater, at Lagrange, from J. H. Christy, of that place. Mr. Gunn has had several years' experience in the business, and expects to make the Grand even more successful than it now is. He will make various improvements, including a handsome new front, and will have personal charge of the house.

A meeting was held at Lexington recently by those interested in Sunday closing, or an "American Sabbath," as it was phrased, to consider ways and means of getting a general observation of the day by the cessation of all work and amusements. It was announced that the motion picture men had promptly agreed to close if the sentiment of the people pointed that way, and this is undoubtedly the case, as has been proved in other Kentucky towns. A committee was appointed to consider the matter and take steps to get action toward securing closing.

After a conference between the Ministerial Association of Paducah, and the management of the Arcade Theater, which was recently leased by the National Moving Picture Company, of Louisville, and which has since been engaged in a heated controversy with the ministers on the subject of Sunday closing, the management announced that no more Sunday performances will be given.

The Crescent Amusement Company has let to Charles H. Smith, of Bowling Green, the contract for the construction of its new house in that city. The building will be 40 by 171 feet, with a 25-foot ceiling in the theater proper, and will have a front of white enameled brick, two stories in height. Work will begin as soon as the weather permits, and the house will be completed by June 1.

The Stiner Amusement Company has been incorporated in Paducah by E. Steiner, H. E. Steiner, Claude Porter and R. E. Foreman, and will shortly arrange to operate a motion picture house.

B. S. Kenney and J. C Bridges, of Frankfort, have purchased the Columbia Theater, of that city, from H. P. Bartram, and are now operating it. Showing an unusually good program. They have improved the building in several respects, adding to the exits until six are now used, and installing better ventilation equipment.

The stockholders of the recently organized Auditorium Company, of Danville, which proposes to erect a modern theater building in that city, recently elected directors, who elected the following officers: W. H. Sullivan, president; J. V. Smith, vice-president, and William Faulconer, secretary and treasurer. Prospects for the success of the venture are bright, as much of the stock has been subscribed.

The New Princess, of Madisonville, has finally been re-opened, after being closed for some weeks. It has been re-decorated in the meantime, and the seating capacity has been considerably enlarged.

The International Bible Students' Association has purchased twenty-five motion picture projecting machines from a concern at Morehead (which manufactures them), which are intended for use in the organization's work abroad. It is understood that a total of 250 machines will be purchased for use in the foreign missionary field.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

MISSOURI.

PLEASANT weather has stimulated attendance at Kansas City moving picture theaters, and coupled with high grade attractions, has made the past few weeks highly profitable ones for Kansas City exhibitors. Local animated picture men believe that recent productions are vastly superior to those of a year ago, the producing companies having made really remarkable improvement in their work. The betterment, according to exhibitors, has not been confined to any one company or group, but has been general, and is largely responsible for the steadily increasing business handled by Kansas City members of the trade.

R. C. Cropper has been appointed manager of the Kansas City branch of the Universal Film Company, succeeding Joseph Spero, who probably will devote his time to his own interests. Mr. Cropper has been with the Universal for several years, serving successively and successfully as manager of branches at Wichita, Kan.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Fort Worth, Tex., and Amarvilla, Tex. Mr. Cropper, while retaining jurisdiction over the branches named, will make his headquarters in Kansas City, the logical point for the district offices.

A feature of the Wonderland theater in Kansas City, and one which promises to become popular in this section, is a balcony, arranged in the form of boxes, where box parties may be accommodated. The objection of many devotees of animated pictures to attending is that no privacy or exclusiveness is available. E. E. Richards, head of the Wonderland, has provided for this minority by establishing the balcony. There may be doubt, of course, as to the advisability of the plan. The majority of moving picture patrons are not particular about sitting in a box, out of sight of others, though a certain number of patrons may like the new plan.

The Empress theater, a vaudeville house which has heretofore been known as exclusively such, has entered the moving picture business in a rather pretentious way. A recent matinee attraction at the Empress was "The Moths," a four-reel Thanhouser subject. "Scrooge," and "Rebecca" were other features shown by the Empress recently, both being provided by Julius Singer of the World's Leader Feature Film Company.

At the instance of Kansas City local No. 1, M. P. E. L. of A., an ordinance was recently introduced in the Kansas City council prohibiting airdomes or tents for moving picture exhibitions in the environs of the city. The action was taken by the Kansas City local with the view of protecting the exhibitors who are in the business twelve months in the year from those who take advantage of the warm months to exhibit at a minimum of expense. The ordinance provides that permanent exhibitors may erect tents or airdomes during the summer months, provided they are in the vicinity of their winter houses. Penalty for violation of the proposed ordinance is fixed at from $10 to $100. An ordinance providing for a reduction of the annual license from $100 to $25 also will be introduced in the near future. While this measure has not met the approval of the larger exhibitors, the majority of the members of the Kansas City local are in favor of its passage. The exhibitors controlling several houses believe that the reduction of the license would mean the addition to the business of men who are ill-equipped for it, and whose entrance would have a tendency to lower the standard of the profession. The majority, however, ruled that the measure be presented to the council for passage and this will be done. The ordinance regarding airdomes was referred to the fire committee of the lower house for a hearing.

The Empress theater, Kansas City, was turned over to 1,200 children from the charitable institutions recently, for the performance of the five-reel production of Dickins' "Christmas Carol," and other pictures. Manager McCoy tendered his house to the kiddies without charge. The Kansas City Automobile Club provided transportation facilities for the children who had the time of their lives.

The value of moving pictures as an advertising medium was emphasized recently when Mayor Jost, of Kansas City, received a letter from a resident of Richmond, Va., asking him to forward the address of an angora cat he and his wife had seen at a Richmond moving picture theater. The letter was the result of the pictures taken by C. C. Brown, the Pathe Weekly representative in Kansas City, at the Cat Show recently held.

The Pathe Film Company took pictures of the Beell-Americus wrestling bout held in Kansas City recently. The company had exclusive rights on the affair, which is said to be the second of the kind ever taken by a moving picture company. The views included training camp scenes. Incidentally, the moving pictures of wrestling matches will tend to eliminate crookedness, according to sport experts who have commented on this phase.

The Merit theater at Thirty-first and Main Streets, has installed a $5,000 Foto-player, purchasing the machine from the Henley-Waite Music Company, which recently secured the Kansas City agency for the instrument. The Twelfth-Street theater is another house which utilizes a Foto-player.

The Dixie theater, which recently closed, has been re-opened with improvements. The house is located on Westport Avenue and has an extensive residential district from which to draw. Mutual service will be used.

Judge Henry P. Lay, of Warsaw, who recently was appointed special examiner by the Missouri supreme court to take testimony to determine whether the business methods of the Mutual Film Corporation and other exchanges in Missouri are centrary to the law, will begin his work in the immediate future. Judge Lay will begin at St. Louis, and will hear evidence at Kansas City, Jefferson City, St. Joseph and other moving picture centers.

Manager Joseph Stiebel, of the Apollo theater, 3227 Terost Avenue, Kansas City, has begun the installation of the Hope-Jones Unit System orchestra at a cost of about $12,000. Mr. Stiebel recently returned from a trip through the East, where he found the Hope-Jones instrument in high favor.

Frank L. Newman is making rapid progress on his theater at 1022 Main Street which will be caled the "Royal," and the house will be ready for the public about May 1, if weather conditions do not retard work. Mr. Newman recently ordered a mirror screen at a cost of $1,200.

MURRAY.

MONTREAL.

THE school children throughout the Province of Quebec will be taught the dangers of forest fires by the medium of moving pictures.

The Theater des Nouveautés, Montreal, will be turned into a combined vaudeville and photoplay house in a very short while. The theater and management has been taken over by the Arco Amusement Co., an American theatrical concern, which will include the Montreal house in its regular circuit. According to the manager of the Nouveautés, the spectacles will not differ in the main from those of the Theatre Francais, where the program usually consists of four or five vaudeville acts and two or three pictures. Until now the Theatre des Nouveautés has been the home of high-class French comedies and plays.

The Tivoli, Montreal, has a new large electric sign over its entrance which spells out the day's feature. The management is greatly pleased with the "Mutual Girl" series.

The New Grand, Montreal, is living well up to its reputation for enterprise in the programs it provides for its patrons. Several new features will be inaugurated in the near future. The most prominent of these is the "New Grand Camera Man," a feature which will undoubtedly prove of the greatest interest to New Grand audiences. An expert cameraman will be present at all events of interest in Montreal, and New Grand audiences will have the opportunity of seeing them reproduced on the screen. A new reel of Montreal scenes will be shown each week. A special feature will be a series of pictures of Montreal babies. Another feature will be the Hearst-Selig News Service every Sunday and Monday.

Manager Herring, of the Mount Royal, Laurier avenue, West, has had the walls on the stairways leading to the gallery decorated with pictures of the Universal stars.

Always in the van of progress, the Ford Motor Company, of Canada, Ltd., has not been slow to take advantage of the extraordinary progress of the moving picture industry, and adapt it to its own uses in advertising. It has made arrangements with picture houses throughout the Dominion to show special slides between the different reels.

The exterior appearance of the New Grand, St. Catherine street, West, has been greatly improved by the addition of a canopy extending across the sidewalk. The management is sparing no expense to make this house one of the most attractive in the city.

Signor Gurdo Mincheri, of Florence, Italy, is painting the scenery for the Canadian Cinematograph, Ltd., for use in their studio at Lonqueuil.

The London, formerly the Gaiety Theater, St. Catherine street, West, has re-opened after the making of extensive alterations which have added greatly to the safety, comfort, and beauty of the theater. The highest class of film dramas and topical pictures will be shown, with frequent changes of program and the London will cater to those seeking clean entertainment.

The management of the Theater Francais announce that they are now in the field with a daily bargain matinee, at which they have 1,000 orchestra seats at ten cents, and another 1,000 balcony seats at the price of five cents. The electric fountain and other effects at this theater every Sunday are the talk of the town and their success has been immediate.

Here is what the Standard has to say about Mr. Schlesinger, of the Francais:

"You have never seen in your life a man with a greater mania for signs than Manager Schlesinger, of the Francais. Mr. Schlesinger's motto is: 'Count that day lost whose low descending sun has not seen big receipts and much sign-painting done.' The Francais is the only theater that has a sign-painter on its staff, and that man earns his salary if the manager has anything to do with him. And the ideas Manager Schlesinger cannot carry out on signs, he carries out in handbills and cards. There was never such a mine of printed matter in Montreal as Mr. Schlesinger. He is the complete advertiser in one volume, and the volume is pretty considerable, thank you. Next time you go to the Francais gaze on the work of C. S. Schlesinger, and take a leaf out of his little book, Mr. Advertiser. You can bet your life that chap has got the right idea."

Advertising through the medium of the press gives splendid results in Montreal. One exhibitor advertised for amateurs the other day. There were so many applicants for a place on his program that he had to have some of the ushers interview them and turn them away.

GALLAGHER.

(Continued on Page 1712)

ALL STAR FEATURE

RELEASED MARCH 16th

The World-Famed Lecturer, Author, War Correspondent and Actor

BURR McINTOSH

AS

JO VERNON (The Village Blacksmith, his original role)

In a Five-Part Moving Picture Presentation of

AUGUSTUS THOMAS'

Stirring Play of Rural Life

"IN MIZZOURA"

With an Exceptional Supporting Company of Broadway Stars

BOOK NOW OF OUR DISTRIBUTORS — THEY GIRDLE THE EARTH

Now Booking

DUSTIN FARNUM in
"SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE"—6 Reels

******

TULLY MARSHALL in
"PAID IN FULL"—5 Reels

In Preparation

EDGAR SELWYN in
"PIERRE OF THE PLAINS"

******

DIGBY BELL in
"THE EDUCATION OF MR. PIPP"

All Star Feature Corporation

HARRY RAVER
President

220 W. 42nd St., New York

AUGUSTUS THOMAS
Director-General

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

Current Releases

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—An Hour of Terror (Drama).....
EDISON—Dinkelspiel's Baby (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The District Attorney's Duty (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 7—The Garden of Brides (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
VITAGRAPH—The Woman in Black (Comedy).....1000

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th, 1914.

AMBROSIO—The Barber of Seville (Special—3 parts—Comedy).....3000
EDISON—The Borrowed Finery (Comedy-Drama)....1000
ESSANAY—The Love Route Via Pittman (Comedy)..1000
LUBIN—A Deal in Real Estate (Comedy).....1000
PATHE—Trichinopoly, India (Scenic).....
PATHE—Workaday Scenes in a Flowery Land (Scenic)
PATHE—Strange Sea Water Creatures (Zoological)..
SELIG—In Remembrance (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Husband (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th, 1914.

EDISON—A Night Out (Comedy).....1000
ESSANAY—Bridget Bridges It (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The Refrigerator Car's Captive (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
LUBIN—Above the Law (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
PATHE—Old Streets of Cairo, Egypt (Scenic).....
PATHE—Whiffles, New Professor (Comedy).....
SELIG—While Wifey Is Away (Comedy).....
SELIG—Doc Yak, the Poultryman (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The Hall Room Rivals (Comedy).....1000

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Wifey's Visit Home (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—Never Shrink (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—The Atonement (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Game of Politics (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
MELIES—Handsome Harry's Wooing (Comedy).....
MELIES—Batty Bill's House "Rough House" (Comedy)
PATHE—The Constancy of Jeanne (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 25—1914 (News).....
SELIG—Cupid's Caprice (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Chanler Rao, Criminal Expert (Drama).1000

FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, 1914.

EDISON—The Brass Bowl (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
ESSANAY—The Three Scratch Clue (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
KALEM—And the Villain Still Pursued Her (Comedy).
KALEM—Phosphate Mining (Industrial).....
LUBIN—The Puritan (Drama).....1000
SELIG—The Story of Cupid (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Millions for Defence (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Battle at Elderbusch Gulch (2 parts—Dr.)
EDISON—Putting One Over (Fourth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series—Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's True Love (Drama).....1000
KALEM—A Leap for Life (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—Detective Short (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—The Bottom of the Sea (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—A Leech of Industry (Special—3 parts—Dr.).3000
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 13 (News)....1000
VITAGRAPH—Never Again (Special—2 parts—Com.).2000

Advance Releases

MONDAY, MARCH 30th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Doctor's Trust (Drama).....
EDISON—The Vision in the Window—Fourth of the Wood B. Wedd Series (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—A Passover Miracle (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 26, 1914 (News).....1000
SELIG—The Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
VITAGRAPH—The Silver Snuff Box (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, MARCH 31st, 1914.

CELIO—The Price of Silence (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
EDISON—The Mystery of the Laughing Death—Fifth of the Chronicles of Cleek Series (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Canning Industry in California (Industry)1000
LUBIN—The Knave of Clubs (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—In the Soup (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—Tivoli and Its Cascade (Scenic).....
PATHE—A Visit to the Volcano Kilauea, Hawaii (Travel) .....
SELIG—The Midnight Call (Drama).....
SELIG—Fancy Skating (Sports) .....
VITAGRAPH—A Helpful Sisterhood (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st, 1914.

EDISON—Mrs. Romana's Scenario (Comedy)..... 460
EDISON—The Missing Twenty-five Dollars (Comedy) 570
ESSANAY—A Queer Quarantine (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The Raid of the Red Marauders (Special—2 parts—Drama) 1500
KALEM—Professor Oldboy's Rejuvenator (Comedy).. 500
LUBIN—The Fighting Blood (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
PATHE—Whiffles Picks a Partner (Comedy).....
SELIG—When Thieves Fall Out (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Stage Struck (Comedy) 1000

THURSDAY, APRIL 2nd, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Burglar's Sacrifice (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Dan Cupid, Assayer (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Mansion of Sobs (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
PATHE—His Sweetheart's Child (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 27, 1914 (News).....1000
SELIG—The Story of Diana.....1000
VITAGRAPH—Tommy's Tramp (Comedy-Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, APRIL 3rd, 1914.

EDISON—A Romance of the Everglades (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
ESSANAY—The Wedding of Prudence (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
KALEM—The Confiscated Count (Comedy).....
KALEM—Historic Tarrytown (Scenic) .....
LUBIN—A Man's Faith (Drama).....1000
SELIG—The Bond of Love (Drama).....
SELIG—In Amalfi, Italy (Scenic).....
VITAGRAPH—Bunny's Scheme (Comedy) 1000

SATURDAY, APRIL 4th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Bill Tell, Pawn Broker (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—Skelley's Birthday (Comedy).....
EDISON—His Comrade's Wife (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—The Coming of Sophie's "Mamma" (Com.)
KALEM—Fast Freight, 3205 (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—She Was a Peach (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—The Eyes Have It (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—In Tangled Web (Special—2 parts—Drama)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 14 (News)....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Crucible of Fate (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

IF YOU DID NOT ORDER ten beautiful posters of the popular Licensed players from us for $1.00, you had better DO IT NOW.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Building, Chicago

MELIES "GENERAL" FILMS

DON'T FORGET

BEGINNING APRIL 6th

2 Comedies Weekly

MONDAY AND THURSDAY

These are the result of the great and growing demand for Melies new "General" comedies. They bring results.

THEY TOP THE BILL

BATTY BILL

Released March 26th Length 1000 feet

ON SAME REEL

Batty Bill's Home Rough-Housed

AND

Handsome Harry's Wooing

THIS IS THE BEST COMEDY REEL WE HAVE YET PUT OUT

GENERAL

MELIES FILMS
204 E. 38TH STREET
NEW YORK

GENERAL

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, MARCH 22nd, 1914.

CRYSTAL—The Fat and Thin of It (Comedy).....
ECLAIR—A Tale of the Desert (Drama).....
REX—Carlotta, the Bead Stringer (Drama).....

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1914.

VICTOR—A Woman's Honor (Drama).....
IMP—King, the Detective, in the Marine Mystery (Two parts—Drama) .....
POWERS—Too Much Married (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—The Mysterious Leopard Lady (Two parts—Drama) .....
CRYSTAL—Snookum's Last Racket (Comedy).....
CRYSTAL—Without Pants (Comedy).....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike in the Battle of Little Tin Horn (Comedy).....

WEDNESDAY, March 25th, 1914.

NESTOR—The Mountaineer (Drama).....
JOKER—Pay the Rent (Comedy).....
ECLAIR—Adrift (Two parts—Drama).....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 107 (News).....

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

IMP—For Life and Liberty (Comedy).....
REX—The Spider and Her Web (Two parts—Drama)..
FRONTIER—Black Hands and Dirty Money (Comedy)

FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, 1914.

NESTOR—The Wrong Miss Wright (Comedy).....
POWERS—Her First Arrest (Comedy).....
POWERS—U. S. Government's Instructions to Young Farmers (Agriculture) .....
VICTOR—Diplomatic Flo (Three parts—Drama).....

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

JOKER—The Head Waiter (Comedy).....
FRONTIER—The Girl Bandit (Drama).....
BISON—Two Little Waifs (2 parts—Drama).....

SUNDAY, MARCH 29th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Auntie's Romantic Adventures (Comedy).
ECLAIR—A Marriage for Money (Drama).....
ECLAIR—Society at Simpson Center (Comedy).....
REX—In the Days of His Youth (Drama).....

MONDAY, MARCH 30th, 1914.

VICTOR—Sealed Orders (2 parts—Drama).....
IMP—Forgetting (Drama) .....
POWERS—A Bad Egg (Comedy).....

TUESDAY, MARCH 31st, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—The Embezzler (2 parts—Drama).....
CRYSTAL—Going Some (Comedy) .....
CRYSTAL—One Happy Tramp (Comedy).....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Why Universal Ike Left Home (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st, 1914.

NESTOR—Cupid Incognito (Drama) .....
JOKER—The Luck of Hog Wallon Gulch (Comedy)..
ECLAIR—The Caballero's Way (3 parts—Drama)....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 108 (News)....

THURSDAY, APRIL 2nd, 1914.

IMP—The Blood Test (2 parts—Drama).....
REX—In the Eye of the Law (Drama).....
FRONTIER—Why Kentucky Went Dry (Comedy)....

FRIDAY, APRIL 3rd, 1914.

NESTOR—Such a Villain (Comedy).....
POWERS—The Romance of an Actor (2 parts—Dr.)..
VICTOR—Granddaddy's Granddaughter (Com.-Dr.)...

SATURDAY, APRIL 4th, 1914.

FRONTIER—Strange Evidence (Drama) .....
101 BISON—The Lamb, the Woman, the Wolf (3 parts—Drama) .....
JOKER—No release this day.

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, MARCH 22nd, 1914.

APOLLO—A Parcels Post Auto (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—Atonement (2 parts—Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—Their Cousin from England (Comedy-Drama) .....

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Turning Point (2 parts—Drama)...
KEYSTONE—Across the Hall (Drama).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 10 (Drama).....

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Peacock Feather Fan (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—They Who Dig Pits (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Miser's Reversion (3 parts—Dr.)

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th, 1914.

AMERICAN—A Decree of Justice (Drama).....
BRONCHO—The Relic (2 parts—Drama).....
KOMIC—After Her Dough (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th, 1914.

DOMINO—Title not yet announced.
KEYSTONE—Cruel, Cruel Love (Comedy).....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 65 (News).....

FRIDAY, MARCH 27th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Gringo (2 parts—Drama).....
MAJESTIC—The Warning Cry (Drama).....
PRINCESS—Beautiful Snow (Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—No release this date.

SATURDAY, MARCH 28th, 1914.

KEYSTONE—Title not yet announced.
RELIANCE—The Smugglers of Sligo (2 parts—Dr.)..
ROYAL—A Mistaken Watch (Comedy).....
ROYAL—The Bell-boy's Revenge (Comedy).....

SUNDAY, MARCH 29th, 1914.

APOLLO—The Battle of Chili and Bean (Comedy)....
MAJESTIC—The Surgeon's Experiment (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Sorrow Fades (Drama) .....

MONDAY, MARCH 30th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Town of Nazareth (2 parts—Dr.)..
KEYSTONE—Title not yet announced.
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 11 (Drama).....

TUESDAY, MARCH 31st, 1914.

BEAUTY—Sweet Land of Liberty (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—Title not yet announced.
THANHOUSER—Title not yet announced.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Certainty of Man (Drama).....
BRONCHO—Wolves of the Underworld (2 parts—Dr.)
KOMIC—Title not yet announced.

THURSDAY, APRIL 2nd, 1914.

DOMINO—Title not yet announced.
KEYSTONE—Title not yet announced.
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 66 (News).....

FRIDAY, APRIL 3rd, 1914.

KAY-BEE—Title not yet announced.
MAJESTIC—Title not yet announced.
PRINCESS—Title not yet announced.
THANHOUSER—Title not yet announced.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4th, 1914.

KEYSTONE—Title not yet announced.
RELIANCE—Title not yet announced.
ROYAL—Title not yet announced.

CENSORSHIP

THE motion picture industry is the principal line of endeavor subject to censorship. This censorship comprises SEVERAL INDIVIDUAL OPINIONS, and passes on films only.

Motion pictures are no longer lightly considered. Millions are invested in the industry, which caters to a critical, educated public.

This public dominates all conditions. It is the only real censorship and it demands not only film character, but also PERFECT PICTURE PROJECTION.

Public opinion, in its approval, confidence and EXTENSIVE USE

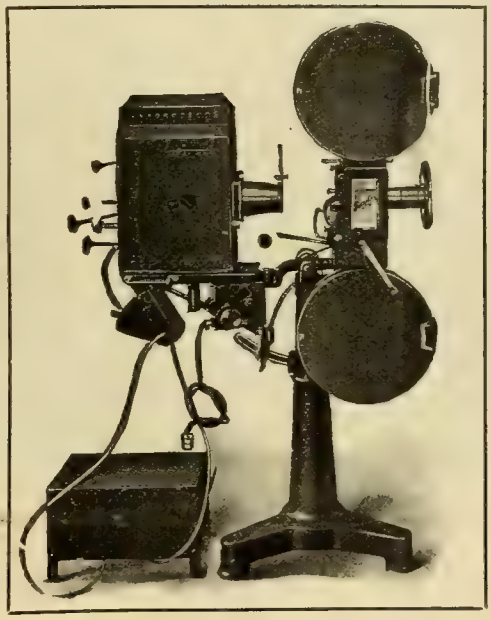
FAVORS

Simplex

THE REASONS

Because it offers

1. Perfect Projection.
2. Perfect Protection.
3. Rigidity.
4. Economy.



THE PROOF

Is shown by

1. SIMPLEX is used by over 90% of the film studios, where the demands for perfect projection are most exacting.
2. SIMPLEX is the only machine on the market whose mechanism is entirely enclosed. Films absolutely protected.
3. SIMPLEX is the heaviest built machine. It withstands all vibration; and
4. SIMPLEX parts are so accurately adjusted that wear and tear is reduced to a minimum. Unkeep expense almost eliminated.

THE RESULT

Public opinion of SIMPLEX has increased our sales more than 300% within a year, and caused us to treble our factory floor space. The public's word is final. It has been quick to recognize SIMPLEX as

The Peerless Projector

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 EAST 34th STREET : : : NEW YORK

Illustrated Catalogue A Gives Full Details

THE BIG STUNT OF THE YEAR

YOU WANT THE

A SERVICE OF ONE GREAT

We don't tie you up on a time contract that forces you mutual; when you make money we do!

MADGE LESSING in "THE BLUE MOUSE"
The Smashing Big Comedy Success

6 REELS 6

Turning the Feathered Messenger Loose.

The Count in His Last Days in "The Haunted Mill."

Both of these great productions are protected by every circumstance that wealth and showmanship can afford—backed up by U. S. Copyright law.

No picture has ever had the support behind these—based on artistic excellence, dramatic "punch" and sterling quality.

Act before the "other fellow" does.

WIRE OR

European Office: H. WINIK

35 Little Newport Street, London, England

Also in the market for QUALITY pictures for Europe for spot cash. Nothing too big!

--NONE BETTER nor BIGGER!

MONEY--SO DO WE!!

BIG FEATURE EVERY MONTH

to accept films that you don't want; our service is truly
Our two first releases are now offered:

"SEALED ORDERS"

6 REELS 6 Musical Score by Prof. Sol. P. Levy

"Sealed Orders." The Lord of the Admiralty Delegates His Son to Lead the First Attack.

Under Question. The Admiralty Orders the House of Lieutenant Von Houven Searched.

The following territory sold on sight for "SEALED ORDERS" for the highest price ever paid for a film attraction:

Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio
Celebrated Players Film Co.
Newspaper Corp.
Alfred Hamburger, Pres.
Schiller Bldg.
Chicago, Ill.

Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee
Apex Feature Service
315 Rhodes Bldg.
Atlanta, Ga.

WRITE

DeLuxe Attractions Film Co.

145 West 45th St. New York City

Barker's Masterpiece

EAST LYNNE

IN SEVEN PARTS

WAS RUSHED

Another week, and we don't even want to talk about it. A great big, smashing production, but we haven't the time.

TERRITORY SOLD

New York State — WM. FOX, 126 West 46th Street, New York City

Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia — APEX FEATURE SERVICE, 315 Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Ohio — H. R. ASHBROOK, 413 Summit Street, Toledo, Ohio

New Jersey — E. S. MINNICK, 33 Division Place, Newark, N. J.

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut — FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. OF NEW ENGLAND, 31 Beach Street, Boston, Mass.

Illinois, Wisconsin — CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO. (ALFRED HAMBURGER, Pres.), Schiller Building, Chicago, Illinois

California, Arizona, Nevada — I. C. ACKERMAN, Humboldt Bank Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Texas — TEXAS FEATURE CO., Dallas, Texas

We are the busiest people in the motion picture business.

We announced "EAST LYNNE" for two weeks; there is one week left. If there is any territory you want—

GO TO IT QUICK!

P. P. CRAFT, 145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

The WARDEN'S CRIME

IN FOUR PARTS

A splendid story of man's humanity to man that is punctuated with several hair-raising climaxes. A great drama of prison life and its unknown side

IF YOU ARE NOT A VISITOR
TO THE APEX
OFFICES THERE
IS EVERY REASON
WHY YOU SHOULD BE.
THERE YOU WILL SEE THE BIGGEST FEATURE CONCERN
IN THE BUSINESS EXHIBITING A LINE OF EUROPEAN PRODUCTIONS
THAT HAVE MADE GOOD. ALL OF OUR DEMONSTRATIONS HAVE SPECIAL MUSIC

NOT GUILTY—The Military Sensation of the Season - - 3 Parts
SHOULD A WOMAN TELL?—A New Conception - - - 4 Parts
QUEEN OF THE 40 THIEVES—A Whirlwind Feature - 4 Parts
THE BATTLE IN THE CLOUDS—Sequel to "Black 13" - 3 Parts
THE DEAD MAN WHO KILLED—A Remarkable Tale - 4 Parts
IN THE HANDS OF LONDON CROOKS—By Barker - - 5 Parts

APEX FILM COMPANY

145 WEST 45TH STREET—NEW YORK—P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER

HUGH HOFFMAN

Exhibitors News

(Continued from Page 1702)

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE California Moving Picture Corporation, 356 Pine street, is preparing for an active season and a number of stars will arrive here shortly to take part in some of the elaborate productions that are planned. At present its activities are confined chiefly to getting out material for its weekly.

The new moving picture theater of Ben Michaels in the North Beach district will be opened in March, and a name will be selected shortly afterward. It was planned to open this house on the last day of February, but construction work was delayed.

The headquarters of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of San Francisco, which are combined with those of the state organization, have been moved to more satisfactory quarters at 1042 Phelan Building.

Secretary Frank Kennedy, of the Board of Fire Commissioners, has sent letters to various places of amusement calling attention to their failure to place an "exit diagram" on their programs and a "notice" to the general public to familiarize themselves with the location of such exits as noted on the diagram. The Board of Fire Commissioners has commenced a plan of education to minimize the danger to theater patrons in case of fire.

The Tivoli was given over to concerts by Mme. Tetrazzini on the evening of March 5 and the afternoon of March 7, and during the balance of the week "Through Fire to Fortune" was shown, together with a Keystone comedy. The splendid music of the Tivoli orchestra proves to be an attraction as well as the pictures.

The announcement made last week to the effect that the De Long Amusement Company would shortly open the old American Theater on Market street as a high grade moving picture house has a roused much comment here. It means another addition to the rapidly growing number of large houses of this kind and also that the amusement district is spreading out Market street. When Grauman't Imperial was opened a short time ago it was regarded as being too far out, but a capacity business has been done and the new theater will be but a block further west. Contracts have been let for the remodeling work.

Marion H. Kohn, manager of Warner's Features, Inc., is back at the San Francisco headquarters following a very successfully trip through the interior. The three features a week policy of this firm is meeting with general favor here.

On March 1, Pastor C. C. Russell, of Brooklyn, delivered two sermons at the Valencia Theater, these being illustrated with moving pictures showing the "Drama of Creation." Moving pictures for four performances, each lasting two hours, have been prepared and these will be shown almost daily for the next three months.

The Vim Theater, which was opened at Point Richmond, Cal., a short time ago, is meeting with great success.

Visitors to Santa Barbara, Cal., pronounce the recently opened Mission Theater to be one of the finest theaters on the Coast devoted exclusively to photoplays.

The Sequoia Moving Picture Theater, at Sacramento, Cal., will shortly show its patrons pictures taken at the launching of the new gunboat, "Sacramento," at Philadelphia, Pa., on February 21. Permission to have pictures taken was secured through an interchange of telegrams between the Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento and the Navy Department.

Moving pictures were recently shown to the convicts at Folsom penitentiary and Warden Smith was so well satisfied with the results that he plans to secure a permanent machine outfit for the prison. Reels of an educational character, including scenes of travel, will then be shown.

A contract has been let by W. B. Martin for the construction of a moving picture theater at Modesto, Cal., at a cost of $50,000.

The World Film Corporation will open offices in San Francisco within the next two weeks, attractive quarters having been secured at 104 Golden Gate Avenue in the film supply district. The local branch will be in charge of William V. Wood who for some time has been with the Union Film & Supply Co. and who is well acquainted with the San Francisco trade.

Martin Beck, manager of the Orpheum, is to have charge of some important amusement concessions at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. No decision has been made public yet in regard to the granting of concessions for moving pictures.

O. V. Traggardh, secretary and treasurer of the Union Film & Supply, and manager of the San Francisco branch of this concern, mourns the loss of his wife who passed away late in February at Denver, Colo. Her illness caused him to make a hasty trip to the mountain city but she died a short time after he reached her side. Mrs. Traggardh had often acted as an assistant to her husband, both when he was an exhibitor and after he entered the exchange field and she will be missed by many in the Coast trade.

Mr. Bryson, who has charge of the Laemmle Film Service, Minneapolis, Minn., was a visitor here this week and after a short stay left for Los Angeles. He expects to be on the Coast but a short time.

A special meeting of the Exhibitors' League will be held at the headquarters of the organization in the Phelan Building on March 10, at which the directors of the league will take up a number of important questions with the managers of local film exchanges.

During the week of March 8 "Judith of Bethulia," a Biograph multiple reel production featured at the Tivoli. A private showing of the picture was made at the Tivoli this week to a number of Rabbis, including Dr. J. Nieto and Dr. M. S. Levy, and these have not only approved the film but have advised their congregations to view it.

A public hearing on the proposed plan to inaugurate fire drills in theaters to lessen the danger in case of fire was held in the rooms of the Board of Supervisors by the fire committee of the board on March 5. More than twenty members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of San Francisco were on hand, and the showing made by them against the projected ordinance was so convincing that the matter has been dropped. It was shown that the scheme was not practical and the ridiculous side of it was pointed out.

Strenuous efforts are being made by certain interests to break the rule that has been adopted by the Exhibitors' League and by many of the leading film exchanges in regard to the number of reels that may be shown in theaters for five cents. Under the caption of "Movie Squabble To Go To Courts!" a lengthy article recently appeared in one of the morning papers, and the intimation is made that a court action is pending. The owners of several of the large theaters, such as the Washington Square, the Garrick, Grand and Progress have placed their case in the hands of Isador Golden, of Rothschild, Golden & Rothschild, who has advised them that any withdrawal of service on the part of the exchanges demanding that only three reels be used in violation of the anti-trust laws and tariff legislation of the United States, and also of the Cartwright anti-trust act of California.

The California Motion Picture Corporation is featuring the Grand Prix automobile races held at Santa Monica last week in its Golden Gate Weekly. This producing firm now has a San Francisco weekly and an Oakland weekly in which strictly local events are depicted.

J. R. Crone, manager of the San Francisco and Los Angeles branches of the Pacific Mutual Film Corporation, will return from the Southern city this week to take personal charge of the local office, and R. E. Stebbins will then take active charge of the feature department.

C. O. Davis, who conducts the Wigwam Theater, at Reno, Nev., was here this week on a business trip and called upon a number of friends in the film exchange district. The exchange managers declare that Mr. Davis is exactly what his initials imply—prompt with the cash, and add further that he conducts one of the best theaters in Nevada.

Mr. Gillette, of the firm of Gillette & Howard, Modesto, Cal., who conduct the Isis Theater, was in town last week and paid a pleasant call at the Mutual office, whose service he is using.

M. Calmy, with the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., has left for Denver, Col., to take charge of the branch office maintained there by this concern.

C. C. Kaufman, of Colusa, Cal., was in San Francisco last week and announced that he would shortly have construction work commenced on a fine new moving picture house, the present one proving to be inadequate.

The California Film Exchange, Inc., has met with unusual success in booking "Absinthe," a multiple-reel Imp production, the film having been booked solid for six weeks in advance. The demand for this production has been the heaviest on the record of the California Film Exchange.

Isador Golden, of the law firm of Rothschild, Golden & Rothschild, has advised local film exchanges that Jewish organizations, which he is representing, object to films in which Jews are caricatured, and ask that several be suppressed. No attention has been paid to the request, the feeling being that one local board of censorship is sufficient.

The Moss Beach Amusement Park Company has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $200,000, the directors of the concern being W. J. C. Leetsch, of Bellingham, Wash.; H. Woolrich, formerly of New York, and Frank A. Smith. Mr. Woolrich is interested in the moving picture business in New York, operating a string of theaters.

The Portola Theater presented three thousand tickets last week to Superintendent of Schools Alfred Roncovieri, to be used by the eighth grade pupils to view the picture entitled "How Wild Animals Live." When the Municipal Auditorium is completed Mr. Roncovieri hopes to arrange for regular moving picture courses, were thousands of children may see educational pictures. He says: "At present we are limited by lack of funds and proper places for exhibition. In the Auditorium we can have weekly educational pictures on the subjects of literature, geography, travel, science, art, health, sanitation and the various industries. Thus many school subjects can be made more interesting and lessons more vividly impressed upon the minds of the children. We hope to have pictures exhibited appropriate to the various grades."

E. Chapin Gard, secretary of the Golden State Panorama Company, is in Sacramento, Cal., making arrangements for the taking of motion pictures for a series of lectures throughout the East.

The developing plant and laboratories of the Kelbrae Motion Picture Company, at Fresno, Cal., is nearing completion. Scenic films will be turned out at first, but the company will later enter the dramatic field. The officers of the company are: Dick W. Parsons, president; H. A. Kelly, vice-president and general manager, and Al. Braverman, secretary and business manager.

The Kinema Theater, Fresno, Cal., was recently given over for one evening to a show by Harry Lauder, who was prevented from reaching Los Angeles by disastrous floods that interfered with traffic in the southern part of the state.

The Broadway Theater, Oakland, Cal., has adopted a new program policy. At every performance this theater has a complete musical comedy, several Sullivan & Considine vaudeville numbers, and three reels of moving pictures.

Harold McCurry, of Sacramento, Cal., who has a contract to take all of the moving pictures in the Sacramento Valley to be used in connection with the big exhibits to be maintained at the 1915 Exposition at San Francisco, has been working in the olive district getting motion pictures of every phase of the industry from picking to milling and pickling.

CHURCH.

ILLINOIS.

THE city council of Clinton has passed an ordinance regulating conditions in local moving picture theaters. Tickets in excess of the seating capacity cannot be sold and aisles must be kept open at all times.

The Board of Education at Blue Island has been granted permission by the city council to install a moving picture machine in the Institutional building.

An epidemic of scarlet fever at Belleville threatened to become such a serious question that the local Board of Health was considering closing the moving picture theaters.

The International Exhibition Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000 to hold exhibitions and entertainments, etc. The incorporators are James E. Hanronic, L. M. O'Connor and Frank M. Kelley.

F. A. Barr, of Lacon, is contemplating the erection of a garage with an opera house on the second floor in that city.

The city council of Galva has granted licenses to T. H. Gibbs and Wallace J. Emery to operate moving picture theaters.

The Homan Photoplay Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 to do a theater and amusement business. The incorporators are Joseph A. McInerney, Edward Byrnes and Byrl B. Collins.

The Princess Theater on North Fifth street, in Quincy, will have a seating capacity of 575—an increase of 250—when improvements begun by the proprietors, Louis Spanople and George Geanetos, are completed. The changes are made with the idea that the additional room will allow large enough crowds for the management to feature the multiple-reel productions instead of finding it necessary to empty the house so often. Safety conditions will be enhanced by allowing additional exits near the front of the house. The work upon the vaudeville house to be erected by Mr. Spanople and his associates is expected to begin early this spring.

Current gossip has it that more pictures in Urbana and Champaign are to be submitted to censors. The editor of the Urbana Courier-Herald does not believe this can be satisfactorily done by a committee of "ministers and near-ministers," however honestly they might seek to perform their labors. "For instance, a moving picture show at an Urbana theater on Sunday would meet with the united opposition of the local ministry," he says, "yet it seemingly met with their approval when the Sunday night 'movie show' was produced under the Chautauqua management, a quasi-religious organization. Why it should be permitted to see the 'movies' on a summer Sunday night at the Chautauqua and not on a winter Sunday night in town is beyond us. . . . . The chief point is that no self-appointed man or set of men is competent to pass on what is morally or politically best for the rest and though their decisions may be of the best, the over lordship implied therein is humiliating to the rest of us. If we need a censorship committee let's elect them by popular ballot."

Kankakee's public buildings and business houses were filmed by the Zenith Motion Picture Company, of Chicago. The pictures were exhibited at the La Petite Theater.

Bruntink & Barber, of Muscatine, Iowa, who purchased the Royal Moving Picture Theater at Litchfield, from R. L. McComas, have announced their intention of making a number of changes in the house. The seating capacity will be increased from 250 to 400 by building an addition, a new front is promised and an indirect lighting system and new machines will be installed.

Charles E. Berkell, manager of the Family Theater in Moline, has become associated with others in a new amusement enterprise to be called "The World at Home." It will be given in connection with festivals like the Mardi Gras and the Ak-Sar-Ben.

John W. Dillon has sold the Exhibit Moving Picture Theater on North Vermilion street in Danville, to Till York, of Ridgefarm, Ill. Mr. Dillon, who is the oldest moving picture man in Danville, will become manager of a branch exchange for the Universal Company.

Moving picture theaters in Urbana and Champaign, the twin college cities, have been allowed to re-open after a period of undue alarm because of a scarlet fever epidemic.

(Continued on Page 1716)

ATTENTION EXHIBITORS IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY LEAGUE

MEMBERSHIP FEE ABOLISHED

In the Moving Picture World of December 20th, appeared names of hundreds of paying members in all sections of the United States, and the number has shown a constant and remarkable increase.

The League distributes supplies in small lots at slightly above wholesale cost, but, owing to the wonderful volume of business, can now stand on its own bottom and

NO FEE WILL BE CHARGED IN FUTURE.

This opens the door to every Exhibitor to buy the celebrated

"BAIRD"

Machine Parts at Discount of 40% from list-prices!
Finest French Condensers $.48 each!
"2 in 1" Cement (best quality) $.10 per bottle
Machines, Carbons, and all supplies at rock-bottom prices.

This League is not connected with any other League, Association or Organization, but refers to all of them and to twenty-one hundred Exhibitors from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

HANDSOME CATALOGUE ON REQUEST
GET BUSY! SAVE MONEY!

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY LEAGUE
24 EAST 23rd STREET, NEW YORK

SOLAX SPECIAL

THE STUPENDOUS 4 PART SOLAX PRODUCTION

Staged under the Personal Direction of

ALICE BLACHE

BOOKING—New York State, and New England, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Washingto Pa.; West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania, Cleveland, O.; Northern Illinois, UNION FILM Mich.; California, Nevada and Arizona, GOLDE SERVICE, 119 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Solax

STATE RIGHTS FEATURE

LEGITIMATE THRILLS ARTISTICALLY PRESENTED WITH A POWERFUL APPEAL TO ALL CLASSES.

A TENSE HEART INTEREST DRAMA FEATURING – A SPECTACULAR FIRE AT SEA.
A FIERCE STRUGGLE ON A JAGGED CLIFF WITH A SENSATIONAL PLUNGE TO THE ROCKS BELOW.
AND A TERRIFIC FIGHT BETWEEN TWO DESPERATE MEN CLINGING TO A SWINGING CABLE.
IN MID-AIR

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION FILM RENTAL COMPANY, 126 West 46th Street, New York City; Eastern n, D. C., Delaware and Virginia, ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY, 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, WEILAND FILM CO., 212 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Ohio, INDEPENDENT FEATURE FILM CO., CO., 167 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.; Michigan, CASINO FILM CO., 2206 Dime Bank Bldg., Detroit, N GATE FILM EXCHANGE, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.; Indiana and Kentucky, BLACHE FEATURE ; Eastern Canada, INTERNATIONAL FEATURE FILM CORP., 203 New Birks Bldg., Montreal, Can.

SOLAX-FORT LEE-NEW JERSEY

Exhibitors News

(Continued from Page 1712)

Manager Stevens has sold his interest in the Joy Theater at Paris to E. H. Zeigler, of Chicago, and has gone to Arizona for the benefit of his health.

The Monarch Theater and Amusement Company, of Springfield, has increased its capital stock from $500 to $5,000.

The associate engineers of Moline recognize the value of the moving picture for informing themselves as to how materials in their field are manufactured. They have named a committee to secure a hall and to arrange for the loan of industrial reels by big firms such as the National Tube Works.

L. A. Boenig, of Chicago, a manufacturer of machinery for making moving pictures, is seeking a location for a factory near Freeport. He was interested in that city by Manager Robert Hopper, of the Lyric Theater, of Freeport.

Davis & Williams, who have been operating a moving picture theater in the Braner building at Troy, have moved their show to Rieder's Opera House.

"Traffic in Souls" was adjudged not a good show for the twin college cities—Urbana and Champaign—and Manager Harris cancelled its booking for the Illinois Theater in Urbana. He put on a private exhibition for Mayor Browder, of Urbana, Dean Clark, of the University of Illinois, and some prominent club women of Urbana, who disapproved of the pictures.

Manager Schuchert, of the Opera House at Chester, has changed his schedule from three nights a week to five nights a week. New programs will be shown on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday nights.

Mayor Bidinger, of Waukegan, has begun a movement to stop the parade of wagons advertising theatrical and moving picture attractions at local showhouses.

Projecting apparatus has been installed in the Opera House at Broadlands and regular moving picture shows will be given.

The contract has been awarded for the construction of a new opera house at Heyworth.

Each person who placed a want ad in the "News-Herald" at Lincoln was given a free ticket to the Lyric Theater.

The Cort Theater at Monmouth gives away a silver set not by the raffling method, but to the person getting the most coupons.

"Candy day" for the kiddies was a Saturday feature at the Dreamland Theater in Kewanee. Each youngster who attended was given a treat. It was noticeable that there was a Western picture on the program.

Managers in Kewanee have raised the price of admission for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays to ten cents when three-reel features will be given. At other times the five-cent admission will prevail.

Patrons of the Gem Theater at Jacksonville who hold numbers corresponding to numbers posted on the wall are entitled to free admission tickets to the vaudeville shows at the Grand Opera House. There is no drawing. The Gem is now using General Film Company service.

C. B. Claybaugh has purchased the moving picture theater at Toulon.

The incorporation papers of the Illinois Consolidated Theatrical Company have been filed in Peoria county, the concern having offices in the Mayer building in Peoria. The company, which has 180 shares of stock at $100 each, owns and operates the Globe Theater at Sullivan, Ill., and as its object is to operate amusement places of all kinds, is preparing to enter a wider field. W. H. Creviston, one of the incorporators, is connected with the McKinley Traction System. The board of directors is composed of A. E. Wolfe, S. T. Hermann, G. W. Burton, C. O. Fischer and E. B. Hamilton.

Edward Shaw, of El Paso, will open a moving picture theater in the Hannifan building at Gridley.

Petitions have been circulated in DeKalb which probably will be presented to the city council in an effort to have theaters in the city operated on Sunday.

Ford Lindquist have been granted a license by the city council of Galva to conduct the opera house.

The Celebrated Players' Film Company Newspaper Service, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000, to manufacture and deal in moving picture films and to engage in amusement enterprises. The incorporators are Alfred Hamburger, E. S. Hartman and S. M. Frankland.

The Vaudeville Film Corporation of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 to do a moving picture business. The incorporators are A. E. Lindas, V. M. Patana and E. M. Tenna.

J. B. Gage, who operates the Royal Theater at Sandwich, has taken a lease on the Grand Theater at Plano and has strings on one or two more houses with the view of building up a circuit which will enable him to book good vaudeville shows.

David Mitchell has sold his moving picture theater at Farmer City to J. L. Kerr, of Decatur, and will go to Colorado Springs, Col.

The Kimmel Theater at Cairo has been leased to Demos & Dooley.

Al Yeager, who has been prominent in moving picture affairs in Sterling and Morrison for some time has taken a five-year lease on the Weinlander Building in Mt. Carroll and after remodeling the building will operate a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

The Lyric Theater at Lincoln did some good advertising recently for "The Merchant of Venice." A street car was sent out over all the lines in the city, which not only displayed signs calling attention to the film, but carried free passengers who wished to attend the show.

Photographer Osgood, of Galesburg, has been doing quite a business in short industrial subjects for concerns of that city. He recently made some films for the Glenwood Ice Company, showing how the company harvests its natural lake ice.

A commendable spirit was shown at Elmwood when Manager Hatcher, of the Photoplay Theater, canceled one of his shows in order that all in the small city might attend the free opening performance at the Palace Theater, Milo Phares, manager.

The Star Theater at Pecatonica recently gave a benefit performance for the high school orchestra.

Charles E. New, who formerly was manager for the Evanston Theater at Evanston, has been engaged as manager to succeed R. B. Pearson. After the stock season has ended a season of moving pictures will begin.

The Belasco Theater Company, of Quincy, which recently secured a charter from the secretary of state, is busy with the plans for its new moving picture theater—the Belasco, in that city.

The Barrison Theater at Waukegan, operated by Greenberg & Isaacs, is now a moving picture house and will run from five to eight reels at a uniform admission of ten cents for adults and five cents for children. This firm has secured from the Sol Litt estate a lease on the Majestic Theater, and the new house gave them a place to show dramas and tabloid musical comedies.

The Social Hygiene Committee of the Federation of Women's Organizations in Waukegan is reported to be interested in the moving picture question and a stand upon the conduct of local photoplay houses is expected.

C. D. Heller, manager of the publicity department of Marshall Field & Company, the big Chicago department store, is giving his lecture, "From the Cotton Field to the Finish," illustrated with moving pictures of textile making, to college students in Illinois towns. The industrial films have been approved by the crowds who paid to see them.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

A GLASS tile front, one of the few in the United States, will be a feature of the new house on 325 Pearl street, in Beaumont, Tex., to be opened by J. C. Christopher, proprietor of the Crystal Theater in that city. Mr. Christopher will expend about $7,000 in remodeling the building which he has leased, installing a half-canopy entrance in addition to the novel front. He will have a stage for vaudeville acts.

The contract has been awarded for the construction of the new Princess Theater, to be erected in Edna, Tex., by W. W. McCrary.

The passing of Southwestern college dramatics is laid at the door of the moving picture show. At the University of Kansas at Lawrence the Thespian and Masque Clubs were combined into the Hawks, one strong dramatic organization, but now it is announced that the society this year will attempt no play. The students are no longer interested in their dramatic productions, so the story goes, when for five cents they can spend an evening at the picture show instead of at a rehearsal.

Jacob Smith has purchased the interest of Joseph Morehead in the McGregir Opera House at McGregir, Tex., and now is managing that house. The Healey Theater No. 2 has been opened at 115 West Exchange avenue, North Fort Worth, Tex., under the direction of J. J. Dillon, who was for a number of years connected with Healey's picture show in Fort Worth. R. A. Healey, Fred C. Burge and W. F. Stewart, of North Fort Worth, also are interested in the new house.

The Crystal Theater at Greenville, Tex., has installed a new orchestral device, imported from Germany, which gives the effect of a twenty-one piece orchestra.

A. C. Waterman, of Sherman, Tex., has bought the Rex Theater at McKinney, Tex., from Mrs. J. L. Beard and has changed the name to the Elk Theater. Waterman has been in the show business eight years.

The Stockyards Amusement Company is planning the erection of an airdome seating 1,250 persons near North Main street in North Fort Worth, Tex.

C. E. Bayett has sold the Dixie Theater in Nevasota, Tex., to E. Swindler and his sister, Mrs. L. McBride, who have assumed possession.

H. J. Slearer has rented the E. O. Seeliger building in Lockhart, Tex., and will open a moving picture theater.

C. E. Kimmel, who recently purchased the Elite Theater on Harrison avenue in Guthrie, Okla., has opened the New Cozy Theater in that city. Daily matinees will be a feature of the policy of the new house.

The Mission Theater at Amarillo, Tex., is being enlarged.

F. Yenne has succeded A. E. Ohlfest as manager of the Grand Theater at Lawrence, Kan.

Charles May has purchased the opera house at Norman, Okla., from John Franing.

The Gem Theater at Batesville, Ark., is being remodeled.

Gillian & Cox are expected to have their newly fitted picture theater in the Van Noy building at Tishomingo, Okla., opened by the first of April.

The theater in Muskogee, Okla., which formerly was operated as the Wigwam No. 2, will be known as the Star, under the management of its new owner, J. A. Marcus.

Vaudeville has been added to the program at the Pythian Theater in Cleveland, Okla., operated by H. H. Naly.

W. J. Harston will open a new moving picture theater at Bromide, Okla.

The Peoples Theater at Frederick, Okla., has been sold to H. L. Loftis and E. H. Casen.

H. L. Taylor has taken over the lease on the opera house at Mangum, Okla., formerly held by E. H. Gragson.

Ames & Powers have opened a moving picture show in the Metropolitan building at Lehigh, Okla.

J. E. Jones has opened an airdome at Hugo, Okla.

The Dyer building at Quinton, Okla., has been leased by Paul Billeaux, who will remodel it for use for a moving picture theater.

A new moving picture theater has been opened at Ft. Gibson, Okla., by W. F. Brown.

Manager Snively, of the Princess Theater at Oaris, Tex., gave over the use of his house for an afternoon to allow the exhibition of pictures of the park system in Kansas City. Inasmuch as the commercial organizations of Paris are interested in city beautification it was an excellent thing for the theater.

The Idle Hour Theater at Drumright, Okla., is now under the management of Stroup & Hock.

Robert Moore is now manager of the Sugg Theater at Tulsa, Okla.

J. E. Wyand, who is a candidate for mayor of Muskogee, Okla., has come out openly for the Sunday moving picture show. That he is not a "liberal" in the common sense of the word is evidenced by a stand against allowing pool halls to open on Sunday. At a recent mass meeting a man from the crowd asked, "Are you in favor of Sunday moving picture shows?" "Yes, sir, I am—provided they are run decently," was the reply. "Well, would you be in favor of running three shows a day—morning, noon and night?" "Most certainly I would," the answer came back promptly. "I think Muskogee is big enough to know what it wants. There are many of her people who are not able to go to the Hinton and if they can go to a picture show with the whole family for twenty-five cents, enjoy a wholesome show rather than walk the streets, why I say let the shows run. If I had a daughter I would much rather she be in a picture show than driving around in an automobile visiting the parks and such places at night."

Adolph Schultz, who has had charge of the Princess Theater at Silver City, New Mex., for some time, has purchased the house from Hyman and Abe Abrahams.

The old Majestic Theater on South Eighth street in Temple, Tex., has been re-opened as Everybody's. This name was selected from a thousand submitted in a prize contest.

An airdome seating 600 persons will be erected at Cushing, Okla., by Manager McCall, of the Empress and Folly theaters.

A half interest in the Browne & Duncan photoplay and opera house enterprises at Las Vegas, N. Mex., has been purchased by Nestor Hoffman, who will take an active part in the management of the houses. James S. Duncan, who was connected with the firm, is now operating a moving picture theater at Salina, Kan.

R. N. Smith is manager of the Olympic Theater, which had been opened at Plainview, Okla., by J. N. Donohoo.

S. Von Phul, of Dallas, Tex., has been made manager of the Majestic Theater in that city, succeeding O. F. Gould, who after four years' service in Dallas has gone to take charge of the Majestic Theater in Fort Worth, Tex.

L. M. Crawford, of Topeka, Kan., and C. U. Philley, manager of the Lyceum in St. Joseph, Mo., were recently in Atchison, Kan., discussing the plans for the new house to be built by the Fraternal Order of Eagles of that city. These experienced show men have suggested a combination photoplay and theatrical house, costing about $18,000.

The Manery Opera House at Smithville, Tex., has been leased by F. Hoffman, of Rockport, Tex.

Five moving picture theaters and one house maintaining a stock company in Fort Worth, Tex., were enjoined by Judge Marvin H. Brown, of the Sixty-seventh District Court from operating on Sundays under the donation plan. The petition was filed at the request of members of a Bible class of the First Baptist church of that city.

J. G. Blaschke, of the Monarch Film Company, of Hot Springs, Ark., has released the first of a series of "Hot Springs Weeklies," consisting of from eight to twelve local subjects. The first was shown at the Royal Theater and included such subjects as the state fair, an alligator farm, an Elks minstrel parade and prize winning dogs at a kennel show. It is planned to circulate the films throughout the state.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

"THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER"

IN FIVE PARTS

The Premiere Drama of American Life

By BRONSON HOWARD

Director - - - - - WM. F. HADDOCK

THE CAST

THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER	KATHERINE LA SALLE
FLORENCE ST. VINCENT	ETHEL PHILLIPS
AUNT FANNY HOLCOMB	KITTY BALDWIN
JOHN STREBELOW	DAVID WALL
HAROLD ROUTLEDGE	WM. BAILEY
COUNT DE CAROJAC	HARRY SPINGLER
LAWRENCE WESTBROOK (Banker)	W. H. TOOKER
G. WASHINGTON PHIPPS (a hustling American)	JOSEPH DALEY
M. MONTVILLAIS	FRANK WOOD
NATALIE (the banker's grandchild)	LITTLE MISS MAB REA

Maids, Footmen, Butlers, Ambassadors, Noblemen, Depositors, Clerks, Etc., Etc.

A Superb Cast in a Wonderful Production Known the World Over

A PORTRAYAL IN DRAMATIC FORM OF AMERICAN LIFE
INTERWOVEN WITH LOVE, PATHOS AND HUMOR

Beautiful One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Photos, Lobby Displays and Other Advertising Matter

SOLD ON STATE RIGHTS BASIS ONLY

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION

102-104 WEST 101st STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Phone 6532 Riverside

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Detroit, Mich., played a very important part in the observance of Tuberculosis Night, March 9, when funds were raised for the purpose of building a hospital for white plague victims in that city. Nearly all the houses gave a share of their receipts to the fund and in addition had women interested in the cause stationed at the door to receive contributions. The committee appointed by the league for this purpose was headed by W. Lester Levy, chairman. It is probable that the Exhibitors' League will fit up a room in the new hospital.

Leonard Mulby is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater at Linden, Ohio.

George Roe has leased the Orpheum Theater at Oelwin, Iowa, to T. A. Bryan, manager of the Dreamland Theater. The new manager will operate the house as a photoplay theater, with an occasional act of vaudeville.

State fire inspectors report that they found practically no fire danger in photoplay houses in Jackson, Mich.

According to newspaper reports a censorship board of ministers, physicians and educators in Milwaukee, Wis., passed the "Traffic in Souls" by a vote of 60 to 1. It is a Universal picture.

The State Industrial Commission of Wisconsin is using four reels of moving pictures to promote its safety first campaign. The possibilities of this work are great, and the commission is unable to cover the field as fully as desired in its schedule. For instance, at Superior where there are 5,000 men employed in industries—men who need the suggestions conveyed by the films—the Grand Opera House had a capacity of but 2,000. Members of the men's families are also interested in the subject. The releases by the Edison company, such as "The Crime of Carelessness," have filled in a great many gaps when they were shown in regular moving picture theaters.

Demands have been made upon city authorities at Oskaloosa, Iowa, that the moving picture and other theaters be closed on Sunday. The Welfare League, with which most of the church people are allied, is responsible for the movement.

Hill & Torrey's new moving picture theater at Freeport, Mich., will be known as the Bon Ton. This name received the most votes in a contest with World League and Princess crowding it for first place.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Harrison, the new owners of the Pastime Theater at Iowa City, Iowa, have made a number of improvements in their new possession, re-decorating, installing more lights and securing better results from the screen.

The Parker Opera House block in Mason City, Iowa, is being remodeled, and when it is finished a portion of the ground floor will be occupied by A. H. Nickerson, of Nora Springs, with a moving picture theater.

H. A. DeBold, owner of two moving picture theaters in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who has secured possession of the new Palace Theater now under course of construction on Sycamore street in Waterloo, Iowa, expects to have his new house open the latter part of April or the first of May. Although the place is fitted for vaudeville he expects to operate it primarily as a motion picture theater.

Wilber Mitchell is now manager of the Isis Theater in Peru, Ind. Jay Lipsett, who has been manager and part owner, sold his interest to Fred Steinmetz.

Fuller & Shealey have retired from the moving picture field at Sac City, Iowa, selling the Lake View Theater to A. B. Vining, of Rolfe.

Harry A. Rick, who recently purchased the Lyric Theater at Boone, Iowa, from Henry Watkins until recently was advertising manager for the Frankel Clothing Company, of Des Moines, Iowa.

Matthew Kickels is operating the Metropolitan Theater at Iowa Falls, Iowa, by himself, having purchased the interest of his partner, E. Chambliss.

L. H. Buckingham has purchased the moving picture theater at Lorimer, Iowa, from C. J. Loehr, who will farm near Lone Tree, Iowa.

Porter Reeves, of Cainsville, Mo., the new owner of the opera house at Leon, Iowa, has leased it to the firm of Van Werden & Kopp, composed of L. P. Van Werden and P. H. Kopp. Van Werden has been owner and manager of the house for many years.

The Star Theater at Sioux Rapids, Iowa, is now under the management of J. A. Meadows. Roy Meadows is acting as manager.

Attendance has been very heavy at the "free" performances given at the Majestic Theater in Kalamazoo, Mich., on Sundays and the crowds are taken by some to be an index, if the city council wishes it, to the attitude of the public toward the Sunday shows. Six reels of pictures were given at each of the two performances. Music was furnished by an orchestra. Later it was planned to add a singer. Ten per cent. of the proceeds was given to the Civic Improvement League.

A Michigan exhibitor is in politics. Royal E. Decker, who is running a moving picture theater in Paw Paw, is a candidate for the nomination of county clerk of Van Buren county on the Republican ticket.

William Shank, basso-baritone of Minneapolis, Minn., recently was a feature attraction for two weeks at the Orpheum Moving Picture Theater in Dubuque, Iowa.

More educational and patriotic films are desired in moving picture theaters in Kalamazoo, Mich. The movement has been started by the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which has appointed a committee of which Mrs. C. H. Mattingly is the chairman.

Young peoples societies of the various churches in Findlay, Ohio, have asked the city council to close the photoplay houses on Sunday. "The Sunday picture shows interfere with the legitimate work of God," declared Dr. H. C. Jameson, pastor of the First M. E. Church, who spoke to the aldermen at the time the petition was presented. The city attorney to whom the matter was referred cited the state law, which provided that no person should engage in manual labor or open a place of business on Sunday. One alderman declared that if that were enforced the street cars could not run. Dr. Jameson asserted that the church people recognize that many of the pictures shown are educational and he believed that if the places would close on Sunday in deference to the wishes of the petitioners that the patronage from the church-going people would increase sufficiently on week-day nights to compensate for any loss of business that might be incurred from closing on Sundays. The council, having been cited to a state law covering the matter, did nothing.

Leo Croasdell has opened a moving picture theater in the Korte building at Chilton, Wis. He expects to run about four days a week and will secure ten cents admission.

The Elite, of Kalamazoo, Mich., advertises its new Kimball pipe organ as "The Sensation of the Hour on the Rialto."

Projection of moving pictures onto curtains in the street has become a common mode of entertaining visitors to the smaller towns on midweek festivity nights, but the merchants of Hospers, Iowa, are contemplating something akin to a municipal moving picture theater. For their lure to the country folk this summer they propose to fit up a local building with comfortable opera chairs, inclined floor and motor-driven projecting apparatus. A fund of $800 will be raised for the purpose.

John M. Waters and John McLean will expend $8,000 in remodeling the building at 613 Fourth street in Sioux City, Iowa, which they have leased for three years, to be used as a moving picture theater.

The Majestic Theater at Grundy Center, Iowa, has been re-opened with pictures and vaudeville shows will be given each Thursday, Friday and Saturday night.

Fred Prusha will erect a building at Chelsea, Iowa, to be occupied by a moving picture show.

W. S. Holcomb has leased a building in Plymouth, Iowa, and will remodel it for use as an opera house.

Herman Goettsch, who recently purchased the Grand Theater at Manning, Iowa, from L. H. Harmon, will be assisted in its management by his brother-in-law, Frank Marnette.

The Sioux Amusement Company is reported to have been formed at Sioux City, Iowa, for the purpose of opening a vaudeville and variety theater costing $15,000, at 509-511 Nebraska street, in that city. Contracts already have been let for the remodeling of the building into a theater seating 1,100 persons.

Commercial clubs in the smaller cities no longer seek to espouse the canning factory, which for many years was a most ardently desired industry; they now woo companies which have plans to erect large glass studios and open air theaters. Half a dozen boards of trades in the Middle West are elated over the fact that "the producers" have at last discovered the beautiful scenery which surrounds their city and its especial adaptability to "western and historical pictures."

W. C. Gleason, connected with the engineering department at the Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa, will open a moving picture theater in the Odd Fellows building in Ames. James Coyle, Jr., who has been in charge of the Elite orchestra at Tama, Iowa, will manage the theater, which will be known as the Palm. Mrs. Gleason will have charge of the orchestra.

The Majestic Theater at Missouri Valley, Iowa, has been sold to a Mr. Moore, of Des Moines, Iowa.

The Star Theater at Shoals, Ind., has been re opened under the management of J. L. Wills, of Washington. Shows will be given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday nights.

F. H. Graaf, owner of the Grand Theater at Estherville, Iowa, is said to be contemplating the erection of a new opera house and confectionery in that city.

E. A. Haddawy, proprietor of a moving picture theater at Cumberland, Iowa, was fatally injured, according to dispatches, by the explosion of the gas tank, which formed a part of the lighting outfit of his house. One side of his head was literally cut away and one jaw was split open.

Niles, Mich., may have a new moving picture theater. A conference recently was planned between John B. Caldwell, owner of the Caldwell Theater in St. Joseph, Mich., John T. Conners, who operates the house, and F. O. Gephart, of Marion, Ind. It is said the plans call for a house seating 700 persons.

The special matinees for children which were contemplated in Omaha, Neb., by the exhibitors and the Social Service Board are to become a reality. The moving picture men and the members of the service board have wisely decided not to limit the program to educational and instructive films, but to include good, clean comedies. Half of the proceeds at these shows will be given to the children's playground fund. The exhibitors are represented by a committee composed of S. H. Goldberg, G. S. Weaver, A. R. Pramer and O. S. Finch.

Films have been made of a new phase of the lumber industry near Esanaba, Mich.—the handling of logs by a steam traction engine.

Al Grossman, of Rochester, N. Y., is now manager of the Vaudette Theater, at Menominee, Mich. Several changes will be made about the house. A four-reel show will be given.

P. W. Ramer will build a new theater at River Falls, Wis.

Three upstairs theaters—the Jewel, 30 Michigan avenue; the Bijou, 24 Monroe avenue; and the Avenue, 996 Michigan avenue—in Detroit were ordered closed by the state fire marshal.

A. G. Wood, of East Tawas, Mich., has purchased the Pastime Theater in that city and the Star Theater in Tawas City, succeeding A. J. Berube as manager.

The forestry department of the United States is using moving pictures at lumber conventions in the Middle West and Northwest to illustrate the development of the lumber industry and to emphasize the perils and costliness of forest fires. The reels were shipped from a convention in California to the meeting of the Northern Forest Protective Association at Marquette, Mich.

Moving pictures will be the chief attraction at the new Famous Theater which has been erected at West Plains, Mo., by J. L. Elledge, a leading grocer of that city, although the house is equipped for handling theatrical attractions and many will be booked. The theater will be under the management of McCoy & Henry.

Harry A. Sodini has sold a half interest in his new vaudeville house, the Orpheum, at Clinton, Iowa, to W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, Mich., who is interested in thirty other houses in Michigan, Illinois, and Iowa. It was planned to open the new house March 26, the opening attraction to be followed with a banquet to the show people and newspaper representatives. The projecting apparatus already has been installed.

John Anegon, proprietor of the Cozy Theater at Iron River, Mich, paid a fine and costs amounting to $9.60 for crowding his aisles at a recent show. The fire chief of the city and his inspectors have been patrolling the theaters.

David Present, who is interested in the Lyric Theater at Chippewa Falls, Wis., is said to have made overtures recently for the purchase of two picture houses in Merrill, Wis.

F. S. Converse has sold his moving picture theater at Nekoosa, Wis., to John Simmett. Louis Simmett will be the new manager. Mr. and Mrs. Converse have gone to Wittenberg, Wis., where the former has leased the Kerstein Opera House.

Moving pictures of Detroit, Mich., prepared under the direction of the Board of Commerce of that city for advertising purposes were shown at the Liberty Theater in Detroit.

The Windsor Theater, Fletcher Russell, manager, Hampton, Iowa, is now using the licensed film service.

To a woman exhibitor, Mrs. D. E. Dues, manager of a moving picture theater in Cheboygan, Mich., belongs the honor of becoming the first woman member of the newly organized Chamber of Commerce in that city.

Producers who have specialized in big fire scenes are not likely to be popular with State Fire Marshal Clem P. Host in Wisconsin. In a recent bulletin on the subject of "School Fire Drills" he declared: "Fire is a particularly fascinating matter to many people, and especially to children, and I believe that pyromania is frequently caused by arousing the imagination and excitement of children by stories of great fire disasters and by seeing such calamities illustrated by moving pictures."

Virgil Thompson, of Seaton, Ill., has purchased the Princess Theater at Manchester, Iowa, and has assumed its management.

Edward Kew, who recently purchased a store building in Rockell, Iowa, and J. L. Snyder, of that place, are said to be preparing to open a moving picture theater.

The ordinance fixing a tax on moving picture theaters was laid over a week by the city council of Omaha, Neb., until a schedule could be prepared showing the total revenue likely to result from this source.

Manager Henry P. Eales, of the Electric Theater in Hannibal, Mo., has erected a stage to be used by home talent vaudeville in connection with his moving picture show. The house is now running Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday nights, but this spring Manager Eales expects to begin a six-day schedule.

St. Joseph, Mo., men are said to be contemplating the opening of a new moving picture theater in Atchison, Kan.

The Lyric Theater at Boone, Iowa, has been sold to Harry A. Rick, of Webster City, Iowa.

R. R. Shafer has closed the Lyric Theater at Hampton, Iowa, and it is said will seek a location in a larger city. Hampton has had two moving picture theaters.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

KING CHARLES II.
(ENGLAND'S MERRY MONARCH)

4--PARTS--4

a feature that causes

the heart to miss a beat

Daring Escape of the King from the Church Tower.

Sensational Fall of Man and Horse Over a Sixty-Foot Precipice.

The King's Historical Escape in Boscobel Oak.

Big Battle Scenes.

Deadly Conflicts Between Man and Man.

The King's Historical Escape to France and His Re-entry Into London.

Intermingled with the sensational conflicts between Royalist and Cromwellian parties is a rare story of the love, heroism and self-sacrifice of one of KING CHARLES' most faithful followers.

State Rights Now Selling

This great historical production is replete with stirring incidents of the escapades of England's Merry Monarch immediately following the famous BATTLE OF WORCESTER.

Historical Escape in Boscobel Oak

The Cast includes hundreds of artists and horses. The costuming of the period has been adhered to in its minutest details. We have prepared a full line of crowd-attracting advertising matter, consisting of one-sheets, three-sheets and six-sheets in four full colors; heralds, photos for lobby display, slides and cuts.

Is Your Territory Sold? Our thrilling three-part feature "DETECTIVE FINN OF SCOTLAND YARD" is selling at record-breaking pace. Better Find Out!

Room 904, 220 W. 42d St. The I. S. P. Co. New York City, N. Y.

NEW ENGLAND.

HARRY F. CAMPBELL, treasurer and general manager of Warner's Features, of Massachusetts, Boston, announces that he has resigned as a director of the Eastern Theaters Company.

The Puritan Theater, Boston, lost no time in booking the Universal's "Merchant of Venice," in four parts, and offered it on March 8, 9 and 10, with a lecture by Dr. Harwood.

On Monday, March 2, the writer journeyed to Salem, Mass., to visit the New Plaza Theater, which recently opened under the ownership of Grant and Campbell. The Plaza is considered to be one of the best appointed and most modern houses in New England, built for the exploitation of pictures only. To show their faith in motion pictures, Grant and Campbell built the Plaza in such a way as to make the showing of vaudeville impossible, by the placing of their screen. The house, which is receiving the personal attention of Samuel Grant, has been most successful since its opening night, offering Warner's Features and the Universal program. On the particular night that the writer visited the Plaza, the management had donated the use of its balcony to the Salem Board of Trade, which was holding a Membership Contest. Towards nine o'clock the show was interrupted long enough to allow the president of the Board of Trade to step on the stage and given a résumé of the history of his organization. The number of new members secured by the contest was announced, and the president of the Board stated his appreciation of the liberality of the Plaza management in helping along the contest, remarking that its success would have been doubtful, save for their helpful assistance. Incidentally, the Plaza got any amount of advertising of the best sort from the contest.

New delegates were admitted to the Boston Central Labor Union from the Operators' Union, Local 182, on March 1.

The fourth season of the Arthur Peck Travelogs opened at Tremont Temple, Boston, this week, with a lecture and moving pictures on "Switzerland."

Despite the inclement weather, Symphony Hall, Boston, was well filled this week at the first of the season's series of Newman's Travel Talks. This year's lectures are on the great cities of Europe, and London was the opening night's subject. A special feature of the lecture was motion pictures of London, the Thames embankment, and other scenes, by night, accomplished for the first time by means of a special phosphorescent screen. Other pictures shown were those of suffragette riots. Next week's lecture is on Paris.

Manager Cecil Dodge, of the Pastime Theater, Lowell, Mass., closed down his house indefinitely on February 25.

At Will Howe's Opera House, Lowell, Mass., Warner's Features and Famous Players subjects are both offered.

Fred. B. Murphy, manager of the Boston branch of the World Films Corporation, held a special showing of "The Triumph of An Emperor," at the South End Theater, this week. This Savoia production appealed so strangely to the many exhibitors present that Fred. had little or no difficulty in securing liberal bookings.

March 2 to 7 was jubilee week at Polis Theater, Waterbury, Conn., celebrating S. Z. Polis' twenty-fifth anniversary as a theatrical manager. To observe this anniversary Manager Eugene Wilson, of Polis, had an unusually large program.

Manager W. Lebresque, of the Opera House, at Milford, Mass., is using the Warner program of three-reel features to good results. W. Lebresque was selected to manage the Opera House when the house changed hands recently.

Malley and Denison, managers of the Park Theater, Taunton, Mass., have given up the policy of stock shows for the present, and "Les Miserables" was offered to very good business the week of March 2.

The Portland Theatrical Mechanical Association was tendered a big benefit entertainment at Greely's Theater, Portland, on March 1. Vaudeville and pictures formed the entertainment. A special permit was obtained for this from the city officials, who realized that Sunday was their only loafing time.

The Box Office Attraction Film Rental Company has opened a Boston office.

Another new arrival in Boston is the Eclectic Film Company, which is opening here, at 3 Tremont Row, Scollay Square Olympic building, and offering Eclectic features to the New England trade. S. Barnfield is in charge of this office.

Messrs. Harold C. and Fred Keegan have purchased the old Comique Theater, in Burlington, Vermont, from G. A. Stebbins, and will continue the house about as before.

Fred Engley, manager of the New Empire Theater, Rockland, Me., reports good business, with motion picture programs.

Boston is now the background for the production of moving pictures, and a thriller is now being made in and around the Blue Hills district. Leon E. Dadmun is one of the prime movers. Chief W. B. Watts, of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, has a leading role in the play, and other players are: Ida Harrison, Catherine Ward, Frank Delydston, H. D. Pritchard and Fred De Crotan.

The Scenic Temple, Haverhill, Mass., joins the ranks of photoplay houses, under the management of H. E. Prescott. The Scenic Temple is controlled by the New England Amusement Company, the owners of which are well known to the trade in this section.

A new house is slated for St. Albans, Vt., to be controlled by L. Best. The theater will have a frontage of nearly 50 feet, and the plans call for a first-class modern theater.

Work on the new Modern Theater, Boston, is going ahead rapidly, and the opening of this 800-seat theater should be about April first. An organ has been contracted for which will be a revelation to the trade, according to general manager Jacob Lourie.

Louis B. Mayer, president of the American Feature Film Company, Boston, states that the demand for his Jesse Lasky features is unprecedented.

Edward Hinkley, of West Newton, Mass., has secured a lease on the Hudson, Mass., Opera House, where he intends to run a first-class theater. Mr. Hinkley has signed up for the complete Universal program.

William White has withdrawn from the White Amusement Company and is no longer associated with the management of the Academy at Lowell, Mass.

The Boston office of the Eclectic Film Company, at the Olympia Building, 3 Tremont Row, is going full blast now, and a demand is being created for the Eclectic product.

S. Bernfield manager of the Boston office of Pathe Freres, 3 Tremont Row, has issued a form letter to all the New England trade, stating that the entire output of Pathe films may be secured by exhibitors at this office, including the Pathe Weekly. Hearst's "Boston American" prints stories of the Pathe releases every day and publishes the names of theaters exhibiting these releases.

Louis Wesley is no longer connected with the theater at Gardner, Mass., which he has been running, as the owners of the property have just taken possession themselves.

L. Whitney, owner of the Bijou Theater, Fitchburg, Mass., has bought the Auditorium Theater, also of Fitchburg. It is expected that the Bijou might be closed. Several new theaters have opened in this town and, as a result, the available trade has been divided into too many parts to make things entirely satisfactory for the exhibitors.

The Calvary Baptist Church has installed a Power's 6A machine, and intends to show pictures on Saturday evenings, and on some Sunday nights.

"The Triumph of An Emperor" has created much attention at the World Film Corporation's Boston offices. Assistant Manager Charles Barolet exhibited this production at the Mission Church, Boston, this week, and the audience, composed of twenty-five priests, was greatly impressed.

Newman's travel talks are still drawing good houses at Symphony Hall, Boston. Moving pictures of the Grand Prix, Longchamps and Deauville appeared to interest intensely.

The "Boston Post" is behind a plan to buy three trained elephants for the city's Zoo. Manager H. A. Chenoweth, of the Shawmut Theater, Blue Hill avenue district, is helping the idea along by holding a show, with admission being one cent. The money goes toward the "Post" fund for buying the elephants.

The entire Poli circuit in this section has booked "Life's Temptations," a Midgar feature.

"The Fatal Wedding" and "Classmates," both Klaw & Erlanger features, were exhibited at the St. James and Orpheum theaters, Boston, this week. Very favorable comment was accorded both subjects, especially the latter.

Jacob Lurie, general manager of the Modern Theater, Incorporated, is busy with this new house now building in Boston. Although the opening was set for April 1, Mr. Lurie is afraid it might be May when the Modern is completed. The house is expected to set up a new standard of excellence for an 800-seat theater in this section.

The Globe Theater, Boston, has changed its policy, and is now offering road shows. This house has been changing policy quite often lately, and had been playing vaudeville and picture programs. The Universal's big feature, "The Traffic in Souls," has completed a long and highly successful run here.

The Bijou Dream, Boston, has taken on new life since Mr. J. W. Craig assumed the management. General film service continues at the Bijou as always, and considerable vaudeville has been added to the programs.

"Les Miserables" returned to Tremont Temple, Boston, and played to good business, considering that the production had already played at Tremont Temple in an extended engagement.

The photodrama "Creation," is booked for an early showing at the Auditorium, Springfield, Mass.

The Victoria Theater, Lawrence, Mass., has a new manager in the person of Charles Beadle. Mr. Beadle has inaugurated many changes in the Victoria, with an eye to the wishes and comfort of his patrons. Motion pictures still remain the chief attraction. Amateur night is held every Friday, and special souvenirs are given away on Saturdays. Another stunt of Manager Beadle's is to take a flashlight of his audience, and the one whose face appears within a circle on the picture when thrown on the screen the following week, is presented with a souvenir.

The Lawler Theater, Greenfield, Mass., continues its usual good business, with vaudeville and motion pictures. On Wednesdays burlesque holds forth.

Park, Nantasket, and more recently in charge of Lexington Park, is now managing the Majestic Theater, Keene, N. H. Mr. Elbridge L. Campbell resigned as manager of the Majestic, in order to give his attention to a project of his own, which is now assuming definite proportions.

A new theater is scheduled for New Haven, Conn. The site selected is just in the rear of the Hotel Taft, and will cost about $50,000. A four-story building is the present plan, and the house is to seat 1,300 people.

Parker Burke, of Bullock's Theater, Providence, R. I., is doing well with vaudeville and pictures. Charles Allen, of the Union, Providence, also is doing a steady business.

Poli's Theater, Waterbury, Conn., is still in charge of Eugene Wilson, and playing to capacity business with vaudeville and motion pictures. E. P. Furlong, formerly manager of the Park Theater, Springfield, is now in Waterbury, and assisting Mr. Wilson.

Jacques Theater at Waterbury, Conn., has been leased to P. F. Shea by S. Z. Poli for a term of eighteen months. It is understood that Mr. Poli intends building a new theater here.

William E. Reeves, manager of the Big Nickle, Portland, Me., used Jack London's "The Sea Wolf," to good results this week. "Hearts Adrift" was also heavily advertised.

The management of the Opera House at Milford, Mass., advertised in the local paper to the effect that moving pictures did not pay, and that the house would be closed while a permanent stock company was gathered.

A new incorporation is the Rugen Amusement Company, of Newport, R. I. This is a $6,000 concern, with Hedwig Rugen, H. B. Sinclair and John Rugen named as the promoters.

"The Merchant of Venice," a Universal special feature, was passed for Sunday use by the Massachusetts State Police, and General Manager J. A. Eslow, of the Universal's Boston offices, has bookings on the subject until early in May.

F. W. Greely has withdrawn from the Casco Amusement Company, and is no longer associated with the Casco Theater at Portland, Me. The house will be continued by A. J. Wildes.

Arthur K. Peck is holding forth at Tremont Temple, Boston, with motion pictures of Berlin and the Rhine. "Travel Talks" they are called, and prices are from one dollar, down.

The Nickel Theater, Bangor, Me., has closed for repairs and extended alterations. It will reopen shortly.

The Bijou Theater, Bangor, has eliminated the vaudeville from its programs, and joins the ranks of the straight moving picture theaters.

The Famous Players Film Company, Boston, has made arrangements with the "Boston Journal," whereby a story of each picture is printed in that paper. The names of the theaters using the Famous Players' productions are also published with the dates on which the pictures may be seen.

HENRY.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

PROTEST has been made in Grand Junction, Colo., against the action of a minister of that city who prevented the giving of travelogue lectures in that city on Sunday. He protested to the authorities and insisted upon the enforcement of the ordinance which prohibits theaters from operating on Sunday. The lecture was to have been on a religious subject, but the minister contended that it would keep people away from church and therefore should not be allowed. Editors of the city refer to the action as "carrying the idea of Sunday observance too far just as the Puritans and other well-meaning, but fanatical people did in days gone-bye."

Miss Lottie Wilson, English soprano, has been singing at the Seville Theater in Minneapolis, Minn.

A feature at the first luncheon of the St. Paul Athletic Club, of St. Paul, Minn., was motion pictures of athletic events from different countries.

Members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, of St. Paul, Minn., are carrying an ad in St. Paul papers, giving the names of the houses which belong to the association.

Arthur Fuller and Matthew Omscheid are now operating a moving picture theater at International Falls, Minn.

The Pine Grove School district near Ironton, Minn., is one of the first rural schools in that part of the country to take up the social center idea. Moving pictures will be used for instructive and entertaining purposes.

E. L. Bedfield, of Cloquet, Minn., will erect a new moving picture theater, costing about $20,000. Kelly & Williams, architects, of Duluth, Minn., drew the plans.

B. D. Brigham has purchased the Empire Moving Picture Theater at Tekoa, Wash., from H. Willett, who has conducted it for the last five years.

The application of John Spencer to conduct a moving picture theater near Carter and Como avenues in St. Paul, Minn., met with a protest from the school board. Citizens appeared before the council to object and the members of the school board served notice that they would also be represented if Spencer's announced plan to renew his application was carried out.

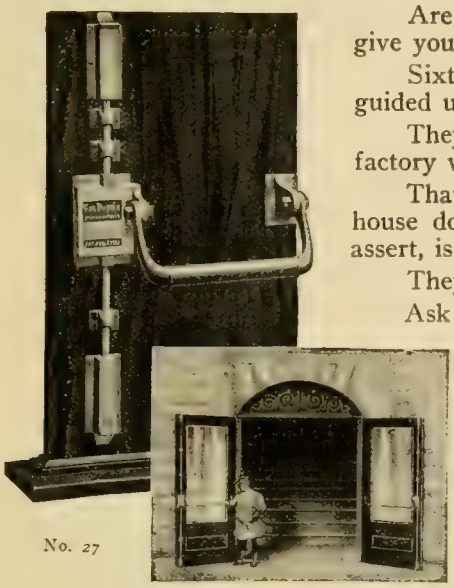
MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

TRADE MARK
REG. U. S. PAT. OFFICE
No. 85021

Von Duprin

PAT.
U. S. AND CAN.

Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches



No. 27

"Safe exit is a universal demand."

Are your Exit doors safeguarded? A few dollars' expense would surely give you mental relief—would it not?

Sixty years of experience in the merchandising of Builders' Hardware guided us in the production of these Latches.

They have stood the test in every competition, and have proved satisfactory wherever applied.

That the mechanism is as good as new after years of service on a school house door is proof positive of substantial construction. This quality, we assert, is found only in the Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches.

They are the best.

Ask for list of theatres equipped with Von Duprin

Send for Catalogue 12D.

See Sweet's Index.

Vonnegut Hardware Co.

General Distributors

120-124 East Washington St., Indianapolis, Ind.

PASQUALI AMERICAN CO. Inc.

110 W. 40th St.
2004 World's Tower Building
New York City

G. ALBERT AMATO, Pres.
WILLIAM J. LEE, Mgr.

Now Ready For Delivery

THE SPARTAN GIRL

IN 5 PARTS

An Episode of the Greek and Turkish War

P. C. A.

ALL PASQUALI PICTURES COPYRIGHTED

Four Kinds of POSTERS

PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY
Action in Every Foot

HERALDS PHOTOS and SLIDES

LICENSED FILM STORIES

ESSANAY.

CANNING INDUSTRY IN CALIFORNIA (Mar. 31).—The picture shows clearly the complete history of the canning business, from the time the vegetables are grown until ready for sale. This picture embraces the pea and the asparagus.

A QUEER QUARANTINE (April 1).—Jack Hastings writes a letter to his sweetheart, Kate, to come to his assistance as Count Caesar de Valdez, a Bolivian merchant, is arriving from Europe with three shiploads of rye, and threatens to "bear the market." Upon the Count's arrival he finds a letter from Jack, asking him to his apartment. The Count calls and is held by Jack and Kate under the pretext that the place is a sub-quarantine station. They pretend that the Count is ill, take his temperature and force him to bed. To their great embarrassment the Count tells them that his ships are loaded with rice, not rye.

DAN CUPID, ASSAYER (April 2).—Silas Barker, a trusting old man, and his daughter, Bessie, arrive in the mining town of Dalton. Here a mine that has been salted, is purchased by Barker. Billy Cousins, the assayer, falls in love with Barker's pretty daughter, and when her father brings him the ore, he hasn't the heart to tell the old man the truth, so gives him a favorable assay and tells him he will buy the ore. Accordingly, Barker does this, and we see Cousins contemplating a large pile of junk ore. Later, an Englishman arrives and Barker sells the mine to him. He tells the assayer all about it and Cousins, realizing that Barker has sold a worthless mine, rushes out after the Englishman, and after an exciting argument, the deed is turned back and the Englishman is given his money. Cousins then leads Barker and Bessie to the rear of his house and shows them the worthless ore. He asks Bessie if he may be her gold mine forever, and Bessie, not being averse to this, fondly nestles in his arms.

THE COMING OF SOPHIE'S "MAMMA" (April 4).—Slippery Slim is very domineering to his wife Sophie. One morning when he is upbraiding her, Mustang Pete overhears it and he and Sophie conceive the plan of having a "fake" mother-in-law come and teach Slim a lesson. They write a letter purporting to be from the mother-in-law to the effect that she is coming on a visit and that if she likes the husband, she will put him in her will for a large amount. She arrives and leads Slim a merry dance. But at this juncture, Sophie's real mamma decides to surprise her daughter with a visit. The "fake" mother-in-law is ousted. Slippery Slim is again master in his own home.

THE WEDDING OF PRUDENCE (Special—2 parts—April 3).—Prudence Smith was in love with John Eliot. Her father, however, disagreed to the match. She finds out that she has the right to love John, however, and expresses herself as wishing to take a husband. The father agrees, but he is to pick out the man. The man he picks out is Peter White, a secret tippler. In a slinking way he accuses John of being a secret tippler and he is put in stocks. The day of the wedding of Prudence, John is released. He is wrought up with the spirit of revenge and determines to save Prudence. He accordingly goes to Peter's home, where he finds the old reprobate sound asleep in the grip of strong drink. He also discovers a marriage license that proves that Peter already has a wife living in England. This gives him an idea, and he writes a note which he puts under Peter's wig. He leaves. Peter wakes up and finds he is late. He rushes to the magistrate's office, where the wedding party waits. John, meanwhile, has secreted himself in the garret with his faithful feline. Just as the ceremony starts, John lowers the cat by a string. Its claws grapple in the wig of Peter White. Up! it is yanked into the garret. John is made to come down, the note is found. Peter is proved to be a tippler and a bigamist, the story coming to a happy ending as John takes Prudence in his arms.

THE FULFILLMENT (Special—3 parts—April 2).—She was the daughter of a moderately wealthy [illegible] town citizen and the hero of the story was a young fellow of the United States Navy. In this town resided a young lumber merchant, who, like the naval lieutenant, was in love with the girl. He proposed marriage, but she was quick to let him know that he was not the right man. In spite of woman being the judge, he thought her wrong and became jealous. Through the long hours of many days, the girl waited until the furlough of the naval lieutenant would begin. Finally he arrived in town for a short stay and their marriage was quickly arranged. The lumber merchant, being a friend of the young officer as well as the young girl, was selected for best man. A fire took place in the lumber yards and the young naval officer was told that his friend, the merchant, was within one of the burning buildings. The officer entered the building, intending to rescue his friend, but instead was overcome by smoke and carried out of another part of the building. The lumber merchant, it so happened, escaped all injury. The naval officer was taken to a hospital. Then the lumber merchant was told that the officer had entered the building to save him and was probably burned to death. When no trace of the officer could be found, this young man began to scheme.

Jealousy controlled him and he sent word to the girl and her family that the young officer had been burned to death. He instructed all his men to keep quiet. One of the fellows in his employ secretly told him that the officer was not burned to death, but was in the hospital. Then the young rascal cautioned the man against utterin ga word about the affair, after which he made his way to the hospital. There he found the officer unconscious.

In the girl's home everything was in readiness for the wedding. The news came of the dark disaster and then the young merchant himself arrived and told the sad tidings—that the lieutenant had perished. She heard the news. Immediately and mercifully Fate robbed her tortured thoughts. She forgot, knew not and naught. Some days went by and the young man realized that he had wrecked the girl's life and robbed her of a happiness which was rightfully hers. His thoughts tortured him. He was repenting. Every morning she dressed in her bridal attire and waited for four o'clock and her loved one. But four o'clock never came, for they always turned the clock back and made a

The lieutenant recovered and in the newspaper he saw an account of his own death. As sick as liar of time.

he was he surprised the doctor by jumping from the couch and dressing to go to the girl. Just then the repentant man came to confess. The lieutenant heard him not, but absolutely forced him to go bring the girl and tell her he was all right. The hospital officials did not know the importance of the man's confession and forced the man to do as the patient bid. The fellow brought the girl to the bedside of the man she was to marry. She stood there smiling at him and glancing from one to another, her mind gone forever! The young man knelt before the lieutenant and made a complete confession of what he had done and it was only the prompt interference of the hospital attendants that prevented a murder on the scene.

Things went along for a time and doctor after doctor could do nothing for the girl. The cause of all the trouble decided on a plan and worked it. The girl's home was arranged as on the day of the lieutenant's arrival. The bandages were taken from the lieutenant's scarred face and he was attired again in Uncle Sam's uniform and approached the house with traveling bag in hand. The lieutenant approached just as before and the girl recognized him. He was taken into the house with his arms around the girl and they went into the room which was decorated for the wedding. Then all returned to her mind. The man who was responsible was brought back into the friendship of the family and pitied; thus everything ended happily.

GEORGE KLEINE.

A SON OF THE SEA (Cines—Special—2 parts—April 7).—Ross Burenett, a young engineer, receives a letter from his lawyer asking him to call, and upon consulting the attorney is presented by him with a letter. This letter is signed by his guardian, now deceased, and informs him that he, the guardian, found him as a child upon the sands of the seashore, evidently cast up by the tide following a wreck at sea. The only mark of identification was a peculiarly wrought ring.

Soon afterward the young man invents a new sort of motor, which is much more successful than anything hitherto on the market. He interests the owner of the Bright Motor Works in his device and is taken into his employ. Farron, manager of the plant, is in love with his employer's daughter, Helen, but the girl is profoundly impressed with Ross' handsome face and sterling qualities; and when he declares his love for her, she accepts him. Thus Ross incurs the enmity of the manager, who soon quarrels with him and is discharged.

Ross' new motor has now been so perfected that he decides the time is ripe for inspection by a government commission, and a series of tests is arranged for. On the day set for the demonstration, Farron succeeds in gaining access to the motor and in tampering with it so that it fails utterly to live up to the promises which had been made for it by Ross and his employer, and it is condemned as a failure by the government inspectors.

The young engineer, however, succeeds in convincing the officials that the failure of his invention has been due to interference upon the part of some malicious meddler, and a second trial is arranged. This time the motor passes every test with flying colors and is haled by the experts as a discovery of the most pronounced merit.

The plot to ruin Ross and his employer in the eyes of the government commission is erroneously attributed to John Hartley, manager of a rival concern, who, justly indignant, comes to Bright's office to demand satisfaction. While he is quarreling with Ross' employer, Helen enters. Hartley sees her engagement ring—the one worn by Ross when he was found a castaway years before—starts and demands to know where she got it. Then, when Ross himself comes into the room, he recognizes the reflection of his own features in the young man's handsome face, and rushes toward him with cries of "My son! My son!" Thus the commercial battle which for years has raged between Hartley and Bright is brought to an end by the happy union of their children.

EDISON.

THE VISION IN THE WINDOW (Fourth of the Wood B. Wedd Series—Mar. 30).—Mr. Wood B. Wedd's romantic temperament occasionally led him into weird and unusual situations. The sight of a beautiful woman threw him into an ecstasy. Hence, one day, when with the aid of field glasses, he espied a lovely apparition in the upper window of a store, his impulsive temperament forced him to rush over to the store and make inquiries. The proprietors and sales force of the store attributed his frenzied demands to insanity until Wood B. with an unmoved saleslady, absent-mindedly wiped his brow with a stocking and put it in his pocket. He was immediately seized and thrown from the store as a shoplifter.

He entered the store by a side door, and made his way upstairs. Before a glass stood a lady clad in the exact cloak he had noticed on his beloved. Wood B. immediately proposed. The lady screamed and slapped him. She was not the same. Once again Wood B. was thrown from the store. Then Wood B. enlisted the aid of the faithful Darby Jenks. Describing the lady's costume minutely, he sent Darby into the store with a note for her. Darby found a rather plain person who answered Wood B.'s description with regard to dress exactly. When he gave her Wood B.'s note, she rushed down enthusiastically to meet her admirer. Wood B. saw her coming and tried to run. She, also, was not the one. The lady claimed that she had been insulted, and the sorely tried private detective threatened Wood B. with instant death if he ever returned.

Wood B. returned to his apartment disconsolately and looked at the lady with the glass. As he looked, he started with horror. The proprietors of the store were pounding his beloved with their fists. Filled with indignation, Wood B. got a policeman and rushed to the rescue. It did not take the rabid remarks of the almost frenzied proprietors to make him see, after he had reached the lady, that she was a wax model.

THE MYSTERY OF THE LAUGHING DEATH (Fifth of the Chronicles of Cleek Series—Mar. 31).—The Arbuthnot family was shrouded in mystery and fear. Kate Arbuthnot and her brothers, Jack, Geoffrey, Harold and Eric, who had been left their father's entire fortune, had lately been joined by their nearest living relative, Eugene Brand, who had just returned from Mexico.

Shortly after his arrival, Geoffrey Arbuthnot fell a victim to a strange malady, marked by paroxysmal bursts of hideous laughter. Death resulted in a few hours after his first uncanny laugh. A little later, Harold, the second brother, died under the same conditions. The doctor was utterly at a loss. The symptoms clearly corresponded with certain types of poisoning, but it was impossible to even hazard a guess as to the exact cause. Everybody in the unhappy home became a prey to silent suspicion. No one was entirely free. Kate, her fiance, the remaining two brothers and Brand would all profit by the deaths. In default of other means, Kate, her fiance, Jack and Brand, visited Cleek separately and engaged him.

On the very evening of Cleek's arrival, Eric, the youngest brother, died from the same terrible disease. Cleek viewed the body, noticed the convulsed face, and looked about the room. His attention finally centered on a hideous Mexican idol. On inquiry, he learned that it had been brought into the house by Brand, and on Kate's request, placed it in her brothers' room. A slender filmy thread projected from the idol's mouth. Cleek seized the ugly thing with both hands and smashed it on the floor. A hideous shape crawled out from the ruined bits of pottery—a tremendous tarantula! The mystery was solved. Both Brand and Kate had been the innocent causes of the terrible Laughing Death.

HIS COMRADE'S WIFE (April 4).—When the news was brought to Marian Percy that her husband had met with a hero's death, she did not weep. Her grief was too deep and bitter for tears because it was mingled with a very terrible regret. While he had lived, she had always believed that her marriage had been a mistake. He had seemed petty, ungenerous, cowardly. She had never suspected that anything fine or noble lay beneath the commonplace mask of his exterior, and now, at his death, she found that she had lost one man in a thousand—a hero. In the hours of her anguished self-reproach, George Harcourt, the friend who had been with her husband's de-

Ambrosio

The Mystery of the Glass Cage

A thrilling story, showing the methods of a scientific criminal

TWO REELS — READY MARCH 28th — TWO REELS

Announcement to Exhibitors and Exchanges

The entire territory for United States and Canada for our last feature

Michael Perrin or A SPY FOR A DAY HAS BEEN SOLD TO

Warner's Features, Inc.

AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO.

15 East 26th Street :: New York City

SOCIETA ANONIMA Ambrosio TORINO

SOCIETA ANONIMA Ambrosio TORINO

AMERICAN-ECLAIR

FEATURE FILMS

"THE GREATEST WESTERN I EVER SAW"

That's what the critics said about

"The Caballero's Way"

Three Hair-Raising Reels

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st

By the Famous Author

O. HENRY

Need we say more? See the nearest Universal Exchange today about it.

126 W. 46th ST., NEW YORK CITY.

tenement at the time of his death, did everything in his power to help and comfort her. When the doctor shook his head gravely, and said that Mrs. Percy would go mad if she did not weep, it was Harcourt who brought little Dorothy to the stricken woman.

After the sight of her little daughter had brought the healing grace of tears to Marian, Harcourt returned to his quarters and puffed very hard on his empty pipe. Should he tell her how her husband really died? Captain Percy did not die a hero. He died a coward. Dispatched for reinforcements by the general in command of the English troops, Percy, once away from the battlefield attempted flight, and was shot as he rode away from his duty. Harcourt, informed of the full particulars by Ram Singh, Percy's servant, immediately set out on Percy's mission.

He arrived at the main division of the army, hurriedly delivered his message, and rode on ahead of the reinforcements. He was captured by the Zulus and bound to a stake in the midst of a blazing pyre. When he escaped from his position of deadly peril, and returned to the British lines, he found that Percy's body had been found and that Percy was being hailed as the hero of the day. Rather than smirch the dead man's memory, Harcourt kept silent. Despite the fact that he loved her with all his heart and soul, Harcourt did not tell Marian. But two years later the news came out through Ram Singh, and Marian turned to the true man who had sacrificed all for his honor's sake.

THE MISSING TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS (April 1).—Mr. Splotz and his rather plump wife are very fond of each other, but he has a tendency to be a little sporty, unknown to her. One holiday in February, while the snow is still deep on the ground, Splotz tells his faithful spouse that he has to go on a little business to Yonkers. For current expenses he carries along with him forty dollars in good coin of the realm. Splotz thinks himself very clever, especially in fooling his better half, for instead of going to Yonkers, he hies himself to the bachelor quarters of some of his cronies to indulge in a quiet little seance of the Great American Game. About the time Splotz is due home, they go to settle up and Splotz is shy twenty-five of the forty dollars that he started out with.

The snow is deep outside and the weather cold and Splotz is prevailed upon to take a little nip for warmth's sake. He does so, and not being used to imbibing, it affects him in such a way that he flounders in a big snow drift and is rescued by a couple of ladies. He gives them his card with thanks and loses his eye glasses. Wifey is parading the floor greatly worried because hubby is three hours late. At last Splotz arrives. He is profuse in his explanations for being late and elaborately tells what happened to the missing twenty-five dollars. Such a pitiful tale he tells of helping a poor woman and her four children that it almost brings tears to Mrs. Splotz's eyes. Alas and alack! Splotz has made good, but the evil spirit in the shape of the good Samaritan who found his glasses, enters to return them and then—Splotz has to do some talking.

MRS. ROMANA'S SCENARIO (April 1).—Mrs. Romana had a warm romantic Latin temperament. When the first warm touch of spring was felt in the air, she, like the birds, desired new plumage. She wished to have a new hat. Mr. Romana was unmoved by his wife's happy idea. He told her that her old hat was plenty good enough. After calling her husband a pig, Mrs. Romana relapsed into a state of melancholia, from which she was aroused by an advertisement in a magazine. The advertisement was to the effect that untold wealth might be accumulated by writing photoplays. Mrs. Romana was overjoyed. She immediately saw how she could get the money for her spring hat. Unfortunately she had no ideas for the play.

That night Mrs. Romana was suddenly struck with a great and wonderful idea for the play. Arising and striking a light, she wrote the wonderful idea on the first thing she laid her hands upon, which happened to be her husband's shirt. The next morning Mr. Romana arose hastily and departed with the literary shirt upon his back. Immediately thereafter befel great and startling adventures. For Mrs. Romana's idea for her motion picture play had been somewhat sensational. Accordingly, such expressions as "$5,000," "Murder!" "Death!" and "Blackhand!" were in considerable evidence. Romana, discovering that the shirt was soiled, gave it to a scrubwoman. A lynx-eyed detective discovered it in her possession, read a few of the bloodthirsty words, and took it to the station house. The incriminating document was traced back to Romana, who was placed in a highly uncomfortable position until his wife appeared and cleared matters up.

A ROMANCE OF THE EVERGLADES (Special—2 parts—April 3).—Wayne Barrow met Norah Everett in the swimming pool of a gigantic Florida hotel. Their meeting was entirely unconventional. Wayne, peacefully paddling about, was suddenly roused by a terrified shriek, and the spectacle of a young lady, fully dressed, floundering in the water. Norah had fallen overboard while watching the bathers. Wayne saved the young lady from her embarrassing position, and laughingly deprecated her exaggerated thanks. The unusual meeting led to a closer intimacy between the two. Wayne and Norah strolled about under the wonderful Southern moon, and grew very fond of each other. Then suddenly Wayne discovered that she was engaged to Phillip Carew. Feeling that life held no more for him, Wayne immediately set off on a surveying trip in the Florida everglades.

A short time after he left, Norah and her party went to Palm Beach. Near the famous winter resort, Carew met May Lou, the daughter of a typical Florida "Cracker." The girl's fresh, uncultivated beauty made a deep impression on the young man. He was very attentive to her, greatly to the displeasure of her father, and her sweetheart, Bat Peterson. One day Carew took May Lou out rowing. An attempt to change places resulted in the capsizing of the boat. Carew was rescued by May Lou's father; May Lou disappeared completely. Carew, handed over to the sheriff, speedily found himself in grave danger from the infuriated country folk, who held him responsible for the girl's death. With the sheriff's aid he took refuge in a shack while the sheriff held off the enraged people from the door. Norah and her chaperon, learning of Carew's danger, came to his assistance and managed to enter the shack. A moment later the flimsy building was in flames. May Lou had not been drowned. Washed ashore by the strong current, she had been found by Wayne Barrow returning from his surveying trip. Wayne and the girl arrived just in time to save Carew from a nasty position and then Wayne learned to his delight that he had no rival in Norah's affections.

BIOGRAPH.

AN HOUR OF TERROR (Mar. 23).—His failing, drink, was the one blot in the happiness of his home. Over the 'phone his wife suddenly received a message—their daughter was locked in a vault, the result of her father's stupor. Her mother also lay prostrate. The double shock restored him. It proved a much needed lesson.

WIFEY'S VISIT HOME (Mar. 26).—Mother and daughter went home for a visit, but ocean breezes caused a stop by the way. To the beach also went hubby. There was a grand mix-up of identities—a general swapping of clothes—strenuous while it lasted, while wifey and hubby decided they wouldn't fool each other again.

NEVER SHRINK (Mar. 26).—It was Saturday afternoon, and Abraham Snitz took advantage thereof by advertising "Bargain Sail Gent's Suits Vill Never Shrink." Hogan came in with the six he begged from his wages. Mrs. Hogan had a fit at the fit—and Abraham Snitz received a visit from an irate Irish lady.

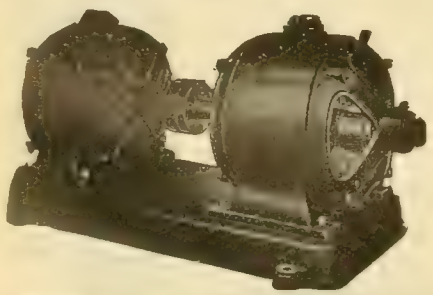
"Hallberg"

TALK No. 20

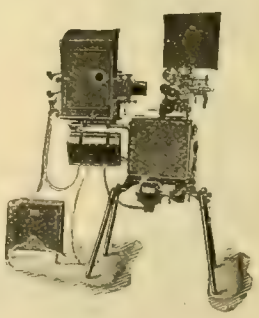
Quality Appreciated

The "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER which has now been on the market going on four years, and which is the best developed device in the world for changing A. C. to D. C., has recently been adopted by fifteen of the biggest motion picture concerns in this country. Only last Saturday, I received an order from Alaska Film Company, Juneau, Alaska—another one went to Canada—another down to Petersburg, Va.—another to Pittsfield, Mass., and one to that great pioneer and most critical motion picture man in Upper New York, Mr. Max Andrews, proprietor of the Andrews Theatre, Salamanca, N. Y. Mr. Andrews has flirted with me for several years about Economizers. He is a very careful selector and buyer and knows just what is wanted. After the most careful research, I am pleased to say that I secured his order, and his A. C. to D. C. Economizer was shipped yesterday. There is only praise for the "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizer by all users, trouble is unknown and the lasting qualities have been proven by four years continuous service in many theatres. Wake up, Mr. Moving Picture Man—it is up to you to act.

My goods are at your disposal and my guarantee is good. Don't forget that I am distributor of POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON M. P. MACHINES, and can make you an ATTRACTIVE PROPOSITION.



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.



I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

Printing Developing

You can obtain the HIGHEST QUALITY printing and developing. Have YOUR WORK under the expert supervision of one who knows the business from every angle, and turns out nothing but QUALITY WORK. The installation of up-to-the-minute equipment, with all work under the critical eye and hand of an expert of wide reputation, is a GUARANTEE of quality work and prompt dispatch

Standard Filmprint Corporation

120 School Street Telephone Yonkers 4600 Yonkers, N. Y.

FREDERICK A. THOMSON

Director

Past Four Years with the VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA

PRODUCER OF THE VITAGRAPH-LIEBLER PRODUCTION OF

"THE CHRISTIAN"

In Seven Reels and Introduction

NOW RUNNING AT THE MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

Recent Feature Releases

"LOVE'S SUNSET"
"FRUITS OF VENGEANCE"
"WHIMSICAL THREADS OF DESTINY"
"WILD BEASTS AT LARGE"
"THE CURSE OF THE GOLDEN LAND"
"THE TIGER LILY"
"DANIEL IN THE LION'S DEN"
"IN THE OLD ATTIC"

ALSO
"THE MISCHIEF MAKER"
"THEIR MUTUAL FRIEND"
"THE TIGER"
"AMATEUR LION TAMER"
"THE LION'S BRIDE"
"THE LADY AND THE GLOVE"
And others

INVITES OFFERS :: Address THE SCREEN CLUB

VITAGRAPH.

THE SILVER SNUFF BOX (Mar. 30).—In London, Ivan Spinoff, a Russian convict, escaped from Siberia, reads of the return of Julian Strogoff from America. It recalls events of years ago when Julian had escaped the consequences of a Nihilist's plot by betraying his friends, one of whom was Ivan, as a result of which Ivan had spent 15 terrible years in exile. Revenge is now his one thought. Knowing Julian's weakness for snuff-taking, he poisons a quantity of tobacco and places it in a little silver snuff-box. Julian shows his greedy and hard-hearted nature when he ruins Pierce Marsden, one of his debtors, and even refuses help to his own daughter, who is dying, because she had married against his wishes. Amy, his granddaughter, decides to make a personal appeal to him.

Meanwhile Ivan arrives at Julian's home under a fictitious name. In a corner of his card is the word "SIBERIA." Julian is vaguely terrified, but finally admits Ivan. Ivan makes him a present of the little snuff-box. Julian accepts it unsuspectingly, and gracefully thanks Ivan. After he has gone, Amy arrives and pleads vainly with Julian to help her and her mother. Becoming angry at his refusal, she calls down the wrath of heaven on his head and departs. To soothe his nerves, Strogoff takes a pinch of the poisoned snuff and falls dead. The servants find the body and tell the police of the quarrel, also that Amy was the last to leave. The police decide she is the guilty one. Milburn, a detective, takes an interest in her case, discovers the little snuff-box, analyzes it and finds it contained poison. He tracks Ivan to the Socialist Club, makes his acquaintance and offers him snuff from the little silver box. Ivan, horror-stricken, struggles desperately against his arrest. Milburn and Amy discover they have fallen in love and in their happiness the past is soon forgotten.

A HELPFUL SISTERHOOD (Special—2 parts—Mar. 31).—Mary, a poor but well-born girl, is invited to join a Sorority Club in the high school she attends, while her chum, Sophie, is ignored. Mary is flattered by the attention, accepts the invitation and gradually drifts away from her former friends. The spirit of snobbishness and unrest enters her life, and in her attempt to keep up with her richer companions, who are purse-proud and pretentious, she changes from a lovable girl into a discontented one. A Sorority Dance is arranged and Mary, unable to pay the assessment for the dance, steals the amount from one of the members of the club, in order to keep up with her new associates. The other members are so self-centered they do not realize the influence of their false pretenses and mistaken ideas of true worth. They are entirely unaware of the demoralizing effects of their example.

Having taken the first step, Mary is still further tempted when she finds a new gown for the dance to be an impossibilty. While shopping with a club member, she steals a pair of stockings and a roll of silk. A house detective sees her commit the theft, taking the two terrified girls into the the manager's office. The silent partner of the firm is the father of the girl from whom Mary has first stolen. He investigates Mary's actions by gentle questions. She breaks down and sobbingly confesses that she did not wish the girls of the Sorority to be ashamed of her. The father understands the situation. He takes the two girls with him to the Sorority Rooms, where he explains Mary's temptations and their false notions of the real standards of life; also explaining that character is the only criterion of personal superiority. The girls are convinced of their error, forgive Mary and dissolve the Sorority. Mary once more becomes a normal sweet girl with wholesome surroundings.

THE MISER'S REVERSION (2 parts—Mar. 24).—The miser has a daughter, who is in love with an intelligent young man making his own living, and who wishes to marry the miser's daughter. The miser wants his daughter to marry some very rich man, and will not have Jack, the young man who visits his daughter.

The miser is deeply interested in Darwin's theory. He is seventy-five years of age. One day Majarah and two attendants in Indian costume enter from the street. The great Lahaif Majarah of India who has come to demonstrate the efficiency of his elixer of eternal youth. The miser looks at him in awe and indicates the book of Darwin's theory. The miser finds out that the East Indian has a great deal of money and valuable skins, and offers his daughter to him for part of this. The East Indian is greatly pleased.

The East Indians give a meeting in the Convention Hall, demonstrating the great Elixir of Eternal Youth. The miser is brought to a chair which is connected with a pulsimeter by means of various tubes and wires. The applicants give the miser the Elixer, and there is a gradual change in the miser. The wrinkles leave his brow, his cheeks fill out, his hair changes color, and he is transformed to a man of forty. When the attendants are not looking the miser seizes the whole bottle of Elixer and drinks it, which immediately changes him from a man into an ape.

The miser escapes from the house, still a monkey, and tries in vain to explain to the people who have gathered, among whom are his daughter and her lover, Jack, that he is the miser and the girl is his daughter. They think his story incredulous, and he is not believed until he shows his arm, which has a tattoo upon it, and shows them a paper which tells about the Hindoo, and his Elixir of Life. They take the ape to the Hindoo and he is restored back to his normal self ,the miser. The miser is so very grateful that he is once more in his home and with his daughter that he gives all his money to the young couple.

STAGE STRUCK (April 1).—Possessed with the idea of becoming a great actress, Mrs. Blair sees visions of herself receiving the applause of an admiring audience. Her husband notices her preoccupation. She receives a letter from a theatrical manager, stating her application is satisfactory and naming a date for her tryout. Mrs. Blair is in ecstasies and, to the consternation of the maid, proceeds to rehearse her performance.

The theatrical manager is called out of town, leaving the public stenographer in his office, who is also called away. Wiley Willy, a book agent, enters, finds no one in, and decides to wait. Mrs. Blair arrives, mistakes Willy for the manager and giving him no chance to explain his identity, proceeds to demonstrate her theatrical talent. He is a philosophical gentleman, and although puzzled, greatly enjoys the performance. She thinks she has made a hit with the "manager" when he applauds loudly. Mr. Blair, who has learned the whereabouts of his wife, looks in the door and is puzzled and angry. Mrs. Blair requests Willy's permission to change in the private office for her next act, and he, rather confusedly, says "Yes, certainly!" She goes in and Mr. Blair then confronts Willy, saying, "So, you're the theatrical agent!" Willy begins to understand matters and hastily tells Mr. Blair who he is. They both laugh and Blair tells Willy of a plan to cure his stage-struck wife. He darts behind a screen as his wife comes out in a Spanish costume and begins dancing enthusiastically. To Mrs. Blair's astonishment and terror, Willy becomes quite demonstrative in his applause and when he puts an arm around her, she promptly faints. Blair carries her to a chair, gives Willy a fat check and the book agent ducks behind the screen as Mrs. Blair comes to. She tremblingly explains her visit and Mr. Blair tells her he thrashed the villain. She promises tearfully to cease all longing for a stage career and Blair then escorts his wife home, thoroughly cured of her theatrical aspirations. The stenographer enters, sees Willy and snappishly says, "Well, sir!" Willy jumps, edges cautiously by her and dashes out of the office.

TOMMY'S TRAMP (April 2).—If there is one thing above all others that Tommy Briggs hates it is the frequent scrubbings he gets. He is fond of playing in the dirt, regardless of his clothes, and nearly worries his nurse into nervous prostration. Tommy is washed, scolded and scrubbed so much that he becomes very tired of it. One day he sees a tramp sitting by the roadside. Noting his shabby appearance, Tommy asks him if he has to wash. The tramp good-naturedly laughs and says, "What! Me wash, Oh No!" He takes a liking to the boy, gives him a little sailboat he has been whittling, and Tommy, in return, gives him a big red apple.

Tommy is found by the nurse making mud-pies; his clothes covered with dirt from head to foot. He is scolded severely and again put through the scrubbing process, to his great discust. Tommy then decides, as tramps don't have to wash, he will become a tramp. He makes up a pack, with the aid of a handkerchief, and thrusting a stick through it, like a regular tramp, starts bravely down the road. After walking until he is so tired he can go no further, he climbs into the hayloft of an old barn and is soon fast asleep. His nurse misses him, tells Mr. and Mrs. Briggs and the parents start out in search of him.

The barn in which Tommy is sleeping is set afire by a carelessly thrown match. He wakes up and staggers through the smoke to the window, calling for help. His parents, searching along the road, see him and rush to his assistance. Tommy's old friend, the tramp, who had "bunked in" nearby, also sees the boy, dashes into the now furiously burning building and succeeds in rescuing him. His parents are duly grateful to the tramp and after giving him a good dinner, Mr. Briggs offers him steady employment. The tramp, however, refuses, and after shaking hands with them all, tramps off down the road, care-free as ever. Tommy, thoroughly cured of the idea of becoming a tramp, is taken to the tub, and despite his protests, given the worst scrubbing of his young life.

BUNNY'S SCHEME (April 3).—For about the fiftieth time John Bunny proposes marriage to Ethel Dana and is greatly disheartened when he is again refused. He meets Clem, a friend, who tells him he is to be married the following day to Agnes Ford, his sweetheart, and that they will leave on their honeymoon on the Florida Special. Bunny gets an idea. He explains his scheme to Clem, who readily offers his assistance, arranges with another friend, a Justice of the Peace, to take a little trip to Florida on that train, and then suggests to Ethel that they decorate Clem's Pullman car seat and give the couple a grand send-off. She delightedly agrees and commences preparations. Tom quietly provides himself with a wedding ring and a marriage license.

Next day at train time Tom secretly buys tickets for the Florida Special and he and Ethel proceed to

Branching Out All Over

22 Branch Offices Established in the United States and Canada

12 More Offices to Be Opened Soon

Write for our rapidly growing list of

FIFTY FEATURES

to be had on flat rental or percentage basis

Some Bargains for States Rights Buyers

All communications to

PAN-AMERICAN FILM CO., Inc.

110 West 40th St.

Telephone 6578 Bryant

BEAUTY FILMS

"Sweet Land of Liberty"

Permeated with the sunshine and dramatic intensity of Southern Italy.
Featuring

MARGARITA FISCHER, HARRY POLLARD and other stars of International fame.

Release Tuesday, March 31st, 1914.

BEAUTY PENNANTS $1.00 EACH

American Film Mfg. Company

6227-35 BROADWAY, CHICAGO

EDISON

DO YOU BREAK CONDENSERS?

The Elbert Condenser Mount

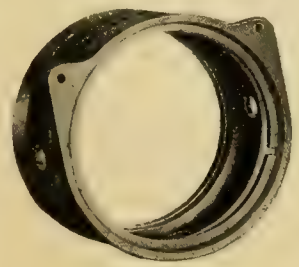
STOPS IT

SIMPLEX

Like all the Elbert Picture Machine Specialties they are built by expert operator mechanics for the use of those managers and operators who believe there is better projection to be had and who want to have it, and who, by their use, are enabled to use high-grade optically true condensers with all their attendant advantages, without the trouble and expense of constant breakage.

Can you take your back condenser out of the machine in its mount while hot and lay it down in a drafty operating room on an iron shelf or a marble slab without breaking?

Hardly; but that is the test the Elbert Condenser Mount had to successfully submit to before we offered it to you. Made for Motiograph, Simplex, Power's 6 and 6a, and all models of Edison's with square condenser cases.



MOTIOGRAPH

Price, $6.00 Per Set

Providing For One Machine Both Front and Back Condensers

Delivered Free by Parcel Post to Any Point in United States or Canada When Money Accompanies the Order

J. D. ELBERT PICTURE MACHINE SPECIALIST

2583 SUTTER STREET SAN FRANCISCO

POWERS

decorate Clem's car seat, placing a huge wedding bell over the center. The decorations completed, they sit down in the seat to await the arrival of Clem and Agnes. They do arrive, but unseen, enter another car. John and Ethel, sitting under the wedding bell, are at once "spotted" by the incoming passengers for a newly-married couple and Ethel is obliged to listen to many well-meant congratulations and comments. Her patience is fast becoming exhausted when they hear the cry, "All Aboard." She springs up, but John succeeds in reassuring her, saying, "It is probably another train leaving." Their train pulls out. Ethel now sees through Bunny's scheme and becomes very angry. While he is trying to soothe her, Clem and Agnes enter and begin throwing rice. Ethel nearly goes wild. John pleads with her to marry him and make it a real honeymoon. She begins to see the humor of the affair, and finally acquiesces. John then "finds" a Justice of the Peace among the passengers, produces the ring and the license, and surrounded by an admiring group, Tom and Ethel are made man and wife. The two pairs of "Newly-weds" locate at John's estate in Florida, and at their wedding breakfast, drink a hearty toast to each other's health and everlasting happiness.

THE CRUCIBLE OF FATE (Special—2 parts—April 4).—Dr. Ross Lowell's professional duties are so exacting that he is obliged to somewhat neglect Cecile, his vivacious girl-wife. She suffers innumerable disappointments in broken engagements and grows somewhat dissatisfied with her lot. Through Maude Leigh, her chum, she meets Richard Burnett, an actor and matinee idol, and is flattered by his marked interest in her. Maude gives Cecile a leading part in an amateur theatrical she is giving, and Burnett, infatuated with Cecile, agrees to direct the production of the play. Cecile displays undreamed of talent in her emotional part, and Ross, greatly pleased and proud of his wife, sees no danger in Burnett's frequent calls. The inevitable happens—Cecile's head is turned; she grieves over a lost career and is finally persuaded to elope with Burnett. Deserting her little child and her husband, she enters the theatrical field, which she imagines is her real sphere.

Five years pass and Cecile has attained the dazzling height to which she has aspired, namely; that of great theatrical fame, but her life is one long regret. Burnett, still her leading man, has become dissipated, coarse and ill-tempered. At the close of a successful season they go on the road. Cecile's old home town, in which Lowell is still living, is on their itinerary, and at first she refuses to go, fearful at the possibility of meeting her husband, but her contract is binding, and desirous of once more seeing her child, she decides to dare the consequences. Ross, who has followed Cecile's career, sees her name on the playbills. On the opening night he goes to the playhouse, armed, and determined to mete out vengeance to the wrecker of his home. But Fate intervenes. There is an explosion on the stage, quickly followed by all the horrors of a fire and panic. Ross leaps on the stage and forces Burnett, at the point of a pistol, to lead him to Cecile's dressing room, where she is found unconscious and rescued by her husband. Burnett, driven insane by fear, perishes in the fire. Cecile is crippled for life, but in the love of her child and loyal husband again finds peace and happiness.

LUBIN.

THE KNAVE OF CLUBS (Mar. 31).—Jack Bunce is a member of the police force. He likes a drop now and then and owns a trick club that is bored out to receive a bottle, the top of the club unscrewing. Jack has a deal with a saloon keeper to fill the bottle for him, but they get rather tired of the job and plan to play a trick on the patrolman by doping the whiskey with an emetic. The chief has discovered the secret of the club and knows where to get a drink when he wants one. Jack starts out with the doped whiskey and runs into the chief, who has his usual thirst. Jack gives him a good drink, but he has barely entered the station house when he throws a most violent fit. At the first attack he has Jack sent for and when the poor patrolman turns up, just as the fit is over, the chief accuses him of having doped the whiskey on purpose, strips him of his badge and has him kicked out. Jack's sweetheart passes him with her nose in the air and Jack begs another patrolman to bang him over the head a few times, which the patrolman obligingly does, and Jack wanders out to look for another job.

IN THE SOUP (Mar. 31).—Pat Tryon, a retired contractor, is a man with a quick temper. Dinah, the cook, has no temper to brag about. She starts to break up dishes and gets into a fight with Pat. Pat fires her after he has been beaten up. Pat takes offense at Ned Lusk, a young physician, who is engaged to his daughter, Molly, and makes her give back the engagement ring. They plan to start something, and Ned gives Molly a box of rat poison. She lets Pat find the label and while he is 'phoning the chemist she puts the poison in the soup. There is a wild dash to have the soup analyzed and it is pronounced poisonous. Ned uses the stomach pump and gets Pat back to safety, which so pleases Pat that the engagement is renewed. Pat announces his recovery to the crowd and his eye lights on Dinah, whom he blames for the whole trouble. The picture ends with another free fight.

Business Is Good!

WHY?

Because "Mundstuk Knows What's What."

Territory is going rapidly for the gripping Five-Reel Masterpiece of Love and War. So Write or Wire and enjoy prosperity!

NOW

THIS IS IT!

SOME 3-SHEET, EH!

Several States left for the Spectacular, Gigantic Production

"THE WHIRL OF DESTINY"

MUNDSTUK'S FEATURES

909 Longacre Bldg. New York

THE FIGHTING BLOOD (Special—2 parts—April 1).—The Fighting Blood, like some subterranean torrent, surges strong beneath the shell of cowardice, but often awakens at the crux of battle, and by its alchemy turns the dross into the molten gold of manhood. Such was the case with the adopted son of Colonel Point. After their father's death the boy and his sister were adopted by Captain Point.

The boy went out into the world and fifteen years later we find him an enlisted man in the regiment of which his adopted father is now colonel. The disgrace of this, combined with the taunts of his fellows, set him on the downward path and when on outpost duty one night he fell a willing victim to one who carried a full bottle. He is arrested, court-martialed and dishonorably discharged. Captain Little, of the Revenue Cutter Service, who finds his old-time friendship for the colonel a good excuse for seeing the colonel's adopted daughter, calls upon them the day of the boy's disgrace. Remorse for his weakness and folly turns the boy back from his path downward, and he returns to the camp to beg forgiveness of his father, when he overhears Captain Little telling of an expected smuggling attempt by the notorious Levey gang. The fighting blood of his ancestors becomes awakened, and he resolves to balance the scales of equality. Running down the beach he comes upon the smugglers and learning of their plans, he rushes to the Revenue Cutter officers and with them plans a trip. Returning to the army post the boy asks for a detachment of troops to aid the Cutter men. This being granted, he leads them back and placing them in a fleet of fishing boats which completely surround the craft of the smugglers, and after a battle the smugglers are captured and taken prisoners. The leader, Levey, at an opportune moment sees his chance of escape, and plunges from the ship's deck with an oath and statement that he will never be brought to justice alive, when the boy plunges after him. A week later finds the colonel and his two adopted children at his headquarters the boy with head held high, and the girl with tender smile of pride and affection for the honor of the fighting blood that had awakened in her brother. Captain Little, of the Revenue Service, returns with a promised commission for the boy.

THE MANSION OF SOBS (Special—2 parts—April 2).—Andrew Gregg is a scientist owning a mansion situated in the midst of a large estate. He is by nature morose and irritable, and his young wife, Rose, is saddened by his outbursts of ill-temper. Her only happiness she finds in caring for her three-year-old son, Ned. Rose's craving for friendship soon leads to an intimate acquaintanceship with John Hardin. Gradually their friendship ripens into love. Gregg is always surrounded by three grim-visaged old scientists—his only companions.

One day while Rose is visiting Hardin in the latter's library he declares his love for her. Gregg, suspicious, has followed his wife to Hardin's home and sees the scene through the window. He does not wait to see that Rose tells Hardin his request is impossible—to see her gently but firmly discourage Hardin's affection. Later, when Gregg meets Hardin in the scientist's home, a terrific fight ensues, and Rose is driven from home by her infuriated husband. Gregg retains possession of the child, Ned. Rose flees to her only relative an uncle owning a tavern in a neighboring village.

Years later Rose still remains at the tavern, having never returned to the mansion. Her only happiness is derived through friendly visits from Hardin, who has always remained steadfast despite Rose's refusals to accept his love. Ned, the son, is now grown to manhood. Gregg has developed into an irascible old man, and the old home is known as the Mansion of Sobs. Repentant over Rose's absence, Gregg works upon an elixir, which, in his state of weakened mentality, he imagines will prolong his life. Ned, the son, has fallen in love with Isabel, Hardin's ward. Ned, who has never looked upon his mother since infancy, takes Isabel to the tavern run by Rose, his intentions being wrong. Through the timely interference of Hardin, Ned's plans are thwarted and Rose meets her son face to face for the first time in twenty years. Ned, broken-hearted over the realization of what he was about to do, agrees to marry Isabel. On the night when the young folks are married, old Gregg wrecks his laboratory in a wild fury. At the same time gay wedding bells announce that Ned and Isabel are man and wife. The young people persuade Rose and Hardin to visit the gloomy old home once more. Rose, trembling with a vague fear, ascends to her room to find Gregg, half-dead, clutching at her own portrait. Then she realizes that nothing but bitter regret has filled the years of the old man in longing for her. She nurses him back to health and freely forgives, and the young wedded couple is there to bring happiness to the old home. Hardin, thankful, too, at last to see love brought to the woman he has always loved, returns alone to his library.

A MAN'S FAITH (April 3).—John Lusk, the teacher of a Bible class, is a deeply religious man. He meets in the woods Mary Forrest, a wild young product of nature, who has hurt her ankle and he carries her home. Her beauty and the daring of her unreligious nature interests him and she coquettes with him until he comes out

RELEASED MARCH 25th

THE

DEATH BALLOON

IN THREE PARTS

A Thrilling Clean-Cut Photoplay. Every Foot a Feature.

Territory now selling. Wire your reservations. Booklet mailed upon request.

Advertising that will interest the State Right Buyer and the Exhibitor.

1 Sheet — 2 Colored Photo Panel Poster
1 Sheet — 4 Colored Lithograph Poster
3 Sheet — 4 Colored Lithograph Poster
9 Sheet — 4 Colored Lithograph Poster

8x10 Photographs (12 in Set) Slides Illustrated 4-Page Heralds
Halftone Cuts Lobby Displays

Globe Feature Film Corporation

No. 110 West 40th Street New York

Pathé Professional Cameras

$350.00

Beware of Imitations

If you want to know who is the authorized camera agent for Pathé Frères write

Pathe Frères, Vincennes, Paris

Machine Department

Whyte's Motion Picture Enterprises, Inc.

110 West 40th Street New York City

of his shell of reserve. In a mad moment of passion he asks her to marry. The minister comes and they are married at the mountain home of the girl.

They are happy for awhile until the man falls back into his reserve and her frank, open nature resents his seeming indifference. He tries to force her to take an interest in religion, and in a fit of temper she throws his books on the floor and leaves him to go to his Bible class alone, and the breach between them widened. He goes to the minister with his trouble and he at first refuses to mingle with his family affairs, but agrees to, later. The Rev. Hugh Howard is a fine handsome chap and earnest in his work. The wife, not realizing what she was doing, thinks to get even with her husband and accepts the minister's endeavor to interest her. She draws him on and listens to all his teaching. In doing so she becomes fascinated by the man without his knowing it, and one day when her husband enters the doorway unseen by either she throws herself in the minister's arms. The husband leaves the house broken-hearted. He gets his gun bent on murder.

Meanwhile the minister has flung the woman from him. He scathingly rebukes her and she breaks down realizing what she has done and sobs. The minister leaves. The husband returns and without noticing his wife gets his revolver and goes to the minister's. The wife follows. Lusk enters the minister's study and tells him he is going to kill him for breaking up his home. The minister, unafraid, turns on the man and tells him that it is all his own fault that his wife has acted the way she has and that he is through with both of them. The man lowers his gun and apologizes, then exits. The wife coming along hides as he comes out. She sees him throw the gun from him in horror and thinks that he has committed murder. He goes home and she staggers forward and falls at the door, sobbing. The minister comes out and comforts her, telling her it is all right to go home to her husband. After she makes sure the minister is alive she goes home and finds her husband. They become reconciled.

SHE WAS A PEACH (April 4).—Mandy Jones is determined to marry Cy Plunket and Cy is just as fully determined that he will not. He rather inclines to a younger and prettier girl, of whom Mandy is very jealous. The church needs new hymn books and Cy is sent to town to make a selection. It takes three men to pull Mandy off the steps of the stage that takes Cy to the railroad. In town Cy gets some books and then meets with a trio of show girls and follows them into a restaurant. It was all well enough to laugh at him on the street, but something else to have him at their table. They give him the cold shoulder. But Cy is wise. The girls are drinking beer. Cy orders champagne and four glasses and the girls suddenly remember that they have seen him before. They all go to his table and have a fine time. He greatly admires Gwendolyn's photographs in stage costume and would like to take one home, but he does not dare. Gwendolyn slyly slips one into the hymn books and it is found by Mandy at the church meeting. Cy attempts to deny the photograph, but it has his name written on it. He is sent to "Coventry" by the congregation; but Mandy offers to marry him to keep him out of further trouble. He tries to evade the honor, but she has the upper hand and drives him back to church and yells for the minister. She has landed him at last.

THE EYES HAVE IT (April 4).—The chief decides that it is about time the city has a police force that is more on the lines of a regular city. He has pretty poor material to deal with and discipline is at a discount, but for a starter he posts a sign that any policeman caught drinking on duty will lose his job with suddenness. In spite of the rigid ruling the call of the glass is too strong to be resisted, and Pat Casey takes a chance and slips into his regular port for a morning nip. But the chief is on his trail and shows up just as Pat is finishing his bottle. He lands one good punch on Pat's eye, but Pat knocks him down and makes his escape. The chief did not get a chance to read Pat's number, but he is certain he will know that black eye. Pat comes back to the saloon and learns from the barkeeper that the chief has him marked. He laments his bad luck to Mrs. Casey, but that resourceful lady is not a bit worried. She spends a pleasant hour blackening the eyes of other policemen and when they come to the station the chief is all at sea. Outside Mrs. Casey waits for her spouse. The policemen spot the cause of their discolored optics and charge upon her, but when she explains that it was to save Pat's shield all is forgiven.

KALEM.

A PASSOVER MIRACLE (Special—2 parts—Mar 30).—Sam's great ambition is to become a doctor. Lena, his foster-sister and sweetheart, gives the boy the money which she had laid aside for their marriage. The two plan to be wedded when Sam graduates. Lena, who works in a sweatshop, manages to support the home by a desperate effort. Sam, however, gets in with a fast set at college, and forgets the sacrifice his sweetheart is making.

The boy meets Rebecca, a flashy stenographer. Sam is compelled to borrow money from Lena to satisfy Rebecca's craving for amusements. Sam gradually becomes ashamed of his family and, on the night of his graduation, leaves home. Lena is heart-broken, while the father vows that his son shall never darken his door again. Shortly before Passover, Rebecca tires of Sam and discards him in favor of Hyman Adler, a traveling salesman. Sam is almost frantic, but the heartless woman mocks at his misery.

On Passover Eve the boy makes his way home. He fears to enter the door, but listens outside while Lena and Ratkowitz celebrate the feast commemorating the flight of the Children of Israel from Egypt. Inside the humble home, Ratkowitz rises and, in accordance with the ancient custom, chants, "Let all who are hungry enter and eat hereof; and all who are needy come and celebrate the Passover." Sam gradually comes to the realization of his ingratitude and weeps bitterly.

Later, Lena opens the door to welcome Elijah, the Lord's messenger of peace and comfort. She discovers Sam outside, his face wet with tears. Her love for him swells up and she clasps him in her arms. In rage, Ratkowitz orders the boy to depart. But Lena reminds him of the invitation extended to the hungry and needy and causes the old man to relent. With the prodigal son back in his old accustomed place, the Passover service joyously continues.

THE RAID OF THE RED MARAUDERS (Special—2 parts—April 1).—Hal is arrested for assaulting his superior officer. Aided by Florence, his sweetheart, he escapes from the fort. A scout informs Col. Lister that the Indians are on the warpath. Despite this warning, the colonel weakens his force by sending a detachment after Hal. The soldiers are ambushed by the Indians. The Indians make an attack upon the post. Hal, from a point on the hillside, sees them about to blow up the fort. Scrawling a message on his shirt sleeve, he catapults it into the enclosure, where it is found by Colonel Lister. Hal goes to Fort Johnson for aid. Headed by Hal, the soldiers dash to the rescue. They arrive just in time to save Colonel Lister's force. In recognition of the boy's heroism, Colonel Lister restores him to duty and consents to his marriage to Florence.

PROFESSOR OLDBOY'S REJUVENATOR (April 1).—Professor Oldboy invents an electric device which restores youth. He tries it on his dog and sees the animal become a puppy. The professor objects to Dean, his daughter Anna's sweetheart, and orders him from the house. Oldboy later decides to try his invention upon himself. He orders Anna to turn the current off when he reaches the age of twenty-five. But Anna sees Dean and before she remembers her father's instructions, he has become a three-year-old infant. Struck by an idea, Dean asks the baby for permission to marry Anna. This secured, the machine is turned backward and Oldboy restored to his normal self.

THE CONFISCATED COUNT (April 3).—Elsie and Tom, a young Custom House inspector, are sweethearts. Mrs. Vanderfeller, Elsie's mother, determines that the girl shall wed a title. She takes Elsie to Russia, where they meet the Count Davidoff Needsthemoneywitz. Mrs. Vanderfeller agrees to pay the Count $500,000 if he will come to America and marry her daughter. Needsthemoneywitz agrees. Elsie writes and imparts the news to Tom. When Mrs. Vanderfeller lands in New York with her Count, Tom looks over her "declared list" and finds that the Count is not listed. He promptly informs his sweetheart's mother that the duty on Counts purchased abroad is 50% of the purchase price. In the excitement that follows, Tom and Elsie run to the minister's. Mrs. Vanderfeller discovers that she has been tricked. Dragging the Count after her, she goes in pursuit. The pursuers, however, arrive just a minute too late. While she stands staring at Elsie and her newly acquired husband, Mrs. Vanderfeller is stricken with an idea. After all, the title is the main thing. Turning to the minister, Mrs. Vanderfeller orders him to marry the Count to her.

HISTORIC OLD TARRYTOWN (April 3).—Few spots in this country are so rich in historic associations as Tarrytown. In this village Washington Irving received the inspiration which led to his penning, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." Here Major Andre, the British spy, was captured.

Among the interesting spots shown in this feature are the Old Dutch Church, built in 1699; the schoolhouse where Ichabod Crane once taught; Washington Irving's grave and the old Philipse Manor House, built in 1680.

FAST FREIGHT 3205 (April 4).—Andrews, the telegrapher at Flint, a lonely station, receives a message ordering the operator at Crow's Landing to hold Fast Freight 3205 until the East Bound Passenger passes. Before Andrews can relay the message, he is stricken with fever. Annie, his wife, discovers Andrew's condition and helps him to their home near the station. The girl takes her husband's place at the key. She discovers the message which should have been relayed. Horrified, Annie desperately calls up Crow's Landing.

Jamison, the operator at that station, is conversing with the crew of Fast Freight 3205 and does not hear the clicking of his receiver. Later, the freight pulls out. Delirious, Andrews knocks over the kitchen stove, setting fire to the house. Annie realizes her husband's peril. Torn between fear for his safety and duty's call, the girl hesitates. Deciding that the safety of the passengers

BRASS FRAMES RAILINGS OF QUALITY

You will admit a fine lobby display draws business. Our goods are the best and at prices that are right. Get our new catalogue and quotations before you place an order. We can give you a one-sheet easel-poster frame of brass, complete with glass front and compo board back No. 12.—for $7.00. No. 8, as illustrated, with compartment top for announcements, $10.00.

No. 8

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO.
1232 East 3d Street Cleveland, Ohio

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
733

We Buy, Rent and Sell Second-Hand Films and Moving Picture Machine

WESTERN FILM BROKERS
3 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

OUR CATALOGUE OF
Brush Electric Lighting Sets
contains more useful information about electric lighting in general than any other book ever issued. Write for it today.
THE CHAS. E. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

"Traffickers on Soles"
In Three Reels
Meeting with great success Everywhere.
"The Great Lure of Paris" In Three Reels
"JUSTICE or LOVE?" In Three Reels
All acknowledged successes of the season. Further particulars at Feature Photoplay Co.
220 W. 42nd St., Candler Bldg., New York City
Phone, Bryant 8486

"Washington at Valley Forge"

FOUR REELS!

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE

RELEASED LAST WEEK IN MARCH!

In which you see Francis Ford and Grace Cunard at their best, supported by a smashing big cast. The midnight ride of Paul Revere, the battles between minutemen and redcoats, the battle of Valley Forge, love, intrigue, mystery, plots and counterplots are all packed into four reels of intense excitement. Get your booking and your ads NOW!

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL FEATURE

THE POSTERS

for this superb 4-reel Universal Special Feature are faithful reproductions of the stirring scenes shown in the film. We have 6-sheets, two kinds of 3-sheets, two kinds of 1-sheets and two kinds of window cards. If your exchange can't sell you as many as you need to plaster your whole neighborhood buy direct from the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, O.

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL FEATURE

THE RENTAL

will have to be more than your regular service price because your exchange is paying extra for this feature. The same is true of every Universal Special. But you will get it back many times over and build up a business that no competition can hurt if you will show every Universal Special as fast as you can get a booking. They are the greatest features on earth!

Half-sheet Card

Three-sheet Poster

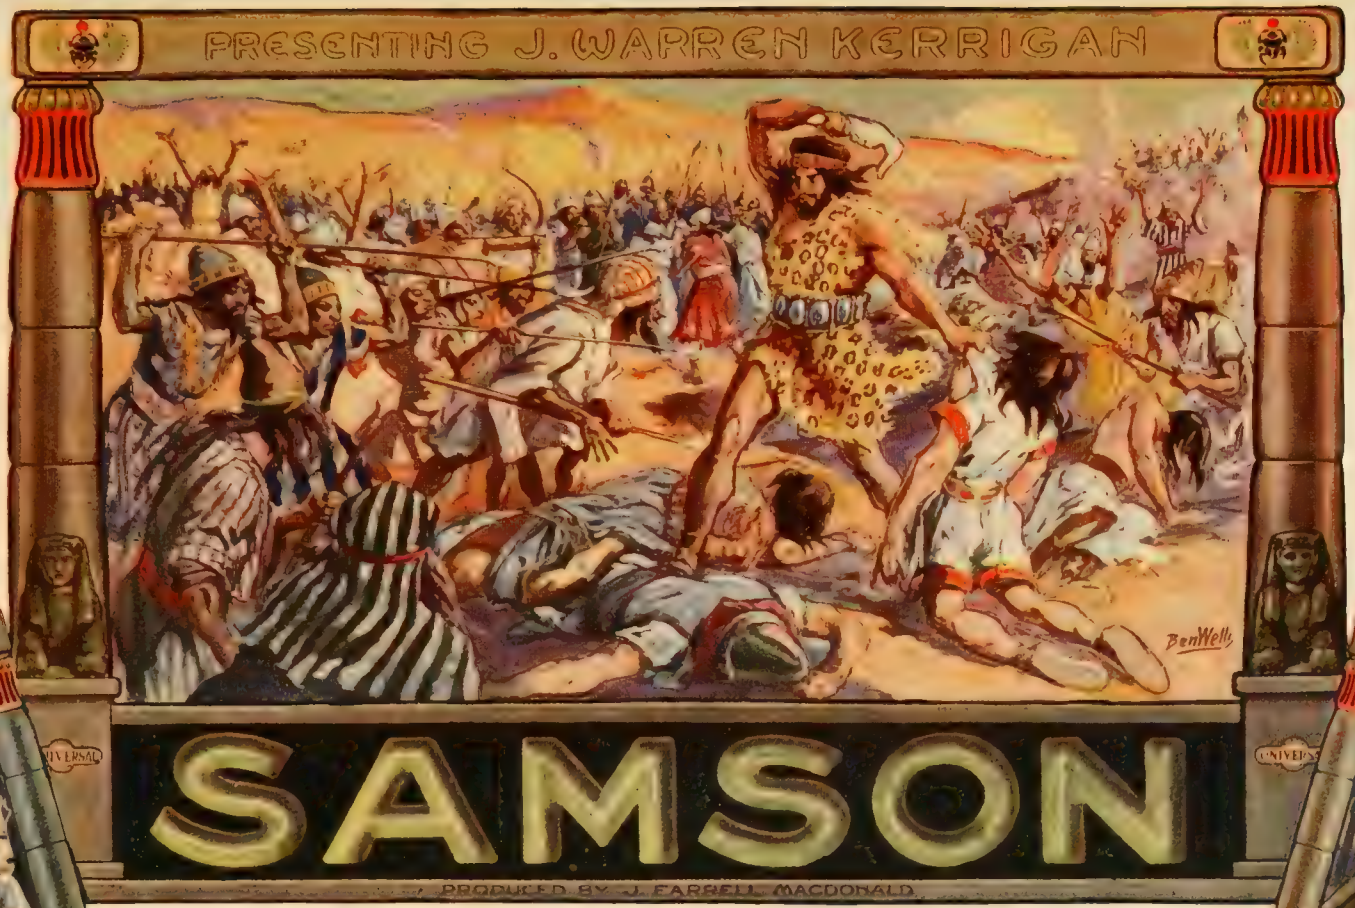
Six-sheet Poster

Half-sheet Card

Three-sheet Poster

THE richest lithographs which art, brains, money and mechanical genius can produce have been made by the Morgan Lithograph people of Cleveland for "Samson," the six-reel masterpiece with which the Universal is urging every exhibitor to revolutionize his business by charging not less than twenty-five cents admission. On these pages we give you a faint idea of the "Samson" window cards, the six-sheet, the two three-sheets, the sixteen-sheet and the two one-sheets. If your exchange cannot sell you as many as you need to cover your neighborhood, buy direct from the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, O.

Sixteen-sheet Poster



One-sheet Poster

The finest theatre in the world may well be proud to represent itself with such lithography as this. It is dignified, clean and artistic without sacrificing strength or drawing power. Every theatre which exhibits "Samson" is again advised to secure liberal quantities without further delay and to begin its advance advertising and billing far ahead of exhibition date.

One-sheet Poster

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

Awe Inspiring Bridge Scene in "The Spy"

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, which will release Fenimore Cooper's thrilling story entitled "The Spy" in the form of a four-reel Universal Special Feature, writes as follows: "The bridge scene in 'The Spy' is the most awe inspiring scene I ever beheld either in actual life or on a picture screen. It is utterly indescribable. With all my experience in the picture business I had no idea such a scene could be staged. Yet it is only one of the dozens of astounding punches in 'The Spy'. Of all the things Otis Turner has ever produced, this is by far his greatest work. Yes, it even surpasses his recent four-reeler 'Won in the Clouds'. I wish every exhibitor in the country could book 'The Spy'."

"THE MONEY GOD"

A STUPENDOUS PRODUCTION

IN FIVE REELS

TERRITORY GOING FAST

Greater New York and Northern New Jersey—Emby Feature Film Corp., 145 West 45th Street, New York City.
Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island—Adams & Co., 844 Bank Street, Waterbury, Conn.
Ohio—Independent Features Co., Inc., Cleveland, Ohio.
Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland—Artistic Feature Co., 145 West 45th Street, Room 1011.
Iowa and Nebraska—Herrick Feature Film Co., Des Moines, Iowa.
Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana—Texas Feature Film Co., Dallas, Tex.
Note:—New York State, exclusive of Greater New York, open.

State Rights Now Selling

METROPOLITAN FILM COMPANY, Inc.
HANS BARTSCH, Pres. H. J. STREYCKMANS, Sales Mgr.
6th Floor, World's Tower Bldg., New York City

Released Early in April "A HUMAN INTEREST STORY, WITH HEART THROBS AND LAUGHTER"

HEARTS OF OAK

By JAMES A. HERNE

With RALPH STUART as Terry Dennison

IN FIVE PARTS

Beautiful Posters, Four colors, 1-3-6 Sheets, Heralds and Lobby Displays

Reserve Your Territory Now—Wire—Write—Call

MOHAWK FILM COMPANY, Inc. TIMES BLDG. NEW YORK

demands that she stick by her post. Annie continues in her desperate efforts to raise Crow's Landing.

Jamison finally receives the message. Its terrible import is revealed to him. The man sees an electric work-car on the siding. He commandeers it and dashes in pursuit of the freight. Jamison having received her message, Annie runs over to the house. Dashing through the flames, she rescues her husband. At the same time, Jamison overhauls the freight and gives warning. The freight backs up at full speed and reaches the siding just as the East Bound Passenger flashes by. Word of Annie's heroism reaches the ears of the president of the road. In recognition of her heroism, the officials build a house and present it to Andrews and Annie, to replace the one which was destroyed.

THE CABARET DANCER (Special—2 parts—April 6.—Don Packard, an artist, forgets his country sweetheart, Martha, and falls in love with his model, Linee. The boy marries Linee and takes her to his home. Martha conceives a hatred for Linee when she discovers that the girl has robbed her of her lover. Don's father, a parson, is horrified when he learns of his son's worldly wife. When Linee realizes the trouble her marriage to Don has caused, she runs away. Martha does her utmost to stir up trouble.

For two years Don searches in vain for Linee, who has become a cabaret dancer. Dupree, a Frenchman, falls in love with the girl, but she repels his advances. Don enters the restaurant just as Dupree, mad with jealousy, attempts to shoot Linee. Don saves her life, but loses his sight. Linee assumes charge of the stricken man, but takes care to conceal her identity. Her voice is familiar to Don and he gradually suspects the truth. Rev. Packard, summoned by Linee, comes to the city, accompanied by Martha. Linee learns that they propose to take Don away from her and spirits him away.

Certain that his devoted nurse is Linee, Don removes the bandage from his eyes. By a clever ruse, Linee makes it appear that the mistress of the boarding house is the woman who is taking care of him. The bandage is replaced. Disappointed and heart-sick, Don determines to do away with himself. Fate, however, frustrates his attempt and Linee resumes her place as her husband's nurse. Don's father and Martha finally discover his whereabouts. Linee is seated near Don, reading one of David's Psalms to him, when the minister and Martha enter. Don learns that it is his wife who has attended him so faithfully. Touched by the girl's devotion to his son, the old minister takes her to his heart.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 22, 1914 (Mar. 16).—Santa Monica, Cal.—Bang! They're off! The fastest autos in the world whirl and skim and skid over the torturous course that leads to fame—or, maybe, death—in the Grand Prize race.

Rome, Italy.—William of Wied, first king of liberated Albania, makes a visit to the Phantheon.

Krugersdorp, South Africa.—Riots striking laborers throughout the Transvaal have become so frequent that 60,000 veterans of the Boer War are mobilized here to check them. General Beyers, commanding, addresses the troops.

Pasadena, Cal.—All aboard for cloud-land! Roy Knabenshue, builder of air-craft, introduces to Pasadena the first "rubberneck" sky-wagon on the Pacific Coast. Many persons go up in the air with him daily.

New Orleans, La.—Ready to sail at an hour's notice for Vera Cruz to swell the fleet there, a flotilla of torpedo boats and destroyers lies at anchor here, crews aboard, guns ready, steam-valves popping.

Vera Cruz, Mex.—The flower of the American navy lies at anchor in the harbor here, awaiting the day of Huerta's fall from power. Reinforcing the U. S. battleships are British, German and other foreign dreadnaughts.

San Bernardino, Cal.—The greatest orange crop California has ever gathered is picked and on its way East, and the growers celebrate their good fortune with displays of choice fruit.

Austin, Texas.—Texas harks back three generations to the day she threw off the Mexican yoke and became the Republic of the Lone Star. Today she celebrates, in a strenuous way, the anniversary of her freedom.

Stockholm, Sweden.—When the King speaks, the city listens. Forty thousand persons attest his popularity by gathering in the streets to hear him and to applaud.

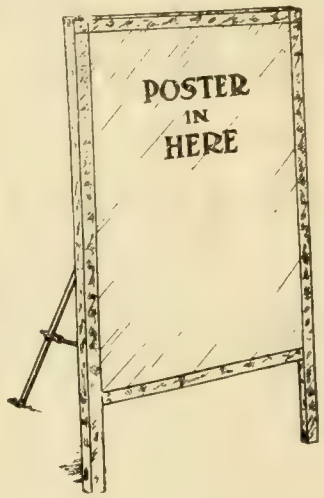
PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 23—1914 (Mar. 19).—Jersey City, N. J.—Newest and keenest cutting force known to man is the oxy-acetylene flame. At 1,750 pounds pressure to the square inch and a heat of 6,300 degrees it cuts iron and steel like paper.

New York City, N. Y.—The firebug with its torch stalks through the city again. This time he fires a block of tenements and one hundred families lose their homes.

Nantes, France.—Somebody told M. Brodin, well-known aviator, to go jump in the river, and he does so from a bridge 200 feet high.

Norfolk, Va.—The super-dreadnaught, "Texas," newest and mightiest of American battleships, is accepted from her builders and formally placed in commission.

"NEWMAN"
BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS



Will keep your cashier busy.

Write for new 1914 catalog
They are different

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. | NEW YORK 101 4th Ave. | CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Est. 1882

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT

DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS

EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED

COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY

WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN. THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF YOUR PROFITS WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P.
537 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

THE U. S. WAR DEPARTMENT USES THE
"Junior Professional Film Camera"

Selected after careful tests on shell explosions, at a speed of 1 5000 part of a second.

THE JUNIOR SATISFIED THE TEST without slushing up or breaking down

It Is The Camera For You

Tripods, Tilts, Developing Outfits, Printers, Perforators, Film-Winders, Polishers, Measurers

THE NEW UNIVERSAL VIEW FINDER FOR M. P. CAMERAS
NOTHING BUT ORIGINAL, SUPREME GOODS.

FOR CATALOGUE
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 SECOND AVE. NEW YORK

Pasadena, Cal.—This is the cake, so hard to make, so quick to take, so good to take—the winning cake that takes the cake at Pasadena's show.

New Orleans, La.—The Detroit Tigers, champions of bygone days, tram in the Sunny South for the baseball season of 1914.

Vera Cruz, Mex.—A prison on the water-front, foul, dark, ill-smelling, where the tide sometimes sweeps over the wretched floors—that is where Huerta sends his captives to languish and to die.

Colorado, Cal.—Rival polo teams from San Mateo and Riverside play a stirring game in the semi-finals for the Junior Championship of Pacific Coast.

Groton, Conn.—The great bronze rudder of the yacht to defend the America's Cup is cast here—and the sweat and skill of a hundred men go into the mold with the metal.

Vincennes, France.—The way may be stony and steep, but the French army can make it carry supplies with its new auto wagons, here shown, built for rocks, ruts and rough roads.

WHIFFLES' NEW PROFESSION (Mar. 25).—Our friend Whiffles being short of cash decides to raise some by methods as humorous as they are shady. His mind, ever fertile at expedients, certainly concocts a strange one this time.

Enveloped in a long coat reaching to his heels and looking the part of a prosperous man, our hero goes to a hotel and engages a room. After the servant has retired, Whiffles removes his coat and shows himself to be clothed in conventional garb save for one important exception—he is trouserless! Peeping out to see if the coast is clear, he then hangs his coat and vest outside the door, in accordance with European custom, in order to have them properly cleaned and pressed for the following day. He then retires in the calm conviction that the morrow will bring him the money he needs.

The next morning the servant brings the coat and vest to Whiffles and is astonished when he is asked where are the trousers. He protests there are none, but the apparently indignant Whiffles demands to see the manager. To the manager the guest insists that the trousers were stolen and demands payment for them. To save trouble the manager assents and pays him liberally. How Whiffles pursues the fraud until it becomes noised around and how he has the narrowest kind of escape from arrest, makes the funniest kind of comedy.

Miscellaneous

CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION.

GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY, NO. 64 (Mar. 7).—Lincoln Highway Pathfinders make their start at Thirs and Townsend Streets, San Francisco.—H. E. Fredrickson, consul at-large, San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, bids tourists "God-Speed".

Famous Monument in Golden Gate Park.—Francis Key Scott, author "Star Spangled Banner".

Oakland's Skeeter Fleet, only Automobile Patrol of kind in America.—Mayor Mott and Chief of Police Peterson make inspection.

Promising Lightweights in Action.—Joe Azevedo puts in strenuous day at his training quarters.

The Los Angeles Deluge.—Pigeon Farm, containing half million pigeons totally destroyed, the birds hover around remnants of homes. Five room house undermined and stood on end: Salt Lake R. R. Bridge of concrete and steel changes into mass of twisted metal, completely tying up traffic. Spur Line over river washed away nearly a million dollars loss on Arroyo Seco, a small stream.

Chris Theophelos, World's Champion Light Heavyweight Wrestler.—Nineteen year old boy, who won title in first professional match shakes hands with former champion Jack Donovan, after which he displays remarkable physique and demonstrates holds that won championship for camera.

Dr. Aked's Congregation Lays Cornerstone for 1st Congregational Church.—Impressive ceremony at corner of Post and Mason Streets.

GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY, No. 65. (Mar. 14).—Santa Monica Road Course New Mecca for Automobile Racers.—America's classic Vanderbilt held in California for the first time. Veteran Ralph De Palma wins with giant Mercedes. Grand Prix breaks all speed records. Edwin Pullen drives Mercer to first honors.

On March.—Troops leave Presidio, San Francisco, for Mexican border.

General Kelley's Army of Unemployed.—Demonstration on Emeryville track, Oakland. Non-descript army prepares to resist mandate to move on and several hundred armed deputy sheriffs and policemen of Oakland department enforce order.

Scenes of Sutro Gardens and Beach, San Francisco.—City's Municipal Band gives open air concert.

Sunset on Pacific.

Who Can Pick a Champion.—Promising boxers make things lively in training camps of Bay region.

DEVELOPING FILM TITLES PRINTING

Send us your negatives. Give us a trial. Prices right—work guaranteed. Expert camera men furnished.

STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
5 S. Wabash Ave. Chicago

THE 3 MUSKETEERS

The Original
Film d'Art Production of Alexander Dumas'

The Pre-eminent Feature Film of the World—in Eight Reels

Beginning its fourth crowded week at the New York Theatre, devoted exclusively to motion picture masterpieces.

Do not be misled by any other productions of same name trading upon our publicity and criticisms—the most favorable ever accorded a film subject.

Plays weeks where other features last only a day.

A pictorial attraction that is in a class by itself.

Now making the longest New York run of any film since Quo Vadis.

Continued success at New York Theatre, the talk of the moving picture world.

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION Masterpieces

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Anglo-American Film Corporation

126-128-130-132 W. 46th St., New York City

OUR NEXT OFFERING WILL BE

"Sixty Years a Queen"

A film Masterpiece, a worthy successor to our "Three Musketeers"

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL.

BISON.

THE LAMB, THE WOMAN, THE WOLF (Three Parts—April 4).—The Lamb is one of these gentle young men who spend their lives looking after the affairs of others and in the meantime lose all the best that is the heritage of the young. This particular Lamb is devoting his life to his invalid mother and in his spare moment editing a weekly paper. The citizens of the small western town deride the editor and his paper. But there are two persons who have faith in him, and they are the Woman and his mother. He loves the Woman deeply, but would not propose marriage because he deems it would be unjust to saddle an invalid upon a young wife.

After an absence of five years, the Wolf, a husky mountaineer, who is sure of himself and devoid of the finer instincts, visits his home town. He had an old love affair with the Woman. He again renews the suit for her hand. She is captivated by his masculine force of character and accepts his proposal of marriage. They are married and the Wolf takes the Woman to his hut in the mountains, where he is the agent between a stage line and a mining company.

The monthly payroll money for the miners is delivered to him by the stage company and he turns it over to the mining company. The Woman learns of her mistake in marrying the Wolf. He is all the things she least suspected, a brute, an egotist without sentiment, or love for her.

In the meantime the Lamb's mother dies. Nursing this sorrow and the hopeless love for the Woman, he goes into the mountains in search of solitude. He falls in with a band of outlaws and at first is a visitor among them. Word travels to the village that he has actually become an active member of the band. He becomes a marked man, shunned and ostracized. He then determines that he will afford the village people cause for their fear and hatred of him. He becomes an outlaw and grows as coarse and as hardened as he was previously gentle and refined.

The Wolf decides that as he is now thoroughly tired of the Woman, he will steal the payroll money left in his keeping and leave her. On the night set for the theft the Woman is alone guarding the money. The Lamb also has decided to steal it and he arrives first and is admitted by the Woman. He recognizes her as his first and only love, but she does not recognize him. To quiet her suspicions he lays his revolver upon the table. Presently some one outside is heard tampering with the lock. Each thinks the intruder a confederate of the other.

The Woman covers the door with the Lamb's revolver. A masked man enters and she shoots and kills him. It is her husband, the Wolf. She then recognizes the Lamb and with the new light that comes into her face and into his face, it can be seen that in the future a different, better life is in store for each.

IMP.

THE BLOOD TEST (2 parts—April 2).—Walter Johnson, a young mechanic, has invented an automobile attachment that will revolutionize the trade. Williams, for whom he works, is desirous of purchasing it, but his superintendent prevails upon him to allow the idea to be stolen, then discharge Johnson. Slavery has so enmeshed himself in Williams' affairs that the latter can hardly call his soul his own. Williams' daughter is in love with Johnson and overhears the plot to steal the invention and on Slawery's exit, upbraids her father for listening to such a scheme. She sees Johnson and tells him of the plot.

Johnson the next day is discharged, and Slawery hires a sailor to steal the blueprints of the invention. Admanson, the sailor, then starts to blackmail Slawery, telling him that he will reveal all if he is not well paid. Slawery defies him, so Admanson tries to regain the blueprints from Williams' house. Williams hears some one breaking in his library and confronts Admanson, and in the subsequent struggle Williams is killed. Johnson has been meeting Grace clandestinely, and is accused by Slawery of the crime. A strong circumstantial case is made against him, as he had been seen leaving the house at the time of the murder. An uncle of Grace's, who is a physician, secures a piece of the glass that Adamson broke from the window to open it. In doing this he cut his hand and a microscopical examination that the doctor makes shows that the blood adhering to the pain is from a man suffering from Kala Azur, an incurable oriental disease. The doctor, believing in Johnson's innocence, advertises that he has a sure cure for the dread malady. Admanson answers the ad, and the doctor charges him with the crime, and on being taken to the district attorney, he confesses all. Johnson is released and is welcomed by Grace.

NESTOR.

CUPID INCOGNITO (April 1).—Frank Graham, rich mine owner, is fatally injured by an explosion. On his death bed he confides to his friend, Jim Blake, all his plans concerning his daughter, Angela's, future. He makes him promise to watch over her. His fortune he places in the hands of his brother, a New York banker, to be held in trust for his daughter until her wedding day; the fact of her being an heiress to be kept secret in order to insure her safety from fortune-hunters.

Angela comes East to live with her brother's family. She is treated as a servant, her cousin, Honora, doing all she can to make her life wretched. Graham permits this, not knowing that Blake shares the secret. He has decided to keep the money for himself. Honora has been betrothed to Jack Falkner, son of her father's friend—an arrangement of the parents. They have not met for years.

Jack, desiring to study the real character of the girl, secures the position of chauffeur. His eyes are opened to Honora's despicable character. He falls deeply in love with Angela. He asks her to marry him. Graham, anxious to rid himself of the girl, gladly consents. Angela telegraphs to her father's friend, Jim Blake, of her approaching marriage. He comes East. Jack's identity is disclosed at the service to the chagrin of the Graham family. Jim Blake has a private interview with the banker, and forces him to make restitution.

SUCH A VILLAIN (April 3).—Showing ends to which the power of hypnotism may be put when exercised by an unscrupulous villain. The villain selects a country girl for his victim. After a few passes she is in his power. He leads her through a dark, crooked tunnel into his den of iniquity and there he compels her to play the piano for him.

Victoria, the villain's second victim, is equally as innocent as the first, but she has a sweetheart, Eddie. The youthful hero follows to the den of iniquity. He finds a book on mental telepathy and thus he learns the secret of the villain's power. He puts his hypnotic power against that of the villain and the atmosphere is literally saturated with telepathic waves.

In this midst of a terrific battle between the two minds a negress comes up the street. She becomes tangled in the thought waves and is drawn to the villain, while Victoria escapes with Eddie. Slaves of the villain's evil power kidnap Victoria. There is another battle for hypnotism supremacy—Eddie urging on the police and the villain directing his crooks. Virtue wins, however.

REX.

IN THE EYE OF THE LAW (April 2).—Robert Carlton, amateur detective, receives a call from a friend in the secret service who explains that a number of banks are hard hit by a band of clever currency imitators. Carlton agrees to work on the case. He learns that the president of the First National Bank associates with a well-known crook. Carlton is engaged as the banker's chauffeur and one night follows the banker to a hut on the water front, where the spurious currency is made. He learns that the counterfeit money was put in circulation with the aid of the banker, and that the crook has turned blackmailer.

Carlton sends word to the secret service man to be at the banker's house that night. That night the crook shoots the banker and escapes. Carlton is the first person on the scene. The banker's daughter discovers him there and believes him to be the guilty party. Instructed to keep his identity a secret, Carlton allows himself to be arrested. The government agent then examines the retina of the dead man's eye with a powerful magnifying glass. On the day of Carlton's trial the crook shows up in the audience. The secret service man produces a photograph of the dead banker's eye. In the retina can be seen an image of the crook. He looks at the picture and commits suicide. The fact that the banker was crooked is concealed by Carlton for the daughter's sake, and in the end there is the suggestion of a future romance between the amateur detective and the banker's daughter.

ECLAIR.

THE CABALLERO'S WAY (Three Parts—April 1).—The Cisco Kid, a young Mexican desperado, reigns supreme among the rough miners and rangers who fear his deadly aim. He is in love with Tonia, the daughter of an old sheep herder. She is a sly coquette and almost maddens Cisco by her changing moods and capricious pranks. Cisco visits the general store, takes what he wants, but pays for nothing. A crowd of rangers pursue him. One of them is shot. Later, Cisco shoots an American who has been too attentive to his girl. The sheriff, with a posse, starts in pursuit. Later, the sheriff is found stretched in the sand with a bullet hole directly in the center of his badge. Baffled and disgusted, the rangers ride away and a week later Captain Duval, Commander of the Army Post, is notified that the Cisco Kid's career of crime must cease at once. The order is forwarded to Lieutenant Sandridge, a handsome young officer in command of the nearest post to the Kid's scene of crimes. In the course of his search for Cisco, Sandridge comes upon the house where Tonia lives. He is taken by the bright face and bewitching manner of the little Mexican girl and she, in turn, admires the lieutenant. After a time, she finds that a true love for the young American officer is slowly taking hold of her finer nature.

Cisco has been hiding in the mountains. He comes to his sweetheart and suspects that she has ceased to love him for someone else. Then he intercepts a note that the girl is sending to the American. Cisco supplants it with one of his own writing, which reads: "He has come and suspects. To prove I am true I must ride to town in his clothes tomorrow. He will ride in mine. Come at sunrise. Kill this man that I may be thine alone." The lieutenant sets forth to kill the Kid. Nearing the house he perceives a figure emerging. He orders it to halt, and getting no answer, fires. The figure topples forward, and rushing up, Sandridge finds that he has killed his beloved Tonia. Too late, he sees through the trick of Cisco, but he swears to capture the outlaw and not to sleep or eat until he does. Then starts a chase which lasts for days. He brings Cisco back, cowed and submissive, to the sheriff, who waits with a rope. As the outlaw is being led away, Sandridge gently takes a flower Tonia had given him from his pocket and presses it gently to his lips.

IN AN OLD TRUNK (April 5).—In an actors' boarding house there exists a counter bond of sympathy a little slavey and Mildred Brown, an actress seeking an engagement. One day, while the actress goes on her rounds to the manager's office, the little girl creeps into her room. She opens the actress's old trunk and brings forth the dress in which she had played her star engagement. The child's fanciful brain immediately conjures up visions of the stage and its many attractions. Clasping the dress tightly in her little arms she lies on the bed, where she falls asleep, and dreams a tale of romance and adventure. The actress returns, and opening the door, finds the little slavey dreaming peacefully away. She awakens her and after hearing about the astonishing adventures the little girl has been having, gently explains that she has just received a contract from Frothingham and that as they need a little girl in the piece, she is taking the little slavey with her, away from drudgery and hardship, into a life of kindness.

VICTOR.

GRAND DADDY'S GRAND-DAUGHTER (April 3).—To devoted grandparents, their grand-daughter remains just their "Baby-Girl." When Dick Lloyd comes a'wooing, grandfather Payton is aghast and refuses to give his consent to the engagement. Irene finds an ally in her grandmother and with her assistance and consent, elopes and marries Dick. Payton, when told of Irene's marriage, is furious and vows never to forgive.

A year passes. Payton has not been to see Irene and her husband. Mrs. Payton visits them frequently—and after each visit Payton sees that his wife's mysterious smile grows happier. Thoroughly curious, he calls on Irene. A great light falls upon him when he sees the wee garment she is fashioning. His enmity forgotten, he embraces Dick and the united families go on merrily. Payton returns from town with a hobby horse for his "Great-Grandson to be." Much to his surprise and indignation, Mrs. Payton informs him that she is preparing for a "Great-Granddaughter." Relations become strained and the rivalry between them waves fast and furious as they vie with each other in purchasing toys for baby boys and baby girls. Then the great moment arrives and Grandfather and Grandmother are both happy 'cause it was twins"; a boy and a girl.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 106 (Mar. 18).—St. Louis' Disastrous Midnight Fire.—Thirty dead and many missing as fire destroys Missouri Athletic Club building and Boatmen's Bank, in which $1,500,000 are buried in vaults under tons of wreckage.

Federal League Breaks Ground.—More than 5,000 fans crowd on vacant lot to witness Federal League officials turn first shovelful to earth for new baseball park.—Chicago, Ill.

President Announces Engagement.—Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo to wed Eleanor Randolph Wilson, youngest daughter of Woodrow Wilson.

Drunkards' Wives Complain to Governor.—Gov. West sends his secretary, Miss Hobbs, to investigate deplorable saloon conditions in Cove, Oregon.

French Patriot's Funeral.—Impressive ceremonies mark burial of Paul Deroulede, the noted Frenchman.—Paris.

Fashions.—Attractive styles for the summer pattern materials. Made from Ladies' Home Journal Patterns.

Novel Trap Shooting Tournament.—Many well-known sportsmen compete for championships on roof of Grand Central Palace, 250 feet above New York City.

Filipinos Sent to Washington.—Delegates Quezon and Earnshaw before departing for the United States to work for the independence of their people.—Manila, P. I.

New Masonic Temple.—With exercises of singular

"BRIFCO" Raw Film Stock "BRIFCO"
PAR EXCELLENCE

"Success follows where MERIT leads the way"

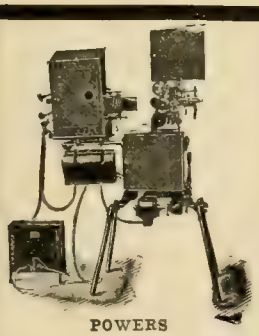
Adopt "BRIFCO" the Raw Film

Used by Europe's Leading Manufacturers

Every Foot Guaranteed

JAMES H. WHITE
SOLE AGENT

Suite 602 Long Acre Bldg., Broadway at 42d St., New York City



POWERS

WHY NOT NOW?

Why delay getting that New Machine for Your Operator, Your Patrons and Your Own Business.

He Who Hesitates Is Lost.
Decide Now, Come in And See The Powers 6A

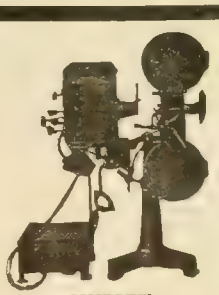
Simplex Projector
Motiograph 1914
Edison's New Model "D"

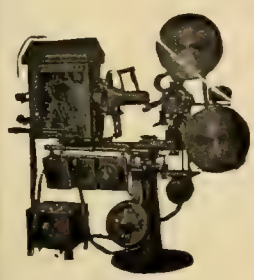
All on Display in Our Salesrooms



SIMPLEX

Call for it.
Write for it.
Wire for it.
And you will get it.
Everything but Films and Posters.

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely



MOTIOGRAPH

Also Economizers, Transformers, Inductors, Converters, Motor Generators, Etc., Etc.

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.
21 East 14th Street New York City

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

HAVE YOU VISITED OUR SALESROOMS?

EDISON

beauty the Grand Lodge of North Carolina lays corner-stone of its new home in Charlotte.

Midnight Mishap.—S. S. "Newport News" collides into "Northumberland," causing considerable damage, near Washington, D. C.

Testing Non-Sinkable Lifeboat.—U. S. Steamboat Inspectors witness remarkable exhibition of all steel lifeboat, holding 50 people and fitted with gas engine and wireless.

Grand Prix Races.—Thrilling feats are performed at the Fifth International Auto Races.—Santa Monica, Cal.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist.—H'y. Mayer, editor-in-chief of Puck.

FRONTIER.

WHY KENTUCKY WENT DRY (April 2).—Colonel Bourbon and Colonel Sourmash are deadly foes. Sourmash's son and Bourbon's daughter are secretly engaged to be married. A revenue spy runs across Colonel Bourbon's still and reports the discovery to his superior, who starts with his men to the scene. Molly and Jimmie, at the still, are forced to hide in empty barrels when they see their infuriated fathers coming. Bourbon and Sourmash indulge in battle, during which the barrels in which Molly and Jimmie are concealed are started rolling down the mountain side. Barrels of liquor are upset, their contents flowing into the mountain stream.

The revenue officers stop by the stream to rest, and soon find that the water of the stream is far more refreshing than expected. Bourbon and Sourmash continue their fight on the edge of a cliff. Both finally go over. They fall on the revenue men, who capture them. Molly and Jimmy roll in the scene in the barrels. Jimmie, putting the revenue men to rout, succeeds in ending the feud that existed between his father and Bourbon.

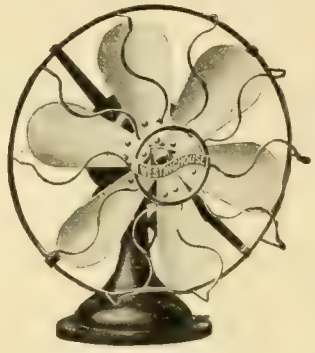
STRANGE EVIDENCE (April 4).—Arthur and Willis quarrel over Edythe. She has shown her preference for Arthur, who has threatened to whip Willis. Willis, the paymaster at the mill, is found in the morning in his office badly beaten up, with the payroll missing. Suspicion leads to Arthur. He is arrested and held for trial. In the paymaster's office Edythe finds a heel. Later, when she sees a tramp with the heel gone from one of his shoes she surmises that he is the guilty party. This, in fact, proves to be correct, and Arthur is released and, of course, wins the girl.

CRYSTAL.

GOING SOME (Mar. 31).—Pearl and Harry ask her father's consent to marry. He refuses. They decide to elope. He learns of it and 'phones the minister and the Justice of the Peace not to marry them. When the young couple call, they are refused. They get an automobile and Pearl kidnaps the Justice of the Peace. Their chauffeur gets drunk while waiting. He goes at a fearful rate of speed, over mountains, through lanes and streets. The Justice, worn out and scared to death, finally gives in and agrees to marry them if they will stop. The chauffeur is induced to desist and the pair are married.

ONE HAPPY TRAMP (Mar. 3).—Morey, an author, goes looking for local color. He meets a tramp and has him agree to change places with him for a day. The tramp is installed in Morey's home. Morey meets another tramp who steaks a meal. They are both arrested. Morey tries to get out, but when he declares his identity he is laughed at. The tramp meanwhile is having the time of his life, ordering Morey's valet around and drinking his good liquor. A young woman calls with a letter of introduction to Morey and the tramp entertains her. He disgraces himself and puts Morey in wrong. Morey is finally released and the tramp is kicked out. The author vows never to again seek atmosphere.

THE LADY DOCTOR (April 5).—Dr. Kelly is called away on an important case. He leaves his office in charge of Dr. Mary Deer, a vivacious young woman, who has just graduated from college. Mr. Maguire's wife gets sick. He sees Mary Deer and decides to get sick himself. The same procedure happens to Mr. Bergman and Mr. Burke. They all feign illness. Bill, the husky of the town, pleads sickness. She, seeing the game that is being played, decides to teach them a lesson. She scares Bill by putting him on an operating table. Bill thinks better of his health and runs. Maguire is given the electric treatment. He is unable to let go of the apparatus. Burke is put on a contrivance and whirled around. Bergman is locked in a small compartment with just his head protruding. The box is heated up. Mary Deer is unmerciful. Finally Dr. Kelly returns. He takes in the situation and gives them the laugh.



The Fan That Does While Others Buzz

The Westinghouse Electric Fan has a long record for quietness, economy and durability. You know when it is running by its breeze, not by its noise. It uses little current and requires no attention from the beginning of the season to the end.

Send for Fan Folder

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

FEATURE BUYERS
TAKE NOTICE

We will sell the following desirable features with rights, including excellent 1, 3 and 6 sheet posters, perfect condition:

INTRIGUES, RUSSIAN COURT
3 reels $150.00
MAN WITH SEVEN FACES
3 reels (Detective) $125.00
UNLUCKY DIAMOND
3 reels $140.00
MYSTERIOUS SHOT
4 reels $170.00
IN THE GRIP OF THE PASHA
3 reels $160.00

We will also sell 25 other selected features, including paper, in perfect order, from $40.00 up.

1000 commercials, excellent order, many desirable subjects, at $4.00 per reel.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS
5 West 14th Street :: New York

A G-E Rectifier

will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.

General Electric Company

General Office Schenectady, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL IKE.

WHY UNIVERSAL IKE LEFT HOME (Mar. 31).—Universal Ike accepts the position of ranch-foreman. Practically the first thing he does is to get in "Dutch" with the cowboys. To further increase his troubles Mrs. Ike develops a platonic friendship from the ranch owner.

Riding his donkey to town, Ike meets a young woman. He follows her to the hotel. A flirtation begins, which is interrupted by the arrival of his enemies—the cowboys. The hotel is full and Ike is given a bed upon the porch. While Ike is flirting with his soulmate the cowboys place a dressmaker's model in his bed. When he retires he discovers his bedmate. He tries to awaken the model. He tickles its papier-mache feet, but all to no avail.

In the meantime the cowboys carry the gossip to Mrs. Ike. Ike hears her coming, and fearing to be caught, crawls into the nearest window. He finds himself in a woman's room. She screams and grabs him around the neck. Mrs. Ike hears the noise, enters the room and saves poor Ike from the wicked woman.

POWERS.

THE ROMANCE OF AN ACTOR (2 parts—April 2).—Lloyd Meredith, an actor and dramatist, is at the height of prosperity one season while the next he is at his best extremely. When the story opens he has just finished and had accepted a drama in which he is to play the title role. At the opening performance, Alice Warren, the daughter of well-to-do people who hold actors in disdain, becomes madly infatuated with Meredith. Her parents labor with her, but she is of an independent spirit and writes the actor, declaring her love and expressing her determination to see him often.

At her solicitation he admits her to his dressing room. He asks her if she does not realize the folly of writing sentimental notes to actors. The girl breaks down and leaves. Meredith takes an interest in the girl and their acquaintanceship ripens into love. Against the wishes of the girl's parents they are married. Meredith sinks all of his money into a beautiful home, but neglects to have it insured.

One night their house burns to the ground and Meredith has a hard time in saving his wife from the flames. While he is fighting for her life he is wounded in the eye; his face is disfigured. Meredith is again poor and begins to write another play. The young wife does not enjoy life with the wolf at the door and she begins to lose interest in her disfigured husband. Despite his objections she goes to work as a stenographer for the manager of a mill and finally she decides to leave her husband for her employer.

The playwright is so poor that he can't even pay the gas bill of 89 cents. However, he sells his play and returns home to tell his wife. He finds her note, saying that she has left him for another. This is more than he can bear. He stops up a crevice which might admit air, turns on the gas and throws himself upon the bed to await the end. In the meantime two other things are taking place. The wife has decided that she loves her husband and is returning to him. The gas company has decided that Meredith's bill cannot run longer and a man is dispatched to turn it off. As the gas man turns off the gas in the basement, the wife is trying to get in her apartment upstairs. The landlady unlocks the door—Meredith comes to and the gas man enters with the announcement, that "You'll have to pay that 89 cents before you get enough gas to commit suicide."

A BAD EGG (Mar. 30).—Lauretta Queenin is a country girl, and despite the fact that she is forty she is inclined toward love and romance. She writes her name and address upon an egg intended for market. The egg finds its way to Warren, a newly married business man. As a joke Warren writes to Lauretta, avowing his love and requesting her to send her photograph. He signs the name and address of a friend, Kenneth Kline.

On receipt of the missive, Lauretta sends her picture to Kenneth. His wife receives and destroys it. The following day Lauretta wires Kenneth that she is on her way to him and will arrive the next afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. The town constable finds the original letter to Lauretta. Believing that she is being enticed to the city by Kenneth, the constable wires the city police the particulars.

Warren accompanies Kenneth to the railroad station. They meet Lauretta, take her to a restaurant and explain that they are married and that it is all a joke. The wives of the two men locate them in the restaurant. Kenneth and Warren escape unnoticed. The wives enter into the heated argument with Lauretta, which finally results in the arrest of all three women.

Kenneth and Warren help their wives out of jail, only on the solemn promise that they will never again pry into their affairs.

NIAGARA SLIDES

Acknowledged the world over to be the best slide made. If you can use a slide of any kind, get them; if you use Moving Pictures, you need them. Sample Edison Feature Announcement Slide $.15.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, Lockport, New York

MOVING PICTURE MEN! Win your Audience! Throw "Personal" Chats on the screen; it makes Box Receipts jump rapidly. You can instantly write, sketch, print or reproduce anything on our "Niagarine" Slides. 12 heat-proof slides, special penmanship needle, complete instructions and valuable suggestions 35c. Try now! Unexpectedly pleasant results or money refunded.

Chas. Hauesser, 1267 C Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

From a Box Office Point of View

The quality of your pictures is directly reflected in the size of the receipts. Certainly it pays to use the best lens equipment.

Bausch and Lomb
Projection Lenses

insure high-class pictures, sharp, clear, true to life. Encourage your operator to do his best work by equipping your machine with Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers.

The Edison and Nicholas Power Machines are regularly equipped with our lenses. Procurable through any film exchange.

Write for our interesting free Booklet. It will prove of value.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE NEW YORK HERALD

last Sunday devoted a page to the Players pictures, and announced another page for next Sunday. The papers cannot give away the pictures, but YOU can. The public look at pictures in a newspaper, and if you "work" our PHOTO PLAYERS POST CARD scheme "they" can carry them away from your house with a double advertising advantage to you.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Hand Colored Pictures of 16 Favorites.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

5c POSTER SERVICE | 10c SLIDE SERVICE

Over 150 Houses are using our 5c Poster Service and we're adding more. We furnish programs complete.

"ONE-SHEETS"—5c "THREE-SHEETS"—15c "SIX SHEETS"—30c

Thousands of old posters (9 months and over) for sale very cheap.

"WE'LL BUY YOUR POSTERS"

If you have any posters to sell, we'll buy all you have, any quantity, (Association, Independent, Exclusive, Famous Players, etc.) from first run to 60 days' service.

10c A Week Slides for Rent on ALL Multiple and Feature Pictures in Every Service, "General Film," "Mutual," "Universal" "Exclusive," "Famous Players," etc. Our Slides are ready before release date.

Stock Slides,—Actors and Announcements – 25c each.

DAVIS BROS.
158 Eddy Street San Francisco

The ASCO TICKET CHOPPER

The last word in choppers. The proper system for theaters, dance halls and all places where tickets are used.

A New Idea Just what the theater and amusement place owners have wanted for their entrance. Necessity is the mother of invention. That is why we made the ASCO. It was needed, demanded, and the ASCO grants their every wish and demand.

WHY?

The ASCO takes up but little space. Mutilates the tickets entirely or only partially destroys them so numbers can be read.

Cutting Rollers cannot be injured should Coins or Checks be accidently dropped into Chopper.

Appearance, none better nor nearly as good. Cabinets the best. Trimmings regular. All nickel plated. Special trimmings solid bronze.

The ASCO DUPLEX
CHOPPER AND PASS BOX

The Duplex has compartment for passes.
A complete system for checking up.
Don't hang on to the old stuff.
Make your show business look correct.

GET OUR PRICES. THEY ARE RIGHT

AMUSEMENT SALES CO.
Woodward and Warren - Detroit, Mich.

VICTOR.

SEALED ORDERS (Two Parts—Mar. 30).—Crooknose is a child of the slums. The slums is his mother, dark alleys his father and his family is composed of the crook, the gambler, the demi-monde and the policeman. But despite these family connections Crooknose is organically a decent fellow. He believes in a "square deal." He insists on a "square deal" and as a result he commands the respect, which comes of fear of the gamblers with whom he associates.

One day while Crooknose is a party in a quiet game of poker another incident of importance to this story is taking place in a nearby crockery store. Katie, a young saleswoman, and Crooknose's idol, sells a vase to a customer. The buyer of the merchandise asserts that she gave the saleswoman a $50 bill. Katie says no and she is discharged. While seeking employment Katie falls into the hands of a procuress who offers her the position of housekeeper for two girl artists. Unsuspecting of the nature of the employment, Katie accepts the offer. The procuress leads Katie to her establishment. The innocent girl only too soon discovers the danger which threatens her. When she attempts to leave the infamous dive she finds that she is a prisoner and that a common person is her jailor.

In the meantime Crooknose catches one of the players cheating. He draws his revolver, pockets the money on the table, which is rightfully his, and retreats from the room, holding the other gamblers at bay with his firearm. The proprietor of the house telephones to a number of confederates downstairs and instructs them to rob Crooknose of his winnings.

Crooknose is "wise" to their game and he leaves the building by way of the roof. A hot chase over the tops of buildings ensues. In looking for an opportunity to reach the street Crooknose peers through a skylight and sees Katie, the object of his secret love, struggling with the pander. He jumps through the skylight and goes to her rescue. The gamblers follow and a one-sided battle begins. Crooknose is all but vanquished when Bullneck Gannon, a policeman and an old acquaintance of Crooknose, and an admirer of Katie, breaks into the room and turns tide of battle against the gamblers. There is a little scene in the hospital that night, when Katie visits Crooknose and the policeman, which suggests a future romance between Crooknose and the girl.

THE MONSTER AND THE GIRL (4 parts—Mar. 25).—Two old fishermen sitting outside of their cabin see a boat at sea on fire. They rush to the life-saving station and report what they have seen. The ship is destroyed and the passengers are lost with the exception of a little boy. One of the old fishermen, who has a little girl the boy's age, decides to adopt him. The children become very fond of each other. Ten years later a New York lawyer comes to the fishing town and wants to adopt the child, but the boy is old enough to decide for himself, and does not want to go. The case is brought to court and it is decided that the child remain with his adopted parents, but that they place the money in the hands of a banker and the guardianship of the lawyer. Not very long afterward the banker is on the verge of bankruptcy and borrows from the boy's money. He has no means of returning it and decides to sell the boy some worthless stock in an unformed corporation. On his visit the banker falls in love with the young girl, now grown to be a beautiful young lady. The boy becomes jealous and seeing the banker kiss the girl fights with him on the edge of a cliff, from which the banker, who is not badly injured, falls. The boy, repentant, helps the banker to his father's house. The girl falls in love with the banker and elopes with him, but he soon neglects her for his gay companions and she returns to her father's home. The banker plans a robbery upon his own bank and is aided by crooks, who dig a tunnel under the bank and enter through the floor of the office. But the banker has already taken the money his confederates seek and flees to the fishing village where his wife is living with her parents. He is followed by the crooks, who trap him into giving them the stolen money. Having been seen by his wife's people, he takes the clothes from a body which is cast up by the sea, placing his own suit upon the unfortunate victim of the waves and placing a suicide note in the coat pocket. He tracks the crooks to a dive in the city and attempts to recover his stolen wealth. In a spectacular fight he follows one of his assailants down a fire rope from the window of a tall building, grappling with him in mid-air. The terrific struggle which ensues ends by the banker plunging headlong to the street below, thus ending his miserable career. The boy and girl live and love, as in their childhood, down by the sea.

REDUCE YOUR EXPENSES
INSTALL
CORCORAN TANKS
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ John St., N. Y.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs.
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill

50 features for sale with paper
10 second-hand machines
Lot commercial reels
ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. M. P. Theatre Manager
Make business by booming your theatre with LOCAL PICTURES
Write for prices, etc.
Cinematograph Adv. Co.
Room 346, 30 Church St., New York City

Machines and Supplies
Everything for your theatre. New and second-hand machines. Liberal allowance on your old machine in trade. Flame arc lamp carbons of all kinds. Oil, cement, tickets, etc.
ILLINOIS THEATRE SUPPLY CO.
128 N. La Salle Street CHICAGO

Write your announcement slides with pen and ink
"SPOT-LIGHT" SLIDE INK
will not blur, spread, peel or crack; gives clean, clear color on screen; put up in 1 oz. bottles. Violet, white, black, green, red and blue. Money back guarantee.
Set six colors, $1.00
LEAVITT STATIONERY CO.,
208 No. Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FIRE & LIABILITY INSURANCE
HENRY GERSTLE'S SON
Specialists and Experts
45 BROADWAY, N. Y. Phone, Rector 1215 Established 186
FOR THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

BEAUTY FILM.

SWEET LAND OF LIBERTY (Mar. 31).—Filippo, a rather prosperous peanut merchant, receives a letter from his wife, stating that she will shortly arrive in America. On his way home, he finds a lost child and, being unable to learn where she lives, takes her to his own home. He is seen, followed and arrested, and is unable to meet his wife when she arrives. His wife, finding no one to meet her, and in a strange country, soon becomes destitute and in desperation steals, is caught and also locked up. Upon the day of the trial, by chance Filippo and his wife's trials come upon the same day. They meet. Overjoyed, they explain to the judge and are both dismissed. Their little home is brightened by the presence of wife and son, and the reunion is celebrated by a "spread."

AMERICAN.

THE TOWN OF NAZARETH (2 parts—Mar. 30).—Rosney, as a young man, is jilted by the girl he loves, in favor of another. As years roll by he keeps an ever watchful eye over the welfare of the girl, Mary, at the same time achieving a success that brings him to the attention of the outside world. When Mary's husband, failing to win success in the town, and losing the money saved for his son, Frank's college education, complains that no success can be won in Nazareth, and plans to go to the city. Rosney remembers the old saying, "Can anything good come out of Nazareth," and attempts to dissuade him. He fails. Walter, the husband, sneaks away and is not heard from. Rosney, unbeknown to Mary, succeeds in replacing the missing college money, and her grief is tempered by the knowledge that Frank will get his college education.

Frank returns from college and takes up some experiments which results in the discovery of a dyeing process much desired by Wilson, a large manufacturer of cloth. Frank, of course, does not know the value of his discovery, nor is Wilson aware of it, but Wilson visits Rosney with his daughter, Miriam, and an attachment springs up between Miriam and Frank. At this time definite news of the disgraceful death of her husband is brought to Mary, and the shock results in a serious illness. Just as she is getting better Miriam foolishly dares Frank to come to the city and make good. He takes the dare and leaves against his mother's pleas—an additional shock that brings a relapse.

Frank, in the city with Miriam, receives word of his mother's condition and has his eyes opened to his selfishness, and, renouncing Miriam, he hurries

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

Condenser Breakage Stopped
by using the Preddey Condenser Mount. Fits any machine. Price $4.00. Very simple, practical and rugged. Installed in a moment. Will pay for itself in a month. If you break Condensers, it will pay you to write. State make and model of machine. A necessity in any booth. A Reliable, Dependable device. Sent on two weeks' trial. An indestructible metal mount, built to fit any lamphouse, that prevents condenser breakage; lasts lifetime.
W. G. PREDDEY, 669 Haight Street, SAN FRANCISCO

Make Your Own Card Signs and Posters

This complete outfit including 3 lessons in lettering will teach you how to make your own Card Signs and Posters in a few hours' time.
The outfit illustrated here consisted of 3 lessons in lettering, 3 fine red sable brushes, ¼ in., ⅜ in., and ½ in., 4 bottles show card color, Black, Red, Blue, and Green.
Complete outfit sent prepaid to any address upon receipt of price, $3.50. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.
Send for this outfit today.
BERT L. DAILY 205 Rauh Bldg., Dayton, Ohio
I carry a complete line of brushes and supplies for Card Writers and Sign Painters. Write for Catalog.

Not a Shadow of Doubt

Need Hamper You in Reaching a Verdict on the Sterling Qualities of

THE CONVICT'S SON

Our Latest Strikingly Stirring and Convincing Three Part Photo Drama

NOW READY FOR RELEASE

BOOK IT NOW

DON'T MISS IT

Actually Bristling With Unlooked For Situations
A Plot That Grips. :: :: :: Climaxes That Thrill

Original in Conception and Produced with Strictest Regard for Fidelity to Detail

SURE TO PROVE A TREAT

Unusually Attractive One, Three and Six Sheet Posters
Descriptive Heralds and Colored Slides

WRITE OR WIRE FOR TERRITORY AT ONCE

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO. 220 W. 42d ST. NEW YORK

home. Rosney, sensing Frank's trouble, explains to him through the immortal "mousetrap," saying he can win success in Nazareth as well as elsewhere, and, sure enough, a coat of Miriam's, left to be dyed, reveals to Wilson the existence of some better process. The threads are quickly gathered together, even Rosney receiving his reward when after years Mary looks up in his eyes with a new and greater love than she had ever known before.

THE CERTAINTY OF MAN (April 1).—The cock-sure deputy sheriff, through circumstantial evidence, places the positive guilt of a certain crime on a man he had previously esteemed a friend. His sworn testimony on the witness stand in the murder trial convicts this man, the foster-father of his sweetheart. The real murderer is a well-known bandit, who in an attempted hold-up kills the man whom at first he merely intended to rob.

The deputy is called to another town to identify the man who has been severely wounded, and in him he finds the real murderer who, on his death-bed, confesses to the crime. The deputy telegraphs the circumstances, having, as he thinks, ample time to prevent the execution of the law, which has decreed death on an innocent man. As he enters a room, a clock which has been set wrong by a boy who had also the cock-sure instinct that his watch was right and the clock wrong, shows the times as 3:23 and the execution had been set for 3:00. Without stopping to reason, the cock-sure man loses his nerve as he realizes he alone is responsible for the death of his former friend. He goes absolutely mad and rushes to the mountains.

Meanwhile, the governor has received the wire in time to release the prisoner, who is returned safely to his home. The deputy wanders near his home town and even attempts to kill the girl he loves, but fortunately his reason is restored by the appearance of the man he had been instrumental in condemning and the girl he had always loved again comes into his life.

KOMIC.

AFTER HER DOUGH (Mar. 25).—A very wealthy heiress decides to make her home in Quietville and realizing her immense fortune in jewels as well as money needs protection, she has the police stationed around the house. Of course, the news travels and attracts the Yeggs as well as the Anarchists—haters of society.

The Yeggs decide to represent themselves as police so visit the station house and after applying the poison needle to the sleeping policemen don their clothes and send their pal to rob the house of the heiress. They then wait to get word from him that his job is complete so they can help him carry off the loot without being suspected. In the meantime a citizen oversees the anarchists plotting and phones the police. The imposters, thinking it is their pal hasten to the house mentioned and run into the anarchists den who have been previously informed of their coming.

Alas, the fake police are met with a warm reception. In the meantime the heiress phones. The police who by this time have recovered. They hasten over to her home and catch the crook at work. The anarchists chase the imposters back to the police station and end their schemes with the aid of a bomb. When the police return to the station with their prisoner they find their pals gone on to the sweet hereafter.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 64 (Mar. 18).—Royalty Roves.—Spanish King and Queen and the Prince of Battenberg visit Ancient Churches in Madrid.

Polar Bears Enjoy Winter Weather.—London zoo inmates highly pleased with icy blast.

California Orange Show.—Annual exhibition of golden fruit is held at San Francisco.

A New Life-boat.—London officials successfully try out an unsinkable craft.

32 Lives Lost.—Missouri Athletic Club burns in St. Louis with terrible results.

Hats.—French milliners designing both small and picture chapeaux for coming season.

Automobile Turns Somersaults.—Santa Monica Races in California prove an exciting event.

The Latest Curtiss Flying Boat.—Aeroplane inventor experiments in Florida waters with his new craft.

Smallpox in Sydney.—Australian city compels thousands to submit to vaccination.

Open Switch Causes Wreck.—Disastrous smash on N. Y., O. & W. at Port Jervis, N. Y.

Apartment Houses Burn.—Long row of high buildings goes up in flames in New York.

"Vulkan" Sinks at Hamburg.—German boat goes to the bottom while in Harbor.

Hard Times for Alaskan Elk.—Government feeds herds during winter in northern territory.

Under-Ice Fishing in Russia.—Food supply landed under extreme difficulties.

MAJESTIC.

THEY WHO DIG PITS (Mar. 24).—Angered that his insolent advances toward Margy should be resented, Jebson, moonshiner, enters upon a systematic robbery of Josiah's still. Being caught, Jebson is by Josiah vigorously forced to return all of the stolen liquor. Jebson, infuriated, vows vengeance. Burying his own still, Jebson puts a revenue officer on Josiah's trail, but is in a most clever way outwitted by Hal, whom Margy favors. Not satisfied, Jebson unearths his own still, points same out to the revenue officer and lays the responsibility upon the shoulders of Josiah. Evil is at the height of its triumph when there comes a sudden turn of events that sends Jebson staggering into his own pit.

THE WARNING CRY (Mar. 27).—Dawn Westley a young opera singer, is in love with Robert Joyce. Dawn becomes interested in Leppo, a young Italian violinist, whom she and Joyce find playing in the streets, and be becomes Dawn's protege.

Joyce proposes to Dawn, but she refuses him, feeling that such a step would hinder her operatic career. He no sooner leaves her when she changes her mind and writes him a note to return, which she intends to send the following morning. That night she encounters a burglar in her home, and the shock brings on temporary paralysis of the throat, which causes her to lose the faculty of speech. When she realizes that she cannot speak, perhaps for years, she tears up the note to Joyce and leaves for her summer home, in company with her mother and faithful Leppo.

Some months later she accidentally encounters Joyce and the love tangle is straightened out, but not until Leppo, who has taken a decided dislike to Joyce, tries to take his life. He is stopped by Dawn who, through fright, regains her voice.

ATONEMENT (2 parts—Mar. 22).—Felix, while excavating under the cabin he is building for his bride-to-be, strikes water, and builds a well directly beneath the kitchen. He is so busy hurrying the cabin to completion that he has little time to see his sweetheart. Julie's father has taken a young city man, off on a hunting trip, to board, and the motherless, ignorant little Julie is no match for his allurements. Felix, on one of his Sunday visits, meets the hunter, but his suspicions are not aroused. Brookes leaves early one morning before Julie is up, pleading urgent business to Old André. When Julie finds he is gone, she is face to face with the world-old problem. Afraid to confess to her stern father and unsuspecting lover, she flees to the woods, intent on self destruction. Her lover, worried and puzzled by her strange behavior, follows in time to prevent her from suicide. In desperation she confesses her guilt. The outraged lover swears vengeange upon her betrayer; but his love for the girl is unchanged and he insists upon marrying her at once. The sacrifice proves futile, for slanderous tongues wag, and Julie is convinced that Felix can never live down her sin. Biding her time, she resolves upon self destruction as the only solution.

Felix starts for the village to match some heavy iron spikes. He is barely gone before Julie attempts to carry out her designs. Finding the gun empty and the revolver in Felix's possession, she hurls herself into the well beneath the kitchen. Felix has returned for a forgotten article, and plunges in after her. He gets a foothold on the jagged rocks of the wall, fastens the well rope about Julie's waist and starts to climb up, when the rope breaks and he is left floundering in the water with his unconscious wife. He gets his foothold again, fastens the rope about her shoulders, drives one of the heavy spikes into the plaster, and in this way reaches the swinging shelf at the top of the well on which the butter, etc., is kept. He rescues the girl after a struggle. Very soon after this a boy is born, and Felix has an aversion for the baby, and rushes forth into the woods, bent upon slaying Brookes.

Twenty years later, Jules, a sturdy handsome youth, is supporting Felix with his earnings as guide at a new summer hotel. Through an envious guide he learns the story of his mother's life, which Felix had kept from him. Demanding the truth from Felix, the latter tells Julie's story to her son. Jules vows to be avenged when Felix is no longer a daily care. Three years later, Robert Brookes brings his wife and son, Robert, to the old haunts, locating at the hotel. Brookes accidentally shoots himself in the arm while out hunting with Robert, and Jules come to their rescue, taking Brookes to the cabin. They leave Felix in charge of Brookes while they rush off for the doctor and to tell Mrs. Brookes of her husband's injury. At the hotel Jules hears the name of the injured man, and recognizes it as his father's. He starts back bent upon revenge, but is intercepted by Robert. In his fury, he tells Robert his father's story. Mrs. Brookes overhears it. In spite of her anguish at the revelation she pleads with Jules until he softens and foregoes his vengeance for her sake. Meanwhile, up in the cabin, Felix has recognized his ancient enemy. His physical infirmities are forgotten as he faces Julie's betrayer. Brookes backs away in terror from the hatred and fury in Felix's face, and steps backward into the open well. Felix rejoices in the workings of destiny, slams down the door, and gives way to his glutted vengeance. When the little party arrives, they find Felix gloating over his enemy's death. He falls lifeless as they enter. Mrs. Brookes expiates her husband's sin by adopting his illegitimate son, and giving him the comforts rightfully his.

TWO MIDGAR SPECIALS

The Diamonds of Destiny

Or a Scented Clue

IMPERATOR

A Distinctive Detective Drama in Four Parts

The Massive Four Part Imperator Sensation

Life's Temptations

A gripping story introducing the wreck of a giant liner, thrilling rescues from a burning coal mine and other sensational incidents

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Telephone Bryant 4985

Midgar Features

135 W. 44th St., New York

QUALITY - EFFICIENCY - ECONOMY - DURABILITY - ADAPTABILITY

THOSE ARE THE FOUNDATION STONES OF THE

"THE PEERLESS" — DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN — "THE PIONEER"

THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM——THE SCREEN THAT IS BUILT TO ORDER

AND THOSE FIVE LITTLE WORDS EXPLAIN WHY IT IS RAPIDLY SUPPLANTING ALL THE OTHER SCREENS UPON THE MARKET—THEY TELL THE WHOLE STORY.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE — ARRANGE FOR COMPARATIVE TEST — THE ONLY PROOF NECESSARY

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

BRANCH OFFICES AND DISTRIBUTING CENTERS AT

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES

Prompt delivery.

Write for illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1476.

T. D. HUME & CO.

Suite 513-522, 668 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING

WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.

176 N. State St., bet. Lake and Randolph, Chicago, Ill.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN

Furnished for all Occasions

CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.

4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

RENT OR SHARE

N. Y. State & N. E. States ONLY

(Greater N. Y. and Boston, and Worcester excepted.)

$100 per day—2 days minimum. Share propositions must have population and capacity inducements. The only Feature Photo Play steadily attracting a $1.50 box office scale in New York City.

VICTOR HUGO'S

"LES MISERABLES"

In 9 Reels

Now in 7th Capacity Week at Carnegie Lyceum.

Address

J. J. RAYMOND,

Care Carnegie Lyceum,

N. Y. City.

LYMAN H. HOWE

——WANTS——

IMITATORS

Intelligent young men with natural ability to mimic people, animals, birds, etc., have an excellent opportunity behind my moving picture screens on tour. If you are AMBITIOUS will train you to qualify for good position. State age, extent of education, experience if any, first letter.

PIANISTS

My TRAVEL FESTIVAL organizations offer exceptional opportunity to young men who have the ability to make their work on the piano stand out from the ordinary. Applicants for positions MUST have overtures that please audiences in the leading theatres of the country where my exhibitions exclusively appear. Give age, experience, in first letter.

Address all communications to

LYMAN H. HOWE

WILKES-BARRE, PA.

(Silence is our polite negative)

Perfect Positive Printing

References from the largest feature concerns in the business, on request. Our factory force is composed of experts of long experience. All work is absolutely guaranteed.

PRICE, 4c PER FOOT

Not cheap work, but assurance that the finest possible results will be obtained from negatives.

WHYTE MOTION PICTURE ENTERPRISES

110 West 40th Street - - - - NEW YORK CITY

THANHOUSER.

THEIR COUSIN FROM ENGLAND (Mar. 22).—A dignified judge lived with his wife and two daughters in a beautiful suburban home in Westchester County, New York. He had a good social standing, plenty of money and relatives in England. One of these relatives, a cousin, had never been to America, but as he placidly explained having visited most of the wild places of the world, he thought he would come over to New York City and hunt buffaloes. At the time of his arrival the judge and his wife were away on a social visit, and the task of receiving the young Englishman fell upon the judge's two fun-loving daughters. They decided to teach him a lesson. They concluded that to be as ignorant as was their cousin, was a crime, so they arranged to teach him something. They received him at the pier, dressed as cowgirls, took him home in an auto, and explained that they lived on the frontier twenty miles away. When he asked them about their parents they calmly informed him that father had gone with the rangers to hunt the Indians who killed mother. The young Englishman believed every word of it, and adventures piled upon him. He met some desperate cowboys, went hunting buffaloes on the roads of Westchester County, and finally participated in a thrilling defense of the house when it was attacked by Indians. In the midst of the excitement, the judge and his wife returned and the young Englishman discovered that he had been tricked to the limit. He was not angry, for he was a good natured young man, but as he plaintively said, "I wonder whoy they spoofed me."

BRONCHO.

SHORTY'S SACRIFICE (2 parts—April 8).—Shorty starts for Arizona with the hope of finding work so that he may be able to send for his mother, who is suffering with a cough. He is unable to pay his fare on a freight train, so he sneaks into the caboose and hides in the wood box. A lot of tramps, who are stealing a ride, when told by the brakeman to move on, attack him and throw him out of the moving box car and then attempt to man the train. Shorty helps the train crew and when the tramps are brought before the magistrate at the next town, Shorty is given work by Tom Simms, a ranch owner, while the ringleader of the tramps is given a long sentence by Ned Dorne, justice of the peace.

Shorty is soon made foreman. In some unknown way the barns in which Simms has his crops stored take fire, burning up everything. Ned Dorne, who is a rival for Ethel Somners, the new school teacher, holds a note against Simms and sees a good chance to ruin him. Ned Dorne demands immediate payment and they quarrel.

The tramp responsible for the attack on the train serves his time and is released and ordered out of town. He sees Dorne riding alone and decides that this is his chance to get even. He attacks him, kills him and is wounded in the struggle. Simms is accused of the crime, but Shorty writes a note to the sheriff, telling him that he did it. Shorty finds the tramp dying, obtains a confession from him, just as the sheriff and posse arrive to arrest him. Simms is exonerated and Shorty's mother arrives just as he returns to the ranch, a free man.

KAY-BEE.

THE TRAP (2 parts—Mar. 20).—Sergeant Perry and Corporal Stone are rivals both in love with Mary O'Toole, daughter of Sergeant O'Toole. Mary favors Corporal Stone. Sergeant Perry forces his attention on Mary, who resents them. Perry assaults a superior officer and is reduced to the ranks. Smarting under his disgrace he plans to betray the post into the hands of the Indians. One Feather, a treacherous government scout, tells the chief of Perry's disgrace. Perry plans with the Indians to attack the post—says he will cut the telegraph lines and blow up the powder magazine. Perry cuts the telegraph lines and then goes to the powder magazine to blow it up. While he is in the inner magazine two privates come in for ammunition. Perry hides from them; they get their ammunition and on leaving, an officer locks the outer magazine door after them. Perry lights the fuse and goes to the door, finds it locked and is blown up in the explosion. One Feather steals the colonel's horse and is thrown in the pursuit. Dying, he informs the colonel of Sergeant Perry's plan to betray the post.

RELIANCE.

THE MYSTERIOUS SHOT (2 parts—April 4).—Buck Gade, the son of the owner of the large Gourd Ranch, had dismounted and was on his knees stopping for a drink of water at a ford of the San Pedro River, when his hat was sent spinning by a bullet, and he promptly spread out flat on the ground. Immediately a horseman emerged from a clump of cotton woods across the river. Whereupon the foxy Buck Gade turned on his side and sent a "forty-fiver" across the shallows. It spurted sand into the air close to the right of the rider, who wheeled and scurried off at top speed. Buck tried again, but the cartridge jammed. He was much disappointed because the fugitive was the Gopher, and the Gopher was the brains of the Price faction.

Buck's father and Price, the owner of the Fork Ranch, were engaged in a desperate feud. Previous to this war Buck had been devoted in his attention to pretty Marylee, Prince's daughter, but her father so deep in his hatred of Gade, senior, forced his daughter to marry Gopher, his foreman. Marylee still loves Buck and meets him at every chance. This becomes known to Gopher, who determines to kill him and, prompted by jealousy, he is very cruel to Marylee.

The war goes on and several attempts are made to kill Buck. Finally Gopher compels Marylee to write Buck a note, telling him that she is held prisoner by her husband, who threatens to send her to an asylum and begs him to come to her rescue at once. Buck starts off at once, unaccompanied, to effect her rescue. He reaches the house and just as he is about to signal Marylee through the window Gopher, assisted by one of his men knocks him down and the men proceed to tie him up with ropes. They then carry him off to an abandoned outhouse. Gopher then dismisses his men, stating that he will fix Buck.

Buck securely bound has been placed on a stool and Gopher before carrying out his revenge taunts and man-handles him generally. Gopher sitting opposite his prisoner proceeds to sharpen a knife on his heel. He shows Buck how he intends to kill him. Gopher leans forward and smites him on the lip. Buck throws himself backward on the stool, kicking straight up as he topples over. The toe of his heavy riding boot catches the Gopher under the chin, and he falls down as though hit with a pile driver. Buck rolls over, staggers to an upright position, and rasps the rope around his wrists up and down the sharp point of the anvil. He releases himself before Gopher regains consciousness and makes his escape. His horse has been put away and he is forced to walk back to his own ranch.

Shortly afterward he meets Marylee again and she plainly exhibits signs of the Gopher's abuse. Buck tries to persuade her to run away with him, but she returns to her husband. Marylee is constantly accompanied in all her rides by a Mexican boy attendant, who is her devoted slave and watches over her carefully. A week later Buck is riding over his ranch. To his right is a sharp rise on the ground topped by a thick cover of thorny brush. Lying in wait behind a screening of this brush the Gopher, with rifle in hand, is waiting for Buck to ride by so he may kill him.

A sharp report from the brush makes Buck whirl in his saddle. Instantly he throws himself off over the horse's shoulder, jerking his rifle free from the holster as he goes. A man totters up behind a bush on the crest holding a gun. He sways a few seconds and disappears. Next a woman runs around the base of the ridge and speeds toward Buck.

"Don't shoot!" she cries. "Don't shoot." It's only me, Buck." Marylee is sobbing against Buck's bosom when a cavalcade of horsemen approach, composed of her father and a number of his men. Buck immediately jumps in front of Marylee and awaits their attack. Old man Price rides forward with outstretched hand making signs of peace and looks upon the scene with evident signs of approval. Lying upon some shale was the body of Gopher. Old man Price gazes at the body for a moment and shakes his head, remarking, "Well, he surely is dead." Turning toward Buck, he continues, "The question is, who done killed Gopher? Did you get him, Buck?" Buck shakes his head. Everybody turns to the Gopher's widow, but she does not utter a sound nor make a move, but continues to nestle in Buck's arms. One of Price's men grunts and throws Gopher's body over the back of a horse and slowly rides away.

Meanwhile the Mexican boy, Marylee's faithful attendant, modestly keeps in the background, stirring gravel with his boot very uncomfortably, and avoiding old man Price's eye.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

PASQUALI-AMERICAN CO.

THE SPARTAN GIRL (Five parts).—Helena, a Greek girl, who is spending her holidays at the seashore together with little cousin Mary, has taken a rowboat and gone on a sketching trip, having selected an advantageous spot on a large rock a short distance from the shore. Ali Bey, a Turkish military attache who is stationed at Athens, has been attracted by Helena's beauty. He follows them down to the shore and patiently awaits their return, when he is horrified by seeing that the boat has gone adrift and the tide is fast rising. He immediately raises an alarm and plunges into the water to save them. After a desperate struggle he manages to get them ashore safely. Helena falls in love with the Turkish officer, much to her father's displeasure, but after may arguments her father compels her to marry Captain Humeroki, a Greek officer, although she is in love with her rescuer, Ali Bey, the Turk.

Some months later war is declared between Greece and Turkey. Important war documents are in the possession of Helena's husband, and the Turkish officer has been commissioned to secure them. He makes an appointment with Helena to meet her at night in the garden of her home. Here he takes advantage of her love for him by threatening to shoot himself unless she will agree to secure for him a copy of these documents, which she accomplishes while her husband sleeps and delivers them to him.

Captain Humeroki has been ordered to the front. Helena becomes remorseful. She cannot stand the strain any longer, so with her butler, whom she has explicit confidence in, she drives to the Turkish headquarters determined to see and persuade her lover, Ali Bey, not to make use of the documents she placed in his possession.

While waiting to see him she overhears arrangements being made that convinces her that use has already been made of the documents and the Greek army will surely meet defeat. She realizes that she can save the day, and immediately dispatches her companion, the butler, for a powerful charge of dynamite, which she places at the base of one of the piers of a great bridge, over which the Turks must pass to accomplish their design, thus blowing up the bridge over which is galloping her lover at the head of the Turkish cavalry. The bridge falls, entombing men and horses. Helena is mortally wounded and the Greek officers cover her with the flag while the dying heroine is pardoned by her husband, to whom she has confessed all.

THE I. S. P. CO.

KING CHARLES II (Four parts).—The picture opens with an introductory scene in which we first meet Clavering Maunsel, only son of Colonel Maunsel, at their home, "Ovingdean Grange." He is bidding his father good-bye, and riding forth to fight for the king. He takes a last farewell of his sweetheart, Dulcia Beard, the chaplain's daughter, and rides away. The preparations of the rival troops are then shown. Cromwell and the Roundheads take every precaution on the field, while in contrast we have a following scene, showing the Royalists toasting the king.

Next follow a number of realistic scenes depicting the final sortie of the Battle of Worcester, in which the Royalists are defeated by the Roundheads, and King Charles is obliged to flee for his life. Clavering Maunsel is wounded and carried home to "Ovingdean Grange" by his faithful servant, John Habergeon. At the Grange an attempt is made by Captain Stelfax, at the head of the Roundhead troops, to make him prisoner. He escapes and succeeds in shooting both of the Roundhead riders. His horse is shot under him at the top of a sixty-foot embankment, and they roll, horse and man, from the top to the bottom.

Clavering is now able to make off on foot. He has not gone far when he meets with a party of horsemen whom he recognizes as the king and his friends, Colonel Gunter and Lord Wilmot. The king is on his way to the coast, and readily agrees to Clavering's offer to take shelter at the Grange. They ride over the ancient bridge at Shoreham, and soon arrive at Ovingdean. Here the merry monarch, feeling secure from capture, charms the company with his jovality. Captain Stelfax has been on the watch, however, and having procured troops surrounds the house, and makes a sudden and unexpected entrance to the dining-hall. He captures the king, and takes the entire company prisoners.

We picture the famous escape from Ovingdean church, and how Clavering and the king succeeded in locking the church door with Stelfax and his men inside. Later we see the dramatic escape from the top of the cliff, when good Nick Tattersal lent his aid, and the king was safely rowed out to the schooner in waiting. A fine picture is presented of the schooner sailing to the friendly shores of France, while from the cliff top Stelfax gazes on the prize he has lost.

We come to the restoration of the king in the year 1660. Clavering is still languishing in prison when Charles makes his triumphant procession from Dover to London. Colonel Maunsel and Dulcia join the cheering throng. The girl remembers the king's kindly manner in the days at Ovingdean, and implores him to release her lover, at which the throng cheers and cheers. A well-earned reward. In the palace at Whitehall, surrounded by his magnificent court, the king, in royal fashion, acknowledges his gratitude and unites the lovely Dulcia to her lover, now Sir Clavering Maunsel.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION.

THE PRICE OF TREACHERY: or THE LIGHT-HOUSE-KEEPER'S DAUGHTER.—This picture tells the story of the life of two brothers, Henry and Robert Williams. Henry's early life has not been beyond reproach, he even stopping to forge a check to raise money and, as the picture opens, he is in receipt of a letter advising him that unless his forged check is paid the matter will be put into

More than one hundred Exhibitors are convinced that our

Compact Marvel Moving Picture Camera

is a box office booster

Complete $150.00

Catalogue on request

Whyte's Motion Picture Enterprises, Inc.

110 West 40th Street New York City

MR. OPERATOR,

ARE YOU USING A "MARCO PROTECTOR"?

IF NOT, WHY NOT?

The "MARCO PROTECTOR" is life insurance to the eyes. You will not have to visit an oculist if you use one.

NOT MADE OF GLASS

Sent postpaid anywhere in the United States upon receipt of $2.00 in currency or money order.

MARKS BROTHERS

3005 N. Washtenaw Ave. CHICAGO

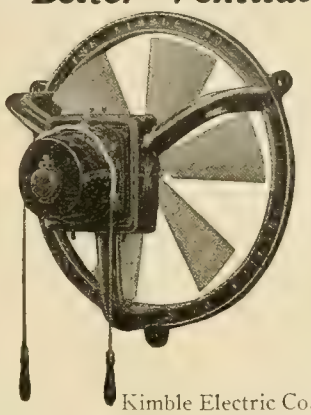
Better Ventilation at Less Cost



KIMBLE

Alternating Current

FAN

May be used as either intake or exhaust. Simply pull the chain. May be run fast or slow or any speed between. Reduces operating cost in direct proportion to every reduction in speed. No other fan has these features. No other fan can give as good ventilation at as low a cost. Write for the Red Catalog.

Kimble Electric Co., 633 Northwestern Ave., Chicago

EXHIBITORS, ATTENTION!

Here Are Two Winners!

"SLIDENE"

With "Slidene" you can make your own slides for less than 1c. each! If your exchange or supply house does not carry it send us a dollar bill for big box. Do it to-day.

"Fotoplay Novelty Cards"

The greatest souvenir ever gotten out. They show your patrons what picture film looks like and tells them about it. Send 10c. in silver for sample, or $2.00 for 100.

WESTERN SLIDE COATING CO.

Spokane Theatre Bldg., Spokane, Wash.

NOTE—Exchanges and supply houses who are not now handling our "Slidene," should "wake up."

EVERY TELEPHONE AND LETTER BOX IS OUR BRANCH OFFICE.

When you need anything in the

MOTION PICTURE LINE

your order by Phone or Mail will receive our careful attention.

SLIDES MADE TO ORDER.

Get that Catalog now.

ERKER'S

608 OLIVE ST. ST. LOUIS, MO.

One, Three and Six Sheets Now Ready

FOR THE FOLLOWING

BIOGRAPH'S release of March 28th, "BATTLE AT ELDERBUSH GULCH"

For the Week of March 30th to April 4th

KALEM'S:

Monday—"A PASSOVER MIRACLE"

Wednesday—"RAID OF THE RED MARAUDERS"

LUBIN'S:

Wednesday—"THE FIGHTING BLOOD"

Thursday—"THE MANSION OF SOBS"

A. B. C. COMPANY - - Cleveland, Ohio

the hands of the police. Driven to desperation Henry breaks into his father's safe and takes out the banknotes, the quarter's rents from the numerous farm tenants which the overseer had brought in that day. Robert, hearing the noise, confronts his brother who breaks down and acknowledges his wrongdoing. Robert urges him to tell all to his father with the assurance that he will help him out of his dilemma. This he refuses to do and begs Robert not to tell. Overcome with remorse, Henry is taken ill and, in the morning, when the theft is discovered, Robert—in order to save his brother—confesses to being the culprit. He is ordered out of the house, but before leaving he confesses the truth of the whole affair to his mother.

Four years elapse during which time the father of the boys dies, and Robert has become captain of a schooner about to arrive at the Isle of Peele, directly across from the mainland where his mother lives, to whom he has written informing her of the fact that he is now captain of the "Harland" and expects to run across and see her and his father, whom he hopes has forgiven him. Henry, while out horseback riding on his way to the quay, runs into Mary, the daughter of the lighthouse-keeper of the Isle of Peele, and, becoming enamored of her beauty, organizes a shooting party to the Isle of Peele in order to see her again. A terrible storm takes place, compelling them to accept the hospitality of the lighthouse-keeper to stay over night. The storm is not confined to the Isle of Peele, but has broken with great fury out at sea, where the lighthouse-keeper discovers the "Harland," tossed by the great waves, completely helpless. Calling Mary to the lighthouse to keep the lantern lit, he runs to the shore, launches his boat and sets out for the work of rescue. Henry, finding Mary alone in the lamp house, endeavors to embrace her. She resents and, in the struggle which ensues, Henry is rendered unconscious. In falling he breaks the oil supply tube which feeds the lamp in the lighthouse. Robert, and Tompkins, the cook—the only survivors—fearing the boat, which is loaded with explosives, will blow up, decide to cast their fate in the turbulent waters and jump overboard. After swimming for a long time, they meet the lighthouse-keeper rowing toward them but, in attempting to get into his boat, it is overturned, and the three of them are thrown back into the sea. Shortly after Robert deserts his ship it is blown up. Mary, having escaped from the lighthouse, rushes to the beach in time to help her father and Tompkins brings Robert onto land. He is carried to the house and tenderly nursed back to health by Mary and her father. Falling in love with Mary, Robert tells these good people who he really is and asks for Mary's hand in marriage. The news of the blowing up of the "Harland" having reached his mother, she becomes seriously ill and, when he crosses to the mainland to see her, he is welcomed as one risen from the dead. Henry, still intent on winning Mary, plans with two others to abduct her. They set out in a motorboat to the island and, by throwing a misleading note into her room, she is decoyed to the cliff where, against overwhelming odds, she is overpowered. In the struggle Henry falls down the embankment Tompkins, having followed Mary, returns for Robert who is just running to the scene of the fray as Henry makes his descent and, continuing the pursuit (not knowing to whom he is giving chase), he reaches Henry just in time to see him disappear into a bed of quicksand, powerless to help him. In the meantime the other two conspirators manage to bring Mary to the motorboat. Thinking they have her secure, they enter the cabin of the boat, whereupon she jumps up, fastens the cabin door, and turns the wheel about headed back toward shore, arriving just before Robert, who bursts in upon them with the terrible news regarding his brother. The next morning Robert takes his fiancee to his mother, who confers upon the happy pair her parental blessing.

BLACHE FEATURES.

THE DREAM WOMAN (4 parts).—In this story the hero is haunted by a beautiful young woman who tries to stab him to death with a knife. This phantasy recurs on each of his birthdays, becoming more and more real as the years go on. He leaves home to secure a place as groom, but arrives at his destination too late. Forced to retrace his steps, he seeks shelter in a little inn, forgetting that the hour of his birth is approaching. In the middle of the night he awakens, terrified with fright. Standing by his bed with a deadly knife in her hand is "The Dream Woman." She plunges the blade into the mattress as he squirms out of the way. Twice she attempts to reach him. He yells for help. The innkeeper and his family are aroused. Seeing nothing, they drive him away for disturbing them. As he is escaping the apparition appears once more. Fear lends speed to his quaking legs and he runs until he falls exhausted in his mother's arms.

Francis Raven, the young man, is home from his hair-raising adventure. His mother is sick and he goes to the druggist for medicine. While there, Alicia Warlock, a very pretty girl, enters. It is easily discerned that she has been wayward—that she is tired of life. She asks the druggist to sell her laudanum. He refuses. As she goes out, she attracts Raven's attention. He is fascinated and follows.

When he introduces Alicia to his mother, that good but very superstitious woman receives her with askance. But the son is infatuated and when the mother orders the girl away he goes with her and the two are married. They settle down in a home of their own, but when Raven is absent his wife associates with questionable companions. She drinks and is frequently under the influence of liquor. He finds her in this state and scolds her, but she is defiant. Not willing to give her up, he summons his mother, who promises to use her influence toward reforming the girl. But the mother sees her daughter-in-law cutting bread with the same knife that has always been a part of her son's dream and runs away.

Not long afterward, Raven finds his wife stupefied with whiskey. He handles her roughly and finally strikes her. She falls to the floor completely sobered by the blow. In a second the husband regrets his hasty temper, but his wife, beside herself with rage, declares she will murder him with the very knife that has tortured him in his dreams. He gets the knife and vows to put it where his wife cannot find it, but while traveling a lonely road he is attacked, the knife is stolen from him and he is thrown into a well, from which he escapes.

A few years elapse and Raven is engaged in the care of horses. Upon the anniversary of his birth two strangers—a man and his wife—employ him to drive them to their station. Having heard his cries they ask for an explanation and he tells his weird story. They pity and employ him as a second groom. To protect him over his birthday the first groom is instructed to watch him constantly during the night. But the first groom while in the village flirts with a woman who readily accepts an invitation to visit his lodgings. Just as she is about to partake of food and refreshments there are groans and cries of distress in an adjoining room. The first groom, not wishing to be disturbed, goes to the frightened man, ties him hand and foot, places a gag in his mouth and returns to the woman he picked up in the street. He does not have much time to revel in her society, however, because his mistress calls him. While he is gone, Alicia steals into the adjoining apartment, recognized the helpless occupant of the bed, draws a knife from the folds of her skirt and plunges it into his heart. The story ends in the fascinating atmosphere of the spirit world with the "Dream Woman" enveloped in soul stirring mystery.

WARNER'S FEATURES.

COME BACK TO ERIN (Three parts).—The story opens in an inland village in Ireland, where Jerry, the village blacksmith, toils, that he may wed Peggy O'Malley in a style befitting her beauty. Peggy's father, Michael, favors Jerry's suit, but Peggy has a mind of her own, and takes passage on a steamer bound for America. Landing in New York, she fortunately secures a position as a parlor maid in a wealthy home.

Peggy attends a dance, where she falls into bad company. Two weeks later young Jerry reads in a New York paper, dropped by passing tourists, of Peggy's arrest for the theft of her mistress' diamond tiara. In another week he is by her side, and after a series of exciting adventures, causes the arrest of the real thieves, recovers the diamond hair ornament, and secures his mavourneen's release. With tearful eyes and a joyous heart, Peggy marries young Jerry, and returns with him to the little cot in Ireland, where her sorrowing father is waiting hopefully for his runaway daughter.

KENNEDY FEATURES.

CHARLOTTE CORDAY (Four parts).—In the magnificent grounds surrounding her home in Normandy, Charlotte Corday and Barbaroux are happy in their love-making, unwarned of the stormy events that fate has decreed should end their dreams. Marat, the leader of the French revolutionists, having plotted the death of the King, arrives at the home of Charlotte. Her beauty attracts his fancy, and finding her in love with Barbaroux, he tells them of his plans for the wholesale slaughter of the French nobility, and by cleverly insinuating that both Charlotte and her lover may be included in the list of those to be executed unless they embrace the cause of the revolution, he succeeds in inducing Barbaroux to accompany him to Paris.

A year later, the revolution is at its height. The aristocrats are being brought to the guillotine by the thousands, and Barbaroux, expressing his disgust of outrages committed by Marat, is overheard by Danton, who betrays him to Marat. Barbaroux, hearing that Marat has ordered his arrest, escapes under a mass of rubbage in a cart, and is pursued by the soldiers. Charlotte, in reading her Bible, feels called upon by a Divine command to do something to restore peace to unhappy France, and sets out for Paris; on the road she is attacked by a mob of peasants. Later she meets the cart in which Barbaroux is escaping just as it breaks down, and Barbaroux emerges from hiding under the rubbage. They are clasped in an embrace as Marat's soldiers arrive and take Barbaroux a prisoner.

Marat, hearing that Charlotte was seen on the road, orders the soldiers to find her, but she avoids them, and later while addressing the multitude from his balcony, Marat sees Charlotte in the crowd. Fearing to point her out lest the mob mistake it for an order to do her harm, he stops his speech and hastens down to get her himself, but she has disappeared. Charlotte, witnessing the guillotine, is horrified. She writes a note to Barbaroux, telling him of her determination to do a big deed to help restore peace. She allows the prison guard to kiss her in exchange for a promise to deliver the note to her love, and Marat, arriving a moment later, takes the note from the guard's hand, and discovering it is from Charlotte, goes to Barbaroux's cell and promises him his liberty if he will tell where Charlotte can be found. Barbaroux, unable to give the information, is brutally beaten.

Marat, feeling that the purpose mentioned in Charlotte's note is a vengeance about to fall upon him, is terror stricken, and in his panic is confronted by the vision of the people he has executed. The next day, Charlotte goes to Marat's house. Marat signs two orders, one for the immediate release and one for the immediate execution of Barbaroux. Showing them to Charlotte, he tells her she is the price of the one for his release. Charlotte pretends to agree to his terms, and Marat, after destroying the death warrant, calls upon Charlotte to embrace him, which she does, and at the same time kills him with a dagger which she had concealed under her cloak. Danton entering at that moment arrests Charlotte, and finds the order of release. Barbaroux is set free. Believing her mission fulfilled and that in causing the death of one man she had saved the lives of thousands, Charlotte mounts the scaffold and gives up her life that quiet may again reign in France.

ECLECTIC.

NAPOLEON (Five parts).—Napoleon's military star first shone at the siege of Toulon in 1793, where he commanded the artillery, a post which he filled with the greatest energy. For his valiant action at Toulon, he was rewarded with the rank of brigadier-general. In 1796 the campaign was vigorously pursued in Italy, until in November, the French were hotly contending against the Austrians at Arcola, where the latter succeeded in retaining possession of the bridge over the Alpone River. However, the French desperately attacked them on the 17th and successfully carried the position.

On July 1, 1798, Napoleon arrived before Alexandria. The campaign in Egypt was a desperate one and much hardship and suffering was endured by the French army. Napoleon's enterprise, however, was again met by success and on the 18th of August, 1799, he set sail for the continent after the conquest of Egypt. In the beginning of 1800, Napoleon again pursued operation sin Italy, which extended to June, when after successfully crossing the Alps by the St. Bernard Pass, the second Italian campaign was brought to an end.

On December 2, 1804, Napoleon Bonaparte was crowned Emperor of the French at the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris. One year later he was desperately engaged in the famous battle of Austerlitz against the allied forces of Russia and Austria. Here was fought a great pitched battle which finally ended in a decided victory for the French. Thus the battle of Austerlitz brought the war of 1805 to a close.

Napoleon's campaign in Russia in 1812 was weighted with great losses, both from his battles as well as from the terrible toll of the severe Russian climate. After the battle of Borodino, the French army entered Moscow, the Russian capital, where Napoleon had decided to make his winter headquarters. But the Russian patriots, rather than have Moscow fall into the hands of the invaders, burned the capital, causing the French to evacuate the city. Therefore, in October, 1812, the Grand Army began the retreat from Moscow, a retreat which proved so disastrous to the French. Harassed in flank and rear by the Cossacks, they left a track of dead and dying across the frozen plains of Russia. On the 5th of December, Napoleon left the army and started on the journey to Paris.

Napoleon's campaign in France ended in April, 1814, when he was forced by the allied powers to abdicate the throne of France and retire to the island of Elba. The history of the origin of Napoleon's resolve to leave Elba is still to some extent wrapped in mystery. He returned to France on March 1, 1815, and at once commenced operations to restore the imperial throne. Several months later, on June 18th, he was engaged in the famous battle of Waterloo, which resulted in his overwhelming defeat by the allies under Wellington and Blucher. Thus was brought to a close the military career of Napoleon, who soon after was exiled to the island of St. Helena, where "the captive giant was handed over by the Earth to the guardianship of the Ocean." There he remained a prisoner till March 5, 1821, when his indomitable spirit surrendered to Death, the conqueror of all.

DE LUXE ATTRACTIONS FILM CO.

SEALED ORDERS (Six parts).—War is in the air. Relations between the two nations are strained to the breaking point. Count Spinelli is the secret agent of the foreign power, and it is his mission to find out what the plans of the government are. To assist in attaining his end, the count organizes a carrier pigeon service between his government's headquarters and an old mill on his own estate. Upon war being declared,

ENTIRELY FREE
—Of Lamp Trouble—

The ARC CONTROLLER

MAINTAINS-- A Perfect Arc
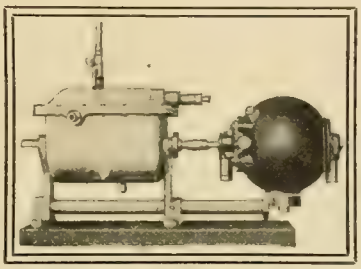
A Clear Field
A Perfect Spot
A Brilliant Sheet
--CONSTANTLY

Motor Power Feed

No Shunt Coils or Magnets



(PATENTED)

Enclosed in a Sheet Iron Box 6" Wide 7" High 17" Long

Cannot Burn Out
Positive in Action
Rugged in Construction

Speed Controller Company, Inc.
257-259 William St. New York

MIRROROIDE SCREENS

The Screen that set the world a-talking. Large demonstration samples absolutely free, so that you can test any way you desire!

Believe the evidence of your own eyes!

Over 7000 now in use.

Universally sold under a positive bona-fide 5-year guarantee that it will not peel, crack, turn black or in any way deteriorate.

MIRROROIDE

will save you one-third in your juice bill. At the same time give you projection 200 per cent. brighter and clearer under real daylight conditions.

Sold the world over at 33⅓ cents per square foot, $3.00 per square yard.

Over 3000 testimonials.

Agencies the world over, or your film exchange.

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.
NEWBURGH N. Y.

"FORGIVEN"

The story of a Jack of Diamonds who turned out to be an "ace of hearts" for the sake of a "queen of clubs." The state-right men who get this feature will make more money for a smaller investment than was ever offered. A production is coming out on the market in a short while that will make the title of this picture alone worth a fortune to you.

Get it now and hold it until we tell you to release it. Thousands upon thousands of dollars have been put behind "FORGIVEN" —the play by this name has been seen all over America.

NOW IS YOUR TIME! This low-priced feature will get big money. Wire in now for territory, then watch how other people will spend money to make money for you.

GOTHAM FILM CO., 145 WEST 45th ST.
(Phone Bryant 3892)

Rear-Admiral Van Houven arranges his order of attack, and hands over the sealed orders referring to same, to his son, Lieutenant Van Houven.

Through an extremely tragic train of events, these sealed orders are placed in the way of Spinelli, who, of course, is not slow to take advantage of his opportunity. Accordingly he copies the orders and sends them by carrier pigeon to his own chief. The pigeon, however, is shot by a government officer; the message is discovered and Rear-Admiral Van Houven learns of the treachery. Quite naturally he immediately suspects his son, and putting duty before paternal affection orders his arrest. The son is court-martialed, found guilty and ordered to be shot. Lieutenant Van Houven's wife reads the result of the trial and makes an abortive attempt to save her husband.

Now we see some of the inner workings of Fate. Count Spinelli is trapped in the old mill; round about the war is raging; deeds of heroism are being performed; Lieutenant Van Houven is taken out to be executed and his wife lies at home prostrated with grief. In the midst of a troubled sleep she has a complicated dream, and we are shown in a very graphic manner how in this dream she tries to piece together all the various tragic details of the story. Her troubled brain eventually connects up the incidents in the proper sequence, and awakening she sees a way out of the maze. Through a series of stirring scenes, the problem is rapidly brought to a satisfactory solution and the story winds up in the happy manner the public taste demands.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN FILM CORP.

PRISONER OF THE OWLS; or THE VICTIMS OF REVENGE (Four parts).—For revenge against Lord Wilmer, Secretary of State of Passena, the Owls, a secret society of gypsies, kidnap his infant son, Ralph. Twenty years pass by, during which time Ralph remains the prisoner of the Owls, who in spite of all Lord Wilmer's efforts to find their hiding-place, have so far evaded capture. Vera, the secretary's daughter, has grown up into a beautiful woman, and she is loved by Frank Burton, a wealthy young man of humble birth. Lord Wilmer, who is an extremely proud man, refuses to consent to the match, in spite of all Frank's father can do to persuade him to change his mind. At last, exasperated against the nobleman, Burton declares that he will avenge his son.

Later, the hiding-place of the Owls is discovered and the caves are raided by a large force of police. After a fierce fight the gypsies are captured, the only one to escape arrest being a man named Maxell. The gypsy's prisoner, Ralph, is not discovered by the police, but he manages to escape from his chains and after wandering round the caves for two days he at length reaches daylight. Fate leads him to Burton's home, and Burton, learning that he has been the prisoner of the Owls decides to use him as cat's paw in obtaining vengeance against Lord Wilmer. Ralph, who is unaware of his parentage, promises to obey Burton's commands under penalty of being denounced as a member of the Owls. Burton's idea is to introduce Ralph to Lord Wilmer as the Duke of Greville, hoping that the title will influence the proud nobleman in arranging a marriage between Vera and the nameless Owl. On learning Burton's cowardly plan, however, Ralph refuses to be a party to the plot, and fearing that the man will denounce him to the police he goes to hide in the caverns where he has been a lifelong prisoner. In the caves he meets Vera, who has been carried off by Maxell, the surviving Owl, and Ralph is just in time to save his sister from the gypsy's terrible vengeance. Ralph overhears Vera repeating a prayer she has learned as a child and to his brain their flashes a memory of his own childhood before he was carried off by the Owls. Thus brother and sister recognize one another, and escaping from the caves they hasten to their father's home. Lord Wilmer, who has been torn with grief at the loss of his daughter, is overjoyed when both children are thus providentially restored to him, and his declining years are spent in undisturbed happiness.

INTER-CONTINENT FILM CO., Inc.

ROME OR DEATH (Five parts).—The particular part of the world's history selected for this production is the thrilling struggle for Italian independence, which continued for sixty-four years and culminated in the downfall of Rome in 1870. The first four parts are devoted to the minor efforts of isolated bodies of Italian patriots to overcome the French soldiers during the years of 1867, 1868, and 1869. In the first scenes are shown some remarkable views of the Vatican and the various old gates of the Eternal City. The streets are heavily patroled and the citizens are held up and questioned, most of them being searched to determine whether or not they are carrying secret messages to the patriots. The meeting-place of the two famous patriots, Ciro Ossani and Canzio, is in the home of Canzio and here we meet his daughter, Elda. Canzio is finally marked by the detective forces as one of the leaders of the patriots and is arrested. He spends his last days in prison, a fact Elda does not know for several years. Ciro, learning of the fate of her father, risks his life to penetrate to the Canzio home, where he is able to console Elda in her loneliness. As he is leaving the Canzio home he is followed by spies, and the meeting-place of the patriots is discovered. The gendarmes surround the house, and when the inmates attempt to return to their homes they are fired upon, but in the confusion Ciro manages to escape. Elda, thinking that Ciro has been arrested, tries to locate him in one of the prisons, but without any success.

The next scenes show the patriots collecting arms and ammunition at Corese Pass, outside the Vatican. In this action Garibaldi participates, and his arrival from the island of Caprerar creates intense enthusiasm among the patriots. The Garibaldians succeed in reaching the city and make their way by night down the Tiber to St. Paul's gate, where preparations are made for an attack, which takes place in the morning. The Garibaldians, though in much smaller numbers, successfully resist the French soldiers for more than twenty-four hours, while the revolution extends throughout the city, but in the end they are compelled to capitulate. The next event is the attempt to seize Rome in an attack on the hills of Villa Glori. The Cairoli brothers lead this attack and both of them met their death in the struggle and of the seventy fho led the attack all but two were killed. A messenger, one of the fortunate soldiers, brings the news of their deaths to the mighty Garibaldi. This heroic struggle, however, was an immense force in welding together the patriotism of the Italian people and in securing united effort, for had not the mother of the Cairoli brothers said, "I have seven sons and I dedicate all of them to my blessed country." All but one made the ultimate sacrifice and the seventh met his death many years later when, as the premier, he defended his king from the stilletto of an assassin. A strong scene in this historical drama is where Garibaldi assembles his somewhat disheartened soldiers, rekindles their patriotism and leads them to an intense exhibition of enthuisasm where they shout in one voice, "Rome or Death!" The final period is that of the year 1870 culminating in the great day, the 20th of September, for it marked the downfall of any separate power in Italy, the achievement of the task the noble patriots of 1867 had set out to accomplish and also the partial realization of the dreams of the world's greatest humanitarian, Mazzini. This last part shows the political prisoners confined in St. Michael prison. Elda, with the aid of a guard by bribing him, succeeds in communicating with Ciro, who is one of the prisoners. She tells him she has heard that the regular Italian troops are approaching the city and that the French soldiers will be unable to hold out against King Victor Emmanuel's forces. The prisoners become impatient, however, and a general outbreak occurs, but they are quickly overcome and transferred to dark dungeons and hard labor. The burden placed upon Ciro is somewhat hard. He has been confined for three years and he is about ready to end it all when he hears shouts in the street announcing the arrival of the Italian soldiers. The patriot prisoners are quickly released. Ciro is selected for chief honors and he is paraded through the streets of Rome, but not without the faithful Elda. The final scenes show a panorama of Rome, the capital of a united Italy and also the massive statute of Garibaldi, defender of liberty on three continents, a naturalized American citizen and Lincoln's devoted friend.

WEINBERG'S FEATURES.

ODA; or THE MYSTERY OF THE WHITE ROSE (3 parts).—The president of the City Bank informs Detective James Bangs that burglars have broken into the vaults and have stolen $20,000 worth of valuables. While looking for clues Bangs sees on the floor the emblem of a white rose and the imprint of a lady's foot. A short time later the detective attends a photoplay theater, and after the performance he finds a wallet in which there is a card with the name, ODA, printed on it. He reads the address and in doing so, is approached by a handsome young man who claims the wallet. The detective notices that the young man has the emblem of a white rose pinned on the lapel of his coat.

His suspicions aroused, Bangs follows the young man at a safe distance and sees him enter a house. Quickly disguising himself as a telephone inspector he enters the house, and, looking through the keyhole in one of the rooms, he sees the young man with several others, all wearing emblems of a white rose, examining some jewels, which, from the description given him, the detective knows to be those stolen from the City Bank. Changing his disguise to that of a peddler of rugs, he decides to follow the young man and his accomplices, who have started to leave the house.

In his great hurry the detective forgets to change his cap of his former disguise and arouses the suspicion of the young man, who invites Bangs to his office. Seating himself in an armchair in the young man's office, the arms of the chair immediately close up and the detective is made a prisoner. The floor underneath the chair next slides forward and the detective finds himself in another room, confronted by two desperate-looking men wearing emblems of the white rose, who release him from the chair and lock him in the room. The next day, as one of his jailers brings him food, Bangs, by a clever bit of strategy, overpowers him and makes his escape. On his way out he finds the watchman of the bank, who has been made a prisoner by the White Rose band. The detective releases him and sends him to telephone for the police. But in the meanwhile the gang, becoming alarmed, flee from the house, and after an exciting motorboat chase escape from the police.

Some time later the mysterious young man applies for lodging at a hotel, and, seeing a young lady in an adjoining chamber leaving to go out breaks into her room and dons the young lady's clothes. He emerges, attired as a girl, and then it is seen that the handsome young man was none other than the notorious Oda, the female lawbreaker and leader of the White Rose gang of society rogues.

Oda meets a young man, who falls in love with her, and although she learns to love him dearly, her past compels her to reject his offer of marriage. Deciding to go away and atone for her former misspent life, Oda again dons her male attire. She is seen by Bangs, who starts in hot pursuit. Oda mounts a horse, followed by the detective. The detective, however, is soon outdistanced, and Oda escapes.

Several days later Bangs accidentally meets the girl in front of a cafe. She immediately jumps on a motorcycle which is resting at the curb and puts on full speed. The detective hails a passing auto and again is after Oda. Coming on a steep embankment, she crashes over the precipice to destruction. The detective quickly makes his way down to the huddled mass at the bottom and finds that the law has been cheated after all. Oda lies there dead.

PLAYGOERS FILM CO.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY (6 parts—Mar. 23).—Opening in Russia, the action of the play speedily transports the beholder across Europe and the Atlantic to New York and concerns itself with the theft in St. Petersburg, by a notorious thief, Don Plon, of the famous Romanoff diamonds from the Count Garbiadoff. The pursuit of these renowned jewels takes the spectator into the palatial homes of the millionaires, and into the underground dens of thieves, into the gold-laden ballrooms of the wealthy, and into the dark alleys of crime and death.

Every Exhibitor

in the territory covered by my exchanges should make it a point to visit them regularly to keep in touch with the remarkable features the Universal is releasing, especially the tremendous ones which I saw in the process of production during my recent visit at the Universal ranch out West. They are simply beyond the power of words to describe. Whether you are showing Universal films or not, you are WELCOME at ALL TIMES if you wish to visit my exchanges and witness an exhibition!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

196 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

'MEXICO'

The last chance to secure State Rights for the spectacular War Drama daily taking place in MEXICO.

All European and foreign territory is sold with a large share of State Rights here.

What territory there is left we expect to close out within the next thirty days. State Right buyers report MEXICO is playing to full capacity.

If you want the sure money getter, wire at our expense what State or States interest you and we will give you bed rock price.

220 West 42nd Street AL DIA FEATURE COMPANY New York

REMOVAL NOTICE

ARTHUR BRADY CO., Inc.

Removed from 124 E. 14th St. to 450 4th AVE. Bet. 30th and 31st Sts.

POSTERS, PRINTING, SIGN PAINTING, SNIPES

Post cards and everything pertaining to the advertising of moving picture theatres. Be sure and get our estimate on printing.

and the WHITE SPECIALTY CO.

could not do otherwise but follow, you will find us together on the fifth floor, with a full line of

SUPPLIES OF EVERY DESCRIPTION FOR THE PHOTOPLAY HOUSES

71 W. 23d ST. | Tel. | PRINTING AND MOUNTING DEPTS. OF
450 4th AVE. | Conn. | BRADY, STILL AT 120-122 E. 14th ST.

Don Plon, unable to dispose of the stolen jewels in Russia, flees to America. His former sweetheart, Maria Marino, fascinates and marries a wealthy attache of the United States Embassy in St Petersburg. Mr. Bulford, and with him also comes to America. On his death-bed, Don Plon, repentant and still unable to dispose of the ill-fated jewels because of their world-wide police renown, sends for Mr. Bulford, with the intention of having him restore the stones to their rightful owner, Count Garbiadoff. The crafty Maria intercepts the letter, and hastily going to Don Plon's lodging, she gets possession of the precious diamonds before the death of her former associate. Consequently, when Bulford, accompanied by a shrewd young detective, Dick Brummage, arrives on the scene, they are greeted by Don Plon's corpse, and the diamonds are not to be found. Damaging evidence they do find, however, in the form of a package of old letters which Bulford takes home with him. On examining them he finds evidence of his wife's relations with the dead Don Plon, and suffers an apoplectic stroke while renouncing her. Maria gives him a glass of poisoned wine, and he dies. Instantly Maria manages to fasten suspicion of the crime upon a young clerk, Frank, whom Bulford had quarreled with and discharged.

To further suspicion, Maria, with the connivance of her scoundrelly brother, manages to get Frank shanghaied upon a villainous tramp steamer, from which he finally escapes in a small boat. Although the criminals believe themselves safe, Detective Brummage has run to earth several clues that lead him to believe that Maria is really the guilty party, and not Frank, who is the brother of Brummage's fiancee, Mary. Working along these lines, Brummage introduces Mary into Maria's home as a maid to assist in piling up evidence against the adventuress and her brother. It is not long before Maria attempts to dispose of the diamonds to a certain notorious "fence," Mother Rosenbaum, who hates Don Plon and his woman accomplice because they betrayed her son to the police in Russia. Mother Rosenbaum has vowed eternal vengeance upon the pair, and learning Maria's true identity, she is about to avenge herself, when Maria, discovering that Mary is in league with Dick, makes Mother Rosenbaum believe that Mary, and not herself (Maria) is the former accomplice of Don Plon. Accordingly, Mother Rosenbaum decoys Mary to her house on the lower East Side, and imprisons her in the cellar, where she is finally rescued by Dick after a series of most thrilling events.

Meanwhile Maria has sought and won the protection of a powerful politician, Senator McSorker, and feeling secure in his patronage, appears at a grand ball at the Senator's home, brazenly displaying the famous Romanoff jewels. In the midst of the revelment, Maria is suddenly confronted by Dick, who is accompanied not only by Mary and Frank, but also by the Count Garbiadoff, who has just arrived from Russia. Realizing that the end has come, the adventuress swallows poison, and in her death agony rolls headlong down the grand staircase to die at the feet of her accusers. So at last the wonderful diamonds are restored to their rightful owner, and the triumphant Dick Brummage is united to his sweetheart.

VERO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.

THE GLORIES OF ROME (Series No. 2—RESIDENCES OF THE POPES.—The second release of the Vero Educational Society gives a very graphic and impressive but at the same time very charming view of the residences of the popes in and about Rome before the Italian government took the papal dominions. There is over a thousand feet of this subject, and all of the material is of the superb quality for which the Vero Educational Society is becoming noted. But the interest of the spectator will center particularly on that part of the film which deals with the ancient residences at Castello Gandolfo. The environs of Rome have immemorially been famed for their beauty, and Castello Gandolfo is one of the most famous beauty spots in Italy. Here are shown the summer residences of the popes and the wonderful artistic creations of the marvels of landscape gardening for which the family of the Allobrandi has been famous. This house has furnished more than one incumbent for the chair of St. Peter.

Particularly interesting are the views of the Lateran Palace. The first home of the popes stood on the site of this structure, which dates back to the fourth century when Emperor Constantine presented it to Pope St. Sylvester. For almost a thousand years the popes resided in the Lateran Palace until the papal site was removed to Avignon in 1309. Interesting views are also shown of the ancient Quirinal Palace, of the house of Pope Julius III, of the papal residences in Viterbo and Orvieto, suburbs of Rome, to which the popes often fled in the troublous times of the eleventh and twelfth centuries. The views of Viterbo show the spot where, according to tradition, Emperor Barbarossa held the stirrup of Pope Adrian's horse. The Castle Gandolfo is also shown. This place, like the villa of the Aldobrandini in Frascati, was a favorite summer residence of the popes and shows many spots of exceeding charm and beauty. The entire film is replete with valuable historic information taken under competent direction on the spot. The next release of the Vero Educational Society will be "Pagan Rome," which will be issued in three parts. It covers the entire history of Rome from Romulus, the first king of the Romans, 753 B. C., to the dawn of the Christian era.

Picture Theaters Projected.

Modesto, Cal.—Oscar Hogin and H. T. Crow are planning for the erection of a modern moving picture theater in the spring.

Needles, Cal.—C. A. Kohlhause is having plans and specifications prepared for a moving picture theater. The building will probably be erected within the next few months.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. B. Frost contemplates the erection of a moving picture theater here in the near future.

Chicago, Ill.—Kusel & Harris, 30 North La Salle street, are planning to build a one-story theater and store building, to cost $30,000.

Chicago, Ill.—S. D. Stoll and J. and L. D. Smith are having plans and specifications prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 75 by 175 feet, with seating capacity of 800, to cost $50,000.

Evanston, Ill.—Michael Hayes has had plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater.

Evanston, Ill.—Bodkin & Keane are having alterations made to their Star Theater, including the addition of a balcony. The improvements will cost about $2,500.

Quincy, Ill.—John Sanapole is having plans and specifications prepared for a moving picture theater.

Rockford, Ill.—Carl Noren, 223 Seventh street, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 33 by 112 feet, with seating capacity of 500.

Gary, Ind.—V. U. Young and C. J. Wolf contemplate the erection of a moving picture theater in the near future.

Gary, Ind.—Cosmopolitan Amusement Company, Morris J. Wohl president, are having plans prepared fo rthe remodeling of a store property into a modern moving picture theater. The alterations will cost about $8,000.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Edward G. Sourbier, 319 Law building, is planning the erection of a two-story moving picture theater and office building, 32 by 120 feet, with seating capacity of 560.

Indiana Harbor, Ind.—Michael Cohen and Mrs. Barney Cohen are at the head of a project for the erection of a three-story theater and store building, 120 by 50 feet, to cost $40,000.

Cresco, Ia.—A local stock company has been formed here for the purpose of erecting a theater building, 50 by 120 feet.

Fontanelle, Ia.—L. A. Brink has leased a commercial building and will remodel suitable for a moving picture theater.

Iowa Falls, Ia.—W. A. Middleton and D. D. Gephart are planning the erection of a moving picture theater, to cost between $10,000 and $15,000.

Osceola, Ia.—The Osceola Amusement Company wil erect a modern moving picture theater in the early spring.

Clinton, Ia.—Donlan Brothers will erect a two-story theater and store building, 94 by 116 feet.

Chelsea, Ia.—Frederick Prusha is planning the erection of a moving picture theater in the near future.

Hagerstown, Md.—H. E. Yessler is preparing plans and specifications for a theater building, 41 by 240 feet, with seating capacity of 1,500.

Boston, Mass.—Toy Theater Company will erect a two-story theater building, to cost $125,000.

Boston, Mass.—Agnes Shea has had plans prepared for alterations to her theater, store and apartment building, to cost about $35,000.

Worcester, Mass.—Bigelow Estate is planning to erect a five-story theater and office building, 210 by 125 feet.

Plymouth, Mass.—Thomas F. Crowell, 19 South street, Campello, Mass., is planning to erect a two-story theater building, 51 by 110 feet, to cost $30,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Herman Zink will erect a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 120 feet, with seating capacity of 400.

St. Johns, Mich.—Odd Fellows lodge have had sketches prepared for a two-story theater and Odd Fellows' temple, 50 by 100 feet.

Zumbrota, Minn.—John Pasaza is planning the erection of a modern one-story moving picture theater.

St. Paul, Minn.—Henry E Erickson, 68 Union block, is preparing plans for the remodeling of store building into moving picture theater, with seating capacity for about 250.

Fulda, Minn.—F. A. Christenson is planning for the erection of a moving picture theater.

Jersey City, N. J.—W. Bogart, 250 Jackson avenue, is preparing plans for a theater building to seat 1,100 persons.

Jersey City, N. J.—Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Stephens avenue, is planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 90 feet.

Jersey City, N. J.—Stephen Hoff has purchased from the Lignot estate a piece of ground upon which he proposes to erect a moving picture theater. The structure will be built along the most modern lines and cost approximately $40,000.

Paterson N. J.—W. E. Dickerson, 170 Market street, is preparing plans and specification for a $7,000 moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 300.

Asbury Park, N. J.—W. C. and A. F. Cottrell, Kinmouth building, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $12,000, for J. Walter Butcher.

New York, N. Y.—A. F. Enos, 13 South William street, will erect a moving picture theater, restaurant and dance hall, to cost $20,000. G. F. Kerr is the lessee.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Reynolds estate, W. M. Reynolds, manager, 31 Nassau street, New York City, are to erect a twelve-story photoplay theater, store and apartment building, 100 by 100 feet, to cost $250,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Joseph Spielberg, 1775 Pitkin avenue, is taking bids on general and sub-contracts for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 32 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Estate of Thomas Cuming, 86 Pulaski street, Joseph O. Smith, agent for owner, is taking sub-bids for altering a property into a moving picture theater and dwelling.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—P. Gluckmann is to erect a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 75 by 75 feet, to cost $20,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A company has been formed for the purpose of erecting a $30,000 theater building. John G. Sattler, 998 Broadway, and Frank M. Treptan, Brisbane building, are interested in the project.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Broadway Amusement Company, care Percy Lansdowne, Morgan building, are planning to erect a theater building, 46 by 105 feet with seating capacity of 500, to cost $35,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Grant Theater Corporation, White building, contemplate the erection of a one-story theater building, 52 by 120 feet, to cost $30,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Joseph Welte, 214 Locust street, will erect a one-story theater building, with seating capacity of 700, to cost $30,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Morton Amusement Company, 628 Ellicott Square, are to build a moving picture theater 43 by 111 feet, to cost $35,000, at 444 Connecticut street.

Long Island City, L. I., N. Y.—Mary L. Scattergood, 79 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, is having plans prepared for altering a church property into a moving picture theater.

North Tonawanda, N. Y William Hubman and others have formed a company and are planning to erect a $40,000 theater building, with seating capacity of 600.

Tupper Lake, N. Y.—Paul Prespare and W. A. Donovan will erect a one-story and gallery theater building, 32 by 98 feet, to cost $10,000.

Johnstown, N. Y.—Charles E. Gardner will erect a two or three-story hall and store building, 70 by 40 feet.

Watertown, N. Y.—M. S. Whitney will erect a one-story and gallery theater building, 78 by 165 feet, with seating capacity of 2,000, to cost $125,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Dakin & Kilpatrick, real estate brokers, have sold for William H. Yorke, premises on the south side of Market street, east of Fifty-third street, 75 by 214 feet, 6 inches to Ludlow street, where it has a frontage of 178 feet. The property has been sold for a consideration reported to be about $100,000 to New York investors, who will build a theater on the site, with a seating capacity of 2,500, to cost $200,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. Rose & Son, 5121 Brown street, has been awarded the contract for a moving picture theater on a triangular lot at Haverford avenue and Fifty-first street, for M. P. Dosse.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Herman Miller is preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater for John Knoell, to be erected at Kensington and Lehigh avenues.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Dixie Realty Company has taken out a permit to make alterations and additions to the building at 153 Levering street, to be used when completed for a moving picture theater, to cost $15,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—It is reported that a theater, to cost $200,000, is to Pittsburg, Pa.—Thomas H. Scott, Machesney building, is preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, 60 by 180 feet, to cost $30,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—H. S. Bair, Vandegrift building, is preparing plans for a one-story theater building, 62 by 160 feet, to cost $50,000, for Clark & Rowland, Empire building.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

ATTENTION.

L. G. L.—Ask for ticket to return, advise doing so at once; your reason for going is known only to me. I will not tell. J. safe. Write Aunt G.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY.—A motion picture theater manager, excellent advertiser, can get results. Desires to locate a permanent position anywhere in U. S. or Canada. Salary or salary and commission. Eight long years of successful experience, live and energetic. Has own original ideas. Strictly sober and reliable. Address all communications to P. O. BOX 213, York, Pa.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR.—Desires engagement. Expert, 16 years' experience. On road 12 years with own show. Past 4 years operator in largest picture theater in Connecticut. Reliable. Only moderate salary required. Address J. P. DIBBLE, 56 Jackson St., Ansonia, Conn.

COMPETENT OPERATOR.—Reliable, efficient, sober. Perfect results for seven years with every equipment. Engineering college, also mechanical and electrical shop experience. Splendid references. Superior results, salary corresponding. JOHN HOUSE, 110 Conklin Ave., Binghamton, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY.—A1 Theatrical Pianist and Director. Strictly sober and reliable. Last engagement, theater destroyed by fire. CHARLES J. W. JERRELD, 1205 Hampden St., Holyoke, Mass.

A ROUGH DIAMOND.—Author of six accepted scenarios, seeks clerical position with some manufacturer, where he will receive the polishing that might develop him into a precious stone. KOHINOOR, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY.—R. E. Languein, the Yankee Drummer. Experienced picture and vaudeville drummer. Have, and play, double drums, bells and feature moving picture effects. Can furnish orchestra of from two to six pieces. Best of references. Address care Grand Theater, Valley City, No. Dakota.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR.—Experienced, perfect projection guaranteed, non-union, good electrician. DAVID REDNISS, 220 West 146th St., New York City.

AMONG THE OLDEST.—Commercial photographers on the road today making moving pictures. Write for a date for this summer in West. GRAVES, the picture man, Winter Quarters: Willard, Col.

CAMERAMAN.—Technical expert in all branches of the trade. Employed by the best studios for the past five years. Wishes to connect with producer or concern doing commercial work, who desires a high-class man. C. P. J., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

OPERATOR.—Expert desires position anywhere. Experienced all machines, mercury arc generator sets. Guarantee perfect projection. State all first letter. C. C. NEWMAN, Madison, Wis., Gen. Del.

AT LIBERTY.—Manager, expert operator and electrician, 8 years' experience U. S. and abroad, would like to connect himself with a first-class Talking Picture Concern. Knows this branch thoroughly. Write T. P. 700, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

HELP WANTED.

CAMERAMEN.—Everywhere, except local, owning outfit, can learn of valuable service now being established for weekly news pictures. MITCHELL, 929 Tribune Bldg., New York.

WANTED.—Salesman in theater line, machines, chairs, supplies in middle western city. Experienced, live wire. State age, experience, salary. LUDWIG HOMMEL CO., 422 First Ave. Pittsburgh, Pa.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

WANTED.—Exhibitors of western Pennsylvania to write when in need of an experienced architect for moderate priced photoplay theaters. FLOYD MEALS, 1100 Woodland Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

PARTNER WANTED.—With $5,000 for establishing a first-class business; splendid opportunity; no competition. Weekly net profit from $300 up. Write G. S. 300, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

BEST LOCATION.—For picture theater in city of 65,000. Will lease ground for 20 years. Store room for lobby; entrance from best shopping street, and 73 x 120 feet for theater building. Lessee to build his own theater. T. K. HARRIS, Canton, Ohio.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANT TO RENT.—Or lease picture theater. C. HEIN, 2427 Dodge St., Omaha, Nebr.

THEATER WANTED.—In or near New York or Connecticut. Full particulars first letter. H. C. BARRINGTON, 148 Greenpoint Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THEATER WANTED.—In good live town of about 2,500 population. State all in first letter. Name lowest price. Address A. J. BERUBE, East Tawas, Mich.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Seating capacity 300 to 1,200—some suitable or vaudeville—guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation ordinance. HUME, Room 513, 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, concrete building, 416 seats. Heat, electric light and fans. Located on one of the best streets. WESTERN AMUSEMENT CO., 412 Caswell Block, Milwaukee, Wis.

FOR SALE.—Exclusive picture theater in one of the best railroad towns in the state of Iowa. Population 4,000, practically new latest improvements. Seating capacity 350, open to rigid investigation. Unless you mean business save your stamps. Address D. F. LEDERMAN, Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines, Ia.

FOR SALE.—Motion picture theater, seats 350, enjoying good patronage and clearing $60 to $70 per week. In town of 3,500 population. New machine, stage and everything complete; price $3,200. Hurry! Address P. O. BOX 342, Loveland, Col.

FOR SALE.—Picture show centrally located in city of sixteen thousand; place is worth $3,000, but on account other business will sell for less than BUSBY, Argenta, Ark.

half that to successful parties. Address A. L.

THEATER FOR SALE.—Within 12 miles of Boston, paying 50% a year net on the sale price above managers salary of $20 a week. Bought in trade; must sell; interferes with regular business. Address W. W. P., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE.—Picture show outfit complete; machine, screen, 150 opera chairs, scenery and everything necessary to run a first-class theater cheap. First man gets it. Address L. D. WINDLE, Leipsic, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED.—Moving picture camera, projector or printer. Address WM. MOGEY, Plainfield, N. J.

WANTED.—Two second-hand No. 1 portable booths in good condition which will pass all fire laws. G. L. McGOVERN, 166 Cranston St., Providence, R. I.

WANTED.—At the Star Light Park for the coming season some good picture service. Black tent about 20 x 60, Fort Wayne compensarc. E. D. MACFEE, JR., Petersburg, Va.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Edengraph Machine with rheostat and extra lenses, A1 condition, $50 complete. VERNON THEATER, Long Island City, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Second-hand opera chairs scattered over eastern states. We buy and sell everywhere, any quantity. Cash for your chairs. EMPIRE EXCHANGE, Corning, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Wurlitzer model CX latest style and as good as new; cost $1,650, also G. E. mercury arc rectifier. BOX 176, Moberly, Mo.

FILMS WANTED.

IOWA RIGHT OWNERS.—We will book your features. Write us. Rainey's Hunt, Fantomas series, etc., wanted. PRINCESS THEATER, Decorah, Iowa.

WANTED TO BUY.—500 commercial reels with paper, number second-hand features, also reel safe. Send list and prices. STATE FILM CO., 60 Bank St., Newark, N. J.

WANTED.—Education and Industrial reels. Send list and prices. Also picture theater. TURNER, Room 247, 30 Church St., New York City.

FILMS FOR SALE.

WALLA WALLA.—"Frontier Days," three new reels of the best Round-Up ever produced, bucking, wild horse racing, bull riding, bull-dogging, stage hold-up, wild buffalo and bear roping. Costs no more than ordinary film, plenty of paper and lobby display photographs. VAN SCOY & HAUCK, 309 Swetland Bldg., Portland, Ore.

FOR SALE.—4-reel feature, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." Plenty of one, three and eight sheets (mounted). Price $50. W. M. HOFFMAN, Palace Theater, Youngstown, Ohio.

2 AND 3-REEL FEATURES.—With paper, at ten dollars per reel. WILLIAM FEINBERG, 58 Willett St., New York City.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

CAMERAS.—First-class second hand Motion Picture Camera outfit in perfect order taken in trade, including tripod, extra magazines, F. 3.5 lens; originally sold for $135.00; the first order with deposit of $10.00 takes it for $80.00. MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO., 5 West 14th St., New York City.

FOR SALE.—1 Pathe camera with two 350-foot magazines, 1 Urban camera with two 350-foot magazines, $50 each. 101 RANCH, Bliss, Okla.

PATHE 1913 MODEL A.—Voightlander Heliar 3 star special lens, 51 mill, 2 inch focus with four magazines and camera case, also panoramic tripod. Brand new outfit. Will sacrifice for $265. Call or write "BRIFCO," 151 West 42nd St., N. Y. City. Room 602.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WRITE FOR.—Our list of educational subjects. ROYAL EDUCATIONAL FEATURE FILM CO., 145 West 45th St., New York City.

1,000 COLORED VIEW CARDS.—From all parts of the United States, $2. Advertise your theater on them; send for sample. F. A. HOLMES, Brewster, N. Y.

4 PART.—Colored Pathe, for rent $7, $5, $4 per day. Lecture free. Educational, scenic, and industrial. LUBACK, 1104 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE
Moving Picture World
Domestic $3.00 per Year
Canada $3.50 per Year
Foreign $4.00 per Year

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS....1672
ALAS POOR YORICK!....1653
ANNA LUTHER....1660
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATRES....1689
"CABARET DANCER, THE" (Kalem)....1663
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES....1704
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..1706
CAMERAMAN'S EXPERIENCES, A....1666
CHARLES FROHMAN, FILM MAN....1655
CHESTER BEECROFT....1691
CHICAGO LETTER....1683
"CHRISTIAN, THE" (Vitagraph)....1656
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....1680
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)...1681
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES....1685
DRAMATIC LICENSE VS. PLAUSIBILITY....1662
EDUCATION AND MOTION PICTURES....1686
EXHIBITORS NEWS....1701
FACTS AND COMMENTS....1651
FEATURE FILM STORIES....1742
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES....1664
"FULFILLMENT, THE" (Essanay)....1659
H. B. COLES....1663
HERBERT BRENON HOME....1691
H WINIK....1692
"IN MIZZOURA" (All Star)....1688
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES....1734
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES....1754
INQUIRIES....1675
"LEECH OF INDUSTRY, A" (Pathe)....1658
LICENSED FILM STORIES....1722
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....1752
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....1694
"MEPHISTOPHELIA" (Savoia Inglese)....1686
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE...1687
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR....1668
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE....1671
"NAPOLEON" (Eclectic)....1658
NEW EDISON SERIES....1665
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....1670
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE....1674
PRACTICAL LOW PRICED HOME PROJECTION....1661
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT....1676
RELATIONSHIP OF CHARACTERS....1655
SCREEN CHILDREN'S GALLERY....1667
"SEALED ORDERS" (De Luxe)....1654
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....1722
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....1734
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)....1742
"THE THREE SHADOWS" (Gaumont)....1660
THEORIES VS. FACTS....1652
TWO MORE STARS FOR FAMOUS PLAYERS.1642
VERNON GOES ABROAD....1669
WORLD'S BASEBALL TOUR....1661

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS
KIEWERT, CHARLES L....1760
REISINGER, HUGO....1638

ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT
AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO..1713
AMUSEMENT SALES CO....1737
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO....1759
BELL & HOWELL....1751
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO....1758
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO....1732
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO....1759
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO....1758
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO....1730
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO....1736
HALLBERG, J. H....1724
HOKE, GEORGE M. SUPPLY CO....1741
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO....1743
MOORE-HUBBLE CO....1751
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO....1735
PREDDY, WILLIAM G....1738
SPECIAL UNIVERSAL MOTOR CO....1757
SPEED CONTROLLER CO....1745
STRELINGER, CHARLES A. & CO....1730
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO....1736
WHITE SPECIALTY CO....1747

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS
ACME FEATURE FILM CO....1761
AL DIA FILM CO....1747
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION....1703
AMBROSIO-AMERICAN CO....1723
ANGLO-AMERICAN CO....1733
APEX FILM CO....1711
ARCTIC FILM CO....1753
BLINKHORN, ALBERT....1639-46
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS....1624
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO....1741
CONTINENTAL FEATURE CO....1630
CRAFT, P. P....1710
DE LUX ATTRACTIONS....1708 9
ECLECTIC FILM CO....1641
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO....1626-27
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO....1730
GENERAL FILM CO....1632-33
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO....1759
GLOBE FEATURE FILM CO....1729
GOTHAM FILM CO....1745
GREAT NORTHERN FEATURE FILM CO....1739
HEL-GAR CORPORATION....1631
I. S. P. CO....1719
INTER-CONTINENT FILM CO....1634
ITALA FILM CO....1625
LASKY, JESSE L. FEATURE PLAY CO....1645
LIFE PHOTO FILM CO....1717
METROPOLITAN FEATURE FILM CO....1731
MIDGAR FEATURES....1740
MILLER BROTHERS 101 RANCH....1756
MOHAWK FILM CO....1731
MUNDSTUK FEATURES....1728
PAN-AMERICAN FILM CO....1726
PASQUALI-AMERICAN FILM CO....1721
PLAYGOERS FILM CO....1620-21
SOLAX FILM CO....1714-15
VERO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY....1751
WARNER'S FEATURES....1622
WORLD FILM CORPORATION....1642-43

FILM EXCHANGES
BRADENBURG, G. W....1758
ECONOMY FILM CO....1738
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO....1752
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....1736
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....1746
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION....1623
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM CO....1738
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO....1732
WEINZ, ISIDOR, FILMS CO....1761
WESTERN FILM BROKERS....1730

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1727-55
ECLAIR FILM CO....1723
GAUMONT FILM CO....1629
NEW MAJESTIC FILM CO....1762
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION....1628
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION....1618
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. Insert

LENS MANUFACTURERS
BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO....1737

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS
EDISON, THOMAS A....1644
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1619
KALEM FILM CO....1650
KLEINE, GEORGE....1647
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1640
MELIES, GASTON, FILM CO....1705
PATHE FRERES....1635-6-7
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO....1763
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA....1648-49

MISCELLANEOUS
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO....1757
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO....1751
CINEMATOGRAPH ADVERTISING CO....1738
DAILY, BERT L....1738
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS....1749
CORCORAN, A. J....1738
DAVIS BROTHERS....1737
EASTMAN KODAK CO....1758
ELBERT, J. A....1727
GERSTLES, H....1738
GOLDEN RADIUM SUPPLY CO....1757
GUNBY BROTHERS....1759
HAUESSER, CHARLES....1736
HORSLEY, DAVID....1758
HOWE, LYMAN H....1741
ILLINOIS THEATRE SUPPLY CO....1738
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO....1737
LEAVITT STATIONERY CO....1738
MARKS BROTHERS....1743
NATIONAL THEATRE....1753
NATIONAL TICKET CO....1754
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO....1759
RAYMOND, J. J....1741
ROCHESTER BRASS WORK CO....1753
SARGENT, EPES, WINTHROP....1761
STANDARD FILMPRINT CO....1725
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO....1750
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE....1738
THOMPSON, F. A....1725
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO....1738
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO....1721
WESTERN SLIDE COATING CO....1743
WHITE, JAMES H....1735
WHYTE, M. P. ENTERPRISES....1729-41-43

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO....1761
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD....1732

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
DEAGAN, J. C....1753
HUME, T. D. CO....1741
SEEBURG, J. P. PIANO CO....1759
SINN, CLARENCE E....1761
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....1761

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS
AMERICAN SEATING CO....1761
ANDREWS, A. H. CO....1761
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO....1761
STEEL FURNITURE CO....1761
WISCONSIN SEATING CO....1761

POSTERS AND FRAMES
A. B. C. CO....1743
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO....1704
ERIE LITHOGRAPH CO....1757
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO....1732
THEATRE SPECIALTY CO....1730

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....1756
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO....1760
POWER'S NICHOLAS CO....1764
PRECISION MACHINE CO....1707

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS
AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN & SUPPLY CO....1757
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO....1741
GENTER, J. H....1745
MIRROR SCREEN CO....1753

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES
CUT OUT SLIDE CO....1758
ERKER BROTHERS....1743
NIAGARA SLIDE CO....1736
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO....1759

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO....1759

BRAND
NEW Davids' Glassine
Announcement Slide Ink
Put up in boxes containing six one-ounce bottles of different colors, viz.. Red, Green, Blue, Violet, Black and White. Price per box, $1.00. This ink can be used with an ordinary pen and is manufactured by the oldest ink and adhesive concern in America. Established 1825
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.
Main Office & Factory, 95 Van Dam St., New York
Western Branch and Warehouse
18 West Kinzie St.
Chicago, Ill.

The 68th St. Play House, New York City, seating 450, admired by all, uses the Automatic.

Features—

RAPID, SAFE and CONVENIENT.

ISSUES, COUNTS, REGISTERS and PROTECTS.

1800

Moving Picture Theatres in the United States and Canada

USE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTERS WHY NOT YOU ?

If you are interested in

Moving Picture Theatres
Amusement Parks
Baseball Parks
Dancing and Bathing Pavilions
Railways and Ferries
Soda Fountains

Write for Prices and New Booklet which explains fully

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK
3RD NAT'L BANK BLDG., ST. LOUIS

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 8,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
817 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

NO SATURATOR · NO ETHER · NO OXONE ·
NO EXPENSIVE CHEMICALS
EXHIBITORS BEST FRIEND.
NEVER FAILS.

BRIGHTEST
OZO-CARBI MOVING PICTURE LIGHT

1/3 Brighter THAN CALCIUM AT HALF THE COST PATENTED

GREATEST LIGHT OF THE AGE. A SCIENTIFIC FACT.

OLD LIGHTS IN EXCHANGE.

MOORE-HUBBELL & CO. 714 MASONIC TEMPLE · CHICAGO.

The Colosseum in Films

These motion pictures are the first in a gala series of truly educational films entitled

THE GLORIES OF ROME

The pictures were made with special permission of the Italian Government and according to instructions of W. Stephen Bush of The Moving Picture World, who was in Rome at the time. The Vero Educational Society has purchased the negative.

Every point of interest in the immortal edifice is covered in a most entertaining way, bringing back memories of the wonderful days when 80,000 spectators looked down upon the struggles in the arena.

There are four divisions:

I. The Exterior and Entrances, together with views of Rome from different stories of the Colosseum.
II. The Lower Floor and the Arena.
III. The Stories and Lodges.
IV. What was hidden beneath the Arena.

The total length of the pictures is three thousand feet. Title and all printed matter have been prepared by Mr. Bush. The titles are full and exact, and a lecture goes with certain parts of the film. The photography is of a high standard, and portions of the films are suitably tinted. For all further information address

The Vero Educational Society Room 704, World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, City
TELEPHONE BRYANT 578

LICENSED
RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Pathe, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

March 5—Politics and Suffragettes (Comedy).
March 5—Pa and Ma Elope (Comedy).....
March 7—Children of Destiny (Drama).....
Mar. 9—For Auld Lang Syne (Drama).....
Mar. 12—Her Hand (Drama).....
Mar. 14—Shorty Makes a Bet (Comedy) .....
Mar. 14—Blame the Tailor (Comedy) .....
Mar. 16—Gentleman or Thief (Drama).....
Mar. 19—The Restless Woman (Drama).....
Mar. 21—A Friend of the District Attorney (Drama) .....
Mar. 23—An Hour of Terror (Drama).....1000
Mar. 26—Never Shrink (Comedy).....
Mar. 26—Wifey's Visit Home (Comedy).....
Mar. 28—Battle at Elderbush Gulch (2 parts—Drama) .....

EDISON.

March 16—The Adventure of the Alarm Clock (Third of the Octavius Amateur Detective Series) (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 17—A Real Helpmate (Drama) 1000
Mar. 18—A Winter Holiday in the Bernese Oberland, Switzerland (Scenic)..... 400
Mar. 18—A Boarding House Romance (Com.).. 600
Mar. 20—The Double Shadow (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 21—The Message in the Rose (Drama)....1000
Mar. 23—Dinklespiel's Baby (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 24—The Borrowed Finery (Com.-Dr.)....1000
Mar. 25—A Night Out (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 27—The Brass Bowl (Spe.—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 28—Putting One Over (Fourth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series) (Com.).1000
Mar. 30—The Vision in the Window (Fourth of the Wood B. Wedd Series—Com.).1000
Mar. 31—The Mystery of the Laughing Death (Fifth of the Chronicles of Cleek series—Drama) 1000
April 1—Mrs. Romana's Scenario (Comedy).. 460
April 1—The Missing Twenty-five Dollars (Com.) 570
April 3—A Romance of the Everglades (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 4—His Comrade's Wife (Drama).....1000

ESSANAY.

March 11—The Girl, the Cop, the Burgler (Comedy) 1000
March 12—The Warning (Drama).....1000
March 13—Grass County Goes Dry (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
March 14—The Interference of Broncho Billy (Drama) 1000
Mar. 17—Oh! Doctor (Comedy) 1000
Mar. 18—Luck In Odd Numbers (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 19—Single Handed (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—Shadows (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
Mar. 21—A Hot Time In Snakeville (Comedy)..1000
Mar. 24—The Love Route Via Pittman (Com.).1000
Mar. 25—Bridget Bridges It (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 26—The Atonement (Drama).....1000
Mar. 27—The Three Scratch Clue (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 28—Broncho Billy's True Love (Drama).1000
Mar. 31—Canning Industry in California (Ind.).1000
April 1—A Queer Quarantine (Comedy).....1000
April 2—Dan Cupid, Assayer (Drama).....1000
April 3—The Wedding of Prudence (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 4—The Coming of Sophie's "Mamma" (Comedy) 1000

KALEM.

March 13—Her Fallen Hero (Comedy).....
March 13—Looking For a Fortune (Comedy)...
March 14—The Race for a Mine (Drama).....1000
Mar. 16—The Colleen Bawn (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000
Mar. 18—The Award of Justice (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 20—The Family Skeleton (Comedy).....
Mar. 20—Cypress Logging in Florida (Industry)
Mar. 21—His Indian Nemesis (Drama).....1000
Mar. 23—The District Attorney's Duty (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 25—The Refrigerator Car's Captive (Spe.—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 27—And the Villain Still Pursued Her (Comedy) .....
Mar. 27—Phosphate Mining (Industrial).....
Mar. 28—A Leap for Life (Drama).....1000
Mar. 30—A Passover Miracle (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 1—The Raid of the Red Marauders (Special—2 parts—Drama) 1500
April 1—Professor Oldboy's Rejuvenator (Com.) 500
April 3—The Confiscated Count (Comedy).....
April 3—Historic Tarrytown (Scenic).....
April 4—Fast Freight 3205 (Drama).....1000
April 6—The Cabaret Dancer (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Feb. 17—The Artist's Model (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 24—The Money-Sharks (Cines—Three Parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 3—The Diamond-maker (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 10—The Greatest Gift (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
March 17—Gypsy Love (Cines special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 24—The Barber of Seville (Ambrosio—Special—3 parts—Comedy).....
Mar. 31—The Price of Silence (Celio—Spec.—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 7—A Son of the Sea (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

LUBIN.

March 12—A Strange Melody (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 13—The Tell-Tale Star (Drama).....1000
March 14—Just a Note (Comedy)..... 400
March 14—She Wanted a Count (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 17—The Laziest Man (Comedy) 1000
Mar. 18—The Weaker Brother (Special—2 parts Drama) 2000
Mar. 19—The Secret Marriage (Special—2 parts Drama) 2000
Mar. 20—The Price (Drama) 1000
Mar. 21—So Long, Count (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 21—A Trip to the Moon (Comedy) 600
Mar. 24—A Deal in Real Estate (Comedy)....1000
Mar. 25—Above the Law (Spe.—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 26—The Game of Politics (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 27—The Puritan (Drama).....1000
Mar. 28—Detective Short (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 28—The Bottom of the Sea (Comedy).... 600
Mar. 31—The Knave of Clubs (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 31—In the Soup (Comedy)..... 600
April 1—The Fighting Blood (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 2—The Mansion of Sobs (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 3—A Man's Faith (Drama).....1000
April 4—She Was a Peach (Comedy)..... 400
April 4—The Eyes Have It (Comedy)..... 600

MELIES.

Feb. 5—Dippy on the Boston Dip (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Com.).
Feb. 19—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
Feb. 19—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700
Feb. 26—Winky Willie's Arithmetic (Com.).. 300
Feb. 26—Batty Billy and His Pal's Legacy (Comedy) 700
March 5—Winky Willy and the Telephone Crime (Comedy) 300
March 5—A Village Scandal (Comedy)..... 700
Mar. 12—Love's Oblivion (Comedy)..... 400
Mar. 12—One On Batty Bill (Comedy)..... 600
Mar. 19—Winky Willy's Private Show (Comedy) 300
Mar. 19—Cupid's Window (Comedy)..... 700
Mar. 26—Handsome Harry's Wooing (Comedy)
Mar. 26—Batty Bill's House "Rough House" (Comedy) .....

PATHE.

Feb. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 15—1914 (News)
Feb. 19—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 21—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 16—1914 (News)
Feb. 24—The Winning Hand (Drama).....
Feb. 25—September Morn (Comedy).....
Feb. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 17—1914 (News)
Feb. 26—The Devil's Assistant (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 28—The Parasites (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 2—Pathe's Weekly, No. 18 (News).....
Mar. 3—The Second Generation (Drama).....
Mar. 4—Hogan's Alley (Comedy).....
Mar. 5—The Brother Counts (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 19 (News).....
Mar. 7—On the Altar of Patriotism (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
March 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 20 (News)....
March 10—The Hunting Spiders (Zoology).....
March 10—The Picturesque Coast of Catalonia—(Scenic) .....
March 11—Abide With Me (Drama).....
March 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 21 (News).....
March 12—A Spoiled Life (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
March 12—Making Lace Fans (Industry).....
March 14—Against Heavy Odds (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
March 14—A Trip to the Great Nile Dam (Travel) .....
Mar. 16—Pathe's Weekly No. 22 (News).....
Mar. 18—Madura and Its Pagodas (Arch.)....
Mar. 19—The Wasted Years (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 23 (News).....
Mar. 21—His Wife Wins (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....
Mar. 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24 (News).....
Mar. 24—Trichinopoly, India (Scenic).....
Mar. 24—Workaday Scenes in a Flowery Land (Scenic) .....
Mar. 24—Strange Sea Water Creatures (Edu.).
Mar. 25—Whiffle's New Profession (Comedy).
Mar. 25—Old Streets of Cairo, Egypt (Scenic)
Mar. 26—The Constancy of Jeanne (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 25 (News).....
Mar. 28—A Leech of Industry (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000

SELIG.

March 13—Elizabeth's Prayer (Drama).....1000
Mar. 14—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News)..1000
Mar 16—The Better Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 17—The Story of Venus (Drama) 1000
Mar. 18—The Cop on the Beat (Drama).....1000
Mar. 19—The Evil We Do (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—Two Little Vagabonds (Drama).....1000
Mar. 21—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News)..1000
Mar. 23—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 7 ((The Garden of Brides) (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 24—In Remembrance (Drama).....1000
Mar. 25—While Wifey Is Away) (Comedy).....
Mar. 25—Doc Yak, the Poultryman (Comedy).
Mar. 26—Cupid's Caprice (Drama).....1000
Mar. 27—The Story of Cupid (Drama).....1000
Mar. 28—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News).1000
Mar. 30—The Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 31—The Midnight Call (Drama).....
Mar. 31—Fancy Skating (Sports).....
April 1—When Thieves Fall Out (Drama)....1000
April 2—The Story of Diana.....1000
April 3—The Bond of Love (Drama).....
April 3—In Amalfia, Italy (Scenic).....
April 4—The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial (News) 1000

VITAGRAPH.

March 9—Ginger's Reign (Drama).....1000
March 10—The Portrait (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
March 11—Art for a Heart (Comedy).....1000
March 12—The Way to Heaven (Drama).....1000
March 13—Mrs. Maloney's Fortune (Comedy)..1000
March 14—An Officer and a Gentleman (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 16—Auntie (Drama) 1000
Mar. 17—The Price of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Mar. 18—The Ghosts (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 19—The Idler (Drama) 1000
Mar. 20—A Model Young Man (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 21—Old Reliable (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Mar. 23—The Woman in Black (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 24—Her Husband (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 25—The Hall Room Rivals (Comedy)....1000
Mar. 26—Chanler Rao, Criminal Expert (Dr.).1000
Mar. 27—Millions for Defence (Comedy).....1000
Mar. 28—Never Again (Spec.—2 parts—Com.).2000
Mar. 30—The Silver Snuff Box (Drama).....1000
Mar. 31—The Helpful Sisterhood (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 1—Stage Struck (Comedy).....1000
April 2—Tommy's Tramp (Comedy-Drama)....1000
April 3—Bunny's Scheme (Comedy).....1000
April 4—The Crucible of Fate (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company

All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York

Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN

DEAGAN BUILDING

1776 Berteau Ave.

Chicago, Ill.

NO Motion Picture is the acme of perfection, or has the elimination of haze, and the softness so delightful to the eye which makes projection an Art but those that are shown upon a "Mirror Screen."

Our New Prismized, Snow-White Surface has the World beaten. We will give $500.00 to anyone who can produce a surface equal to it.

Write for our new catalogue.

MIRROR SCREEN CO.

F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND.

NATIONAL THEATER

Being Built at Portland, Oregon

Seating 2000. Opening in June

Contracting for Every Real Big Thing in Motion Pictures and high grade Musical Turns.

MELVIN G. WINSTOCK, President and General Manager

315 Selling Building, Portland, Oregon

REAL MONEY PAID FOR IDEAS

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's ARCTIC HUNT

Native and animal life in the north. A revelation of life and affairs in the frigid zone that has never been equalled. An intimate close range study of the animal life, including Moose, Caribou, Sea Lion, Polar Bear, Great Kodiak Bear, Walrus and Millions of birds on their rookeries. Glaciers in action, Icebergs the size of twenty-story buildings precipitated headlong into the sea.

Roping and Charging of Sea Lion and Polar Bear.

STATE RIGHT BUYERS 6 Reels

2 Great Shows In 1

Lithographs, handsome enlarged photos, heralds, Art slides and wide publicity. Everything ready for a high class show. Later you can split the six reels into two three-reel features for moving picture theatres. Territory going fast. Act at once.

ARCTIC FILM CO.

Suite 1209 220 West 42nd Street New York

BRASS POSTER FRAMES

RAILINGS

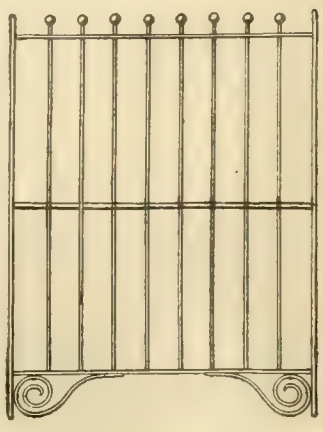
WINDOW GRILLES

PIANO PIT RAILS

KICK PLATES

Add immeasurably to the drawing power of your posters, and make a bright and attractive lobby. We make a number of different styles to meet your requirements, and our prices are as attractive as the goods.

Write to-day for our illustrated list.



ROCHESTER BRASS AND WIRE WORKS CO.

76-84 Exchange Street, Rochester, New York

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Mar. 23—The Turning Point (2 parts—Dr.)....2000
Mar. 25—A Decree of Justice (Drama).....1000
Mar. 30—The Town of Nazareth (2 parts—Drama) 2000
April 1—The Certainty of Man (Drama).....1000
April 6—Like Father, Like Son (2 parts -Dr.).2000
April 8—A Happy Coercion (Comedy).....1000
April 10—The Second Clue (Drama).....1000

APOLLO.

Feb. 15—Black Hand Conspiracy (Comedy)....
Feb. 22—Up In the Air Over Sadie (Comedy)..
Mar. 1—Village School Days (Drama).....
Mar. 8—Rafferty's Raffle (Comedy).....
Mar. 15—Dad's Terrible Match (Comedy).....

BEAUTY.

March 4—Italian Love (Drama).....1000
March 11—Closed at Ten (Comedy-Drama)....1000
Mar. 17—The Girl Who Dared (Drama) 1000
Mar. 24—The Peacock Feather Fan (Drama)...1000
Mar. 31—Sweet Land of Liberty (Drama)....1000

101 BISON.

March 7—The Yaqui's Revenge (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 14—From the Lion's Jaws (2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 21—In the Wolves' Fangs (2 parts—Dr.).2000
Mar. 28—Two Little Waifs (2 parts—Drama)..
April 4—The Lamb, the Woman, the Wolf (3 parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

March 18—The Adventures of Shorty (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 25—The Relic (2 parts—Drama).....
April 1—Wolves of the Underworld (2 parts—Drama) .....
April 8—Shorty's Sacrifice (2 parts -Drama)..

CRYSTAL.

March 10—Bimberg's Love Affair (Comedy)...
March 10—Baldy Belmont Breaks Out (Com.)..
Mar. 15—Kelly's Ghost (Comedy) .....
Mar. 17—Dazzle's Black Eye (Comedy).....
Mar. 17—Baldy Belmont Almost a Hero (Com.)
Mar. 22—The Fat and Thin of It (Comedy)....
Mar. 24—Snookum's Last Racket (Comedy)...
Mar. 24—Without Pants (Comedy).....
Mar. 29—Auntie's Romantic Adventures (Com.)
Mar. 31—Going Some (Comedy).....
Mar. 31—One Happy Tramp (Comedy) .....
April 5—The Lady Doctor (Comedy).....

DOMINO.

March 5—For the Wearing of the Green (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 25—The Silent Messenger (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 19—The Bells of Austi (2 parts—Drama)
Mar. 26—The Silent Messenger (2 parts—Dr.)..

ECLAIR.

March 8—Birds of Passage (Comedy).....
March 8—Orchids (Horticulture) .....
March 11—Into the Foothills (2 parts—Dr.)...
March 15—At the Court of Prince Make-Believe (Comedy-Drama) .....
Mar. 18—When God Wills (2 parts—Drama)...
Mar. 22—A Tale of the Desert (Drama).....
Mar. 25—Adrift (2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 29—A Marriage for Money (Drama).....
Mar. 29—Society at Simpson Center (Comedy).
April 1—The Caballero's Way (3 parts—Dr.).
April 5—In An Old Trunk (Drama).....

FRONTIER.

March 12—The Colonel of the Nuts (Comedy)..
March 14—His Younger Brother (Drama).....
Mar. 19—Colonel Custard's Last Stand (Com.)..
Mar. 21—The Sheriff's Duty (Drama) .....
Mar. 26—"Black Hands" and "Dirty Money" (Comedy) .....
Mar. 28—The Girl Bandit (Drama).....
April 2—Why Kentucky Went Dry (Comedy)..
April 4—Strange Evidence (Drama).....

GAUMONT.

Feb. 10—Tiny Tim and the Lion (Comedy)...
Feb. 10—Scenes in Costa Rica (Travel).....
Feb. 12—Simple Simon Deals in Antiques (Comedy) .....
Feb. 12—Excursions in Old Paris (Travel)....
Feb. 17—Two Miniatures (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Magic Salesman (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Bee Farming (Industry).....
Feb. 26—A Tiff—and After (Comedy).....
Feb. 21—Judgment of the Jungle (Drama).....
Feb. 24—The Missing Pearl (Drama).....
Feb. 26—A Tiff—and After.....
Feb. 26—Manana-Land .....
Feb. 28—The Better Man .....

GOLD SEAL.

Feb. 10—The Bride of Mystery (3 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 17—Honor of the Mounted (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 24—Captain Jenny, S. A. (3 parts—Dr.)..
March 3—By Radium's Rays (2 parts—Dr.)
March 10—The Twin's Double (Three parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 17—Discord and Harmony (Drama).....
Mar. 24—The Mysterious Leopard Lady (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 31—The Embezzler (2 parts—Drama)....

IMP.

Feb. 23—The Touch of a Child (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 26—Rounding Up Bowser (Comedy).....
March 2—Testing Bill's Courage (Comedy)....
March 5—The Opal Ring (2 parts—Drama)..
March 9—The Flaming Diagram (2 parts—Dr.)
March 12—Jealousy and Giant Powder (Com.).
Mar. 16—The Gambler (Drama).....
Mar. 19—The Silver Loving Cup (2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 23—King, the Detective in the Marine Mystery (2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 26—For Life and Liberty (Comedy).....
Mar. 30—Forgetting (Drama) .....
April 2—The Blood Test (2 parts—Drama)....

JOKER.

March 11—A Mexico Mix (Comedy).....
March 14—Won in the First (Comedy).....
Mar. 18—Won in the First (Comedy) .....
Mar. 18—A Visit to Mont St. Michael (Normandy, France) (Scenic) .....
Mar. 21—Mike and Jake Go in for Matrimony (Comedy) .....
Mar. 25—Pay the Rent (Comedy).....
Mar. 28—The Head Waiter (Comedy).....
April 1—The Luck of Hog Wallon Gulch (Com.)
April 4—(No Release This Date).....

KAY-BEE.

Feb. 10—Colonel's Adopted Daughter (Drama)..
Feb. 13—Arrow Maker's Daughter (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 20—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 26—North of 53 (2 parts—Drama).....2000
Mar. 6—The Path of Genius (2 parts—Dr.)..
Mar. 13—Desert Gold (2 parts—Drama).....
Mar. 20—The Trap (2 parts—Drama).....

KEYSTONE.

Feb. 28—Between Showers (Comedy).....
Mar. 2—A Film Johnnie (Comedy).....
Mar. 9—Tango Tangles (Comedy).....
Mar. 16—His Favorite Pastime (Comedy).....
Mar. 19—A Rural Demon (Comedy).....
Mar. 20—The Race (Comedy) .....
Mar. 23—Across the Hall (Comedy).....
Mar. 26—Cruel, Cruel Love (Comedy).....

KOMIC.

Feb. 19—Getting a Suit Pressed (Comedy).....
March 5—The Impostor (Drama).....
Mar. 12—The Yegg and the Eggs (Comedy)....
Mar. 14—The Moonshiner's Daughter (Comedy).
Mar. 18—He Who Laughs Last (Comedy).....
Mar. 18—Snowball Pete (Comedy).....
Mar. 25—After Her Dough (Comedy).....

LUX.

Feb. 13—An Elopement by Aeroplane (Comedy) 475
Feb. 13—Animal Export from Algiers (Travel). 450
Feb. 20—Shortsighted Miss Prim (Comedy).... 520
Feb. 20—Boating on the Seine (Scenic)..... 370
Feb. 27—Pat's Motor (Comedy)..... 595
Feb. 27—Lakes and Falls (Scenic)..... 310
March 6—Bill's Day Out (Comedy)..... 575
March 6—A Stone Quarry in Belgium (Ind.).. 420

MAJESTIC.

March 7—The Rector's Story (Drama).....
Mar. 8—The Stronger Hand (2 parts—Drama)
Mar. 10—His First Love (Drama) .....
Mar. 14—The Moonshiner's Daughter (Drama)..
Mar. 15—His Little Pal (Drama).....
Mar. 17—The Woman Without a Soul (Drama)
Mar. 22—Atonement (2 parts -Drama).....
Mar. 27—The Warning Cry (Drama).....
Mar. 24—They Who Dig Pits (Drama).....

NESTOR.

Feb. 27—One of the Finest (Comedy).....
March 4—The Voice of the Viola (Drama)....
March 6—She Was Only a Working Girl (2 parts—Comedy) .....
March 11—The Mexican's Last Raid (Drama).
March 13—What a Baby Did (Comedy).....
Mar. 18—The Way of a Woman (Drama).....
Mar. 20—Those Persistent Old Maids (Com.)..
Mar. 25—The Mountaineer (Drama).....
Mar. 27—The Wrong Miss Wright (Comedy)...
April 1—Cupid Incognito (Drama).....
April 3—Such a Villain (Drama).....

POWERS.

March 9—A Murderous Elopement (Comedy)..
March 13—The Faith of the Two (Drama).....
Mar. 16—Hawkeye and the Cheese Mystery (Comedy) .....
Mar. 20—Hands Invisible (Drama) .....
Mar. 23—Too Much Married (Comedy).....
Mar. 27—Her First Arrest (Drama).....
Mar. 27—U. S. Government's Instructions to Young Farmers (Agriculture).....
Mar. 30—A Bad Egg (Comedy).....
April 3—The Romance of an Actor (2 parts—Drama) .....

PRINCESS.

Feb. 20—All's Well That Ends Well (Comedy).
Feb. 27—The Hold-Up (Drama) .....
March 6—Her Way (Comedy-Drama).....
Mar. 13—Billy's Ruse (Comedy) .....
Mar. 20—The Grand Passion (Comedy).....

RELIANCE.

March 4—A Lesson in Bridge (Drama).....
March 7—When Fate Frowned (Drama).....
Mar. 9—Our Mutual Girl (Chapter 8—Dr.)....
Mar. 11—Caught in the Web (Drama) .....
Mar. 14—Red the Mediator (Drama) .....
Mar. 16—Our Mutual Girl (No. 9—Drama)....
Mar. 20—Messenger No. 845 (Drama).....
Mar. 21—The Coming of the Real Prince (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 23—Our Mutual Girl (No. 10—Drama)....
Mar. 28—The Smugglers of Sligo (2 parts—Drama) .....
April 4—The Mysterious Shot (2 parts—Drama)

REX.

Feb. 22—Woman's Burden (Drama).....
Feb. 26—For the Family Honor (2 parts—Dr.)..
Mar. 1—The Weaker Sister (Drama).....
March 5—The House Across the Street (Dr.).
March 8—A Modern Fairy Tale (Drama)....
March 12—Heart of the Hills (2 parts—Dr.)..
March 15—The Senator's Bill (Drama).....
Mar. 19—A Pugilist's Romance (Drama) .....
Mar. 22—Carlotta the Bead Stringer (Drama)..
Mar. 26—The Spider and Her Web (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 29—In the Days of His Youth (Drama)..
April 2—In the Eye of the Law (Drama).....
April 5—The Babies' Doll (Drama).....

THANHOUSER.

March 6—(No Release This Date.)
Mar. 8—Guilty or Not Guilty (Drama) .....
Mar. 10—Kathleen, the Irish Rose (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 13—(No Release this Date) .....
Mar. 15—The Eugenic Boy (Comedy).....
Mar. 17—The Cat's Paw (2 parts—Drama)...
Mar. 20—(No Release This Date.)
Mar. 22—The Cousin From England (Comedy).
Mar. 22—Their Cousin From England (Com-Dr.)
Mar. 24—The Miser's Reversion (3 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 27—(No Release This Date).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

Mar. 17—Universal Ike Has One Foot in the Grave (Comedy) .....
Mar. 24—Universal Ike in the Battle of Little Tin Horn (Comedy).....
Mar. 31—Why Universal Ike Left Home (Com.)

VICTOR.

March 9—Hearts and Flowers (Drama).....
March 13—The Honeymooners (2 parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
Mar. 16—The Acid Test (2 parts—Drama)....
Mar. 20—Because She Loved Him (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 23—A Woman's Honor (Drama).....
Mar. 27—Diplomatic Flo (3 parts—Drama)....
Mar. 30—Sealed Orders (2 parts -Drama).....
April 3—Granddaddy's Granddaughter (Comedy-Drama) .....

A. BLINKHORN.

Jan. 12—Jean's Evidence (Turner Films, Ltd. —2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 19—Motherhood or Politics? (Hepworth's —2 parts—Comedy-Drama).....
Feb. 23—Blind Fate (Hepworth's—2 parts—Dr.)
Mar. 2—Justice (Hepworth's—4 parts—Drama)
Mar. 9—The Cloister and the Hearth (Hepworth's—5 parts—Drama) .....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

See Americans First

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

The TOWN of NAZARETH

TWO PARTS

AN INTENSE and POWERFUL DRAMA

Driving Home with Astounding Emphasis a Fundamental Principle of Psychology.

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs. Heralds. Slides and Photos.

RELEASE, MONDAY MAR. 30, 1914

"The Certainty of Man"

An intense Western Drama depicting dire distress and misfortune, culminating in a tableau of happiness.

ONE AND THREE SHEET LITHOGRAPHS. RELEASE WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1st, 1914.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

MILLER BROS. 101 RANCH

REAL WESTERN FEATURES

Released by

WARNER'S FEATURES

MR. MANAGER, ARE YOU BOOKING THE MILLER BROS. 101 RANCH WESTERN DRAMAS? IF NOT, WHY NOT? THEY ARE AT YOUR DISPOSAL FROM WARNER'S EXCHANGES, LOCATED IN EVERY PRINCIPAL CITY IN THE UNITED STATES. ABSOLUTE GENUINE WESTERN FEATURES, SUCH AS COULD BE PRODUCED NOWHERE ELSE IN THE UNIVERSE. FEATURES WITH PUNCH, ORIGINALITY, AND TRUE WESTERN ATMOSPHERE, REAL INDIANS, REAL COWBOYS, REAL COWGIRLS—EVERYTHING REAL. THE ONE FACTOR (REALISM) THAT HAS BUILT THE LARGEST WILD WEST SHOW ON EARTH. GET IN TOUCH WITH THE NEAREST WARNER'S EXCHANGE AND BOOK THE ONLY REAL WESTERN FEATURES. ASK OUR TRAVELING REPRESENTATIVES.

OUR MOTION PICTURE ROAD SHOWS

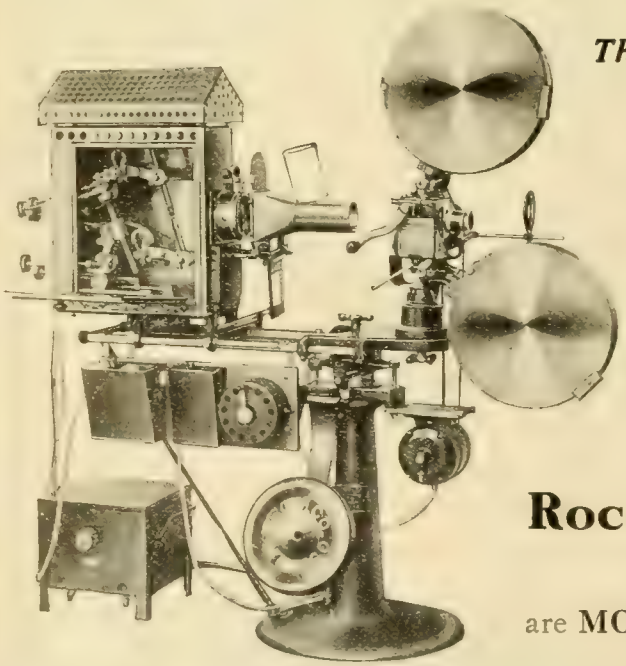
PRESENTING 1914 PRODUCTION OF "LIFE ON THE 101 RANCH, BLISS, OKLA," showing every detail of the ranch with sports and pastimes of the cowboys and cowgirls. Old frontier scenes with a real buffalo hunt. "101 Ranch Real Wild West Show." Everything shown from arrival of show train to pulling of stakes. Positively the only circus picture ever made successfully.

Secured through the following agents (NOWHERE ELSE)

J. C. Woodworth, Michigan	H. C. Williams, Fla. & Pa.	Calvert & Herman, Iowa	F. L. Bailey, Okla., Ark., & Colo.
Joseph Lewis, West Virginia	Andrew Barr, Miss., Ala., & La.	T. W. Bright, Kans. & Nebr.	Belmont Shields, Texas
Cleveland LaRue, Tenn. & N. C.	Chas. Shepherd, Ky. & N. C.	S. H. Flanigan, N. Mex. & Ariz.	E. P. Shields, N. & S. Dakota.

FOR BOOKINGS ADDRESS THE 101 RANCH MOTION PICTURE DEPT., BLISS, OKLA.

THE 1914 MOTIOGRAPH IS READY FOR DELIVERY



The Improvements Are:

Star and Cam of tool steel, hardened and ground. (Grinding done on specially designed machine to insure absolute accuracy.)

Bushings for both Cam and Intermittent Sprocket Shaft are made of hardened tool steel.

Lamp House Support Frame is braced to prevent the possibility of slight vibration.

Arc Lamp has been further improved.

The above improvements can be furnished for 1912 and 1913 models.

Rock Steady Pictures Long Life Sold with a Guarantee

are MOTIOGRAPH QUALITIES. Write for particulars.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

EASTERN OFFICE: 21 East 14th Street, New York WESTERN OFFICE: 833 Market Street, San Francisco

FILM COMPANIES CONTRACTING WITH US FOR THEIR

POSTERS

Erie LITHOGRAPH CO.
12TH & PARADE STS.
ERIE, PA.

get the HIGHEST QUALITY and LOWEST PRICES. MOTION PICTURE LITHOGRAPHING and PRINTING our SPECIALTY

SERVICE and QUALITY GUARANTEED

Get our prices before contracting for your next supplies. Get in touch with our NEW YORK OFFICE

F. J. WALKER, Jr., Mgr.
World's Tower Building, 110-112 W. 40th St.
New York City Phone, 7160 Bryant

WE ARE THE ONLY PEOPLE

in the world who can now supply

STAR WHEELS for Standard Machines

We have purchased the entire stock on hand of sprockets from the American Moving Picture Machine Co.

Write us for your repair parts.

Motion picture machines repaired, rebuilt and remodelled.

ELECTRICAL REPAIRS

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL MOTOR CO.
379 East 145th St., New York

AT LAST!

We are going to help you pack your house every day. Have you seen our Golden Radium Condensor?

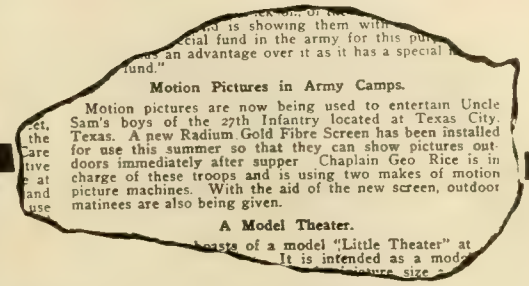
The only condensor that will give you a perfect sunlight picture on your screen. This condensor gives 25 per cent. better result, a sunlight effect on your screen. Unequalled! Unexcelled! Call for a demonstration or write for our circular.

Golden Radium Condensor Co.
71 West 23rd Street, New York City
Masonic Building, Room 812



...is showing them with ... special fund in the army for this pu... an advantage over it as it has a special ... fund."

Motion Pictures in Army Camps.

Motion pictures are now being used to entertain Uncle Sam's boys of the 27th Infantry located at Texas City, Texas. A new Radium Gold Fibre Screen has been installed for use this summer so that they can show pictures outdoors immediately after supper. Chaplain Geo. Rice is in charge of these troops and is using two makes of motion picture machines. With the aid of the new screen, outdoor matinees are also being given.

A Model Theater.

...boasts of a model "Little Theater" at ... It is intended as a mod...

Show Your Pictures In A Daylight House

INCREASE your box office receipts by insuring the safety of your patrons.

The Radium Gold Fibre Screen

will allow you to show your pictures with the house lights on.

The above extract from a recent issue of a motion picture journal proves our assertion.

Write department 17 for full particulars.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Co.
Nulsen Bldg. Sixth and Olive Sts. St. Louis, Mo.

Pittsburgh Office:
Suites 9-10 Hartley Bldg.
405 Fourth Ave.

New York Office:
2nd & 3rd floor Candler Bldg.
220 W. 42nd Street

You must buy a FOTOPLAYER to get a double-tracker

There is only one FOTOPLAYER

Allows immediate change from one music selection to another without discord or interruption and uses ordinary 88-note player piano roll.

Full Orchestral Effect BUILT FOR THE MOVIES Fits the Pit

REED ORGAN, PIANO, ORGAN PIPES, DRUMS, CYMBALS, CRASH, WIND, WHISTLES, TRAPS OF ALL KINDS

PRICE RIGHT BUILT RIGHT TERMS RIGHT

AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER COMPANY Factory and Offices: Berkeley, California

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

BARGAIN BUSINESS BOOMERS

To convince exhibitors of the drawing power of our UP-TO-THE-MINUTE SYSTEM to advertise in advance your DAILY PROGRAM, we have organized a 30 DAY CREDIT DEPARTMENT for the United States and Canada.

Our Slide Service is for the General, Mutual and Universal releases. 75c. is the price of Entire Weekly Set, including all two and three reel features of either of the above Companies. Filing cabinet and complete outfit Free with first shipment.

Special Slides for two and three reel features only, with synopsis and date to be shown, 10c. each.

Any Announcement Slides, your own wording, in either English, German, French or Spanish, for 10c. each.

Send us your "Dope Sheet," and we will do the rest. All orders must be signed by Owner or Manager.

We know that our Weekly Slide Sets are the greatest Photo-play advertisers in the world—and it would be folly to make the above offer if we did not have the proper goods to deliver.

CUT OUT SLIDE CO., EMERSON TOWER BUILDING Baltimore, Md.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

You SHOULD Worry

if your pictures are not the best. Competition is so keen these days that only the best pictures are considered by buyers. The unusually brilliant photographic results obtained on Lumiere film will make the buyers look very favorably on your product.

DAVID HORSLEY

American Agent for Lumiere Film

NEW YORK - - - Mecca Building
CHICAGO - - - Schiller Building
LOS ANGELES - - - Higgins Building

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 Vine Street Philadelphia, Pa.

Films for sale in first-class condition, 1c per foot. Also feature films from 2c per foot upwards. Posters for all films.

THE PICK OF THE PRODUCTIONS OF AMERICA AND EUROPE

Wanted, Branches in all the leading cities of the U. S. Applicants must have experience and be able to furnish security. 500,000 feet first-class films available.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)
Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex
LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Abestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS
PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE
A Few Slightly Used Machines
N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new

SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER

Manufactured by

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.,

Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan

Machines and Genuine Parts

Edison--Powers--Simplex
Motiograph--Edengraph

Sold cash or time

Send for new catalogue today.

Bargains in Rebuilt Machines
Photo and Poster Frames,
Curtains and Screens

Write us today what you are interested in.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.

"Everything from screen to booth"

160-A No. FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

Archer Ave. and Leo St. CHICAGO, ILL.

FILM TITLES

6c PER FOOT

POSITIVE PRINTING

5c PER FOOT

1000 feet, 4½c ft. 5000 feet, 4c per ft.

Negatives Developed Free

GUNBY BROS., Inc.

145 West 45th Street

NEW YORK CITY

Our Supreme Program Includes

FOR ILLINOIS AND WISCONSIN

ALL HELEN GARDNER RELEASES

ALL FLORENCE TURNER RELEASES

ALL KENNEDY'S FEATURES, INC.

ALL CRITERION FEATURES

A Feature Every Day or Any Day

GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.

POWER'S BLDG. CHICAGO

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height.....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—6 E. 39th St.

It certainly is remarkable how well defined the lines in a picture are brought out with

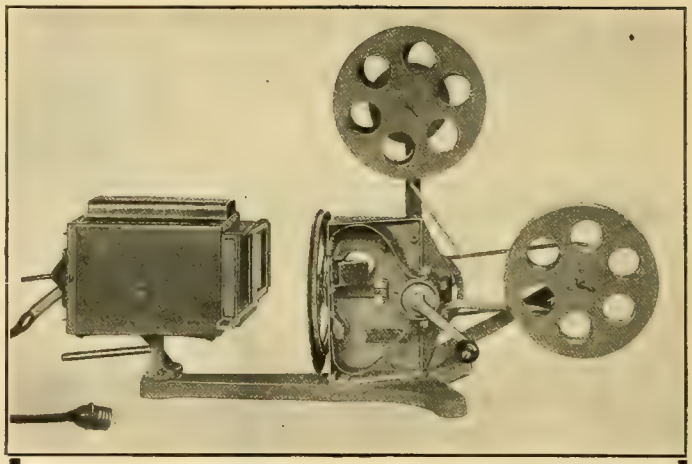
Bio Carbons

Without a question of doubt they are

"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. | MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. | SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.



THE PHANTOSCOPE is a motion picture projector, for home, school or salesman.

It uses standard film, which can be rented in every large city, and with hundreds of thousands of subjects to choose from.

Is fitted with lenses standard the world over, the same lenses found on machines costing three and four times as much.

Has a thousand candle-power lamp, producing a picture eight feet wide, at a distance of from 15 to 60 feet, in city or country district.

Turns so easily that a short, light crank is sufficient, for there is but one sprocket and one pair of gears; though you can get it motor-driven if you wish.

And it weighs but 18 pounds, is beautifully finished in nickel-plate, buffed oxidizing, and satin enamel, with felt feet which will not mar the finest table or desk.

Has patented mechanism giving 92% light efficiency, and a rheostat inclosed in the lamp-house, which is also a patented feature, of which it is intended that this shall be lawful notice to infringers.

PHANTOSCOPE in traveling case
Moael A, $75 Model B, $100

PHANTOSCOPE MFG. CO.

Bond Bldg. Washington, D. C.

ACME FEATURES

Mr. Exhibitor: If you are not doing capacity business you are not satisfied, what you need is something to "Pull them in." Our unequaled features will double your receipts. Call or write at once for list and prices.

ACME FEATURE FILM CO. 37 S. Wabash Ave. CHICAGO
GEO. A. HUTCHINSON, Prop.

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS

are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world. We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment. Distributors for Eastman Raw Film. Send for Catalogues.

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO.

Special Features and Regular Service
MACHINES--FILMS--SUPPLIES
50 Features and 100 Single Reels For Sale
WE ARE BOOKING HIGH CLASS PRODUCTIONS
Office: 133 N. Gay St. Baltimore, Md.

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Sargent's Photoplay Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. The A. H. Andrews Co. Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So
San Francisco Office, 730 Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

Steel or Iron STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 31-33 East 32nd Street, New York City. Telephone 1488 Murray Hill.

California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

Steel standards will not break.

The Wisconsin Seating Company, New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON

HIGH Quality

LOW Price

Opera Chairs

Immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.: New York, 150 Fifth Ave.; Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 69 Pearl St.

Every Day 1,500,000 People

IN Motion Picture Theatres

of the United States listen to the Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra. Have you one? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES
CINCINNATI

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on Motion Picture Seating

Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books
V-2, Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.
Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan

American Seating Company
"Public Seating Exclusively"
218 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

Please Don't Use Sensational and Unclean Films When the Same Rental Figure Gets You "IMAR THE SERVITOR!"

It is more than we can understand how an exhibitor will book cheap, unclean features when he can get one that Daniel Carson Goodman, the big author, wrote, and William Garwood, the most popular actor in pictures, "starred" in. Dr. Goodman, you know, is the writer whom John Macy, literary critic of the Boston Herald, said would have a monument erected to him on Boston Common in a hundred years from to-day. WHEN HE WRITES A FEATURE WHY PAY ANY ATTENTION AT ALL TO "CHEAP" FEATURES, from the pens of unknown authors? Why be bothered with features full of players of whom you never heard WHEN "IMAR THE SERVITOR" HAS A GARWOOD IN THE TITLE ROLE! Better see Mr. Continental to-day.

On the regular program is an "All Heart Interest" Week, with "ATONEMENT" 2 reels, Sunday, March 22nd—"They Who Dig Pits," 1 reel, Tuesday, March 24th—"The Warning Cry," 1 reel, Friday, March 27th. Every one a heart interest subject. Get in on "All Heart Interest" Week!

"NEW MAJESTIC"

"There Are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites"

All-Year-Round Studios: Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Offices: New Rochelle, New York.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME XIX

January to March, 1914

J. P. CHALMERS
Founder

PUBLISHED BY
CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO.
17 Madison Avenue, New York

Index to Contents of Vol. XIX.

A

Adrienne Kroell 931
"Adventures of Kathlyn, The" (Selig) 266, 926
Advertising for Exhibitors. By Epes Winthrop Sargent. 38, 162, 280, 404, 535, 668, 800, 937, 1079, 1227, 1376, 1516, 1672.
Alas, Poor Yorick 1653
Alec B. Francis 57
"American Citizen, An" (Famous Players) 292
"American King, An" 525
Andrew Carnegie Before the Camera 654
Anna Little Joins Universal 1531
Anna Luther 1660
Another Exposition Scheduled 1218
"Antony and Cleopatra" (Kleine-Cines) 150
Arctic Hunts 956
Army in Films 178
Arthur S. Kane 1076
At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs. By George Blaisdell. 52, 175, 415, 594, 679, 961, 1103, 1394.

B

Bad Law, A 1226
Balsdon Takes New Position 1395
"Battle In the Clouds" (Apex) 1364
Beatriz Michelena 1071
"Behind Comedy's Mask" (Pathe) 685
Belle Rutland 958
"Beneath the Czar" (Solax) 952
Ben Wilson 1069
Best Is Yet to Come, The 148
"Better Man, The" (Gaumont) 1241
Big Changes Taking Place 24
"Billionaire, The" (K. & E.) 1366
Bills Affecting Massachusetts Exhibitors 1390
"Black Thirteen, The" (Apex) 181
"Boer War, The" (Kalem) 1216
Bolters Confer 34
Boosting Pathe Pictures 1392
"Buffalo Bill" Picture Shown 1370

C

"Cabaret Dancer, The" (Kalem) 1663
"Call of the Traumerei, The" (American) 1214
Camera in the Arctics, The 1387
Cameraman, The 664
Cameraman's Experience, A 1666
Camera on the Firing Line, The 522
"Captured by the Redskins" (Belmont) 685
Caveman, The 1361
"Celebrated Case, A" (Kalem) 814
Censorship Proposed in Jersey 1101
Centaur's New Building Well Equipped 1239
Charles Frohman, Film Man 1655
Charles Pathe's Views 390
Chester Beecroft 1691
"Christian, The" (Vitagraph) 1656
Cinema Club Ball 420
Cinema Club Still Independent 34
"Cloister and the Hearth, The" (Blinkhorn) 1222
"Clothes" (Famous Players) 1527
"Comedy and Tragedy" (Edison) 788
Court Scores Vice Film Promoters 156
Creating a Market 594
"Criminal Path, The" (Ramo) 1509

D

"Day of Days, The" (Famous Players) 529
Day of the Expert, The 1213
"Death of a Geisha, The" (Eclectic) 933
"Desert's Sting, The" (Criterion) 1247
"Detective Finn" (Mfg. Film Agency) 1394
"Diamonds of Destiny, The" (Midgar) 1365
"Dock Disaster, The" (Apex) 685
"Double Shadow, The" (Edison) 1074
"Drama of Heyville, The" (Edison) 656
Dramatic License vs. Plausibility 1662
"Dream Woman, The" (Blache) 1508
"Duke's Talisman, The" (Gaumont) 394

E

"East Lynne" (Apex) 1535
Edgar Jones 57
Edison Touches Popular Chord 28
Editor's Confession, The 149
Education and Motion Pictures 1686
Edward Earl 291
Edwin Milton Royle 930
Edward O'Connor 1368
Ernemann Camera, The 58
"Evangeline" 662

F

"Fall of France, The" (Apex) 36
"Famous Battles of Napoleon" (Cosmos) 637
"Fantomas, the Crook Detective" (Gaumont) 1367

Faversham to Act For Playgoers....1531
Favors Increase in Admission Price....1104
Films in Education of Adults.... 924
Final Proceedings of Ohio Convention.... 791
"Fire and Sword" (Kismet).... 815
First American Censors, The.... 26
Five Reels.... 652
F. J. Carroll Will Make Pictures.... 54
"Fooling Uncle" (Beauty).... 522
Ford Sterling a Universal Star....1391
"For Ireland's Sake" (Gauntier Players).... 526
"For Napoleon and France" (Kleine-Cines).... 1326
"For the Queen's Honor" (Ambrosio).... 275
Fourth Annual Convention of Ohio.... 681
Frank Smith.... 158
"From Gutter to Footlights" (Apex).... 788
"Frou Frou" (Thanhouser).... 277
"Fulfillment, The" (Essanay)....1659

G

"Gambler's Revenge, The" (Pasquali).... 180
"Gangsters of New York, The" (Reliance).... 932
"Germinal" (Pathe).... 416
George Albert Smith Wins.... 663
Get Together at 'Frisco....1218
"Governor's Ghost, The" (Ramo)....1076
Great Historical Subject, A.... 954
"Great Mine Disaster, The" (Eclectic)....1215
"Grip of Circumstances, The" (Essanay).... 393

H

H. B. Coles....1663
"Hara-Kiri" (Apex).... 295
"Hearts Adrift" (Famous Players).... 927
Herbert Brenon Still in Hospital....1070
Herbert Brenon Home....1691
Herbert Prior.... 273
"Her Guilty Secret" (Gaumont).... 177
"Hermit, The" (American).... 524
H. Hirsch....1219
Hippodrome's "America" in Pictures....1510
"His Comrade's Wife" (Edison)....1364
Hite Engages Three....1366
Hodkinson, Iconoclast.... 816
Home of the Vitagraph, The.... 401
"House of Bondage, The" (Photo Drama).... 276
H. Winik....1692

I

Ideal Motion Picture Home, An....1225
Imperator Projector, The....1510
"Impersonator, The" (Edison).... 1534
Inter-Continent Film Company Begins.... 177
Interview With A. C. Bromhead.... 656
"In Mizzoura" (All-Star)....1688
"In the Python's Den" (Apex).... 527
"In the Stretch" (Ramo).... 395
Is the Nickel Show on the Wane?....1065

J

Jack London, Picture Writer.... 547
Jesse L. Lasky in Pictures.... 35
Jewish Religious Subject....1369
"Joan of Arc" (World Special).... 790
Joe Brandt Is Back.... 56
Joseph Fornas Visiting New York.... 790
"Joseph's Trials in Egypt" (Eclectic).... 983
J. Searle Dawley, Producer.... 531
"Judgment of the Jungle, The" (Gaumont)....1094
"Judith of Bethulia" (Biograph)....1242
Just Complaints of Exhibitors.... 784
"Justice" (Hepworth).... 929

K

Kempton Greene.... 958
"King Charles II" (Mfgs. Film Agency)....1368

L

Ladies' World Contest.... 56
"Lady of Quality, A" (Famous Players).... 153
Last Call for Ohio Convention.... 420
"Leech of Industry, A" (Pathe)....1658
"Let No Man Escape" (Essanay)....1067
Levine Slated for London....1247
"Life's Temptations" (Midgar)....1091
"Lincoln the Lover" (Vitagraph).... 523
"Lion and the Mouse, The" (Lubin).... 659
Living Genealogical Tree....1222
"Love Everlasting" (Gloria).... 277

M

Maine Exhibitors in Convention.... 957
"Man's Shadow, A" (Eclectic).... 654
"Man Who Came Back, The" (Am. Kineto)....1098
Man With the Bark On, A....1243
Mark-Brock Consolidation, The.... 391
"Marriage of Figaro, The" (Kleine-Ambrosio).... 655
Massachusetts Exhibitors at Springfield....1530
Massachusetts Exhibitors Fight Legislation....1099
Massachusetts Exhibitors' Special Meeting....1390
"Mephistophelia" (Savoia-Inglese)....1694
"Merchant of Venice" (Gold Seal).... 813
"Message of the Sun-Dial, The" (Edison).... 32
"Mexican Rebellion, The" (Ammex).... 396
"Mexican War Pictures".... 657
Mexico....1091
"Michael Perrine" (Ambrosio).... 953
"Million Bid, A" (Vitagraph).... 658
Miss Jane Wolf.... 269
Missouri State Meeting.... 683
"Modern Mephisto, A" (Greene's Features).... 529
Morgan-Universal Contract.... 952
Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, 33, 294, 420, 681, 791, 1099, 1217, 1390, 1530, 1687.
Motion Picture Trades' Club.... 421
Moving Picture Educator....159, 274, 532, 665, 798, 934, 1077, 1220, 1373, 1512, 1688.
Music for the Pictures. By Clarence E. Sinn....534, 796, 1072, 1671
"Mystery of St. Martin's Bridge" (Fidelity).... 684
"Mystery of the Fatal Pearl" (Empress).... 789

N

"Napoleon" (Eclectic)....1658
National Executive Committee Meeting.... 682
New Edison Series....1665
New Picture Making.... 181
New Star, A....1095
New York City Exhibitors.... 295
New York Operators' Ball.... 680
No Distinctions in Censorship.... 264
No Lowering of Standards.... 389
No Man Big Enough to Be City's Censor.... 932
Now for the Screen Club Ball.... 548

O

Observation By Man About Town.... 37, 161, 278, 400, 530, 667, 797, 936, 1095, 1223, 1372, 1511, 1670.
Oklahoma Exhibitors' Meeting....1218
"Old Curiosity Shop" (Blinkhorn)....1533
"On the Lazy Line" (Edison).... 275
Opened With Eclat.... 931
Oregon League Organized.... 294
"Over Niagara" (Sterling C. & F. Co.).... 55

P

"Paid in Full" (All Star).... 397
"Paradise Lost, A" (Gt. Northern)....1075
Passing of a Mania, The.... 653
Persistent Errors....1064
Phillips Smalley Talks.... 399
Photoplaywright, The. By Epes Winthrop Sargent....40, 165, 282, 406, 537, 670, 802, 939, 1081, 1229, 1378, 1518, 1674.
"Pickles, Art and Sauerkraut" (Vitagraph).... 267
Picturing Americans....1360
"Portrait, The" (Vitagraph)....1246
Previous Restraint, The.... 25
"Pride of Jennico, The" (Famous Players)....1071
Prigs Is Prigs.... 388
Prof. Frederick Starr.... 928
Practical Low Priced Home Projector....1661
Projection Department. By F. H. Richardson....43, 167, 284, 408, 539, 672, 804, 941, 1083, 1231, 1380, 1520, 1676.

Q

Quality's Deadliest Foe....1504
"Quo Vadis?" at the Regent.... 680

R

Ralph Ince as Lincoln....1102
"Rebecca, the Jewess" (World's Leader).... 291
Recent Legal Rulings....1075
Reina Valdez....1395
Relationship of Characters....1655
Reliance a Million Dollar Company.... 32
Rex E. Beach....1506
"Romany Spy" (Pathe)....1532
Ruth Roland....1215
"Romance of the Sea, A" (Broncho).... 392
Rothapfel Rehearsing.... 787
"Ruby of Destiny, The" (Warner's).... 815

S

"Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy, The" (Selig)....1507
H. W. Savage Allies With Famous Players.... 955
Screen Children's Gallery, The....1066, 1371, 1667
Screen Club Ball, The.... 818
Screen Club Has Mock Christmas.... 160
"Sealed Orders" (DeLuxe)....1654
Second International Exposition, The....1100
Signor Fornas Sails for Home.... 953
"Shadows of the Moulin Rouge, The" (Solax).... 417
Sid Olcott in Traveltalk.... 272
"Silver Loving Cup, The" (Imp)....1535
"Sixty Years a Queen" (Barker).... 51
"Sky Monster, The" (Universal)....1363
"Soldiers of Fortune" (All Star).... 154
"Soul's Tempest, A" (Pasquali).... 552
"Spartan Girl, The" (Pasquali)....1536
"Squaw Man, The" (Lasky)....1068
Standing Room Question Before Board.... 527
State of Missouri Sues Mutual.... 929
Survival.... 265

T

Thanhouser in New Studio.... 268
"Three Shadows, The" (Gaumont)....1664
Theories vs. Facts....1652
"Third Degree, The" (Lubin).... 30
Thomas Santschi....180
"Three Musketeers, The" (Anglo-Amer.)....1369
"Through Fire to Fortune" (Lubin)....1240
Too Many Cooks.... 546
To the Theater Manager....1224
"Triumph of an Emperor, The" (Savoia)....1073
Two Comprehensive Apexes....1102
Two Ideal Features Worth Noticing.... 528
Two More Stars for Famous Players....1642
Tyranny of Censorship, The.... 152

U

"Under Suspicion" (Pasquali)....1098
Universal Ball.... 293
Universal Has Fire.... 398
"Unknown Monster, The" (Features Ideal)....1070
"Unseen Terror, An" (Kalem).... 31

V

"Vampires of the Night" (Aquila)....1513
"Vavasour Ball, The" (Vitagraph).... 176
Vernon Goes Abroad....1669
Visualization.... 925
Vitagraph Picture Theater.... 786

W

"Waif of the Plains" (Frontier).... 179
Weekly "Masterpieces".... 520
When Features Are Failures....1505
"Whirl of Destiny, The" (Mundstuk).... 552
Who Will Help?.... 179
Will Barker.... 55
Wisconsin Organized At Last.... 33
Women and Children.... 962
World's Baseball Tour....1661
Worthy of Confidence....1212

Y

"Younger Sister, The" (Turner).... 267
Your Program.... 785

Z

"Zingo, Son of the Sea" (Ambrosio)....1533

Index to Stories of the Films

For the benefit of the readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, we have compiled a complete list of films with their dates which have been released during the past three months. Some of the films listed which have no page numbers indicate that synopses were not furnished by the manufacturers.

Licensed Releases

A

Abide With Me—Mar. 11 (Pathe).....1296
Above the Law (Special 2 parts)—Mar. 25 (Lubin).....1576
Absent-Minded Mother, An—Mar. 4 (Edison)...1148
Adventure of the Actress' Jewels, The (First of Octavius Amateur Detective Series)—Jan. 12 (Edison).....206
Adventure of the Extra Baby, The (Second of the Octavius—Amateur Detective Series)—Feb. 16 (Edison).....858
Adventure of the Alarm Clock, The (Third of the Octavius—Amateur Detective Series)—Mar. 16 (Edison).....1416
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 1—The Unwelcome Throne (Special—3 parts)—Dec. 29 (Selig). 76
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 2—The Two Ordeals (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 12 (Selig).....318
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 3—The Temple of the Lion (Special—2 parts) Jan. 26 (Selig) 452
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 4—The Royal Slave (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 9 (Selig).....590
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 5—A Colonel In Chains—Feb. 23 (Selig).....1292
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 6—Three Bags of Silver—Mar. 9 (Selig).....1292
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 7, The (The Garden of Brides)—Mar. 23 (Selig).....1562
Affair of Dress, An (Third of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—Mar. 14 (Edison).....1284
African Sea Birds—Jan. 7 (Edison)..... 72
After Death (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 10 (Cines)
Against Heavy Odds (Special—2 parts—Mar. 14 (Pathe).....1296
All for His Sake (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 20 (Edison).....858
All on Account of Polly—Feb. 11 (Pathe)..... 710
American King, An (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 6 (Edison).....580
And the Villain Still Pursued Her—Mar. 27 (Kalem).....1564
Andy Plays Hero—Jan. 14 (Edison)..... 208
Andy Goes on the Stage (Third of Andy Series)—Feb. 11 (Edison)..... 714
Andy the Actor (Fourth of the Andy Series)—Mar. 11 (Edison).....1284
Angel Paradise—Jan. 13 (Selig)..... 318
Anne of the Golden Heart—Jan. 22 (Vitagraph) 322
Antony and Cleopatra Jan. (8 parts)—George Kleine
Antidotes for Suicide—Feb. 9 (Lubin)..... 712
Arm of Vengeance, The—Feb. 26 (Essanay)...1006
Art for a Heart—Mar. 11 (Vitagraph).....1280
As It Might Have Been—Feb. 12 (Biograph).. 708
At Home With the Heron—Jan. 21 (Pathe)... 328
At Last They Eat—Jan. 23 (Kalem)..... 332
At the Eleventh Hour—Feb. 3 (Selig)..... 588
Atonement, The—Mar. 26 (Essanay).....1570
Attic Above, The—Feb. 27 (Selig).....1154
Auntie—Mar. 16 (Vitagraph).....1414
Award of Justice, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 18 (Kalem).....1414

B

Back to Broadway (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 17 (Vitagraph)..... 860
Barber of Seville, The (Special—3 parts)—Mar. 24 (Ambrosio)
Bartered Crown, The—Jan. 10 (Biograph)..... 202
Baseball Stars—Jan. 15 (Vitagraph).....
Battle at Elderbush Gulch, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 28 (Biograph).....1572
Battle of Shiloh, The (Special—4 parts)—Jan. (Lubin)..... 334
Batty Bill and His Pal's Legacy—Feb. 26 (Melies).....1156
Batty Bill's Honeymoon—Jan. 29 (Melies)..... 592
Batty Bill's House "Rough House"—Mar. 26 (Melies)
Beating Their Board Bill—Feb. 7 (Vitagraph). 592
Beautiful Leading Lady, The (Third of the Wood B. Wedd Series)—Feb. 23 (Edison)..1002
Beauty, the Educated Horse—Mar. 6 (Kalem)..1144
Because of a Hat—Feb. 28 (Biograph).....1142
Behind Comedy's Mask (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 5 (Pathe)..... 586
Best Man, The—Mar. 3 (Lubin).....1144
Better Way, The (Special 2 parts)—Mar. 16 (Selig).....1562
Between Savage and Tiger (Special 6 parts)—Feb. (Cines).....
Between Two Fires—Jan. 8 (Lubin)..... 74
Blame the Tailor—Mar. 14 (Biograph).....1418
Blinded Heart, The—Jan. 24 (Lubin)..... 326
Blue Blood and Red—Jan. 15 (Selig)..... 320
Boarding House Romance, A—Mar. 18 (Edison).1418
Borrowed Finery, The—Mar. 24 (Edison).....1568
Bottled Romance, A—Feb. 20 (Kalem)..... 860
Bottom of the Sea, The—Mar. 28 (Lubin).....1578
Brass Bowl, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 27 (Edison).....1568
Bridget Bridges It—Mar. 25 (Essanay).....1570
Bringing Up Hubby—Jan. 29 (Selig)..... 452
Broken Lives (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 12 (Pathe)..... 710
Broncho Billy and the Bad Man—Jan. 24 (Essanay)..... 330
Broncho Billy and the Red Man—Feb. 7 (Essanay)..... 584
Broncho Billy and the Settler's Daughter—Jan. 31 (Essanay)..... 448
Broncho Billy—Guardian—Jan. 17 (Essanay)... 204
Broncho Billy's Bible—Feb. 28 (Essanay).....1008
Broncho Billy's True Love—Mar. 28 (Essanay).1570
Brother Counts, The (Special 2 parts)—Mar. 5 (Pathe).....1152
Brute, The—Jan. 15 (Vitagraph)..... 202
Buffalo Jim—Mar. 2 (Vitagraph).....1142
Bunch of Flowers, A—Mar. 2 (Biograph).....1282
Bunny's Birthday—Feb. 13 (Vitagraph)..... 704
Bunny's Mistake—Jan. 9 (Vitagraph)..... 74
Bunny's Scheme—April 3 (Vitagraph).....1726
Buy Wool—Jan. 29 (Biograph)..... 460
By Unseen Hand—Jan. 7 (Selig)..... 318

C

Cabaret Dancer, The (Special—2 parts)—April 6 (Kalem).....1732
Calling of Jim Barton, The—Feb. 14 (Essanay) 712
Call of the Footlights, The—Jan. 28 (Edison).. 576
Card of Mystery, The—Jan. 20 (Lubin)..... 324
Canning Industry In California Mar. 31 (Essanary).....1722
Cast of the Die, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 16 (Essanay)..... 204
Catch of the Season, The—Feb. 3 (Lubin)..... 580
Cathedral and Leaning Tower of Pisa, The Mar. 11 (Selig).....
Caught With the Goods (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 3 (Vitagraph)..... 582
Celebrated Case, A (Special—4 parts)—Feb. (Kalem).....
Chains of Bondage (Special 2 parts)—Mar. 6 (Essanay).....1148
Chains of Honor, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 14 (Pathe)..... 710
Chanler Rao, Criminal Expert—Mar. 26 (Vitagraph).....1566
Change in Baggage Checks, A—Feb. 27 (Vitagraph).....1004
Charmed Arrow, The—Jan. 21 (Selig)..... 450
Chasing the Smugglers (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 18 (Kalem)..... 858
Cheese Mining—Feb. 25 (Edison).....1002
Chest of Fortune, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 2 (Kalem).....1142
Children of Destiny—Mar. 7 (Biograph).....1282
Children of the Feud (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 14 (Vitagraph)..... 706
Chocolate Dynamite—Feb. 28 (Biograph).....1142
Chronicles of Cleek, Series No. 3 (The Mystery of the Talking Wire)—Jan. 27 (Edison)... 576
Chronicles of Cleek, Series No. 4 (The Mystery of the Ladder of Light)—Feb. 24 (Edison).1002
Chronicles of Cleek Series, No. 5 (The Mystery of the Laughing Death)—Mar. 31 (Edison).1722
Colleen Bawn, The (Special—3 parts)—Mar. 16 (Kalem).....1414
Colonel Heeza Liar's African Hunt—Jan. 14 (Pathe)..... 208
Colonal Heeza Liar Shipwrecked—Mar. 18 (Pathe).....1422
Colonel In Chains, A (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 5)—Feb. 23 (Selig).....1292
Coming of Sophie's "Mamma"—April 4 (Essanay).....1722
Comedy and Tragedy (Special 2 parts)—Mar. 6 (Edison).....1150
Concentration—Jan. 12 (Biograph)..... 332
Confiscated Count—April 3 (Kalem).....1730
Conqueror, The—Jan. 20 (Essanay)..... 330
Conquest of Man, The—Mar. 5 (Essanay).....1148
Conscience and the Temptress—Jan. 14 (Selig). 320
Conspirators, The—Jan. 27 (Selig)..... 450
Constancy of Jeanne, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 26 (Pathe).....1576
Convict's Story, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 2 (Kalem)..... 590
Coon Town Suffragettes—Feb. 28 (Lubin)..... 1012
Cop On the Beat, The—Mar. 18 (Selig)..... 1426
Counter Melody, The—Mar. 10 (Essanay)..... 1288
Countess and the Burglar, The—Mar. 4 (Selig).1289
County Seat War, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 9 (Kalem)..... 706
Courting Betty's Beau—Feb. 18 (Edison)..... 858
Crawfishing—Feb. 25 (Vitagraph).....1004
Criminology and Reform—Feb. 21 (Biograph).. 868
Cruel Revenge, A (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 11 (Lubin).....1284
Crucible of Fate, The (Special—2 parts)—April 4 (Vitagraph).....1728
Cupid's Caprice—Mar. 26 (Selig).....1562
Cupid's Window—Mar. 19 (Melies).....
Cutey's Vacation—Jan. 16 (Vitagraph)..... 202
Cynic, The—Feb. 24 (Selig).....1154
Cypress Logging in Florida—Mar. 20 (Kalem).1414

D

Dan Cupid, Assayer—April 2 (Essanay).....1722
Dangerous Case, A—Mar. 10 (Lubin).....1284
Dawn and Twilight—Feb. 3 (Essanay)..... 584
Deacon Billington's Downfall (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 16 (Edison)..... 574
Deal in Real Estate, A—Mar. 24 (Lubin).....1576
Decoration Day at Old Soldiers' Home—Jan. 23 (Vitagraph)
Delayed Special, The—Feb. 28 (Kalem).....1006
Desperate Chance, A—Feb. 27 (Lubin).....1012
Desperate Hero, A—Feb. 19 (Biograph)..... 868
Detective Short—Mar. 28 (Lubin).....1578
Devil's Assistant, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 26 (Pathe).....1008
Diana's Dress Reform—Jan. 7 (Vitagraph)..... 72
Dilemma, The—Feb. 5 (Biograph)..... 592
Dinkelspiel's Baby—Mar. 23 (Edison).....1568
Dippy On the Boston Dip—Feb. 5 (Melies)..... 708
Dishing Dick's Dishwasher—Jan. 7 (Pathe).... 78
District Attorney's Duty, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 23 (Kalem).....1562
Doctor Polly (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 24 (Vitagraph).....1002
Doc Yak, Moving Picture Artist—Jan. 23 (Selig) 450
Doc Yak, The Poultryman—Mar. 25 (Selig)...
Dolly of the Dailies Series, No. 1 (The Perfect Truth)—Jan. 31 (Edison)..... 578
Dolly of the Dailies Series, No. 2 (The Ghost of Mother Eve)—Feb. 28 (Edison).....1002
Dolly of the Dailies Series, No. 3 (An Affair of Honor)—Mar. 14 (Edison).....1284
Dolly of the Dailies Series, No. 4 (Putting One Over)—Mar. 28 (Edison).....1568
Double Shadow, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 20 (Edison).....1418
Down Lone Gap Way—Jan. 13 (Pathe)..... 208
Drama In Heyville, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 27 (Edison).....1002
Drudge, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 28 (Vitagraph).....1004

E

Elizabeth's Prayer—Mar. 13 (Selig).....1292
Engineer's Revenge, The—Jan. 9 (Lubin)..... 76
Eternal Duel, The—Jan. 19 (Lubin)..... 324
Evil We Do, The—Mar. 19 (Selig).....1426
Eyes Have It, The—April 4 (Lubin).....1730
Explosive "D"—Jan. 24 (Kalem)..... 332

F

Fable and Its Moral, A—Feb. 19 (Melies).....1006
Faddists, The—Feb. 7 (Biograph)..... 592
Fallen Angel, The—Jan. 31 (Biograph)..... 460
Family Skeleton, The—Mar. 20 (Kalem).....1414
Fancy Skating—Mar. 31 (Selig).....
Fast Freight 3265—April 4 (Kalem).....1730
Fatal Clues, The—Feb. 14 (Kalem)..... 706
Father's Temper—Feb. 28 (Lubin).....1012
Fat Man's Burden, The—Feb. 4 (Pathe)..... 586
Fatty On the Job—Feb. 18 (Vitagraph)..... 860
Female Book Agent, The—Feb. 21 (Lubin).... 864
Fighting Blood, The (Special—2 parts)—April 1 (Lubin).....1728
First Endorsement, The—Feb. 19 (Vitagraph).. 860
Fitzhugh's Ride (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 12 (Lubin)..... 712
Flood On the Dal River—Feb. 14 (Kalem)..... 708
Foot of Romance, A—Jan. 7 (Essanay)..... 76
For Auld Lang Syne—Mar. 9 (Biograph).....1418
Four-Footed Desperado, A—Mar. 4 (Edison)....1150
Francine—Jan. 5 (Vitagraph)..... 72
Friend In Need, A—Jan. 22 (Selig)..... 450
Friend of the District Attorney, A—Mar. 21 (Biograph).....1572
Fulfillment, The (Special—3 parts)—April 2 (Essanay).....1722

G

Gambler's Way, A—Feb. 5 (Essanay)..... 584
Game of Politics, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 26 (Lubin).....1578
Garden of Brides, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 7)—Mar. 23 (Selig).....1562
Gentleman or Thief—Mar. 16 (Biograph).....1572
Germinal: or the Toll of Labor (Special—5 parts)—Feb. (Pathe).....1014
Getting Even—Feb. 17 (Lubin)..... 862
Ghost of Mother Eve, The (Second of Dolly of the Dailies Series)—Feb. 28 (Edison).....1002
Ghosts, The—Mar. 18 (Vitagraph).....1414
Ginger's Reign—Mar. 9 (Vitagraph).....1280
Girl at the Curtain, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 30 (Essanay)..... 448
Girl In the Middy, The—Jan. 5 (Edison)..... 72
Girl, the Cop and the Burglar, The—Mar. 11 (Essanay).....1288
God's Warning—Jan. 24 (Pathe)..... 328
Good Pals (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 17 (Pathe) 208
Grass County Goes Dry (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 13 (Essanay).....1289
Greatest Gift, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 10 (Cines).....1289
Grip of Circumstances, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 6 (Essanay)..... 584
Gun Behind the Man, The—Feb. 13 (Kalem).. 706
Gypsy Love (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 17 (Cines)

H

Hall Room Rivals, The—Mar. 25 (Vitagraph)..1566
Hand Print Mystery, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 4 (Kalem)..... 590
Hand That Rocks the Cradle, The—Jan. 13 (Essanay)..... 204
Handsome Harry's Wooing—Mar. 26 (Melies)..
Hear No Evil—Feb. 24 (Essanay).....1006
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—Mar. 14 (Selig)..
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—Mar. 21 (Selig)..
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—Mar. 28 (Selig)..
Heart of a Gypsy, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 13 (Cines)..... 76
Heart of Maggie Malone, The—Feb. 4 (Selig).. 588
Hearts and Flowers—Jan. 6 (Essanay)..... 76
Hearts of Women (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 24 (Vitagraph)..... 322
Helpful Sisterhood, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 31 (Vitagraph).....1726
Her Fallen Hero—Mar. 13 (Kalem).....1280
Her Father's Silent Partner—Feb. 23 (Biograph).....1142
Her Hand—Mar. 12 (Biograph).....1418
Her Husband (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 24 (Vitagraph).....1566
Her Husband's Friend (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 7 (Kalem)..... 80

Her Old Teacher—Feb. 16 (Biograph)..... 868
Hero, The—Feb. 25 (Vitagraph).....1004
Her Side-Show Sweetheart -Feb. 7 (Lubin)... 582
Her Wayward Son—Feb. 2 (Lubin)..... 580
Hills of Peace, The—Jan. 8 (Essanay)..... 76
Hiram's Hotel—Mar. 6 (Kalem).....1144
His Comrade's Wife—April 4 (Edison).....1722
His Excellency—Jan. 27 (Lubin).....454
His Father's House—Jan. 8 (Biograph)..... 202
His Fireman's Conscience—Jan. 26 (Biograph). 460
His Grandchild—Feb. 14 (Edison)..... 714
His Guiding Spirit—Jan. 20 (Selig)..... 450
His Indian Nemesis—Mar. 21 (Kalem).....1414
His Little Page—Feb. 20 (Vitagraph)..... 862
His Wife (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 5 (Lubin).1146
His Wife Wins (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 21 (Pathe) 1422
Historic Old Tarrytown—April 3 (Kalem).....1730
Hobo Philosopher, A—Feb. 19 (Melies).....1006
Hogan's Alley—Mar. 4 (Pathe).....1152
Hopi Raiders, The—Mar. 7 (Kalem).....1144
Hot Time In Snakeville, A—Mar. 21 (Essanay).1420
Hour and the Man, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 9 (Essanay)..... 78
Hour of Terror, An—Mar. 23 (Biograph).....1724
House of Fear, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 19 (Lubin) 862
How Bobbie Called Her Bluff—Jan. 28 (Edison) 576
How Burke and Burke Made Good—Feb. 4 (Vitagraph) 582
How God Came to Sonny Boy—Feb. 2 (Vitagraph) 582
How the Earth Was Carpeted—Feb. 2 (Edison) 578
How They Struck Oil—Jan. 15 (Biograph)..... 332
Hunting Spiders, The—Mar. 10 (Pathe).....1296
Husband's Experiment, The—Jan. 24 (Biograph) 460

I

Idler, The—Mar. 19 (Vitagraph).....1414
If It Were Not For Polly—Feb. 2 (Biograph). 592
Indian Ambuscade, The—Feb. 7 (Kalem)..... 592
Indian Blood (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 12 (Kalem) 204
Indian Fate (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 11 (Kalem) 706
Indian's Honor, An—Feb. 21 (Kalem)..... 860
In Mysterious Ways—Jan. 16 (Lubin)..... 212
Innocent Victim, An—Feb. 17 (Lubin)..... 862
Insects that Mimic—Jan. 20 (Pathe)..... 326
Inscription, The—Jan. 13 (Lubin)..... 210
Interference of Broncho Billy—Mar. 14 (Essanay) 1289
In the Dredger's Claw—Feb. 20 (Lubin)..... 864
In the Gambler's Web (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 4 (Lubin) 1146
In the Mesh of Her Hair (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 7 (Pathe)..... 588
In the Old Attic—Feb. 23 (Vitagraph).....1002
In the Soup—Mar. 31 (Lubin).....1728
In Remembrance—Mar. 24 (Selig).....1562
Into Society and Out—Feb. 4 (Essanay)..... 584
Intrigue, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 4 (Kalem) 1142
Iron and Steel (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 21 (Vitagraph) 862
Italian Games and Dances—Feb. 6 (Selig).....
Italian Love—Feb. 19 (Essanay)..... 864

J

Janitor's Flirtation, The—Jan. 19 (Edison)..... 574
Janitor's Revenge, The—Jan. 5 (Biograph)..... 202
Jerry's Uncle Namesake (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 6 (Vitagraph)..... 202
Joke on Jane, The—Jan. 9 (Kalem)..... 80
Just a Note—Mar. 14 (Lubin).....1288

K

Kid Pink and the Maharajah—Mar. 12 (Selig).1290
King Baby's Birthday—Feb. 25 (Selig).....1154
Knave of Clubs—Mar. 31 (Lubin).....1728

L

Last Scene of All, The—Jan. 17 (Edison)..... 574
Laziest Man, The—Mar. 17 (Lubin).....1422
Leap For Life, A—Mar. 28 (Kalem).....1564
Leech of Industry, A (Special—3 parts)—Mar. 28 (Pathe) 1576
Let No Man Escape (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 27 (Essanay) 1008
Lincoln the Lover—Feb. 5 (Vitagraph)..... 582
Lion and the Mouse, The (Special—6 parts)—Jan. (Lubin) 334
Little Bugler, The—Jan. 29 (Vitagraph)..... 448
Little Lillian Turns the Tide—Mar. 5 (Selig)..1290
Little Sister, The—Feb. 5 (Selig)..... 588
Living Wage, The—Jan. 6 (Selig)..... 318
Local Color (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 17 (Vitagraph) 202
Lonely Road, A—Jan. 10 (Edison)..... 72
Long Cold Night, The—Mar. 3 (Essanay).....1148
Long Island Skunk Farm, A—Feb. 21 (Kalem). 860
Looking for a Fortune—Mar. 13 (Kalem).....1280
Looking for Trouble—Jan. 21 (Essanay)..... 330
Lord Mayor of London, The—Jan. 16 (Kalem). 206
Lost Child, The—Feb. 24 (Lubin).....1010
Love Route Via Pittman, The—Mar. 24 (Essanay) 1570
Lovely Senorita, The (Second of Wood B. Wedd Series)—Jan. 26 (Edison)..... 576
Love of Tokiwa, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 31 (Vitagraph) 448
Love's Oblivion—Mar. 12 (Melies).....
Love's Old Dream—Jan. 21 (Vitagraph)..... 320
ove's Young Dream—Feb. 25 (Edison).....1002
Luck In Odd Numbers—Mar. 18 (Essanay)....1420
Lucky Elopement, The—Jan. 30 (Vitagraph) ... 448
Lumbering In Sweden -Feb. 18 (Vitagraph).... 860
Lunatic's Child, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 31 (Pathe) 458

M

Madura and Its Pagodas—Mar. 18 (Pathe)....1420
Making Cut Glass—Jan. 9 (Kalem)..... 80
Making Hig[illegible] Paper—Jan. 30 (Kalem) . 462
Man from the West, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 22 (Lubin)..... 324
Man of Destiny, The—Feb. 7 (Edison)..... 580
Man's Faith, A—April 3 (Lubin)..... 1728
Mansion of Sobs, The (Special—2 parts) April 2 (Lubin) 1728
Marriage of Figaro, The (Special—2 parts) - Feb. 3 (Ambrosio) .....
Married Men—Jan. 10 (Lubin)..... 76
Marrying Sue—Feb. 6 (Vitagraph)..... 584
Masked Dancer, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 13 (Vitagraph) 202
Masquerader, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 28 (Kalem) 460
Massacre, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 26 (Biograph) 1006
Master of the Mine (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 10 (Vitagraph) 704
Match-Making Dads -Jan. 20 (Lubin)..... 324
Measure of a Man, The—Feb. 10 (Lubin)..... 712
Medicine Man's Vengeance, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 11 (Kalem).....1280
Medicine Show at Stone Gulch, The—Jan. 30 (Kalem) 460
Memories—Feb. 20 (Selig).....1154
Message from Across the Sea, A—Jan. 16 (Selig) 320
Message In the Rose, The—Mar. 21 (Edison)..1418
Message of the Sun Dial, The—Jan. 20 (Edison) 574
Mexican's Gratitude, The—Mar. 10 (Edison)...1284
Midnight Call, The—Mar. 31 (Selig).....
Million Bid, A (Special—4 parts)—Feb. (Vitagraph) .....
Million In Jewels, A (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 16 (Kalem) 858
Millions for Defence—Mar. 27 (Vitagraph)....1566
Minister's Daughter, The (Special—2 parts) - Jan. 10 (Pathe)..... 80
Mischief Maker, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 14 (Vitagraph) 1282
Miser's Reversion, The (Special—2 parts) Mar. 24 (Vitagraph) 1726
Miss Milly's Valentine—Feb. 11 (Essanay)..... 710
Missing Twenty-five Dollars, The—April 1 (Edison) 1724
Mistress of His House, The—Feb. 12 (Selig)... 704
Model Young Man, A—Mar. 20 (Vitagraph)....1416
Modern Vendetta, A (Special—3 parts) -Feb. 2 (Selig) 588
Money Sharks, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 24 (Cines) .....
Montana State Fair—Jan. 8 (Vitagraph).....
Monte Cristo Up to Date—Jan. 22 (Melies).... 456
Monuments of Upper Egypt—Feb. 18 (Pathe).. 866
Moth, The—Jan. 23 (Lubin)..... 324
Mrs. Maloney's Fortune—Mar. 13 (Vitagraph)..1280
Mrs. Manly's Baby—Feb. 25 (Essanay).....1006
Mrs. Romana's Scenario—April 1 (Edison).....1724
Mr. Sniffkins' Widow—Mar. 2 (Edison).....1148
Mystery of the Ladder of Light, The (Chronicles of Cleek Series, No. 4)—Feb. 24 (Edison) 1002
Mystery of the Laughing Death, The (Fifth of the Chronicles of Cleek Series)—Mar. 31 (Edison) 1722
Mystery of the Milk, The—Jan. 5 (Biograph).. 202
Mystery of the Talking Wire, The (Chronicles of Cleek Series, No. 3)—Jan. 27 (Edison).. 576

N

Nearly Married—Jan. 28 (Essanay)..... 448
Necklace of Rameses, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 23 (Edison)..... 574
Nest Unfeathered, A—Feb. 14 (Biograph)..... 708
Never Again (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 28 (Vitagraph) 1566
Never Shrink—Mar. 26 (Biograph).....1724
Niagara Falls—Feb. 12 (Vitagraph).....
Night at the Inn, A—Jan. 13 (Edison)..... 206
Night on the Road, A—Jan. 22 (Essanay)..... 306
Night Out, A—Mar. 25 (Edison).....1568

O

Oasis of Gabes, The—Jan. 27 (Pathe)..... 456
Octavius—Amateur Detective Series, No. 1 (The Adventures of the Actress' Jewels)—Jan. 12 (Edison) 206
Octavius—Amateur Detective Series, No. 2 (The Adventure of the Extra Baby)—Feb. 16 (Edison) 858
Octavius—Amateur Detective Series, No. 3 (The Adventure of the Alarm Clock)—Mar. 16 (Edison) 1416
Officer and a Gentleman, An (Special—2 parts) Mar. 14 (Vitagraph) 1142
Officer John Donovan (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 10 (Vitagraph) 202
Oh, Doctor—Mar. 17 (Essanay).....1420
Old Oak's Secret, The—Feb. 26 (Vitagraph)....1004
Old Reliable (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 21 (Vitagraph) 1416
Old Streets of Cairo, Egypt—Mar. 25 (Pathe)..1732
Old vs. the New, The—Jan. 28 (Selig)..... 452
One on Batty Bill—Mar. 12 (Melies).....
One Thousand to One Shot—Feb. 9 (Biograph). 708
One-to-Three Feb. 8 (Essanay)..... 864
Only One Shirt—Jan. 16 (Kalem)..... 206
On the Altar of Patriotism (Special—2 parts) —Mar. 7 (Pathe).....1152
On the Breast of the Tide—Jan. 9 (Selig)..... 318
On the Great Steel Beam—Jan. 6 (Edison)..... 72
On the Lazy Line -Feb. 4 (Edison)..... 578
Orphans of the Wild—Feb. 10 (Pathe)..... 708
Ostrich Farming, South Africa—Jan. 19 (Edison) 574
Other Girl, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 20 (Essanay) 864
Out-Blacked—Jan. 15 (Biograph)..... 332
Out In the Rain Feb. 13 (Kalem)..... 706
Out of Sight, Out of Mind—Jan. 29 (Biograph) 460
Out of the Depths (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 5 (Lubin) 580

P

Pa and Ma Elope—Mar. 5 (Biograph)..... 1282
Pair of Frands, A—Mar. 4 (Vitagraph).. 1142
Paleface Brave, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 21 (Kalem) 332
Pale of Prejudice, The—Jan. 31 (Lubin)..... 456
Passover Miracle, A (Special—2 parts) -Mar. 31 (Kalem) 1730
Patched Adonis, The—Jan. 28 (Pathe)..... 456
Pathe's Weekly, No. 78, 1913—Dec. 22 (Pathe) 78
Pathe's Weekly, No. 79, 1913—Dec. 25 (Pathe) 78
Pathe's Weekly, No. 80, 1913—Dec. 29 (Pathe) 208
Pathe's Weekly, No. 1, 1914—Jan. 1 (Pathe).. 328
Pathe's Weekly, No. 2, 1914—Jan. 5 (Pathe).. 328
Pathe's Weekly, No. 3, 1914—Jan. 8 (Pathe).. 330
Pathe's Weekly, No. 4, 1914—Jan. 12 (Pathe). 460
Pathe's Weekly, No. 5, 1914—Jan. 15 (Pathe). 460
Pathe's Weekly, No. 6, 1914—Jan. 19 (Pathe). 586
Pathe's Weekly, No. 7, 1914—Jan. 22 (Pathe). 586
Pathe's Weekly, No. 8, 1914—Jan. 26 (Pathe). 708
Pathe's Weekly, No. 9, 1914—Jan. 29 (Pathe). 708
Pathe's Weekly, No. 10, 1914—Feb. 2 (Pathe). 866
Pathe's Weekly, No. 11, 1914—Feb. 5 (Pathe). 866
Pathe's Weekly, No. 12, 1914—Feb. 9 (Pathe).1010
Pathe's Weekly, No. 13, 1914—Feb. 12 (Pathe).1152
Pathe's Weekly, No. 14, 1914—Feb. 16 (Pathe).1152
Pathe's Weekly, No. 15, 1914—Feb. 19 (Pathe).1154
Pathe's Weekly, No. 16, 1914—Feb. 23 (Pathe).
Pathe's Weekly, No. 17, 1914—Feb. 26 (Pathe).1294
Pathe's Weekly, No. 18, 1914—Mar. 2 (Pathe).1420
Pathe's Weekly, No. 19, 1914—Mar. 5 (Pathe)..1572
Pathe's Weekly, No. 20, 1914—Mar. 9 (Pathe)..1572
Pathe's Weekly, No. 21, 1914—Mar. 12 (Pathe).1572
Pathe's Weekly, No. 22, 1914—Mar. 16 (Pathe).1732
Pathe's Weekly, No. 23, 1914—Mar. 19 (Pathe).1732
Pat's Revenge—Feb. 7 (Lubin)..... 582
Perfect Truth, The (First of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—Jan. 31 (Edison)..... 578
Perils of the White Lights (Special 2 parts)—Jan. 14 (Kalem)..... 206
Perplexed Bridegroom, The—Jan. 23 (Vitagraph) 322
Phosphate Mining—Mar. 27 (Kalem).. 1564
Pickles, Art and Sauerkraut (Special—2 parts) —Jan. 27 (Vitagraph)..... 448
Picturesque Coast of Catalonia, The—Mar. 10 (Pathe) 1296
Pietro, the Pianist—Jan. 8 (Selig)..... 318
Playing for a Fortune—Jan. 31 (Kalem)..... 462
Playing With Fire—Feb. 5 (Melies)..... 708
Politics and Suffragettes—Mar. 5 (Biograph)...1282
Portrait, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 10 (Vitagraph) 1280
Power of Print, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 29 (Pathe) 458
Powers of the Air, The—Feb. 21 (Edison)..... 858
Presto Willie—Magician—Mar. 4 (Essanay)....1148
Price of Silence, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 31 (Celio) 1570
Price of a Ruby, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 18 (Lubin) 862
Price of the Necklace, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 13 (Edison).....1284
Price of Vanity, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 17 (Vitagraph) 1414
Price, The—Mar. 20 (Lubin).....1424
Professor Oldboy's Rejuvenator—April 1 (Kalem)1730
Puritan, The—Mar. 27 (Lubin).....1578
Putting One Over (Fourth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—Mar. 28 (Edison).....1568

Q

Quantrell's Son—Jan. 19 (Vitagraph)..... 320
Queer Quarantine, A—April 1 (Essanay).....1722
Question of Right, A (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 15 (Lubin) 210

R

Race for a Mine, The—Mar. 14 (Kalem).....1280
Raid of the Red Marauders, The (Special—2 parts)—April 1 (Kalem) 1730
Ramble In Pondichery, India, A—Jan. 8 (Pathe) 80
Rambles In Bourges, France—Feb. 17 (Pathe).. 866
Real Helpmate, A—Mar. 17 (Edison).....1416
Real Miss Loveleigh, The—Jan. 14 (Essanay).. 204
Reconciled In Blood—Feb. 10 (Selig)..... 704
Red Hawk's Sacrifice—Jan. 17 (Kalem)..... 206
Refrigerator Car's Captive, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 25 (Kalem) 1564
Regie, the Squaw Man—Feb. 27 (Kalem).....1006
Renegade's Vengeance, The—Mar. 6 (Selig)...1290
Restless Woman, The—Mar. 19 (Biograph)....1572
Return of Jack Bellew, The—Jan. 26 (Vitagraph) 448
Reward, The—Feb. 14 (Lubin)..... 712
Right and Wrong of It, The—Jan. 12 (Vitagraph) 202
Rise of Officer Casey, The—Feb. 24 (Lubin)....1010
Romance In the Northwest, A—Mar. 6 (Lubin).1146
Romance of the Everglades (Special—2 parts)—April 3 (Edison) 1724
Rorke's Drift (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 13 (Edison) 714
Royal Slave, The (Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 4)—Feb. 9 (Selig) 590

S

Sacrifice of Kathleen, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 3 (Vitagraph) 1142
Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy, The (Special—2 parts) Mar. 30 (Selig) .....
Sawdust and Salome—Feb. 16 (Vitagraph)..... 860
Scenes Along the Canvery River, India—Feb. 11 (Pathe) 710
Scenes In Nordland—Mar. 5 (Vitagraph).....
Scotland Forever—Jan. 28 (Vitagraph)..... 448
Sealed Orders (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 25 (Lubin) 1010
Second Generation, The—Mar. 3 (Pathe).....1150
Secret Marriage, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 19 (Lubin) 1424
Secret of the Will, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 9 (Kalem).....1280
Sentimental Sister, The—Jan. 22 (Biograph)... 460
September Morn—Feb. 25 (Pathe).....1008
Seringapatam (Southern India)—Jan. 29 (Pathe) 458
Servant of the Rich, A—Jan. 17 (Lubin)..... 212
Seventeen-Mile Drive, California, The—Jan. 14 (Pathe) 208

Shadow of Guilt, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 26 (Kalem) 460
Shadows (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 20 (Essanay).1420
Shadow, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 23 (Kalem) 1004
Sherlock Holmes Girl, The—Jan. 7 (Edison)... 72
She Wanted a Count—Mar. 14 (Lubin).....1288
She Was a Peach April 4 (Lubin).....1730
Shorty Makes a Bet—Mar. 14 (Biograph).....1418
Shot In the Night, A (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 5 (Kalem) 80
Silent Death, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 30 (Edison) 578
Silent Trails—Mar. 5 (Vitagraph).....1142
Silver Snuff Box—Mar. 30 (Vitagraph).....1726
Single Handed—Mar. 19 (Essanay).....1420
Skelley and the Turkey—Feb. 19 (Biograph)... 868
Skelley Buys a Hotel—Feb. 9 (Biograph)..... 708
Sleeping Sentinel, The—Feb. 13 (Lubin)..... 712
Slumberville's Case—Mar. 10 (Lubin).....1284
Smiles of Fortune—Jan. 12 (Lubin)..... 210
Smuggler's Sister, The—Mar. 3 (Selig).....1289
Snakeville's Fire Brigade—Feb. 21 (Essanay).. 864
Snakeville's New Doctor—Jan. 10 (Essanay)... 76
Snow Effects In Austria—Jan. 7 (Pathe)..... 78
Soldier of the C. S. A., A—Feb. 13 (Selig).....1154
So Long, Count—Mar. 21 (Lubin).....1426
Some Steamer Scooping—Feb. 12 (Vitagraph).. 704
Somnambulist, The—Jan. 8 (Melies)..... 210
Son of the Sea, A (Special—2 parts)—April 7 (Cines) 1722
Sonny Jim In Search of a Mother—Feb. 11 (Vitagraph) 704
Sophia's Imaginary Visitors Feb. 17 (Edison). 858
Sophie Picks a Dead One (Special—2 parts) - Feb. 13 (Essanay)..... 710
Sophie's Birthday Party—Mar. 7 (Essanay).....1148
Speak No Evil—Feb. 10 (Essanay)..... 710
Speeder's Revenge, The—Mar. 6 (Vitagraph)..1142
Speedway of Despair—Mar. 11 (Selig).....1290
Splendid Sacrifice, A—Jan. 30 (Selig)..... 452
Spoiled Life, A (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 12 (Pathe) .....
Squire's Mistake, The—Jan. 6 (Lubin)..... 456
Stage Struck April 1 (Vitagraph).....1726
Story of Crime, A—Feb. 9 (Edison)..... 714
Story of Cupid, The—Mar. 27 (Selig).....1562
Story of Diana—April 2 (Selig).....
Story of the Old Gun, The—Jan. 15 (Essanay). 204
Story of the Willow Pattern, The—Feb. 10 (Edison) 714
Story of Venus, The—Mar. 17 (Selig).....1426
Story the Gate Told, The—Jan. 5 (Lubin)..... 74
Strange Melody, A (Special—2 parts) -Mar. 12 (Lubin) 1288
Strange Sea Water Creatures—Mar. 24 (Pathe).1576
Strenuous Scoop, A—Feb. 11 (Selig)..... 704
Submarine Mysteries—Jan. 20 (Pathe)..... 326
Sultan and the Roller Skates, The—Mar. 9 (Edison) 1282
Sunken Village, The; or Through Fire to Fortune (Special—5 parts)—Feb. (Lubin).....1012
Suppressed News—Mar. 10 (Selig).....1290
Suspense and Suspenders Feb. 12 (Melies).....
Sword of Damocles, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 22 (Pathe)..... 328

T

Tainted Money (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 7 (Vitagraph) 584
Taming Terrible Ted—Feb. 9 (Lubin)..... 712
Tell-Tale Stains—Jan. 10 (Kalem)..... 206
Tell-Tale Star, The—Mar. 13 (Lubin).....1288
Temple of the Lion, The (Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 3) (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 26 (Selig) 452
Temples of Japan—Jan. 1 (Melies)..... 76
Tested by Fire—Feb. 26 (Selig).....1154
Testing Fire, The—Jan. 27 (Essanay)..... 448
That Terrible Kid—Mar. 3 (Lubin).....1144
Their Interest In Common—Jan. 8 (Vitagraph). 72
Their Lesson—Feb. 13 (Selig)..... 704
Thief of Hearts (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 15 (Pathe) 208
Third Degree, The (Special—5 parts)—Jan. (Lubin) 332
Thou Shalt Not Kill—Feb. 18 (Selig).....1154
Three Bags of Silver (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 6)—Mar. 9 (Selig).....1292
Three Pairs and a Cat—Jan. 21 (Pathe)..... 326
Three Scratch Clue, The (Special 2 parts) - Mar. 27 (Essanay) 1570
Through the Centuries—Feb. 17 (Selig).....1154
Through the Storm (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 23 (Essanay) 330
Tigers of the Hills, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 25 (Kalem).....1006
Timing Cupid—Jan. 14 (Vitagraph)..... 202
To Alaska Via the Great Rivers of the North—Feb. 17 (Essanay)..... 864
Tobacco Industry—Jan. 12 (Lubin)..... 210
Tommy's Tramp—April 2 (Vitagraph).....1726
Tony and Malone—Feb. 6 (Selig).....
Too Late (Special—2 parts) Jan. 19 (Selig)... 459
Too Many Johnnies—Feb. 20 (Kalem)..... 858
Tragedy of Ambition, The—Mar. 2 (Selig)....1294
Trapped (Special—2 parts) -Jan. 19 (Kalem).. 330
Treacherous Rival, A—Feb. 3 (Edison)..... 578
Treasures on Earth (Special -2 parts) -Jan. 29 (Lubin) 454
Trichinopoly—Mar. 24 (Pathe).....1572
Trip to the Great Nile Dam -Mar. 14 (Pathe)..
Trip to the Moon, A—Mar. 21 (Lubin).....1494
Two-Family Affair, A—Jan. 27 (Pathe)..... 456
Two Little Vagabonds—Mar. 20 (Selig).....1426
Two Ordeals, The (Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 2) (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 12 (Selig)..... 318
Two Roses, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 26 (Lubin) 1010
Typical Buddhist Temple, A—Feb. 11 (Pathe).. 710

U

Uncanny Mr. Gumble, The—Jan. 21 (Edison).. 574
United In Danger—Jan. 24 (Edison)..... 574
Unintentional Hero, An—Jan. 30 (Lubin)..... 456
Unto the Third and Fourth Generation (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 5 (Selig)..... 318
Unveiling the Maine Monument—Mar. 7 (Kalem) 1144
Unveiling the Pilgrim Father's Monument—Jan. 23 (Kalem) 332
Unwelcome Throne, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 1) (Special—3 parts)—Dec. 29 (Selig) 76
Up-Hill Climb, The (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 16 (Selig) 1292

V

Vaccinating the Village—Feb. 6 (Kalem)..... 592
Vagaries of Fate, The—Feb. 6 (Lubin)..... 582
Vavasour Ball, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 20 (Vitagraph) .....
Venus and Adonis—Feb. 19 (Selig).....1156
Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts)—Feb. 21 (Pathe) 866
Vision in the Window, The (Fourth of the Wood B. Wedd Series)—Mar. 30 (Edison)..1722

W

Waifs, Jan. 17 (Biograph)..... 332
Wards of Society, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 8 (Pathe) 78
Warning, The—Mar. 12 (Essanay).....1288
Wasted Years, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 19 (Pathe) 1422
Way to Heaven, The—Mar. 12 (Vitagraph)....1280
Weaker Brother, The (Special—2 parts)—Mar. 18 (Lubin) 1422
Weaker's Strength, The—Feb. 12 (Essanay).... 710
Wedding of Prudence, The (Special 2 parts)—April 3 (Essanay) 1722
What Came to Bar "Q"—Jan. 29 (Essanay)... 448
When Dooley Passed Away—Mar. 7 (Lubin)..1146
When the Cartridges Failed—Mar. 7 (Edison).1150
When the Doctors Failed—Jan. 10 (Lubin)..... 76
Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts) Feb. 19 (Pathe) 866
Whiffles and the Diamond Pin—Mar. 17 (Pathe) 1420
Whiffles' Balcony Buds—Feb. 17 (Pathe)..... 864
Whiffles' New Profession—Mar. 25 (Pathe)....1732
While Wifey Is Away—Mar. 25 (Selig).....1562
Whom God Hath Joined—Jan. 6 (Pathe)..... 78
Who Was Guilty? (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 27 (Cines) 212
Wifey's Visit Home Mar. 26 (Biograph).....1724
Windfall The—Jan. 26 (Lubin)..... 454
Winky Willy and the Fisherman—Jan. 29 (Melies) 592
Winky Willy's Arithmetic—Feb. 26 (Melies)..1156
Winky Willy's Birtbday Gifts—Feb. 12 (Melies)
Winky Willy's Disappearing Stunt—Feb. 5 (Melles) 708
Winky Willy's Private Show—Mar. 19 (Melies)
Winner Wins, The—Feb. 9 (Vitagraph)..... 704
Winning Hand, The—Feb. 24 (Pathe).....1008
Winning Mistake, A—Feb. 21 (Lubin)..... 864
Winter Holiday in the Bernese Oberland, Switzerland—Mar. 18 (Pathe).....1418
With the Eyes of Love—Mar. 3 (Edison).....1148
Witness to the Will, The (Special—2 parts)—Jan. 9 (Edison) 72
Woman In Black, The—Mar. 23 (Vitagraph)...1564
Won By a Nose—Feb. 18 (Pathe)..... 866
Wood B. Wedd Series, No. 2 (The Lovely Senorita)—Jan. 26 (Edison)..... 576
Wood B. Wedd Series, No. 3 (The Beautiful Leading Lady)—Feb. 23 (Edison).....1002
Wood B. Wedd Series, No. 4 (The Vision in the Window)—Mar. 30 (Edison) .....
Wooing the Cook—Feb. 3 (Pathe)..... 586
Wooing the Saleslady—Jan. 15 (Melies)..... 456
Workaday Scenes In a Flowery Land—Mar. 24 (Pathe) 1572
Wrecked In Mid-Air—(Special—2 parts)—Jan. 27 (Eclipse) 326

Independent Releases

A

Abide With Me—Jan. 24 (Frontier)..... 336
Absinthe (4 parts)—Jan. 22 (Imp).....
Academy Romance, An—Feb. 9 (Powers)..... 716
Acid Test, The—Mar. 16 (Victor).....
Accusing Voice, The (2 parts)—Jan. 3 (Gaumont) 96
Across the Hall Mar. 23 (Keystone).....
Admission Two Pins—Jan. 9 (Victor)..... 84
Adrift (2 parts)—Mar. 25 (Eclair).....1582
Adrift In a Great City—Jan. 13 (Thanhouser).. 340
Adventures of Shorty, The (2 parts)—Mar. 13 (Broncho) 1302
After Her Dough—Mar. 25 (Keystone).....1740
Alarming Dinner Party, An—Jan. 23 (Lux).... 600
All's Well That Ends Well—Feb. 20 (Princess)
Almost White Hope—Feb. 16 (Powers)..... 872
Amateur Animal Trainer, An—Dec. 30 (Thanhouser) 90
Amateur Sportsman, An—Jan. 6 (Gaumont).... 94
Angel of the House (3 parts)—Feb. 7 (Gaumont) 880
Animal Export from Algiers—Feb. 13 (Lux)....1022
Animated Weekly, No. 94—Dec. 24 (Universal). 92
Animated Weekly, No. 95—Dec. 31 (Universal). 216
Animated Weekly, No. 96—Jan. 7 (Universal). 338
Animated Weekly No. 97—Jan. 14 (Universal). 464
Animated Weekly, No. 98—Jan. 21 (Universal). 596
Animated Weekly, No. 99—Jan. 28 (Universal). 718
Animated Weekly, No. 100—Feb. 4 (Universal). 872
Animated Weekly, No. 101—Feb. 11 (Universal).1018
Animated Weekly, No. 102—Feb. 18 (Universal).1160
Animated Weekly, No. 103—Feb. 25 (Universal).1298
Animated Weekly, No. 104—Mar. 4 (Universal).1430
Animated Weekly, No. 105—Mar. 11 (Universal) 1582
Animated Weekly, No. 106—Mar. 18 (Universal) 1734
Arabella's Romance—Feb. 24 (Crystal).....1016
Arrowhead Romance, An—Jan. 3 (Rex)..... 86
Arrowmaker's Daughter, The (2 parts)—Feb. 13 (Kay-Bee) 1022
At the Court of Prince Make-Believe—Mar. 15 (Eclair) .....
At the Crossing -Feb. 1 (Eclair).....1158
At the Potter's Wheel—Jan. 24 (American)... 338
Atonement (2 parts) Mar. 22 (Majestic).....1740
Auntie's Romantic Adventure—Mar. 29 (Crystal) 1580

B

Baby, The -Dec. 30 (Majestic)..... 88
Babies' Doll, The—April 5 (Rex).....
Bad Egg, A—Mar. 30 (Powers).....1736
Bad Man from the East, The—Jan. 1 (Komic). 342
Baffles, Gentleman Burglar (2 parts)—Feb. 16 (Keystone) .....
Baldy Belmont Breaks Out—Mar. 10 (Crystal)..1300
Baldy Belmont Nearly a Hero—Mar. 17 (Crystal) 1430
Baldy Belmont Picks a Peach—Feb. 10 (Crystal) 718
Baldy Belmont's Bump—Jan. 13 (Crystal)..... 214
Barrier Royal, A (2 parts)—Mar. 11 (Broncho).1160
Beautiful Snow Mar. 27 (Princess).....
Because She Loved Him (2 parts) -Mar. 20 (Victor) .....
Bee Farming—Feb. 19 (Gaumont).....1166
Bee, The—Feb. 19 (Gaumont).....1166
Bell-boy's Revenge, The—Mar. 28 (Royal).....
Bells of Austi, The (2 parts)—Mar. 19 (Domino) 1586
Bertie Has a Free Ride—Jan. 30 (Lux)..... 726
Bess, the Outcast—Jan. 28 (Beauty).....
Better Man, The (3 parts)—Feb. 28 (Gaumont).
Between Showers—Feb. 28 (Keystone).....
Bill and the Compass—Jan. 9 (Lux)..... 470
Bill and the Electrician—Jan 16 (Lux)..... 470
Bill's Day Out—Mar. 6 (Lux).....1166
Billy's Ruse—Mar. 13 (Princess).....1432
Bimberg's Love Affair—Mar. 10 (Crystal).....1300
Birds of Passage—Mar. 8 (Eclair).....1158
Birthday Present, A—Feb. 19 (Komic).....
Black Hand Conspiracy, The—Feb. 15 (Apollo).
Black Hands and Dirty Money—Mar. 26 (Frontier) 1580
Black Sea, The—Feb. 8 (Eclair)..... 594
Blood Test, The (2 parts)—April 2 (Imp).....1734
Blowout at Santa Banana, A (2 parts)—Jan. 26 (American) 468
Boating On the Seine—Feb. 20 (Lux).....1022
Boob's Honeymoon, The—Feb. 19 (Rex)..... 870
Box Couch The—Feb. 16 (Imp).....
Breed o' the Mountains—Feb. 25 (Nestor)....1016
Bride of Mystery, The (3 parts)—Feb. 10 (Gold Seal) 716
By Radium's Rays (2 parts)—Mar. 3 (Gold Seal) 1158

C

Caballero's Way, The (3 parts)—April 1 (Eclair) 1734
Calamity Anne In Society—Jan. 31 (American). 468
Calino as a Stage Prompter—Jan. 27 (Gaumont) 726
Call of the Traumerei, The (3 parts)—Mar. 9 (American) 1302
Can of Baked Beans, A—Feb. 22 (Thanhouser)
Captain Jenny, S. A. (3 parts)—Feb. 24 (Gold Seal) 1018
Carbon Copy, The—Feb. 28 (American).....1020
Carlotta, the Bead Stringer—Mar. 22 (Rex).....
Case of Cherry Purcelle, The (3 parts)—Jan. 7 (Eclair) 82
Cat's Paw, The (2 parts)—Mar. 17 (Thanhouser) 1584
Caught in the Web—Mar. 11 (Reliance).....1436
Certainty of Man, The—April 1 (American)....1740
Chasing Gloom—Jan. 8 (Komic).....
Chicken Chasers, The—Feb. 14 (Joker).....
Child of the Desert, A—Mar. 7 (American)....1162
Circle of Fate, The (2 parts)—Jan. 16 (Kay-Bee) 340
Circumstantial Nurse, A—Jan. 9 (Princess).... 218
Clerk, The—Feb. 17 (Majestic).....1020
Closed at Ten—Mar. 11 (Beauty).....1300
Coals of Fire—Jan. 16 (Thanhouser)..... 340
Coincidental Bridegroom, A—Jan. 30 (Powers). 466
Colonel Custard's Last Stand—Mar. 19 (Frontier) 1428
Colonel of the Nuts, The—Mar. 12 (Frontier)..1300
Colonel's Adopted Daughter—Feb. 10 (Kay-Bee)
Colombo—Feb. 22 (Eclair).....
Coming Home (2 parts)—Jan. 21 (Eclair)..... 336
Coming of the Padres, The -Mar. 18 (American) 1436
Coming of the Real Prince, The (2 parts)—Mar. 21 (Reliance).....
Conscience (2 parts) -Jan. 21 (Broncho)..... 222
Countess Retty's Mine—Jan. 21 (Nestor)..... 338
Country Girl, A—Feb. 6 (Lux).....1022
Courtship of O San, The (2 parts)—Feb. 26 (Domino) 1160
Coward Hater, The—Feb. 8 (Rex)..... 596
Cricket on the Hearth, The (2 parts)—Feb. 16 (American) 874
Crook Detective, The (Fantomas Series No. 4) (4 parts)—Mar. 7 (Gaumont).....
Cross In the Cacti, The (2 parts)—Feb. 18 (Eclair) 870
Cross Roads—Jan. 10 (Frontier)..... 86
Crucible, The -Mar. 2 (American).....1162
Cruel Lesson, A—Feb. 24 (Gaumont)..... 880
Cupid's Close Shave—Jan. 16 (Nestor)..... 216
Cupid Incognito -April 1 (Nestor).....1734
Cure, The—Jan. 14 (Broncho)..... 220
Cycle of Adversity, The—Jan. 11 (Rex)..... 86

D

Dad's Terrible Match—Mar. 15 (Apollo).....
Dancer, The (2 parts)—Feb. 10 (Thanhouser)..
Dances of Today—Jan. 26 (Victor).....
Dangerous Experiment, A (2 parts)—Jan. 23 (Victor) 336
Daybreak—Dec. 29 (Reliance)..... 90

Dazzle's Black Eye—Mar. 17 (Crystal).....1430
Decree of Justice, A—Mar. 25 (American).....1586
Dead Line, The—Jan. 7 (Nestor)..... 82
Desert Gold (2 parts)—Mar. 13 (Kay-Bee)...1586
Desert Tribesman, The (2 parts)—Mar. 3 (Thanhouser) 1302
Destinies Fulfilled (3 parts)—Jan. 12 (American) 220
Dodge and Two Pairs, A—Jan. 23 (Powers) ... 338
Devil Fox of the North, The (2 parts)—Feb. 25 (Eclair) 1018
Diamond Maker, The (3 parts)—Mar. 4 (Eclair).1158
Diplomatic Flo (3 parts)—Mar. 27 (Victor)....1580
Discord and Harmony (3 parts)—Mar. 17 (Gold Seal) 1580
Divorce (2 parts)—Jan. 30 (Kay-Bee) 722
Doctor's Deceit, A—Jan. 26 (Imp)..... 464
Double Cross, The—Jan. 26 (Keystone).....
Dream Child, The (2 parts)—Feb. 23 (American) 1020
Duke's Talisman (5 parts)—Jan. 24 (Gaumont)

E

Educating His Daughters—Jan. 3 (Majestic)... 88
Electric Girl, The—Feb. 22 (Eclair).....1428
Elevator Man, The—Jan. 25 (Thanhouser)..... 596
Eleventh Hour, The (2 parts)—Jan. 10 (Bison). 86
Elixir of Love, The—Feb. 12 (Imp).....
Elopement by Aeroplane, An—Feb. 13 (Lux)..1022
Elusive Diamond, The—Jan. 23 (Thanhouser).. 468
Embezzler, The (2 parts)—Mar. 31 (Gold Seal)
Enchanted Voice, An—Jan. 25 (Eclair)..... 338
Eugenic Boy, The—Mar. 15 (Thanhouser).....1584
Excursions In Old Paris—Jan. 27 (Gaumont)... 726
Excursion Through Old Paris (Second Release)—Feb. 12 (Gaumont) 1022

F

Faith of Her Fathers, The (2 parts)—Jan. 17 (Reliance) 342
Faith of Two, The—Mar. 13 (Powers)..... ...1300
False Beauty, A—Mar. 5 (Keystone).....
False Bride, The (3 parts)—Jan. 30 (Victor).. 464
Fan Making—Feb. 12 (Gaumont).....
Fantomas, No. 3 (The Mysterious Finger-Prints) (4 parts)—Jan. 10 (Gaumont)..... 94
Fantomas, No. 4 (The Crook Detective) (4 parts)—Mar. 7 (Gaumont).....
Fatal Card, The—Feb. 21 (Frontier)..... 870
Fat and Thin of It, The—Mar. 22 (Crystal)..1430
Fate's Decree—Feb. 14 (Majestic)..... 874
Father's Devotion, A—Jan. 18 (Crystal)..... 214
Fighting Is No Business—Jan. 6 (Crystal)..... 84
Film Johnnie, A—Mar. 2 (Keystone).....
Fires of Conscience—Feb. 4 (Nestor)..... 596
First Nugget, The (2 parts)—Jan. 14 (Eclair). 214
Flaming Diagram, The (2 parts)—Mar. 9 (Imp) 1298
Flash In the Dark, The—Feb. 18 (Nestor)..... 870
Flash of Fate, The (2 parts)—Jan. 17 (Bison). 216
Flirt's Mistake, A—Jan. 12 (Keystone).....
Fooling Uncle—Jan. 21 (Beauty)..... 470
For a Woman—Feb. 8 (Crystal)..... 594
For Her Brother's Sake—Jan. 27 (Kay-Bee).. 600
For His Master (2 parts)—Feb. 7 (Reliance).. 724
For Life and Liberty—Mar. 26 (Imp).....
For the Family Honor (2 parts)—Feb. 26 (Rex).1016
For the Freedom of Cuba (2 parts)—Jan. 24 (Bison) 338
For the Wearing of the Green (2 parts)—Mar. 5 (Domino) 1302
Forgetting—Mar. 30 (Imp).....
Fourth Proposal, The—Feb. 1 (Rex)..... 464
Freak-Temperance Wave, A—Jan. 28 (Joker).. 466
Fresh Freshman, The—Dec. 28 (Apollo).....
From Father to Son (2 parts)—Jan. 29 (Rex). 464
From Nice to Monte Carlo—Jan. 9 (Lux)..... 470
From the Lion's Jaws (2 parts)—Mar. 14 (Bison) .....
Frou Frou (4 parts)—Jan. 1 (Thanhouser)..... 94

G

Gambler, The—Mar. 16 (Imp).....
Gangsters of New York, The (4 parts)—Feb. (Reliance) .....
Gee! But It's Great to be Stung—Feb. 3 (Crystal) 594
Germ In the Kiss, The—Feb. 2 (Powers)..... 594
Getting a Suit Pressed—Feb. 19 (Komic).....
Getting Reuben Back—Feb. 10 (Crystal)..... 718
Getting Rid of His Mother-in-Law—Jan. 19 (Imp) .....
Girl Bandit, The—Mar. 28 (Frontier).....
Girl Who Dared, The—Mar. 18 (Beauty).....1436
Glimpse of Los Angeles, A—Jan. 1 (Keystone).
Glory of Whitney Durkel, The—Mar. 3 (Majestic) .....
Going Some—Mar. 31 (Crystal) 1736
Golden Cross, The (2 parts)—Feb. 24 (Thanhouser) 1164
Good In the Worst of Us, The (2 parts)—Feb. 11 (Eclair) 716
Grand Passion, The—Mar. 20 (Princess)..... 1582
Granddaddy's Granddaughter—April 3 (Victor).1734
Grateful Outcast, A—Feb. 1 (Crystal)..... 466
Greater Devotion, The—Feb. 11 (Nestor)..... 718
Great Pasadena Rose Tournament, The—Feb. 1 (Apollo) .....
Green-Eyed Devil, The (2 parts)—Feb. 28 (Reliance) 1162
Gringo, The (2 parts)—Mar. 27 (Kay-Bee)..
Guilty or Not Guilty?—Mar. 8 (Thanhouser)..
Guilty Secret (2 parts)—Feb. 14 (Gaumont)..

H

Hands Invisible—Mar. 20 (Powers) 1430
Hand that Rules the World, The—Mar. 6 (Powers) 1160
Happy Coercion—April 8 (American) .....
Harold's Burglar—Feb. 17 (Crystal) 870
Harp of Tara, The (2 parts)—Jan. 8 (Domino). 220
Hawkeye and the Cheese Mystery—Mar. 16 (Powers) 1430
Head Waiter, The—Dec. 28 (Thanhouser)..... 90
Head Waiter, The—Mar. 28 (Joker) .....
Heart of a Woman, The (3 parts)—Jan. 29 (Domino) 600
Heart of Carita, The—Mar. 1 (Eclair).....1018
Heart of Smiling Joe, The—Feb. 14 (Frontier). 716
Heart of the Hills, The (2 parts)—Mar. 12 (Rex) 1300
Hearts and Flowers—Mar. 9 (Victor).....
Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl—Jan. 24 (Joker) 336
He Doesn't Care to Be Photographed—Jan. 25 (Eclair) 338
Helen's Stratagem—Dec. 28 (Majestic)..... 88
Her Brother—Jan. 17 (Frontier)..... 214
Her Father's Guilt—Feb. 21 (Bison) .....
Her First Arrest—Mar. 27 (Powers).....1580
Her Guilty Secret (3 parts)—Jan. (Gaumont).
Her Love Letters—Jan. 20 (Thanhouser)..... 468
Hermit, The (2 parts)—Feb. 2 (American).... 598
Her Way—Mar. 6 (Princess) 1300
He Who Laughs Last—Mar. 13 (Komic).....
He Would a Hunting Go—Dec. 29 (Keystone)..
Hidden Clue, The—Jan. 24 (Reliance)..... 470
Higher Law, The—Feb. 21 (Majestic).....1020
His Awful Vengeance—Dec. 31 (Reliance)..... 92
His Favorite Pastime—Mar. 16 (Keystone).....
His First Love—Mar. 10 (Majestic).....1436
His Little Pal—Mar. 13 (Majestic).....1582
His Royal Pants—Feb. 13 (Nestor) 718
Historic Bremen—Jan. 31 (Joker).....
His Twin Soul—Jan. 2 (Lux) 470
His Vacation—Jan. 27 (Crystal)..... 464
His Younger Brother—Mar. 14 (Frontier)..... 1300
Hold-Up, The—Feb. 27 (Princess).....
Honeymooners, The (2 parts)—Mar. 13 (Victor).1298
Honor of the Mounted, The (2 parts)—Feb. 17 (Gold Seal) 872
Hot Finish, A—Feb. 2 (Imp)..... 594
House Across the Street, The—Mar. 5 (Rex) .1160
How Mosha Came Back—Feb. 29 (Crystal)....1016
How Motion Pictures Are Made—Jan. 15 (Keystone) .....

I

Idler, The—Feb. 14 (Reliance)..... 876
Imp Abroad, The—Jan. 12 (Victor)..... 216
Impostor, The—Mar. 5 (Komic) 1298
In a Granite Quarry—Feb. 6 (Lux).....1022
In an Old Trunk—April 5 (Eclair).....1734
Informer, The (2 parts)—Jan. 22 (Domino).... 600
In Lapland—Jan. 12 (Powers).....
Interrupted Seance, An—Feb. 21 (Reliance)....1162
In the Clutches of the Gang (2 parts)—Jan. 17 (Keystone) .....
In the Eye of the Law—April 2 (Rex).....1734
In the Fall of '64 (2 parts)—Feb. 3 (Gold Seal) 596
In the Year 2014—Jan. 31 (Joker)..... 466
Into the Foothills (2 parts)—Mar. 11 (Eclair)..1298
Into the Lion's Pit (2 parts)—Feb. 6 (Powers) 594
Into the Wilderness (3 parts)—Feb. 4 (Eclair) 594
Intruder, The—Jan. 14 (Nestor)..... 216
In Union There Is Strength—Jan. 18 (Apollo).
Irene, the Onion Eater's Daughter—Feb. 6 (Victor) .....
Italian Love—Mar. 4 (Beauty).....1162
It May Come to This—Jan. 13 (Crystal)..... 214
It's a Bear—Jan. 25 (Apollo).....

J

Jake's Hoodoo—Jan. 13 (Majestic) 340
Jane Eyre (2 parts)—Feb. 9 (Imp)..... 716
Janitor, The—Feb. 4 (Reliance)..... 724
Jealousy and Giant Powder—Mar. 12 (Imp)...
Jones' Burglar Trap—Jan. 20 (Crystal)..... 336
Joseph In the Land of Egypt (4 parts)—Feb. (Thanhouser) 880
Just a Song at Twilight—Feb. 10 (Majestic).. 874
Just Kids (2 parts)—Jan. 28 (Eclair)..... 464
Just Mother—Jan. 12 (Powers)..... 214

K

Kathleen, the Irish Rose (2 parts)—Mar. 10 Thanhouser) 1432
Kelly's Ghost—Mar. 15 (Crystal).....1300
Kentucky Romance, A—Jan. 23 (Kay-Bee)..... 600
Kid Auto Races at Venice—Feb. 7 (Keystone)
Kidnapped Pugilist, The—Mar. 19 (Rex).....1428
King, the Detective In Formula "879" (2 parts)—Feb. 5 (Imp) 594
King, the Detective, In the Marine Mystery (2 parts)—Mar. 23 (Imp).....

L

Lackey, The—Jan. 17 (Majestic) 340
Lady Doctor, The—April 5 (Crystal).....1736
Lakes and Falls—Feb. 27 (Lux).....1166
Lamb, The Woman, The Wolf, The (3 parts)—April 4 (Bison) 1734
Law of His Kind, The (2 parts)—Feb. 12 (Rex).716
Law's Decree, The (2 parts)—Feb. 13 (Victor). 716
Lawyer's Courtship, The—Jan. 15 (Gaumont).. 470
Leak In the Foreign Office, A—Feb. 17 (Thanhouser) 1020
Legend of the Lilacs, The—Feb. 15 (Eclair).. 716
Legend of the Phantom Tribe, The (2 parts)—Feb. 29 (Bison) .....
Leonce at the Chateau D'If—Feb. 10 (Gaumont)
Loper's Cost, The—Jan. 25 (Rex)..... 336
Lesson In Bridge, A—Mar. 4 (Reliance) ..1304
Levinsky's Gold Mine—Mar. 16 (Imp).....
Levi's Luck—Jan. 1 (Komic)..... 342
Lie, The (2 parts)—Jan. 6 (Gold Seal) 84
Like Father, Like Son (2 parts)—April 6 (American) .....
Little Billy's City Cousin—Feb. 26 (Keystone)
Little Billy's Triumphs—Jan. 29 (Keystone)..
Lizzie and the Iceman—Mar. 8 (Crystal) 1160
Loafer, The—Jan. 7 (Reliance)..... 290
Loser Wins, The—Jan. 30 (Princess)..... 596
Lost Treasure, The (3 parts)—Feb. 9 (American) 722
Love and Dynamite—Jan. 3 (Keystone).....
Love and Gasoline—Feb. 21 (Keystone)..... ..
Love and Politics—Feb. 4 (Joker).....
Love's Victory (2 parts)—Feb. 20 (Victor)... 870
Luck of Hog Wallow Gulch, The—April 1 (Joker) .....
Lumber Industry of California—Feb. 18 (Joker)

M

Ma and Pa Play Poker—Feb. 25 (Joker).....
Magic Salesman, The—Feb. 19 (Gaumont)....1166
Man Between, The (2 parts)—Mar. 2 (Victor)..1158
Mabel's Bear Escape—Jan. 31 (Keystone).....
Mabel's Stormy Love Affair—Jan. 5 (Keystone)
Mabel's Strange Predicament—Feb. 9 (Keystone) .....
Mad Hermit, The (3 parts)—Jan. 31 (Bison). 466
Magic Skin, The (2 parts)—Jan. 5 (Victor)... 84
Making a Living—Feb. 2 (Keystone).....
Man, The—Jan. 21 (Reliance).....
Man Who Lied, The—Jan. 19 (Victor)..... 336
Man Who Slept, The—Feb. 9 (Victor)..... 716
Mario (2 parts)—Mar. 4 (Broncho).....1020
Marriage by Aeroplane (3 parts)—Jan. 31 (Gaumont) 728
Marriage for Money, A—Mar. 29 (Eclair).....1582
McSweeney's Masterpiece—Feb. 22 (Crystal).. 872
Messenger No. 845—Mar. 20 (Reliance).....
Mexican's Last Raid, The—Mar. 11 (Nestor)..1298
Michael Arnold and Dr. Lyun (2 parts)—Jan. 15 (Rex) 214
Midnight Alarm, The—Feb. 7 (Joker)..... 594
Midnight Scare, A—Jan. 20 (Crystal)..... 336
Mike and Jake Go In for Matrimony—Mar. 21 (Joker) .....
Mike and Jake Join the Army—Jan. 21 (Joker)
Mike and Jake Live Close to Nature—Jan. 7 (Joker) .....
Militant, The (3 parts)—Jan. 12 (Imp)..... 214
Miniature, The—Feb. 17 (Gaumont).....
Miser's Reversion, The (3 parts)—Mar. 24 (Thanhouser) .....
Misplaced Foot, A—Jan. 1 (Keystone).....
Miss America—Jan. 29 (Gaumont).....
Missing Pearl, The—Feb. 24 (Gaumont).....
Mistaken Watch, A—Mar. 28 (Royal).....
Modern Fairy Tale, A—Mar. 8 (Rex).....1160
Modern Free-Lance, A (2 parts)—Mar. 16 (American) 1432
Mollie and the Oil King—Jan. 4 (Majestic)... 218
Money Lender, The—Feb. 14 (American).... 722
Moonshiner's Daughter, The—Mar. 14 (Majestic) 1438
Mother-in-Law Pays a Visit—Jan. 13 (Gaumont)
Mountaineer, The—Mar. 25 (Nestor).....1580
Mrs. Pinkhurst's Proxy—Jan. 4 (Thanhouser). 218
Mud Bath Elopement, A—Jan. 22 (Rex).... 336
Murderous Elopement, A—Mar. 9 (Powers)..1300
Musician's Wife, The—Feb. 25 (Reliance)..1164
Mutual Weekly, No. 52—Dec. 24 (Mutual Weekly) 88
Mutual Weekly, No. 53—Dec. 31 (Mutual Weekly) 220
Mutual Weekly, No. 54—Jan. 7 (Mutual Weekly) 342
Mutual Weekly, No. 55—Jan. 14 (Mutual Weekly) 470
Mutual Weekly, No. 56—Jan. 21 (Mutual Weekly) 600
Mutual Weekly, No. 57—Jan. 28 (Mutual Weekly) 722
Mutual Weekly, No. 58—Feb. 4 (Mutual Weekly) 878
Mutual Weekly, No. 59—Feb. 11 (Mutual Weekly) 1022
Mutual Weekly, No. 60—Feb. 18 (Mutual Weekly) 1164
Mutual Weekly, No. 61—Feb. 25 (Mutual Weekly) 1304
Mutual Weekly, No. 62—Mar. 4 (Mutual Weekly) 1584
Mutual Weekly, No. 63—Mar. 11 (Mutual Weekly) 1584
Mutual Weekly, No. 64—Mar. 18 (Mutual Weekly) 1740
My Mother's Irish Shawls—Feb. 20 (Powers)..
Mysterious Finger-Prints (Fantomas Series, No. 3) (4 parts)—Jan. 31 (Gaumont)..... 94
Mysterious Leopard Lady, The (2 parts)—Mar. 24 (Gold Seal) .....
Mysterious Shot, The (2 parts)—April 4 (Reliance) 1742
Mystery Lady, The (2 parts)—Feb. 12 (Domino) 878
Mystery of Buffalo Gap, The—Mar. 7 (Frontier).1158
Mystery of a Taxicab, The—Jan. 17 (Joker).. 216
My Wife's Away—Feb. 5 (Komic)..... 724

N

Narcotic Spectre (2 parts)—Jan. 9 (Kay-Bee).. 220
Narrow Escape, A—Feb. 18 (Joker).....
Nemesis That Passed, The—Mar. 6 (Victor)..
New England Idyl, A (2 parts)—Feb. 4 (Broncho) 600
North of 53 Degs. (2 parts)—Feb. 27 (Kay-Bee) 1302
Nutty Delivers the Message to Garcia—Jan. 11 (Eclair) 82

O

Obsession, The—Feb. 3 (Gaumont).....
Oh! You Puppy—Jan. 27 (Crystal)..... 464
Old Locket, An—Feb. 15 (Rex).....
Olives and Their Oil—Feb. 7 (Keystone).....
O Mimi San (2 parts)—Feb. 5 (Domino)..... 722
One of the Bravest (2 parts)—Jan. 27 (Gold Seal) 464
One of the Finest—Feb. 27 (Nestor).....1016
One Happy Tramp—Mar. 31 (Crystal).....
One-Round O'Brien in the Ring Again—Feb. 8 (Apollo) .....
Opal Ring, The (2 parts)—Mar. 5 (Imp).....1160
Option, The—Jan. 18 (Rex)..... 214
Orange Bandit, The—Feb. 15 (Majestic).....1020
Orchids—Mar. 8 (Eclair).....1158
Oscar's Disappointment—Feb. 5 (Gaumont)....1022
Oscar's Heroic Poses—Jan. 20 (Gaumont)..... 470
Oscar Wins the Shop Girl—Feb. 5 (Gaumont)..
Our Mutual Girl (No. 1)—Jan. 19 (Reliance). 598
Our Mutual Girl (No. 2)—Jan. 26 (Reliance). 598
Our Mutual Girl (No. 3)—Feb. 2 (Reliance).. 722
Our Mutual Girl (No. 4)—Feb. 9 (Reliance)... 876
Our Mutual Girl (No. 5)—Feb. 16 (Reliance).1022

Our Mutual Girl (No. 6)—Feb. 23 (Reliance).1162
Our Mutual Girl (No. 7)—Mar. 2 (Reliance)..1302
Our Mutual Girl (No. 8)—Mar. 9 (Reliance)..1436
Our Mutual Girl (No. 9)—Mar. 16 (Reliance)..1586
Our Mutual Girl (No. 10) -Mar. 23 (Reliance).
Our Mutual Girl (No. 11)—Mar. 30 (Reliance).
Outdoor School Life—Feb. 14 (Joker).....

P

Parcels Post Auto, A—Mar. 22 (Apollo).....
Pat Flannagan's Family -Feb. 11 (Reliance) . 876
Path of Genius, The (2 parts)—Mar. 6 (Kay-Bee) 1432
Pat's Motor—Feb. 27 (Lux).....1166
Pay the Rent—Mar. 25 (Joker).....
Peacock Feather Fan, The—Mar. 24 (Beauty) .1584
Percy Needed a Rest—Jan. 15 (Imp).....
Percy's First Holiday—Feb. 8 (Thanhouser).. 874
Picturesque Colombo—Feb. 22 (Eclair).....1428
Picturesque Corsica—Jan. 30 (Lux)..... 726
Play's the Thing, The (2 parts)—Feb. 19 (Domino) 1022
Plumber and Percy, The—Feb. 12 (Komic).....1018
Portrait of Anita, The (2 parts)—Feb. 3 (Majestic) .....
"Pote Lariat" of the "Flying A"—Feb. 21 (American) 876
Power of Light, The (2 parts)—Jan. 5 (American) 88
Power of the Mind, The—Jan. 24 (Majestic).. 468
Pretzel Captures the Smugglers—Mar. 5 (Frontier) 1158
Price of Sacrilege, The (3 parts)—Feb. 19 (Imp) 870
Primitive Call, The (3 parts)—Jan. 15 (Domino) 340
Prince—Jan. 2 (Kay-Bee)..... 220
Professor's Awakening, The—Feb. 25 (Beauty).1020
Purse and the Girl, The—Jan. 30 (Princess)..
Pursuer Pursued, The—Mar. 5 (American)....1162
Put Yourself In His Place—Feb. 7 (Frontier). 596

R

Race, The—Mar. 20 (Keystone).....
Race With Death, A—Feb. 5 (Rex)..... 596
Rafferty's Raffle—Mar. 8 (Apollo).....
Raiders, The (2 parts) -Feb. 20 (Kay Bee)..1160
Rebecca's Wedding Day—Jan. 24 (Keystone)..
Rector's Story, The—Mar. 7 (Majestic).....1300
Red the Mediator—Mar. 14 (Reliance).....1436
Reform Candidate, The (3 parts)—Feb. 22 (Majestic) 1164
Regeneration—Feb. 27 (Powers).....1016
Relic, The (2 parts)—Mar. 23 (Broncho).....1432
Remember Mary Magdalen—Feb. 23 (Victor)..1016
Repaid (2 parts)—Feb. 25 (Broncho)..... 878
Return of Helen Redmond, The (2 parts)—Jan. 19 (American)..... 338
Ring, The—Jan. 11 (Crystal)..... 86
Ring, The—Jan. 20 (Majestic)..... 468
Riot in Rubenville, A—Jan. 31 (Majestic).... 598
Rival Barbers, The—Feb. 28 (Majestic).....1164
Rival Dentists, The—Feb. 23 (Powers).....1016
Robust Romeo, A—Feb. 12 (Keystone).....
Romance of an Actor, The (2 parts)—April 3 (Powers) 1736
Romance of a Photograph, The—Jan. 16 (Victor) 216
Romance of Sunshine Alley—Jan. 28 (Broncho) 340
Romance of the Sea, A (2 parts)—Feb. 11 (Broncho) 600
Rounding Up Bowser—Feb. 26 (Imp).....1018
Runaway Princess, The—Jan. 6 (Thanhouser). 218
Rural Demon, A—Mar. 19 (Keystone).....
Rural Free Delivery Romance, A—Jan. 2 (Princess) 90
Ruy Blas (3 parts)—Feb. (Majestic)..... 874

S

Sacrifice, The—Feb. 18 (Beauty).....1020
Sacrifice, The—Jan. 10 (Reliance)..... 220
Saint and the Singer, The—Jan. 26 (Powers). 466
Sally's Elopement—Feb. 4 (Beauty).....
Sam-Slam'em Slammed—Jan. 5 (Imp)..... 84
Saving the Child—Jan. 14 (Joker)..... 216
Scientist's Doll, The—Mar. 1 (Thanhouser)....1302
Scooped By a Hencoop—Feb. 20 (Nestor).... 870
Sealed Orders (2 parts)—Mar. 30 (Victor).....1738
Second Clue, The—April 10 (American).....
Secret Lode, The—Feb. 6 (Kay-Bee)..... 878
Seeing Stars and Stripes—Dec. 31 (Reliance).. 92
Senator's Bill, The—Mar. 15 (Rex).....1300
Servant Problem, The—Jan. 8 (Komic).....
Shadowed—Jan. 6 (Crystal) 84
Shadow of a Crime, The—Jan. 25 (Crystal)... 336
Sheriff's Deputy, The—Mar. 21 (Frontier)..1428
She Was Only a Working Girl (2 parts)—Mar. 6 (Nestor) 1158
She Wrote a Play -Jan. 18 (Eclair)..... 214
Shorty's Sacrifice (2 parts) -April 8 (Broncho).1742
Shortsighted Miss Prim—Feb. 20 (Lux).....1022
Silent Messenger, The (2 parts)—Mar. 26 (Domino) 1432
Silver Loving Cup, The (2 parts) -Mar. 19 (Imp) 1430
Simple Simon Deals In Antiques -Feb. 12 (Gaumont) 1022
Simple Simon Ragtime Mad -Feb. 12 (Gaumont)
Simple Simon's Honeymoon—Jan. 15 (Gaumont) 222
Single Standard, The (5 parts)—Mar. (Griffith Film) 1164
Skating Master, The—Feb. 15 (Thanhouser)..1020
Sleepy Head, The—Feb. 5 (Komic)..... 724
Slim and the Dynamiters -Jan. 29 (Frontier). 466
Slim and the Indians -Jan. 22 (Frontier).... 336
Slim and the Money Pot Jan. 15 (Frontier) . 214
Slim Becomes a Cook—Feb. 26 (Frontier)...1018
Slim Becomes an Editor -Feb. 5 (Frontier).. 596
Slim Hogan's Getaway Jan. 12 (Reliance).... 340
Slim Joins the Army Feb. 19 (Frontier)....
Slim's Strategy—Jan. 8 (Frontier)..... 86
Slim to the Rescue—Feb. 12 (Frontier)..... 716
Smugglers of Sligo, The (2 parts)—Mar. 18 (Reliance) 1586
Snake Charmer, The—Jan. 11 (Eclair)..... 82
Snobbery—Jan. 23 (Nestor)..... 338
Snookum's Last Racket—Mar. 24 (Crystal)....1580
Snowball Pete—Mar. 18 (Komic).....
Society at Simpson Centre—Mar. 29 (Eclair)...1582
Some Doings—Feb. 17 (Crystal).....
Some Nightmare—Jan. 10 (Joker)..... 86
Some Pull—Mar. 3 (Crystal).....1160
Some Rogues and a Girl—Jan. 3 (Reliance).. 92
Son of Thomas Gray, The—Jan. 10 (American). 90
Sorority Initiation—Jan. 10 (Majestic)..... 218
So Shall Ye Reap—Feb. 28 (Frontier).....1018
Spider and Her Web, The—Mar. 28 (Rex).....
St. Claude and Surrounding—Jura, France—Jan. 10 (Joker) .....
Stepmother, The (2 parts)—Feb. 27 (Victor).1016
Sticky Proposition, A—Jan. 16 (Lux)..... 470
Stone Quarry in Belgium, A—Mar. 6 (Lux)..1166
Story of Little Italy, A—Mar. 14 (American)..1302
Strange Bird, A—Mar. 3 (Crystal).....1160
Strange Evidence—April 4 (Frontier).....1736
Stronger Hand (2 parts)—Mar. 8 (Majestic).1300
Success of Selfishness, The—Feb. 6 (Thanhouser) 720
Such a Villain—April 3 (Nestor).....
Sure Cure, A—Feb. 15 (Crystal)..... 718
Swell Dish, A—Jan. 11 (Apollo).....
Sweet Land of Liberty—Mar. 31 (Beauty).....1738

T

Tale of a Dog, The—Mar. 2 (Powers).....1160
Tale of a Shirt, The—Jan. 4 (Apollo)..... 218
Tale of the Desert, A—Mar. 22 (Eclair).....1428
Tangled Cat, The—Feb. 13 (Princess)..... 874
Tango Tangles—Mar. 9 (Keystone).....
Telltale Footprint, The—Feb. 19 (Gaumont).. 878
Tender-Hearted Sheriff, The—Feb. 21 (Joker)..
Ten of Spades, The—Jan. 6 (Majestic)..... 218
Testing Bill's Courage—Mar. 2 (Imp).....
That Infernal Machine—Feb. 24 (Crystal)....1016
That Spring Lock—Feb. 12 (Komic).....1018
Their Best Friend—Feb. 27 (Thanhouser)....1164
Their Cousin From England—Mar. 22 (Thanhouser) 1740
Their Golden Wedding—Jan. 2 (Thanhouser).. 90
Them Ol' Letters—Jan. 5 (Powers)..... 82
They Who Dig Pits—Mar. 24 (Majestic).....1740
Thief and the Book, The (2 parts)—Jan. 24 (Majestic) 598
Thief Catcher—Feb. 19 (Keystone).....
Those Persistent Old Maids—Mar. 20 (Nestor).1428
Ticket to Red Horse Gulch, A—Jan. 11 (Majestic) 340
Tiff and After, A—Feb. 26 (Gaumont).....
Tightwad Buys a Laundry—Feb. 27 (Powers)..1016
Tiny Tim and the Fisherman Jan. 15 (Gaumont) 222
Tiny Tim and the Lion—Feb. 10 (Gaumont)..1022
Tiny Tim's Sweetheart—Jan. 8 (Gaumont).... 94
Too Many Brides—Jan. 19 (Keystone).....
Too Many Cooks—Jan. 19 (Powers)..... 338
Too Much Married—Mar. 23 (Powers).....1580
Too Proud to Beg—Jan. 31 (Reliance)..... 598
Touch of a Child, The (2 parts)—Feb. 23 (Imp).1016
Town of Nazareth, The (2 parts)—Mar. 30 (American) 1738
Traffic in Soles—Mar. 4 (Joker).....
Trap, The (2 parts)—Mar. 20 (Kay-Bee).....1742
Tricked By a Photo—Jan. 28 (Reliance)..... 598
Trieste to Porto Rose, Austria—Mar. 2 (Powers)
True Irish Hearts (3 parts)—Jan. 1 (Domino). 220
True Western Hearts—Feb. 7 (American)..... 598
Trust Begets Trust—Jan. 16 (Powers)..... 214
Turkey Trot Town—Jan. 18 (Thanhouser).... 468
Turning Point, The—Jan. 31 (Frontier)..... 466
Turn of Cards, A—Feb. 8 (Majestic)..... 872
Turning Point, The (2 parts)—Mar. 23 (American) 1586
Twins and a Stepmother—Feb. 3 (Thanhouser). 720
Twin's Double, The (3 parts)—Mar. 10 (Gold Seal) 1298
Twixt Love and Fire—Feb. 23 (Keystone).....
Twixt Love and Flour—Feb. 6 (Nestor)..... 596
Two Little Dromios—Jan. 11 (Thanhouser)...
Two Slaves, The—Jan. 14 (Reliance)..... 342

U

Under Sheriff, The—Jan. 8 (Keystone).....
Universal Ike Gets a Goat—Mar. 3 (Universal Ike) .....
Universal Ike Has One Foot In the Grave—Mar. 17 (Universal Ike).....1428
Universal Ike In the Battle of Little Tin Horn—Mar. 24 (Universal Ike).....
Universal Ike's Wooing—Mar. 10 (Universal Ike) 1300
Unjustly Accused (2 parts)—Feb. 14 (Bison). 718
Unsigned Agreement, The (2 parts)—Jan. 20 (Gold Seal) 338
Unto the Weak—Jan. 17 (American)..... 220
Up in the Air Over Sadie—Feb. 22 (Apollo)....
U. S. Government Inspection of Beef—Feb. 2 (Victor) .....
U. S. Government's Instruction to Young Farmers—Mar. 27 (Powers).....

V

Vacant Chair, The—Jan. 23 (Princess).....
Vagabond Soldier, The (3 parts)—Feb. 7 (Bison) 594
Valentine's Day—Feb. 8 (Eclair)..... 594
Vapor Bath, The—Jan. 15 (Komic).....
Vengeance of Najerra, The—Feb. 1 (Majestic).. 720
Village School Days—Mar. 1 (Apollo).....
Visit to Mont. St. Michael, A—Mar. 14 (Joker)
Voice of the Viola, The—Mar. 4 (Nestor) 1158
Votes For Men (2 parts)—Feb. 16 (Victor).... 870

W

Walt's Photograph—Jan. 15 (Komic).....
War Time Reformation, A (2 parts) -Jan. 13 (Gold Seal) 218
Warning Cry, The—Mar. 27 (Majestic)..... 1740
Watch Dog of the Deep, The (2 parts)—Jan. 8 (Imp) 84
Way of a Woman, The—Mar. 18 (Nestor)....1428
Weaker Sister, The—Mar. 1 (Rex).....
What a Baby Did—Mar. 13 (Nestor).....1298
What Didn't Happen to Mary—Feb. 3 (Crystal) 594
What the Crystal Told—Jan. 18 (Majestic).... 468
Wheel of Life, The—Jan. 28 (Nestor)..... 464
When Billy Proposed—Jan. 30 (Nestor)..... 464
When Fate Frowned—Mar. 7 (Reliance)..... 1304
When God Wills (2 parts)—Mar. 18 (Eclair).1428
When the Cat Came Back—Jan. 16 (Princess) 340
When Ursus Threw the Bull (2 parts)—Jan. 9 (Nestor) 84
Where Paths Diverge—Feb. 6 (Princess)..... 720
Whose Baby Are You?—Jan. 18 (Apollo).....
Who So Diggeth a Pit—Jan. 9 (Powers)..... 82
Why Kentucky Went Dry—April 2 (Frontier)..1736
Why Reginald Reformed—Feb. 1 (Thanhouser) 720
Why Universal Ike Left Home—Mar. 31 (Universal Ike) 1736
Wife, The—Feb. 11 (Beauty).....
Winter Scenes in Switzerland—Jan. 23 (Lux).. 600
Withered Hands, The—Feb. 13 (Powers)..... 718
Withering Roses—Jan. 14 (Beauty).....
Without Pants—Mar. 24 (Crystal).....1580
Wolves of the Underworld (2 parts)—April 1 (Broncho) 1586
Woman Pays, The (3 parts)—Jan. 27 (Thanhouser) .....
Woman Without a Soul, The—Mar. 17 (Majestic) .....
Woman's Burden—Feb. 22 (Rex).....
Woman's Honor, A—Mar. 23 (Victor).....
Won In a Closet—Jan. 22 (Keystone).....
Won In the First—Mar. 14 (Joker).....
Working Girl's Romance—Feb. 18 (Reliance).1162
Wrong Miss Wright, The—Mar. 27 (Nestor)...1580

Y

Yaqui's Revenge, The (2 parts)—Mar. 7 (Bison)
Yegg and the Eggs, The—Mar. 12 (Komic)...1428
Yellow Flame (2 parts)—Feb. 18 (Broncho) 720

Miscellaneous Features

A

Accused by Darkest Russia (3 parts)—Jan. (Liberty Features) .....
Adventuress, The (3 parts)—Jan. 10 (Union Features) 342
American Citizen, An (4 parts)—Jan. 10 (Famous Players) 342
Awakening of Domia Isolla, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Chas. V. Barker).....

B

Balkan Wars (8 parts)—Feb. (Col. De Loris)..
Banker's Daughter, The (5 parts) -Mar. (Life Photo Film Corp.).....
Battle In the Clouds, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Apex) 1440
Beneath the Czar (4 parts)—Feb. (Solax)..... 880
Black Ball, The—Jan. (F. R. A.).....
Black Thirteen, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Apex).. 346
Blind Faith (2 parts)—Jan. (A Blinkhorn)..... 602
Boy and the Law, A (5 parts)—Mar. (Pan-American Film Co.).....
Bride of Lammermoor, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Kennedy Features, Inc.)..... 604
Bridge that Failed, The (3 parts)—Jan. 1 (Eclectic) 96
Brother Officers (4 parts)—Mar. (Apex).....1304
Buried Secret, A (3 parts)—Mar. 18 (Itala)...1442
Burning Train, The (2 parts)—Jan. (Itala)... 606
By Whose Hand (3 parts)—Jan. (Gt. Northern Spec. Fea. Film Co.).....

C

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's Arctic Hunt (6 parts)—Feb. (Arctic Film Co.).....
Captured by Redskins (3 parts)—Feb. (Belmont) 730
Caught In the Web of Intrigue (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) 730
Cloister and the Hearth (5 parts)—Mar. (A. Blinkhorn) 1306
Clothes (4 parts)—Mar. 10 (Famous Players)..1442
Charlotte Corday (4 parts)—Mar. (Kennedy Features) 1744
Coils of Calamity (3 parts)—Mar. 25 (F. R. A.)
Colosseum In Films, The (4 parts)—Feb. (Vero Educational Society) 1166
Come Back to Erin (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) 1744
Confession, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) 1306
Conspiracy, The; or A $4,000,000 Dowry (4 parts) Feb. (World Film Corp.) 1168
Convict 113 (3 parts)—Feb. 13 (Itala).....1442
Convict's Son, The (3 parts)—Mar. 19 (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.).....
Copper Mining at the Calumet and Hecla (2 parts)—Jan. (Lauriun Amusement Co.)....
Course of Justice (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) .....
Criminal Path, The (3 parts)—Mar. 10 (Ramo Films, Inc.).....

D

Daughter of Eve, A (3 parts)—Feb. (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.)..... 732
David Garrick (3 parts)—Jan. (World's Leader Features) 604
Day of Days, The (4 parts)—Jan. 20 (Famous Players) 472
Dead Man's Papers, A (2 parts)—Jan. (Gaumont) 472
Dead Man Who Killed, The (4 parts)—Mar. (Apex) .....
Death of a Geisha, The (3 parts)—Feb. 10 (Eclectic) 728
Death's Door (2 parts)—Feb. (Itala).....
Desert's Sting, The (3 parts)—Feb. 28 (Criterion Feature Film Co.) 1308
Detective Finn of Scotland Yard (3 parts)—Mar. (The I. S. P. Co.) 1442
Devil Within, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Ramo)..... 94

Diamond Smugglers, The (3 parts) — Mar. (Warner's Features) 1304
Diamond Mystery, The, or A Scented Clue (4 parts)—Mar. (Midgar Features) 1440
Dream Woman, The (4 parts) Mar. (Blache)..1744

E

East Lynne (7 parts)—Mar. (P. P. Craft).. ..
Elsie Venner (3 parts) Mar. 4 (Kennedy Features) 1308
England's Army (2 parts)—Mar. (Keith, Prowse & Co., Ltd.) .....
Esther (3 parts)—Mar. 20 (Eclectic)..... 1588
Evangeline (5 parts)—Feb. (Canadian Bioscope Co., Ltd.) 726
Eye of the Government, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) .....

F

Fall of France, The (3 parts) —Jan. (Apex).... 96
Famous Battles of Napoleon (4 parts)—Feb. (Cosmos) .....
Fatality and Mystery; or The Veil of the Isis (3 parts)—Jan. (Features Ideal)..... 606
Father's Crime, A (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) 1306
Fedora (4 parts)—Dec. 25 (Trans-Oceanic Films) 98
Fight for a Million, A (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) 222
Fire and Sword (6 parts)—Feb. (Kismet Feature Film Co.) .....
First Irish National Pilgrimage to Lourdes, The (2 parts)—Dec. 29 (A. Blinkhorn) 98
First Law of Nature, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) 346
Fleur-de-Lys (3 parts)—Feb. (Hel-Gar Corp.)..
For Ireland's Sake (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) 346
For the Queen's Honor (3 parts)—Jan. (Ambrosio) 606
From Gutter to Footlights (5 parts)—Jan. (Apex) 602
Fugitive, The (3 parts)—Jan. 25 (Features Ideal) 472
Funny Regiment, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Union Features) 600

G

Giant's and White Sox World's Tour (6 parts) —Mar. (John J. Gleason)..... ..
Gambler's Penalty, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.)..... ..
Gambler's Revenge, The (4 parts)—Jan. (Pasquali-American Co.) 344
Girl With the Hole In Her Stocking, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Hel-Gar Corp.)..... ..
Glories of Rome, The (4 parts)—Feb. (Vero Educational Society) 1166
Glories of Rome (Series No. 2—Residences of the Pope's)—Mar. (Vero Educational Society) 1748
Good Little Devil, A (5 parts)—Mar. 1 (Famous Players) .....
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 54, Dec. 20 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 224
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 55, Dec. 27 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 334
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 56, Jan. 3 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 462
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 57, Jan. 10 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 462
Gate Weekly, No. 58, Jan. 17 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 462
te Weekly, No. 59, Jan. 24 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 732
n Gate Weekly, No. 60, Jan. 31 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 868
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 61, Feb. 14 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 1172
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 62, Feb. 28 (California M. P. Corp.)..... 1426
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 64—Mar. 7 (Calif. M. P. Corp.) 1732
Golden Gate Weekly, No. 65—Mar. 14 (Calif. M. P. Corp.) 1732
Governor's Ghost, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Ramo). 730
Great Bullion Robbery, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Apex) 1304
Great Diamond Robbery, The (6 parts) Mar. (Playgoers Film Co.)..... 1746
Great Dock Disaster, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Apex) 882
Great Leap, The (4 parts)—Mar. (Continental Feature Film Co.)..... ..
Great Mine Disaster, The (4 parts) Mar. 1 (Eclectic) 1170
Grip of Iron, The (4 parts)—Mar. (Apex)..... ..

H

Hara-Kiri (3 parts) Jan. (Apex)..... ..
Hearts Adrift (4 parts)—Feb. 10 (Famous Players) 1024
Hearts of Oak (5 parts)—Mar. (Mohawk Film Co., Inc.) .....
Her Brother's Pard (3 parts)—Feb. (Ammex).. 730
Her Life for Liberty (3 parts)—Jan. 28 (Inter-Continent Film Co.) 602
Hook and Hand (4 parts) Feb. (Blache)..... 1166
House of Bondage, The (6 parts)—Jan. (Photo Drama Motion Picture Co.)..... ..
House of Correction, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Union Features) .....
House of Mystery, The (4 parts)—Jan. 10 (Eclectic) 344

I

In the Hands of the London Crooks (5 parts) — Mar. (Apex) .....
In the Python's Den (3 parts)—Jan. (Apex)... 602
In the Stretch (4 parts)—Ja. (Ramo)..... 224
Isle of Vengeance, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) .....

J

Jean's Evidence (2 parts) -Jan. 12 (A. Blinkhorn) .....
Jess (4 parts)—Feb. 18 (Kennedy Features, Inc.) 1438
Joan of Arc (5 parts)—Feb. (World Film Corp.) 880
Joan of Arc (2 parts)—Feb. 20 (Eclectic)..... 1308
Joseph's Trials in Egypt (3 parts)—Feb. 1 (Eclectic) 606
Journey's Ending, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) .....
Judgment of the Jungle (3 parts)—Feb. 21 (Gaumont) 1304
Justice (4 parts)—Feb. (A. Blinkhorn)..... 868

K

King Charles II (4 parts)—Mar. (The I. S. P. Co.) 1742

L

Land O' Dreams, The (6 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) .....
Leap of Despair, A (4 parts)—Jan. (Itala).... 606
Let There Be Light (3 parts)—Mar. (Hel-Gar Corp.) .....
Life In the Western Penitentiary (3 parts)—Jan. (Citagraph Co.) .....
Life of "Big Tim" Sullivan; or From Newsboy to Senator (4 parts)—Mar. (Gotham Film Co.) .....
Life's Temptations (4 parts) -Feb. (Midgar Features) 1170
Lion Tamer's Revenge, The; or The Divine Appeal (3 parts)—Feb. (Union Features).....1168
Lost In Darkness (4 parts) Mar. 26 (Itala Film Corp.) 1588
Love Everlasting (6 parts)—Jan. (Gloria-American Co.) 602
Loyalty of a Savage, The (3 parts) -Jan. (Warner's Features) 346

M

Man's Shadow, A (6 parts)—Jan. 20 (Eclectic). 344
Man Who Came Back, The—Mar. (American Kineto Corp.) 1306
Marriage of Convenience, A (3 parts)—Mar. 2 (Ammex) .....
Mary Magdalene (3 parts)—Jan. (Kennedy Features, Inc.) 604
Masked Mystery (3 parts)—Feb. (Vernon Film Co.) 726
Master Bob's Last Race (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) 1168
Master Crook, The (4 parts)—Jan. 15 (Trans-Oceanic Films) 222
Master Rogue, The; or A Dumb Accuser (3 parts)—Jan. 5 (Features Ideal)..... 224
Mephistophelia (3 parts)—Mar. (Features Ideal) 1444
Mexican Rebellion, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Ammex) .....
Mexico (4 parts)—Jan. (A1 Dia. Feature Co.).
Mexican War Pictures (2 parts)—Feb. (Mutual)
Michael Perrin; or A Spy for a Day (4 parts)—Feb. (Ambrosio) 1166
Midnight Strike, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) .....
Modern Mephisto (6 parts)—Jan. (Green's Feature Photo Plays, Inc.)..... ..
Money God, The; or Do Riches Bring Happiness? (5 parts)—Mar. (Metropolitan Film Co., Inc.) 1586
Monster and the Girl, The (4 parts) -Mar. 25 (Solax) 1738
Motherhood or Politics? (2 parts)—Jan. 19 (A. Blinkhorn) 348
Movie Queen, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's (Features) 98
Mystery of No. 13 Hill Street (3 parts)—Mar. 6 (F. R. A.) 880
Mystery of St. Martin's Bridge, The (5 parts) —Feb. (Fidelity Film Co.)..... 728
Mystery of the Fatal Pearl, The (5 parts)—Feb. (American Kineto Corp.) 730

N

Napoleon (5 parts)—Mar. (Eclectic).....1744
Native Life In the Philippines (2 parts)—Mar. (Pan-American Film Co.)..... ..
New York Weekly, No. 1, Feb. 3 (Life Photo Film Co.) 1024
New York Weekly, No. 2, Feb. 10 (Life Photo Film Co.) 1172
New York Weekly, No. 3, Feb. 17 (Life Photo Film Co.) .....
New York Weekly, No. 4, Feb. 24 (Life Photo Film Co.) 1308

O

Oda; or The Mystery of the White Rose (3 parts)—Mar. (Weinburg's Features).....1746
On the Firing Line In Tripoli (5 parts)—Mar. (Mundstuk's Features) .....
Out of Darkness (3 parts)—Jan. (Itala)..... ..
Over Niagara (4 parts)—Jan. (Sterling Camera & Film Co.) 222

P

Paid In Full (3 parts)—Mar. (All Star Feature Corp.) .....
Paradise Lost, A (4 parts)—Feb. (Great Northern Preferred Features) 1024
Peril of the House of Styr, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) .....
Pierrot's Love (3 parts)—Feb. 3 (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.)..... ..
Pieces of Silver (4 parts)—Mar. (Hel-Gar Corp.)
Pirates of the Plains, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) 1440
Price of Treachery, The; or The Lighthouse Keeper's Daughter—Mar. (World Film Corp.)1742
Pride of Jennico, The (4 parts)—Feb. 20 (Famous Players) 1170
Princess Elena's Prisoner (4 parts)—Jan. (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.)..... 472
Prisoner of the Owls, The; or The Victims of Revenge (4 parts)—Mar. (Italian-American Film Corp.) 1746

Q

Queen of the Forty Thieves (4 parts)—Mar. (Apex) .....

R

Race for the Rubies, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Trans-Oceanic Films) 730
Rebecca, The Jewess (6 parts)—Jan. (World's Leader Features) 346
Red Diamond (3 parts)—Mar. (Mundstuk Features) .....
Redemption of Steve Harding, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Ammex) .....
Red Spiders, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) 730
Rome or Death (5 parts)—Feb. (Inter-Continent Film Co.) 1746
Rose of Yesteryear, The (3 parts) Jan. (Warner's Features) 346
Rose of Surrey (2 parts)—Mar. (A. Blinkhorn)
Round-Up at Pendleton (5 parts)—Mar. (Thomas & Bouman) .....
Ruby of Destiny, The (6 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) .....
Sacrificial Fires (3 parts)—Feb. (Balboa Feature Films) 1170
Samson (6 parts)—Mar. (Universal)..... ..
Satan's Castle (2 parts)—Dec. 27 (Ambrosio).. 98
Saved by the Headhunters (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) .....
Sealed Orders (6 parts)—Mar. (De Luxe Attractions Film Co.)..... ..1744
Shadows of Sin (3 parts)—Jan. (World's Leader Features) 604
Shadows of the Moulin Rogue (4 parts)—Dec. 26 (Solax) 348
Shattered Idol, A (3 parts)—Feb. 6 (Itala)....1442
Sign of the Secret Mine, The (3 parts)—Jan. (Lewis Pennant) .....
Silent Hero, The (2 parts)—Jan. 17 (Ambrosio)
Sitting Bull (5 parts) Jan. (American Rotagraph Co.) .....
Sixty Years a Queen—Feb. (Anglo-American Film Corp.) .....
Snared In the Alps; or Wheats and Tares (3 parts)—Jan. (Union Features) 224
Society Detective, The (4 parts)—Jan. (Trans-Oceanic Films) .....
Soldiers of Fortune (6 parts)—Jan. (All Star Feature Corp.) .....
Soul's Tempest, A (3 parts)—Jan. (Pasquali-American Co.) 600
Spartan Girl, The (5 parts)—Mar. 20 (Pasquali-American Co., Inc.)..... 1742
Squaw Man, The (6 parts)—Feb. (Jesse L. Lasky Features) 730

Stampede of Fate, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Gorman Film Co.) 1022
Stranglers of Paris (6 parts —Feb. (Victory Film Co.) .....

T

Tess of the Stormy Country (5 parts)—Mar. 30 (Famous Players) .....
Thorns of the Gay White Way (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) 728
Three Musketeers, The (8 parts)—Feb. (Anglo-American Film Corp.)..... ..
Through the Fires of Temptation (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) 472
Tiger, The (4 parts)—Mar. (Gloria American Co.) .....
Traffickers In Soles (3 parts)—Feb. (Feature Photoplay Co.) 1168
Trap, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Criterion Feature Film Co.) 1024
Treasure of Buddah, The (3 parts)—Jan. (F. R. A.) 472
Triumph of an Emperor, The (5 parts)—Mar. (World Film Corp.)..... ..1444

U

Under Susnicion (3 parts)—Feb. 23 (Pasquali-American Film Corp.)..... ..
Unexpected, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Balboa Feature Films) 1170
Unknown Monster, An (3 parts)—Feb. (Features Ideal) 1170

V

Vampires of the Night (5 parts)—Mar. (Greene's Feature Photo Plays, Inc.)..... ..
Vampire's Tower, The (2 parts)—Jan. 24 (Ambrosio) 348
Vesuvius—Feb. (Trans-Oceanic Films)..... ..

W

Waif of the Plains, A (3 parts)—Jan. (Warner's Features) 98
War Dog, The (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) .....
Way Down East (4 parts)—Mar. 12 (Solax)....
Web of Fate, A (3 parts)—Feb. (Warner's Features) 1168
What the Gods Decree (4 parts)—Jan. (World Film Corp.) 344
When Men Would Kill (3 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features) 1306
Whirl of Destiny, The (4 parts)—Jan. 20 (Mundstuk Features) 472
White Ghost, The (4 parts)—Jan. (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.)..... 470
Wife of Cain, The (3 parts)—Mar. (Hel-Gar Corp.) .....
Winnipeg Stampede, The (3 parts)—Mar. 5 (Zay Gardner) .....
With the Greeks on the Firing Line (4 parts) —Feb. (Robert Schwobthaler)..... ..
Woman's Heart, A (3 parts) —Mar. 4 (Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.)..... ..

Y

Younger Sister, The—Jan. 8 (A. Blinkhorn)... 224

Z

Zingo (12 parts)—Mar. (Warner's Features)..

"THE SALVATION OF NANCE O'SHAUGHNESSY"

Perils investing the lives of the lowly in great cities, vividly revealed. How love brought light and escaped the shadows, is tensely sympathetic and absorbingly interesting.

In Two Reels - Released March 30th

March 31st "THE MIDNIGHT CALL"

A doctor saves a girl imprisoned for her fortune.
On the same reel with "FANCY SKATING."

April 1st "WHEN THIEVES FALL OUT"

How a girl escaped criminal environment for better things.

April 2nd "THE STORY OF DIANA"

New beauties of "dissolve" compare classic age with modern romance.

April 3rd "THE BOND OF LOVE"

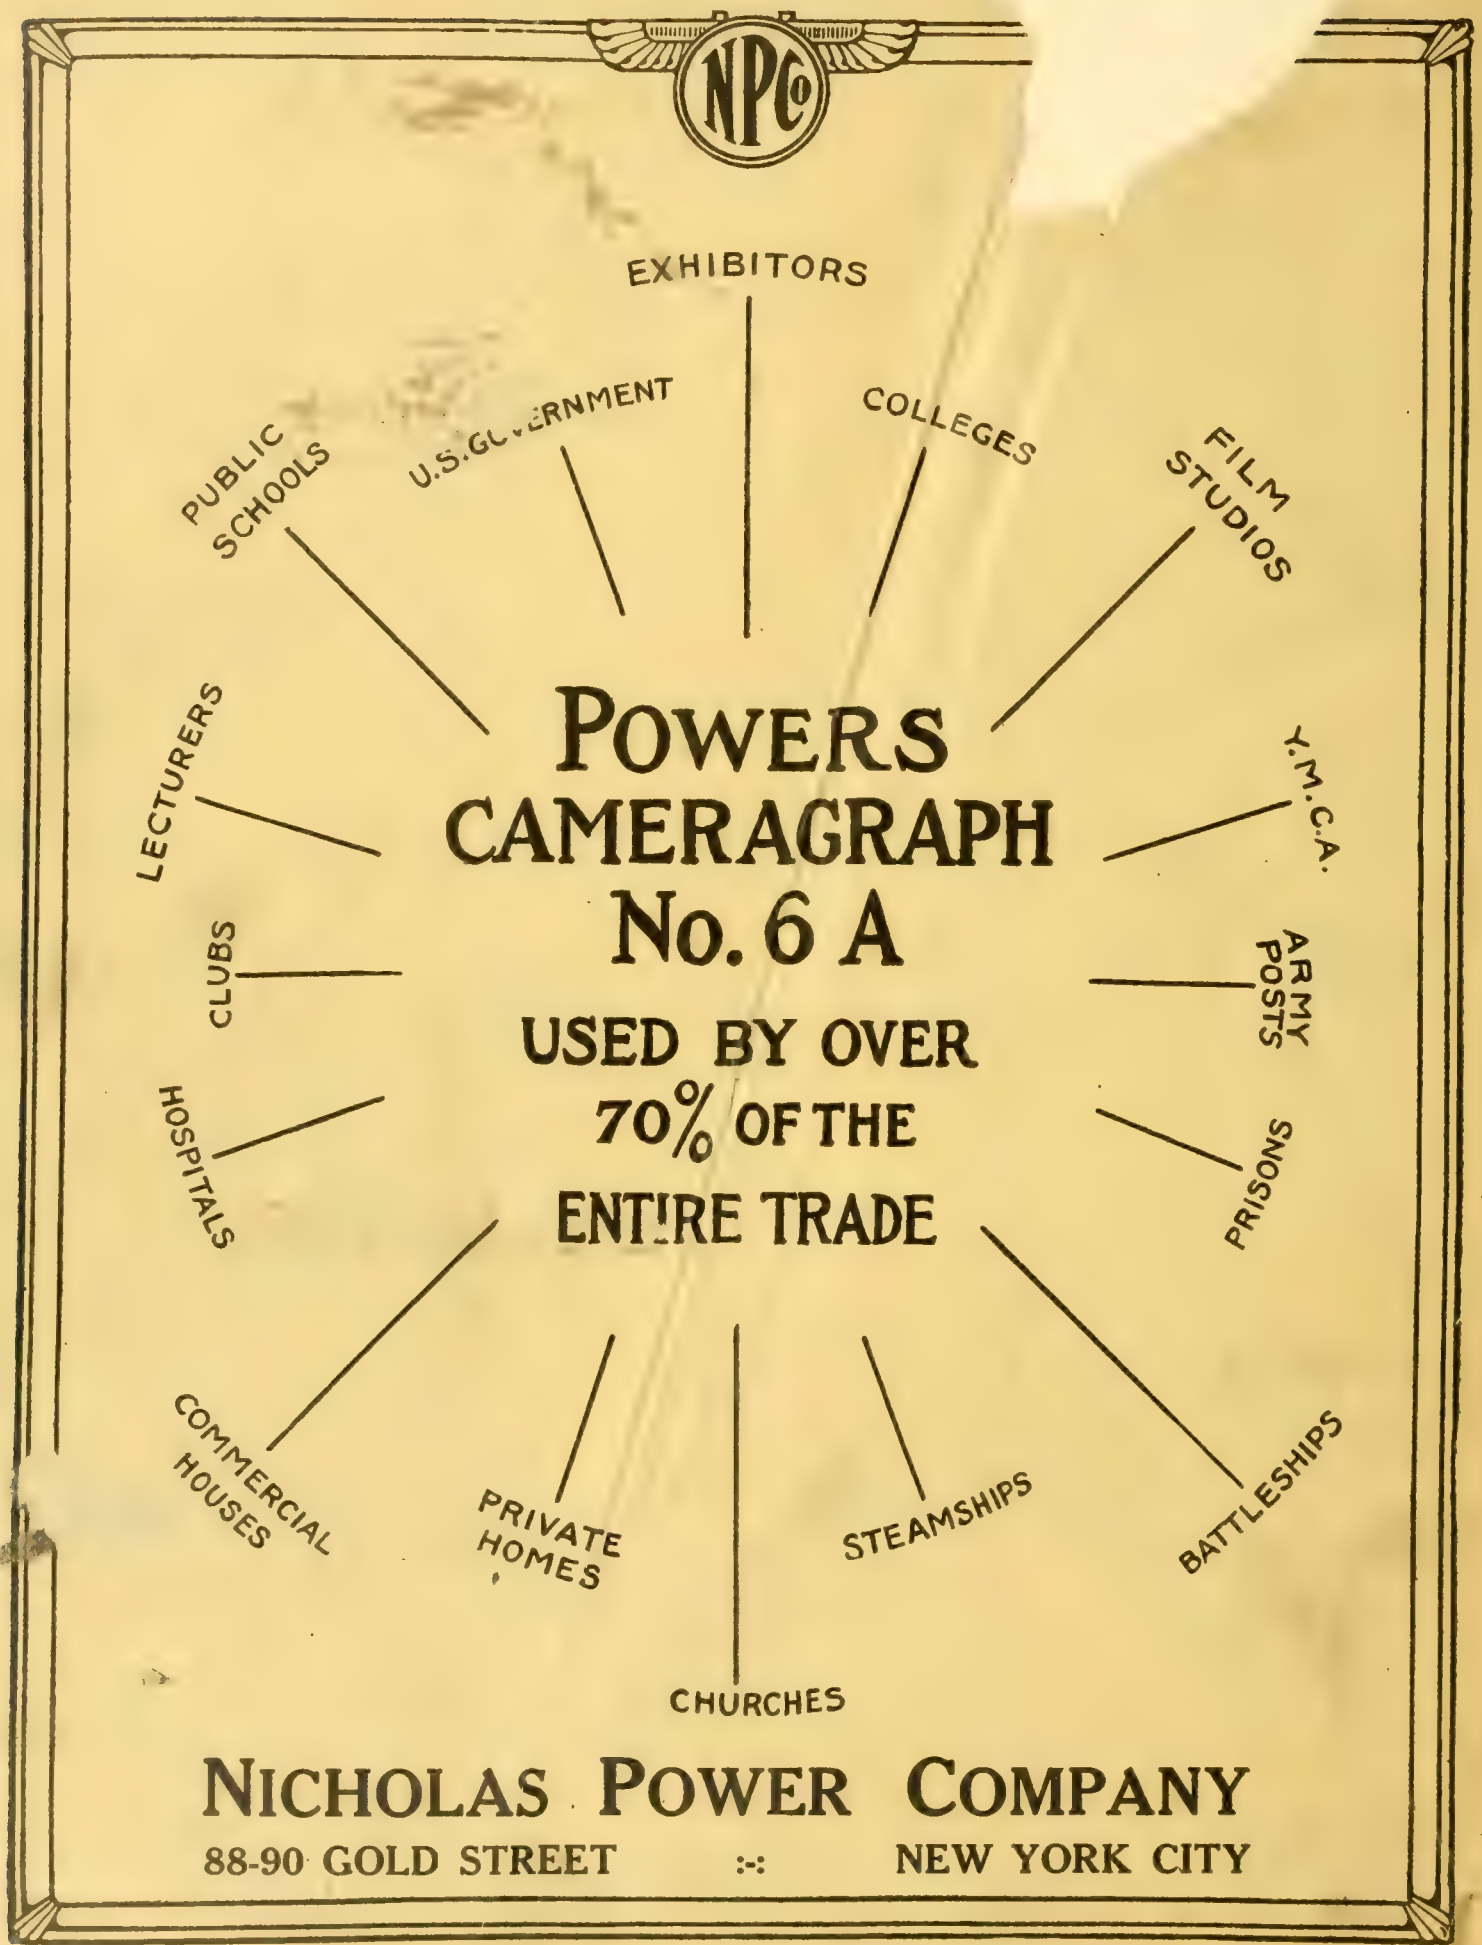
How a lawyer saves his clients from divorce and makes them happy ever after.
On the same reel with "IN AMALFI, ITALY."

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL—the most interesting, epochy and comprehensive pictorial weekly ever presented to the public Released EVERY SATURDAY.

N. B.—Our new line of colored posters will give your lobby a pictorial interest that will attract customers. One-sheets for all releases; three and sixes for multiple reels.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.
CHICAGO



POWERS CAMERAGRAPH No. 6 A

USED BY OVER 70% OF THE ENTIRE TRADE

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

88-90 GOLD STREET :-: NEW YORK CITY